The One Best Bet of the Week

Harry Carey in "The Texas Sphinx"

HARRY CAREY'S millions of admirers will say that is some title for a Carey picture—because with all the dash and go that they find in his work, they know he is a master of the "quiet" method of getting his big stuff over on the screen. They'll enjoy every foot of this picture. It's great and thrilling, tense and absorbing, with a walloping punch at the end. There's a stage robbery and Harry is suspected. There's a pretty love story and for a time it seems that Harry is to lose out, but the punch climax comes with a satisfactory surprise that will bring the fans to the edges of their seats.

Harry Carey—"The Texas Sphinx"

A MERRY L-KO

"Cactus and Kale" — Mile-a-Minute Comedy

The Kale

OUT in the L-KO studios there's a big two-reeler made every week. There are a lot of people working, and the L-KO is some busy place. No comedy company in the country is equipped to the point of production that can equal the L-KO. That's why you can COUNT on the big two-reel L-KO every week as a humdinger. In "Cactus and Kale" there is about the swiftest action—brilliant comedy action—you've ever seen. As usual there are funny stunts and daring stunts, and pretty girls and screamingly funny situations and titles, too. Produced under the personal supervision of J. G. Blystone. The featured players are Walter Stephens, Gladys Varden, Bert Roach and Catherine Young.

Mary Fuller Feature

Beautiful Star in "To the Highest Bidder"—Romantic Drama

MARY in this strong two-reel drama, falls heir to five thousand dollars, and leaves her home in the country and a faithful lover "to see life." She sees it with a fast crowd, and when her money is nearly gone she offers herself unconditionally to the highest bidder. The highest bid comes from an anonymous source, and while Mary is hesitating a chap offers to double it. Before Mary can decide she is handed a letter, a bid that causes her to say that all bids are off. Returning home she finds the country lover, and the fans find a climax too big to be told in words. A big picture that will go everywhere.

"The Boulevard Speedhound"

Lee Poses As Eddie's Wife

EDDIE is a speed-hound and takes Lee for a ride in a powerful racing car. They are followed to Eddie's house by a cycle cop. Eddie's wife, Edith, is away, but to avoid arrest the cop is told that Mrs. Eddie's wife is sick and they have been for the doctor. The cop has to be shown and so Lee dashes upstairs, puts on a nighty and gets into bed, where he poses as Eddie's wife. The cop leaves and Lee ducks, too. Outside he meets his best girl and sees the cop returning, still suspicious. The girl takes Lee's place and then Eddie's wife returns and finds the strange girl in her room. Lively, funny and clever, this Nestor will tickle them all.

WILLIAM FRANEY

"Short Skirts and Deep Water" Corking One-Reel Joker

BILL FRANEY and Gale Henry are re-united in this grouch assassinator, "Short Skirts and Deep Water," and they will give your fans the time of their lives. They are members of the Anti-Sin League, and Bill is sent to the beach to see that the girls wear skirts of proper length. Gale follows to see what he does, loses her own bathing skirt and is arrested, while Bill is marooned at high tide. It is a bang-up Joker—one continuous laugh from start to finish.

Bill Prefers Land Dangers

GALE HENRY

"Nearly a Queen," One-Reel Joker Has Melodramatic Plot

CAST up by the sea as a baby, Gale is brought up in a humble fisherman's cottage. She is engaged to Milton Sims, and the opening is full of big laughs. The cottage is visited by a guy in a gorgeous uniform, who tells them that Gale is a lost princess, and takes her away with him in a boat. In the middle of the bay he ties her up in a bag and throws her overboard. She is rescued by Milt, captured again, tied in a shack which is set on fire. Then comes the punch, and it is as funny as it is surprising.

"Queen" Gale and Her Prime Minister

Helen Gibson in "The Perilous Leap"

Three Reel Gold Seal Offers Many Thrilling Situations and Much Exciting Action--Strong Story and Cast

HELEN GIBSON does stunts in this picture that will fairly take your breath away. How she does them and comes up smiling after, is a mystery that only Helen herself could solve. In this Gold Seal she is the daughter of a prosperous rancher on the Border, who is visited by some strangers, who ask permission to store some property in his barn. This is granted, when it is learned that there are smugglers in the neighborhood The news comes from Helen's sweetheart, Val Paul, a Secret Service operative. It develops that the stored goods is opium, and Val lays for the gang. He is bested in a tremendous fight, put aboard a freight train, and the gang think they have won. But they haven't counted on Helen, who, at a mad gallop, overtakes the train, jumps aboard from her horse, and after a perilous leap to and from a bridge and the fast train, rescues her lover. Max Asher

"In the Clutches of Milk," a Clever Victor Stunt Comedy

SOME of the funniest stunts you ever saw are pulled in this one-reel Victor comedy in which Max Asher is a hotel keeper. Max has a chronic thirst, and so he draws a drink from the bath tub, from the gas jet, from his bootleg and various other queer places. He gets hold of a bottle of poison, and to save his life is ordered to drink milk. He is chased by an irate milkman through several hundred feet of the liveliest action you ever saw, trying all the time to drink from the milk bottle. Good fun.

Universal Screen Magazine Shows Fascinating Subjects

EVERY week sees a broadening in interest of the subjects shown on this fascinating one-reel feature. It is a veritable mine of information and entertainment. There are shown on the current release sea birds by the million on an inland lake; making butter on the farm; the most fascinating pictures of physical culture for babies, posed by a husky 18-months-old baby girl; making shrapnel and other ammunition, an unusual glimpse of war preparations in America; and the unique and exclusive Miracles in Mud, this week's subject being "Swat the Fly." A release that captures them all—young and old—and gets them on the dullest day.

"GREAT FILMS, like good literature or music, or art of any kind, come few and far between. Moreover, they are apt to spring from the most unexpected sources."

You can count on the fingers of your two hands those motion pictures which have equalled in beauty and strength, plot and action, this offering of the Ogden Pictures Corporation.

"THE LUST OF THE AGES" is one of the rare successes of motion picture history.

Whether the Ogden Pictures Corporation can repeat a success so marked, or whether it shall forever strive to live up to this, its master achievement, is a question only the future can solve.

But, at this moment, America will unconsciously say, "Here is one of the greatest motion pictures we have ever seen."

The story has to do with GOLD—the fight for wealth—the hunger for that power which comes through great possessions. it has to do with that latent appetite which resides in every human breast for MONEY.

Surely, no elemental quality is so dominant in modern society, and this powerful story of Aaron Hoffman's, built on this theme, touches "home" in every home.

The "girl with the dimple" has again proven herself to possess superior dramatic qualifications, and there is no actress on the screen to-day who can point to a single performance greater than this one of Miss Walker's.

MACK SENNETT

—is the man who put satire in overalls.

—the father, so to speak, of screen comedy and the most original director in the world.

—admittedly a leader and a picker of successful ideas of showmanship for exhibitors.

—the man who has proven that laughs are the most profitable.

—last, but not least, the man who blends the girl-idea and the slap-stick into a gold mine for you.

PARAMOUNT-MACK SENNETT COMEDIES

The first "wild one" is released September 30th, entitled "A Bedroom Blunder," with Charles Murray, Wayland Trask and Miss Mary Thurman.

The second "mirth riot," will be labeled, "The Pullman Bride." The cast includes Miss Gloria Swanson, Mack Swain, Chester Conklin—aided and abetted by a flock of beauties.

Number three of the "delirious delights" is a girl avalanche, entitled "Roping Her Romeo," with Miss Polly Moran, Ben Turpin and Slim Summerville, assisted by custard pies, slapsticks, and a barrel of fun.

The hardest competition you have is Dad's "old pipe and comfortable chair"—but remember, Dad is very much interested in "Girl Pictures," and if you get Dad with a Mack Sennett Comedy, you've got him for life, and where Dad goes—the family follows—Dad's the man you're after—get him now.

SESSUE HAYAKAWA
in
"Hashimura Togo"
from the Story by WALLACE IRWIN

WALLACE IRWIN probably never heard of Sessue Hayakawa when he wrote his famous "Letters of a Japanese Schoolboy," upon which "Hashimura Togo" is based, because the now famous Paramount star was still in Japan at that time. However, there is probably no other actor in the world who could have done the same justice to this inimitably funny and thoroughly human story that Hayakawa did. And probably no other director could have made such a strong photoplay as did William C. De Mille, from the scenario by Marion Fairfax. Presented by Jesse L. Lasky.

THOS. H. INCE
Paramount Pictures

THE affiliation of the Ince producing organization and the Paramount distributing organization means much to the exhibitor of Paramount Pictures.

One of the great producing factors, whose pictures have always had a finish and faithfulness of story and perfection of detail, an ingenuity and insight into human nature, which has transformed a commonplace incident into a marvel of perception, that has stamped his work undeniably as that of a genius.

These splendid photoplays will be distributed with Paramount care and service and publicity—this means much. Ask the Paramount exhibitor.

DOROTHY DALTON

A NEW name is to be added to Paramount Pictures—a name that will mean money to Paramount exhibitors. There will be eight Ince productions featuring Dorothy Dalton.

In her pictures she has displayed remarkable versatility, parts calling for the deftest touch of comedy and the heaviest emotional roles. In all of them she has scored a distinct screen success, augmented by her beauty and physical magnetism.

In productions made and supervised by directors who can attain the standard and ideals of Paramount you will see a new, a greater Dorothy Dalton.

This cuts off your foresight and blinds you to the importance of new ideas which may have a direct and lasting influence on your business—progressive ideas of great value which you should study and apply.

Have you been too busy to send for the Paralta Plan book? If you have, it's time for you to look up and see what's going on in the world. Don't let anything relating to your business get by you without knowing all about it. If you are wise you will consider the Paralta Plan.

Start With Goldwyn at the Beginning

WHEN the eyes of the nation are on this new organization's splendid productions, when artists and critics everywhere are saying: "Here are the most beautiful pictures we have ever seen."

When billboard campaigns and skilled exploitation have made American audiences eager to come into your theatres. In other words, when the stage is all set for an immediate profit for your box-office.

This is the time for every exhibitor to sign a Goldwyn Pictures contract. You benefit by everything Goldwyn has done for its productions and its stars. You have to do less yourself—if you sign now—than for any other productions ever made.

Goldwyn Pictures are letter-perfect, scenically beautiful and dramatically powerful. And in the words of a score of great critics they are "better than Goldwyn ever promised they would be."

Goldwyn Asks You These Questions

WHERE is there another company in the industry that has ever made ten costly productions in advance of a first release that exhibitors may know in advance just what they are buying?

Where is there another company that has ever financed such a tremendous undertaking entirely with its own money—without ever receiving or applying a penny of exhibitor money to production?

Where is there another company that not only advises exhibitors to reach out and find the best available pictures in the open market, but stands ready to distribute the quality pictures of any other producer—thereby seeking to provide you with pictures on which you will make a profit each week in the year?

You will realize instantly that Goldwyn is the first producing and distributing organization to adopt such courageous and unusual policies. . . . It will be greatly to the advantage of all exhibitors to sign contracts with Goldwyn now.

MOLLIE KING AND CREIGHTON HALE is a strong attraction for you!

¶ No.1 Mollie King is one of the most beautiful girls on the screen today. Her talent as a player has been amply proven by the Pathé successes – the serial "Mystery of the Double Cross" and the features "The On-the Square Girl", "Kick In", and "Blind Man's Luck".

¶ No.2 Creighton Hale had a very large following in "The Exploits of Elaine" and "The Iron Claw". He is young, handsome and an actor of experience. The millions who followed him in his two previous serials will want to see him in "The Seven Pearls".

¶ No.3 Charles W. Goddard, the author, is a famous dramatist and writer for the screen. With Paul Dickey he wrote "The Misleading Lady", "The Ghost Breaker" and "The Last Laugh", all successful plays. He wrote "The Perils of Pauline" and with Arthur B. Reeve "The Exploits of Elaine", two great serials.

Other reasons will follow.

BATTLE FRONT"

Here is the Reason

These are the kind of the so-called "war pictures" for which the public—and the trade—have been seeking.

Which means that they are "different"—

Different, in that heroism is supplanted for horror. Romance, beauty, drama, art, action, suspense take the place of a deadly round of deadliness.

In other words, these art records of the Italian battlefront contain that quality so essential to entertainment and successful screen presentations:

A GREAT, HUMAN DRAMATIC, NOTE—

Plus—

The most marvelous natural scenery that has ever been shown in any picture.

It is because of this that up to the date of the release of this advertisement, standing room has been at a premium in every theatre at which these pictures have been presented, and scalpers have been reaping a harvest.

Facts and Comments

THE exhibitor with a touch of advertising is a curious minded man. His interest in his neighbors and in life is so fresh that he is said to be original, which merely means that his ideas and actions are not faked. He isn't half-hearted nor half alive, but is genuinely there. He doesn't "get there," but is there all the time. The kernel in the nut is his desire to be friendly. This is the real difference between exhibitors—one can't help being friendly because it is in him naturally; the other wants to be a success, perhaps, but he wants it for himself. He merely tries to be friendly. To the latter success is quite possible, but hardly in the amusement business. The other—well, the people like to talk about him and the more freshly curious his mind is the more they delight to tell each other about him. There's exhibitor Harry Pomeroy of the Photodrome in Toronto. He got the small boys hunting through the long grass for snakes for him. We don't know why he wanted them. But he made us write this and that's the personal advertising touch of genius that pays in the exhibiting of pictures.

THERE have been from time to time suggestions that the number of denominations of our smaller coins be increased. Cashiers in our picture theaters would have their work greatly simplified by the introduction of a 15-cent piece, while we have often believed that a 20-cent piece would be used in greater number than our old standby, the quarter. Possibly there are banking and other reasons why it might be inadvisable to have too many different small coins, but we would welcome consideration of the question by the powers that be and believe an addition or two would facilitate the transaction of business in many lines outside the moving picture theaters. The daily change passing the little ticket window of our theaters is of such volume that if the 6-cent and 11-cent admissions talked of a short time ago had become effective the Government would have been justified in striking new coins for those exact amounts.

THE greatly increased demand for good, serviceable programs at reasonable prices for family group and children's matinees, church, school and similar entertainment is emphasizing the need of a Central Bureau or Exchange or Film Library in all the larger centers where such programs may be secured. The present exchange system of handling moving picture productions is ignoring altogether this very important end of the business and the film industry will have to take cognizance of this increasing demand sooner or later if it is to be taken full advantage of. When one requires a book on any subject whatever nowadays they naturally go to the library. They do not have to find out who published the book and go to the publisher nor do they have to visit a half dozen different booksellers before they secure the particular book they may desire. Why not so with film?

INDICATIONS continue to multiply justifying the belief that the whole industry will enjoy a season of excellent business during the coming fall and winter. Business in general is booming, good wages are being paid over the whole country and theaters are being reopened and running to good business in every state in the Union. The anxiety and worry and increased strain under which the people are at present laboring make short periods of respite and entertainment more imperative than ever and nothing that we know of at present quite equals the moving picture in providing these short and necessarily frequent moments of relaxation.

BE SURE you are right, then go ahead, is an old motto and a mighty good one in business. Any enterprise that is begun on a wrong foundation starts with a handicap that will usually prove, sooner or later, insurmountable. When, to a faulty foundation, is added improper business methods, the situation becomes correspondingly worse. Submission to "big stick" methods in the slightest degree will result in a greater use of the big stick.

Presentation, Not Exhibition

By Louis Reeves Harrison

THERE is no great difference between the two words in ordinary use. Exhibition is probably more general, sometimes expressing a section of the other, and presentation has come to be regarded as more ceremonious, characterized by more elaborate form. Such is the distinction here intended. The manager of the Rialto, S. L. Rothapfel, for instance, has made the showing of moving pictures very imposing and impressive. Finding the Rialto packed with an enthusiastic audience at a very early hour in the afternoon, I made some inquiries and learned that five representations were being given daily.

The success of an exhibitor, quite as well as that of a producer or an actor, is something to be studied as an example and even utilized as one, provided it is due to some definite policy carried out consistently, or to exceptional taste and full appreciation of what an audience needs, or, above all, to a sincere desire to make moving pictures a big factor in our daily lives. A careful study of the effects which have led to Rialto popularity brought to light an almost unsuspected artistry in offering moving pictures before a mixed audience for acceptance.

The Rothapfel idea seems to be to make a whole impression of the visual kind, with a delightful appeal to the ear besides, the latter not intrustive while a picture is being shown, but appropriate and harmonious. Then aside from this charm, the music alone is decidedly worth while, a delight in itself, and it affords in sole performance a refreshing relief from possible eye strain. The eye is also given no decorative distraction. The theater interior is one of very dignified beauty. It might not even attract attention because of its noble simplicity of design.

Here we have a form of exhibition so elevated that it can consistently be called "presentation." It starts with a house design full of meaning, one of its subtlest charms. Good taste is pleased, and common taste, very rarely pure, is not offended. There is nothing incongruous, nothing inappropriate, though the ordinary exhibition room may confound and jar the eyes in many ways, wrong in shape, wrong in color, wrong in proportion, so many points of unconscious irritation for the audience. After visiting a harmonious theater one can sincerely say, "I am very pleased to have met you, and I hope to have the pleasure of calling again." Such is the effect of artistic design.

It is often next to impossible for the really ambitious exhibitor to get the right sort of house, so much depends on opportunity, and his opportunity may be limited by the inexorable laws of supply and demand, but he can sometimes compensate by making his patrons comfortable, placing them in chairs meant to give the spectators a sense of ease while they are his guests.

An interesting experiment would be that of having each audience vote on the question of time versus comfort. "Would you prefer a two-hour performance in easier chairs, or three hours in those you are using?" This new art is violating many old conventions, sweeping time-honored traditions into the dust heap—we may yet provide chairs for the spectator which he can call his own, which do not compel him to dig his elbows in his sides to keep them from jabbing his neighbor's, with people directly in front of him far enough apart for him to see the whole screen between their heads, instead of twisting himself with cat-like contortions to get a glimpse of the pictured story.

Before the average exhibitor can go to any large expense in such matters as house beauty and comfort, he may feel that he should be playing on velvet in the game. The quality of his projection, dealt with elsewhere in the MOVING PICTURE WORLD, becomes highly important. But, after he has done all in his power to be fair with his patrons, his thoughts turn to how he can set the tide of victory flowing in his favor. The ordinary attendance may pay expenses with a dangerously narrow profit besides—by what magic can he find out the secret of filling his house to overflowing? How can he lay hands on the big money?

The "flash" has been tried. It works in some places, especially in large city locations, where new people are constantly passing. The billboard gets them in—sometimes it keep them out—but the neighborhood house can only be built up on steady patronage, and that means steady, high quality of performance. Let us suppose that an ambitious exhibitor, anxious to reach a state of high-class presentation, willing to take a chance and in dead earnest, is getting 20 per cent. of the possible patronage in his neighborhood. How can he get a line on the other 80 per cent. of them?

Get away from biased viewpoint. Certain beaming women will exclaim "How cute!" every time a baby is shown on the screen; even little animals may temporarily stir their maternal instincts. But the constant introducion of babies and little animals would soon empty the house. Little Jimmie wants an exciting chase, in which the heroine arrives at the very last minute to save the hero from the villain's clutches. But Little Jimmie would empty the house of all but his own kind. The man who selects his own program must broaden the scope of his selective taste until he can rise to a point of discriminating among all screen stories.

Have a definite policy and carry it out consistently, try to learn what an audience needs in order to arrive at that policy. What are you looking for when you turn over the leaves of a story magazine? Something new? Something refreshing? Do you prefer fresh fruit to dried apples? The evaporated kind may do for the people who are attending your theater—how about those who are not? Your surplus profits must come from them. Demand at least some originality. Let us suppose you find a good magazine story with a definite aim which bears on subjects uppermost in the minds of people today. To every friend you meet you are going to say, "You ought to read so and so—it is great."

Your patrons ought to leave your theater as so many publicity agents, speaking to all their friends of the consistently fine presentation you are making of stories entirely new and of a kind which leaves a strong after impression. If a story starts out to show where tenderness, sentiment and consideration may be better than harsh justice, the introduction of extraneous matter is merely so much padding and destroys both the pleasurable illusion and the strength of impression to be made. The moment a story is no longer consistent it becomes self-destructive. The people may enjoy a few scenes but the whole effect is boredom.

To attain presentation means an effort on your part to make moving pictures a big factor in our lives. Your audience goes to the theater in a receptive mood, very much as a woman goes shopping—she is willing to buy something good. It is for you to supply the vision. People are there to be impressed. It is for you to make the impression. It is not a case of this or that actor or director, but of a great, big composite artistry in all the leading factors of production.

Summer Musings

By Sam Spedon

THIS is our vacation time and we are not supposed to be bothering our heads about anything but doing the "dolce far niente" act at some summer resort with our wife, to show the rest of the guests that we are the real things, even if we don't own an automobile. No use, you can't teach an old dog new tricks. We stood it for three days, then we had to get back on the job among the reel people before we got too lazy to work at all. We don't have to write this and you don't have to read it. You may find it different and it may give you something to think about and help relieve your minds.

Green Fields of Virginia and Canada.

We are going to the convention to be held at Ocean View, Norfolk, Va., the latter part of this month by the Exhibitors of the Virginias, Carolinas, District of Columbia and adjacent territory. We are looking forward to meeting our old friends in that section; they are arranging for a real business session of much interest. Jake Wells, president of the American Exhibitors' Association, will be there. H. B. Varner of Charlotte, N. C.; Percy Wells of Wilmington, N. C.; Harry Crandall of Washington, D. C., and we are informed Lee Ochs, president of the National Exhibitors' Association, will be there; C. C. Pettijohn, general manager of the A. E. A., is expected. We ought to hear a whole lot of worth while news and get a big ear full. Besides it will give us another chance of sizing up the Southern situation, which we consider one of the most prolific on the motion picture map. Nothing like getting a broad view of things outside the confines of our little six by eight. September 9 and 10 we will jump to St. Johns, New Brunswick, to mix with the exhibitors of the Maritime provinces of Canada. They tell us there is a live "bunch" up there and we want to get better acquainted with them. They are keen for organization and we may learn a whole lot that is new touching upon a territory the industry should cultivate.

Never Too Old to Learn.

The other day we called a film man's attention to an article on motion pictures, published in one of the national magazines. He said: "I know. It's an old story." We agree with him. Motion pictures grow stale to us and so do we. That's the reason we lose business keenness and do not keep up with the procession. The heart and the mind must ever keep young in this business. It presents new phases every day, it changes over night. If we are alert we can always learn something new from the other fellow's experience. We should not give up the student habit; listen, read and learn all the time. It is a mistake to conclude we know it all. Just as soon as we do we will go backward. The world doesn't stand still; neither does the film business. When we get too old and wise to learn it is time to take off our shoes, turn ourselves loose and await the end.

Identity.

When an individual player becomes identified with any make of pictures and becomes recognized as part of them it is an assurance of their character and it is mighty hard to make people believe differently. As soon as those pictures lose the personnel of their players they lose in popularity. We believe the picture should be the thing "The play's the thing" applied to the stage as the special medium of entertainment, but just the same the play is considered better if it has the popular and capable actors to put it over and properly interpret it.

When a public individual loses his identity in the public eye he is soon forgotten and the asset for which he was valued is lost. It would have been a wise move on the part of some producing companies who have lost much of their indentity to have followed the co-operative method by making those who contributed to their prosperity sharers in it instead of believing they themselves were the alpha and omega of the whole business. This could have been done for a year or term of years instead of considering them mere employees. The more progressive producers recognize that they must retain personnel and identity as that which counts for success.

There are some newcomers into the producing of motion pictures who had a false idea that they could conduct it as they would manufacturing, and some old timers believed it, gradually they learned their mistake and they are now willing to leave it to those who know and from present indications the man who knows how isn't looking for a job.

No Such an Animal as Monopoly

By Sam Spedon.

AT the present time all sorts of questions and rumors are ripe about an amalgamation of star feature productions. Will it lead to monopoly of all that is worth showing and seeing? Will it develop into a merger of producers and exhibitors who will control all the best theaters? Will the best star features be vested in one exchange?

A Dream.

Many a thinking man has dreamed of such an amalgamation and looked forward to its realization. It has never come to pass, and it is the belief of many it never will. As we see it, concentration of productions does not necessarily mean monopoly. It means co-operation. Each star or unit of stars produces its own pictures at its own expense and has a monetary interest and guarantee in the profits of its products leased through the one distributing source. In this way each star being a partner or part of the whole receives his profit from the success of his own products and the exchange handles them just as a department store handles different products on consignment. Nor does concentration necessarily mean that any one exchange can secure and hold everything of the best no matter how much it might desire it. The co-operative system does not destroy the individual identity of each unit, who will naturally look out for its own interests. Therefore if results or profits from the amalgamation do not measure up to its expectations that unit will withdraw from the amalgamation and release through some other channel.

Many to Select From.

There are not less than ten producing companies provided with stars of first magnitude well equipped to supply the varied demands for high grade pictures and there always will be a plenty to furnish all the other grades. It is well to remember that no matter how long or short a picture may be or who the players may be, no picture will be acceptable to the public and survive unless it meets a certain standard of perfection and tells a story worth while picturizing.

Nothing Less Than Good.

We may have good, better and best pictures, valued accordingly, but nothing less than good will satisfy. Therefore there is no need of apprehending a monopoly of production by one concern. We will always find a supply equal to the demand and our circumstances. Anything less than good means failure.

Control of Theaters.

It may be that the key-note of organization was struck by an exhibitors' circuit in protecting the exhibitors against the invasion of the theater field by large moneyed interests, a report of which was circulated two or three years ago when such an invasion was likened to the United Cigar Store intersts. There always will be in human affairs an effort for control, hence the cause and need for union or organization in the regulation of them.

N. A. M. P. I. By-Laws

THE recent first Members' Annual Meeting of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry shed some light on the by-laws governing the organization that would seem to call for careful and immediate consideration if the Association is intended to be representative of the whole industry and all branches of it impartially. It is not an easy task to draft a set of by-laws that will meet all the requirements of such an organization and the defects that developed in the present by-laws were doubtless unforeseen. It was also propitious that these defects should be brought into the limelight thus early in the life of the Association, as this makes possible an early correction, which, in turn, will result in unhampered development of this very necessary trade organization.

Undoubtedly the gravest error uncovered in the by-laws in the short discussion at the annual meeting was the limiting of membership for exhibitors to Class Two, or rather making membership in this Class contingent to or dependent on membership in another and outside organization. Class Two limits membership in the N. A. M. P. I. to exhibitors who are members of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America. It was further developed in the discussion that no further provision was made for membership of exhibitors except through Class Five, which already includes publishers, authors, actors, directors, agencies and all others not included in the first four classes.

Producers and importers are admitted as a class, not as a separate organization and altogether independent of any other affiliation, and the same is true of the manufacturers and dealers in equipment in Class Three and distributors of motion pictures in Class Four. Exhibitors are by far the most numerous of any class or group in the industry and this fact was evidently in mind when Class Two was given double the representation of any of the other classes on the Board of Directors. Why then should exhibitor representation in the N. A. M. P. I. be limited to exhibitors only who are members of another organization?

The president of the N. A. M. P. I. is making strenuous and laudable efforts to keep petty politics out of the deliberations of his Association. All unwittingly or otherwise, however, the Association is hereby saddled with a fundamental bit of trouble making—a discriminating and unfair regulation that is bound to be a canker until it is corrected.

Surely it would not be a hard matter to adjust some method of prorating representation of the different Classes on a basis of membership, if that is necessary. As pointed out by a member at the annual meeting, membership in the Association should be on broad, democratic principles of equal representation. If not, and if the organization is to be made the catspaw of any clique or group, no matter of what class in the industry, the end of its usefulness will not be far distant.

There is no politics behind our motive in bringing this forward for consideration at this time, however much some may try to make it appear that there is. A storm of protest may result on the ground that this discourages unity of organization and fosters the idea of several antagonistic groups. This we deny. It is no part of the work of the N. A. M. P. I. to bring exhibitors or any other class together in an outside organization of their own, but it is the duty of the Association to open its classes of membership to each branch of the industry on an equal basis for all, without fear or favor. The N. A. M. P. I. should become a strong organization, representative of this great industry and any flaws in its by-laws or anything else that stands in the way of its progress should be eliminated and corrected with all possible despatch.

A Triumph for Decency

By Edward Weitzel.

THE day of the salacious moving picture has evidently come to an end. Unscrupulous adventurers who still labor under the delusion that there is considerable profit to be made by manufacturing screen dramas that pander to the lowest instincts of humanity, will do well to heed the fate of the first release of a company that sought to place on the market a photoplay of this description. The claim to an ethical purpose put forth in behalf of the picture deceived neither the National Board of Review nor the better class of trade journals, the real nature of the play being unmistakable. Everything was done to "put the picture over." The author of the scenario was a playwright of experience and reputation, the director was equally distinguished and the members of the cast were high salaried players chosen for their fitness for their respective characters. An expensive advertising campaign, to which the Moving Picture World refused to open its columns, absorbed still more of the company's funds; but the failure of the picture to pass the censorship and the frank exposure of its true character by a number of the reviewers of the moving picture press proved too great a handicap, and the original version was withdrawn from the market. Last week the National Board of Review and representatives of the trade papers were asked to pass judgment upon a second and much chastened edition of the offending picture. Practically all the obnoxious material had been eliminated, the "cleaning up" process resulting in a screen drama that no longer presents scenes of depravity under the cloak of exposing the dangers of driving lewd women from their accustomed haunts.

The family moving picture theater is not the proper forum for discussions on such a subject.

A gratifying indication of the success attending the efforts to put a stop to the making of undesirable pictures is revealed by the remark of a speculative gentleman, after reading the reviews of the release in question.

"Six months ago such a bunch of 'roasts' would have been worth all kinds of money to that picture. The talk about it being offcolor would have boomed it in great shape, but you can't get away with that stuff now."

Correct, Mr. Speculator! And the bars are up for good in every sense of the word!

Activities of War Committees

OF THE MOTION PICTURE INDUSTRY

Have You Any Films to Give to the Soldiers in France?

THROUGH the MOVING PICTURE WORLD one of the veteran chaplains of the United States Army appeals to the manufacturers and exchangemen of the country on behalf of the soldiers on service in France. The chaplain, who has been many years in the service, must be nameless on account of the War Department prohibition against the publication of the identity of persons or organizations destined for foreign service. Suffice it to say he has, since pictures became a public amusement, been using them for the entertainment of the men under his care. He states that in time to come, perhaps within a year, the Young Men's Christian Association will be in a position to exhibit motion pictures to the men in France. In the meantime that organization will have its hands full taking care of the entertainment of the men in the camps of the regular army, the National Guard and the national army in the United States.

Until such time as the Y. M. C. A. can extend its work to France the chaplain says the only motion pictures the soldiers in camp will be able to see are those which may be provided by the manufacturers and exchangemen here and exhibited under the direction of the chaplains of the different organizations. The visitor to the WORLD office, who expects soon to join his regiment on the other side, said he would take up with his brother chaplains the work of organizing the distribution and exhibiting of the pictures in the several camps. What is necessary first are the films—and those of comedies, especially.

It is not stipulated that the films shall be new or even nearly new. Old films will be welcomed by the soldiers. There must be many such subjects available in the vaults of the exchanges in this country, subjects the owners of which would be glad to give to such a high purpose—it would be difficult to conceive of a higher. It need not be pointed out that the class of pictures should be of the best in theme—the cleanest—only such as a man would show in his own home and surrounded by his own family. This is vital.

The Moving Picture World will be glad to forward to the proper army official for shipment to the soldiers in France any such film as may be sent to this office and to acknowledge in its columns the receipt of all such. In case of New York contributions we will arrange for their collection.

Who will be the first to contribute films for the entertainment of the men who are giving their all representing the United States abroad?

Brady Praises Friend

WILLIAM A. BRADY, chairman of the war committee for the motion picture industry, which is working in conjunction with the officials in Washington, uttered strong words of praise last week for Arthur S. Friend, chairman of the industry's delegation to the Food Commission. Mr. Brady said also that Herbert C. Hoover, head of the commission, seemed to be the first of the Washington officials to appraise at its full value the aid that may be given by the motion picture industry in the work of prosecuting the war.

The president of the National Association said no end of credit should be given to Mr. Friend, who was entering heart and soul into his work in the capital city. "He is Johnny on the Spot," he said. "He is spending his own money and is getting results."

The treasurer of the Famous Players-Lasky Company, in order to facilitate his work in Washington has opened offices in that city. There he will attend various conferences with Mr. Hoover and the other authorities interested in the food situation. Mr. Friend is a lawyer as well as a man of marked executive ability.

William L. Sherrill, vice-chairman of the general committee, and also chairman of the committee to the shipping board, will go to Washington this week to confer with Edward Hurley, chairman of the shipping board. Mr. Sherrill will present to Mr. Hurley some well defined ideas as to how the picture industry can aid the board in its work of creating a large merchant marine and equipping it with man power. Already several applications have been made for the making of pictures on this division of the government's work.

Mr. Brady was gratified last week to receive the following letter from William G. McAdoo, Secretary of the Treasury. It is self-explanatory:

The Secretary of the Treasury,
Washington, August 8, 1917

My Dear Mr. Brady: I have your letter of the 1st of August advising me of the appointment of Messrs. Zukor, Loew, Irwin, Brulatour and Spoor as a committee representing the motion picture industry to co-operate with the Treasury Department in placing its activities before the public of the country, especially in connection with the Liberty Loan. I deeply appreciate your interest in the matter, and shall be glad to write to each of the gentlemen named in accordance with your suggestion. I am sure that the film can perform a great patriotic service to the country at this time, and I am indeed pleased to have your co-operation.

I am taking the liberty of expressing the hope that you will submit some concrete suggestions in the near future I shall be glad to have them, and shall give them my careful consideration in connection with the campaign for the next loan.

I am advising Mr. Oscar Price, who has just been appointed Director of Publicity for the loan, of the committee you have selected to co-operate with the Treasury Department. May I suggest that you keep in touch with him as to assistance which may be rendered by the motion picture industry in carrying the message of the next loan, when it is announced, to the people of the United States?

With best wishes I am

Cordially yours,
W. G. McADOO.

War Work Under Way in Boston

Louis B. Mayer, in Charge of the New England Campaign, Addresses Massachusetts Exhibitors.

President Louis B. Mayer of the New England Metro and the American Feature Film Company of Boston has started a vigorous campaign in New England to aid the National Government in its war campaign of publicity. Mr. Mayer was given the assignment of taking full charge of the New England campaign by William A. Brady, chairman of the motion picture committee.

One of Mr. Mayer's first acts was to address the members of the Massachusetts branch of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America at a special session on Tuesday, August 13, at the league headquarters, 127 Pleasant street, Boston. A large gathering was in attendance.

Mr. Mayer was introduced by President Ernest H. Horstmann. His address was full of instructive points on how the exhibitors could play an important part in aiding the Government in war times. He told them of the great service which President Wilson expected of them and stated that by their sincere co-operation the motion picture industry should be able to help the Government materially in the vigorous prosecution and conduct of the war.

"The motion picture," Mr. Mayer said, "has become the great intermediary between the public and the Government at Washington. By throwing instructive reading matter upon the screen in every motion picture house invaluable aid to the government in its various propagandas such as food conservation and liberty bond sales may be given."

Mr. Mayer, with Mrs. Alice Rice Carroll, a prominent Massachusetts exhibitor and well known lecturer, is mapping out a program, which will be put into operation in the near future. Mr. Mayer announces he will be glad to receive suggestions of any sort from New England exhibitors in regard to this new movement.

The first publicity matter to be thrown on New England screens will be literature regarding the movement for shoppers to carry home their own bundles, rather than have them delivered. It is expected this movement will meet with success.

The Massachusetts Branch of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America went on record at the session as supporting the Government in its work by co-operating in every way possible with Mr. Mayer and Mrs. Carroll.

Mrs. Carroll is one of the few women exhibitors in Massachusetts, or in fact New England. She controls the Home theater in Everett and the Regent theater in Arlington, both of which houses are doing a big business, owing to her unceasing efforts to make her patrons happy and give them the show they want. She has also been an active worker in women's club circles and led the movement against motion picture censorship in New England. It was Mrs. Carroll's work and lectures which she gave before the women's clubs in several New Hampshire cities that killed censorship in that State.

The Roll of Honor

CARL METCALFE, one of the oldest of the screen players, has been commissioned second lieutenant in the national army, having been graduated last week from the Plattsburg training camp. Lieutenant Metcalfe has been receiving the congratulations of his fellow-members of the Screen Club, among whom there is a firm belief that promotion will quickly come to him when he gets into real work.

Paul McAllister, author and screen player, has been commissioned a captain of infantry following the recent graduation exercises at the Plattsburg camp.

Victor Smith, known to his friends as "Vic," long time studio manager and general manager of the Vitagraph, has been commissioned a second lieutenant in the Quartermasters Department.

Bud Fisher, creator of Mutt and Jeff, is off for Plattsburg training camp this week. W. A. Brook, manager of the Bud Fisher Company, has been ordered to Governors Island for a course of training for the Quartermasters' Department.

Kent Watson, correspondent of the Moving Picture World at Dallas, has left for the army training camp at Fort Worth.

Robert Warwick, screen player, leaves this week for Plattsburg to enter the officers' training corps.

Alan J. Bachrach, late of the V-L-S-E sales force, is being showered with congratulations upon having won his shoulder straps following the three months' course of training which he has been undergoing at Fort Myer, Va. Mr. Bachrach is a second lieutenant of the new National Army, and has been assigned to the Quartermaster Corps for active duty. The new lieutenant has had experience from both sides of the business, having been manager of the Casino theater when that house was operated as a picture and vaudeville theater by the Brylawski interests, and with other houses owned and operated by them.

Noman M. Dickson, traveling representative for K-E-S-E out of the Indianapolis office, who joined the officers' reserve training corps at Fort Benjamin Harrison, has received a commission as first lieutenant, and expects to see active service soon.

Victor A. Nulty, for many years associated with Kessel & Bauman—The New York Motion Picture Company—has been promoted to the rank of corporal in the Second Machine Gun Troop of the First Texas Cavalry, at present stationed at Hillsboro, Texas. Corporal McNulty writes: "I don' know how or where I am going, but it makes no difference, because my companions are rattle-snake eaters and German killers."

Asta Nielsen, Danish Actress in America

A FEW years ago, when pictures made in Europe were common on the American screens, Asta Nielsen's abilities as a vampire and comedy lead were recognized by most patrons. She has appeared in Nordisk and other Continental brands and is of the black-haired, black-eyed type and rather slender. A story is told of a patron new to pictures who asked, "Who is that holding a stick up in front of the screen?" "That isn't any stick," he was admonished, "that's Asta Nielsen." She does give that up-and-down effect with a tight fitting silk dress on and has the ability to make excellent comedy use of it. But her mobility of countenance and the power of registering with dramatic effectiveness all kinds of emotions has given her high standing as an artist. She may make use of tears, but they are not needed to show her grief. Among so many impressions as a screen critic gets, it is hard to remember more than a general impression of work seen three years ago; but the writer has enjoyed many of her pictures and terror and laughter are equally convincing in her.

Asta Nielsen.

She was born in Copenhagen not many years ago and began her theatrical career at the Royal theater playing Ibsen characters. Then at the New theater, also in Copenhagen, she made a distinct hit as "Trilby." Her first film appearance was in a picture made for the Nordisk in 1912 and has worked under several brands since. She arrived in America this week on the "United States," a Danish steamer, and is at the Biltmore at present. The war has, of course, given the death blow to artistic activity in Europe. Miss Nielsen probably finds it a good time to take a vacation. She intends to visit the Pacific Coast and may go on to Japan. It is affirmed that she has not come here under contract and is not connected with any film maker on this side of the water.

"THE SPY" AT THE GLOBE.

William Fox will present "The Spy," George Bronson-Howard's sensational expose of the nation-wide workings of the German spy system in this country, in which Dustin Farnum appears in the stellar role, at the Globe theater, beginning Monday night, August 27. "Jack and the Beanstalk" will close there on August 26. "The Conqueror," which was announced to follow "Jack and the Beanstalk" will be seen later on Broadway.

"The Spy" is released as a special production, under a separate contract, by William Fox, and bookings can be fixed now with any branch manager of the Fox Film Corporation.

Association's All-Star Picture a Winner

Manufacturers' Review of Great Scenes from Screen Productions Is a Most Interesting Novelty

A WHALE of a subject is the all-star composite production assembled by the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry and shown to the trade at the Strand theater on the morning of Thursday, August 16. There was a large gathering of film men present, and they all were enthusiastic over the remarkable entertaining qualities of the great scenes from great screen plays. Never but once before had anything similar been attempted, and that was by a single company. Here were scenes taken from the works of a number of manufacturers. President William A. Brady of the association announced in a short address before the pictures were shown that there would be exhibited but three of the five reels it is intended to release. The two others were not yet ready.

The three reels shown were "Love Scenes from Great Screen Plays," "Great Fights in Motion Pictures" and "Daredevil Deeds of Motion Picture Artists." The two remaining reels are "Great Acting Moments" and "Funny Moments of Funny Stars."

Mr. Brady stated in his preliminary talk that the picture had been contributed by all the manufacturers, but that by no means did the present showing represent all that were to come. Independent of the matter contained in the two reels that were not to be shown there were to be contributions from Goldwyn, which company would present one scene from each of its earlier subjects. Paramount, too, with a rich store of productions, would add its bit to the whole.

"In assembling these pictures," said the head of the National Association, "our object is to raise a fund for the legitimate legislative work of the association. In the past year we have had to combat adverse legislation in forty-eight states, and we were successful. We will probably meet more of the same sort in the coming year, but it is also probable we will have more friends than we have had in the past.

"At the present moment there are over a dozen committees of your industry working in Washington in co-operation with the Army and Navy departments, with the Food Commission, with all the factors of war activity. Our men are giving up their time and money without recompense, making daily and weekly trips to Washington.

"The picture you are to see is to be issued, say, one reel a month for a period of five months, or oftener if it should be the wish of those who purchase it." Mr. Brady then described how the subject would be strengthened by the addition of the productions of other manufacturers. "These pictures," he went on, "which will comprise the work of every star of real prominence in the United States, will be sold for the benefit of the association."

Tender Moments in the Love Scenes.

In the first reel, "Love Scenes From Great Screen Plays," there were fourteen subjects. It is purely a matter of individual opinion as to which of these was the greatest, but there can be no question that the scenes from Vitagraph's "The Christian" stood out. Earle Williams and Edith Storey were the players, and truly it was a great moment from a great story. Then, too, there was a real touch in the flash from Mutual's "Youth's Endearing Young Charms," in which Mary Miles Minter shone. Context was unnecessary to establish the situation. It spoke for itself; it all was eloquent of life, of the persistence, the determination of a woman not to be scorned by the man she loved.

There was more than a reminiscent interest in the scene showing Mary Pickford and Henry Walthall in Biograph's "Ramona." Not only was this an extract from a picture, the making of which was the occasion and the reason of Biograph journeying to the Pacific Coast for the first time; not only was it taken from a subject conceded up to that time, 1910, to be the most expensive single reel ever made, but it showed us Miss Pickford in her teens—not so long ago at that—and Mr. Walthall at the beginning of a screen career destined to be notable.

Other scenes in the opening reel, and every last one of them of interest, were Rupert Julian and Ella Hall, in Bluebird's "The Bugler of Algiers"; Carlyle Blackwell and Ethel Clayton, in World Film's "A Woman's Way"; Donald Cameron and Lillian Walker, in Vitagraph's "Kitty Mackay"; Franklyn Farnum, in Universal's "The Woman He Feared"; Anita Stewart and Evart Overton, in Vitagraph's "The Glory of Yolanda"; Francis X. Bushman and Beverly Bayne, in "Romeo and Juliet"; Clara Kimball Young, in World Film's "The Dark Silence"; Madame Petrova, in Metro's "The Black Butterfly"; Alice Brady, in World Film's "La Vie de Boheme," and Harold Lockwood and May Allison, in Metro's "Pidgin Island."

Some Hot Scraps With Real Thrills.

Real thrills there were in the series of great fights. One of the shorter but decidedly picturesque was that of Neal Hart in Universal's "The Raid." Douglas Fairbanks was shown in a red-hot muss from Triangle's "Reggie Mixes In." It was one gem out of a rather wide choice in the same subject. It was enough—enough to show what the robust player can put over when he sets out to do things; and it demonstrated his ability to pick opponents who can take as well as give punishment. Jack Sherrill in World Film's "Then I'll Come Back to You" staged a mill that held attention tight. Then there were William S. Hart and House Peters in Triangle's "Between Men"; E. H. Sothern in Vitagraph's "An Enemy to the King"; Robert Warwick, in World Film's "Alias Jimmy Valentine"; Mr. Bushman, in Metro's "Pennington's Choice"; Alice Brady, in World Film's "Tangled Fates." Last and by no means least, there was Charles Chaplin and his robust associate in the escalator scene from Mutual's "The Floor Walker." It is just as funny as when it was released and displays Chaplin at his best. It is a situation to make even an exhibitor laugh.

Regret was expressed by some of those present that the battle between William Farnum and Tom Santschi in Selig's "The Spoilers" had not been included. Executive Secretary Flliott of the association said he had written Mr. Selig asking for the excerpt. Also on Mr. Elliott's list was the fight between William S. Hart and Robert Edeson in Triangle's "On the Night Stage."

When the Players Take Risks.

The final reel shown was devoted to "Daredevil Deeds of Motion Pictures." There was an even dozen extracts shown, and the incidents were of a wide variety. Helen Holmes put over a train thriller in a Universal subject. Then there were Alice Brady, in World Film's "Miss Petticoats"; Mr. Bushman and Miss Bayne, in Metro's "The Great Secret"; Mr. Lockwood and Miss Allison, in Metro's "The River of Romance"; Miss Bayne, in Metro's "Pennington's Choice"; Joseph Kilgour and Virginia Pearson, in Fox's "The Turn of the Road;" Charles Richman, in Vitagraph's "The Secret Kingdom" and the same company's "'A Goat Without Horns"; Mary Anderson, in Vitagraph's "The Dangers of Doris" and "The Gang"; Edith Storey, in "Aladdin from Broadway," and a scene from the storm on shipboard from Triangle's "Aloha Oe"—a finely staged spectacle.

It will be noted that some companies have supplied a large number of extracts. With the expansion of the list, as outlined by Mr. Brady in his introductory address, the series is bound to be of even greater interest. One inevitable result of the showing of these "bits" from so many subjects is to arouse curosity among picturegoers to see the story surrounding these "punches," which, in spite of being separated from their context, are able so strongly to grip the interest.

Perhaps it was this phase of the showing that was uppermost in the mind of one feminine observer who remarked at the conclusion: "But it is all so tantalizing!" Then, again, she made have had in mind those tenderer moments revealed in the first thousand feet.

WALT WHITMAN AS SOUTHERN PLANTER.

Walt Whitman, veteran character actor, will soon make his appearance as a Southern planter, wearing long coat, checkered trousers and wide black hat, in a Triangle production, "The Tar-Heel Warrior," directed by E. Mason Hopper. A company of colored players has been engaged

NEW JEWEL FOR BROADWAY THEATER.

Jewels Productions, Inc., will put into the Broadway Theatre, starting August 28, a super-feature in five reels, titled "Sirens of the Sea." Allen Hollbar produced the offering after the scenario by Grace Helen Bailey. Louise Loveland and Jack Mulhall will be seen in the leading roles.

Nicholas Power Company Wins Suit

Action in United States Court for Infringement of Fire Shutter Brought by LeRoy and Baird Finally Disposed of by Judge Manton—Power Company Wins on All Contentions.

THE opinion in the case of Jean A. LeRoy and Chester R. Baird against Nicholas Power Company, handed down last week by Judge Manton in the United States District Court for the Southern District of New York, terminated litigation which has been virtually pending for the last three and one-half years. The suit was based on a patent for fire shutter granted to LeRoy on October 7, 1913, No. 1,075,215, and which was claimed by LeRoy to be infringed by the fire shutter known as the Nicholas Power Style "B" shutter used on all the Power Cameragraphs in recent years.

The litigation was started by two suits instituted shortly after the grant of the patent in the fall of 1913, against two exhibitors using Power No. 6 Cameragraphs in theaters, in the city of Buffalo. These suits were brought without knowledge of the Nicholas Power Company, but as soon as the company received notice of them, they took over the entire defense.

After it became known that the defense of these suits had been undertaken by the Nicholas Power Company, the plaintiffs dismissed the Buffalo suits of their own motion and instituted proceedings in the Federal Court in this city against the Nicholas Power Company directly. The suit came to trial in the latter part of April and the decision handed down is a complete victory to the Nicholas Power Company on every point which they urged against the patent.

The Nicholas Power Company rested their defense on three principal grounds; first, that Nicholas Power was the first and original inventor of the shutter and not LeRoy; second, that the shutter had been used publicly for more than two years before the LeRoy application for patent; and third, that the LeRoy patent was invalid in view of numerous prior patents on fire shutters, principal among them the patents of the Edison Company.

Mr. Power testified as to his invention of the shutter more than eleven years ago and was corroborated as to his early work by witnesses from the Power factory, also by Mr. Timothy of the Department of Gas, Water Supply and Electricity, Mr. Cecil of the New York Herald, and others, Mr. Timothy stating that the first fire shutter ever presented to his department was one invented by Mr. Power. The rebuttal of the plaintiff to this evidence is summed up by the Court in the decision in the following language:

> The only contradiction of this is the testimony of Bogdanffy, a former employee of Power, who claimed that he made the drawing for this shutter and showed it to Mr. Power and directed its construction. The record of the City Water Department shows that Shutter "B," which Bogdanffy says he suggested to Mr. Power in April, 1907, was submitted to the Department for approval or disapproval in December, 1906, and the witness (Mr. Timothy) called from that Department, is therefore confirmatory of the claim that it was made prior to March 12, 1908.
> I regard Bogdanffy's claim that he made a drawing of the parts in co-operation with Mr. Power (indeed it is even claimed that he was the real inventor of the Power Shutter "B") as not well founded. His testimony is in direct conflict with many circumstances portrayed by the evidence which cannot be erroneous and point with unerring certainty to the untruthfulness of his claim.

The Court's opinion that the patent was invalid in view of the various patents prior to LeRoy is summed up in the following clause:

> The cases are uniform in holding that there is no invention merely selecting and fitting together the most desirable parts of different machines in the same art, if each operates the same in the new machine as it did in the old and effects the same result. In view of this condition of the prior art, I am of the opinion that the claim of the defendant, that LeRoy's patent is anticipated by the art, and is, therefore, void of invention, is well founded.

NEW COMEDY PLAYERS IN UNIVERSAL FILMS.

Among the new players recently engaged to work at Universal City are Mattie Cummont and Henry Murdock, well-known laugh-makers, who will be under the direction of F. F. Beaudine. Mattie is the short, roly-poly woman who has been working recently with the Fox company and with Max Linder. Henry Murdock has been working with the Kalem company for a year or more, first with its Florida company and more recently with Ham and Bud in California.

King Vidor, formerly scenario editor of the LaSalle company, has been engaged to write for the oddly assorted pair.

Another new comedy man to join the Universal is Al Santell, who has been added to the directing staff to alternate with Craig Hutchinson in staging comedies in which Dave Morris and Gladys Tennison are the principal players.

At Leading Picture Theaters

Programs for the Week of Aug. 19 at New York's Best Motion Picture Houses—The Revolution in Russia at the Rialto.

FOR the first time in the history of the Rialto all photoplays were eliminated from the program the week of Aug 19 and the dramatic spectacle, The Revolution in Russia, was given the place of honor, supplemented by scenes from the Russian battle fronts in the Caucasus, along the Black Sea, and on the southwest frontier. The films are owned by the Skobeleff Committee for the Relief of Russian Wounded and Prisoners of War and the proceeds from their exhibition will go to the committee's relief fund. The pictures are official and bear the endorsement of the Russian Commission now in Washington.

The soloists were Greek Evans and Alberto Bachmann.

British War Pictures at The Strand.

The Strand Theater presented motion pictures of the Germans retreating at the Battle of Arras. They are official and authentic British War pictures and are shown through special arrangements with the Official Government Pictures, Inc. All branches of the service are seen in actual operation in this great drive, which proved so disastrous to the Germans. Another feature was Billie Burke in her first Paramount picture, "The Mysterious Miss Terry," an adaptation from a story by Gelett Burgess. Miss Burke's impersonation of Mavis Terry demonstrates a novel method of finding both happiness and a husband. The cast includes Thomas Meighan, Walter Heirs, Gerald Smith, George Wright and Bessie Learn. An animated cartoon entitled "Colonel Heeza Liar's Temperance Lecture," and the Strand Topical Review, were also shown.

On the musical program were Grace Hoffman and Antone Lescault.

"Pay Me" at the Broadway.

This second week of the engagement of "Pay Me," the Jewel five-part western melodrama with Dorothy Phillips at the head of the cast, indicates that it has caught on at the Broadway theater.

Eighty-First St. Theater Bill.

At the Eighty-First St. theater the following pictures were shown.

On Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, Wm. Desmond was seen in "Master of His Home," a Triangle Komedy, "His Cool Nerve" being on the program. On Thursday, Friday, Saturday and Sunday, Enid Bennett, in "They're Off," and the Keystone Comedy, "Thirst," were the picture features.

GAUMONT-MUTUAL WEEKLY.

Spectators who see the Gaumont-Mutual Weekly No. 138, the current issue, will have an opportunity of seeing President and Mrs. Wilson at close range—with Secretary of War Baker thrown in for good measure. The occasion is the graduating exercises of the student officers at the training camp at Fort Myers, Va. Major General Scott, who recently returned from Russia, is also with the President.

War pictures again predominate in Mutual Weekly No. 138. Sea lane guards which put in at an Atlantic port are shown in their drab war paint. Government officials investigate a new aero propeller, which meets all atmospheric conditions and also lifts an aeroplane 2,000 feet a minute.

At Washington, D. C., Mrs. Lansing, wife of the Secretary of State, gives a luncheon to the ladies of the Cabinet, where only dried foods are served.

At least one cantonment will not suffer from a lack of lumber. This issue of the Mutual Weekly shows a huge raft containing eight million feet of lumber on an ocean voyage of 1,500 miles to San Diego, Cal. Another California picture shows Uncle Sam in the hog raising business, an undertaking necessary to assure food for the National Army.

Miss Edna Goodrich, the beautiful Mutual star who will soon appear in "Reputation," finds time between the taking of scenes to make bandages for the Red Cross. A Gaumont cameraman took the picture at the Empire studio at Glendale, L. I.

On the same reel are some authoritative styles in footwear, showing the latest wrinkles in shoes.

Margery Wilson's Play Completed.

"Mountain Dew," the first starring vehicle of Margery Wilson, has been completed and will be released on the Triangle program early in September. The star appears as a girl of the Kentucky Cumberlands where feudists thrive. Charlie Gunn, the most popular of Triangle leading men, has the chief masculine role that of a schoolmaster.

The Motion Picture Exhibitor

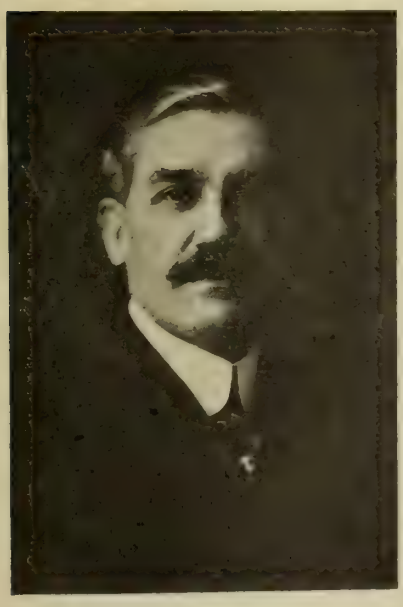
WRITE US EARLY AND OFTEN

THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD carries the most complete record of Exhibitors' News. This department aims at being the fullest and fairest chronicle of all the important doings in the ranks of organized exhibitors. To keep the department as complete and as useful as it is now we request the secretaries of all organizations to favor us with reports of all the news. Coming events in the ranks of the organized exhibitors are best advertised in this department of the Moving Picture World.

Big Round-Up at Ocean City

Many Southern Exhibitors Will Be There—Prominent Men in Trade to Attend.

AMONG the prominent men in the film industry who will attend the joint convention and exposition to be held by the State Exhibitors' Association of North and South Carolina, Virginia, Maryland and District of Columbia to start on August 30th and end the night of September the 1st, are President Lee A. Ochs, of the M. P. E. L. A.; Samuel Trigger, prominent exhibitor of New York City; Charles C. Pettijohn, general manager of the American Exhibitors' Association; I. E. Mosher, prominent theater owner of Buffalo, New York; Frank J. Rembusch, of Shelbyville, Indiana; Harry Crandall, of the Washington syndicate of theaters, and Guy Wonders, of Baltimore. Governor Stuart, of Virginia, has also accepted an invitation to attend and deliver an address before the convention.



Jake Wells

The idea of the joint convention and exposition originated with Jake Wells, of the great Wells chain of theaters, and now president of the American Exhibitors' Association. Mr. Wells' idea is to discuss at this convention only matters which are more of a local nature than national, and to come to certain agreement between the different states as to taking action on various matters affecting the theater owners of the territory embraced, so that concerted action can be obtained through strong committees selected from the different states, when necessary to present matters before legislative bodies, manufacturers, distributers or other interests. Mr. Wells is largely interested in each of the states which is to be represented and is exerting every effort to make the convention the greatest gathering of theater owners ever held in the South. Harry Bernstein, of Richmond, Va., is in active charge of arrangements.

The idea of an exposition in connection with the convention is not with an idea of making money, but simply to help clear up certain items of heavy expense incident to the convention, and also to make the convention more attractive and tend to largely increase the attendance. Exhibits have been contracted for by every exchange serving the territory covered and the various trade papers will also be represented and have booths. Attendance of a dozen or more picture stars has been insured, and they will be guests of honor at the banquet and movie ball to take place on the last night.

American Association Men Meet

Affairs of New Exhibitors' Organization Discussed and Attitude Toward National Association of Industry Defined—Will Meet at Ocean City, Va.

AN IMPORTANT meeting of several of the officials of the newly formed American Exhibitors' Association was held at the offices of the association, Times building, New York, on Thursday, August 16. Those present were President Jake Wells, Vice-president Guy Wonders, Treasurer William Fait, Jr., General Manager Charles C. Pettijohn and Harry Crandall. Among other things it was decided to call a meeting of the association to be held at Ocean City, Va., at the same time as the convention of the Virginia League, when exhibitors from many southern states will be present. The date of this meeting is August 30.

Arrangements were also made to take a lease on a suite of rooms on the 20th floor of the Times Building, which will be the national headquarters of the association. General Manager Charles C. Pettijohn will have charge of this office and will establish at once a bureau for the adjustment of such complaints as may be referred to him by members of the association. Mr. Pettijohn's wide experience as a lawyer will enable him to be of invaluable assistance to members.

Regarding the matter of affiliation with the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry General Manager Pettijohn was instructed to define the attitude of the American Exhibitors' Association toward the N. A. M. P. I. In accordance with those instructions the following letter was written:

To the President and Directors of the National Association of Motion Picture Industry.

Gentlemen: In order that the attitude of the American Exhibitors' Association toward the National Association of Motion Picture Industry may be clearly understood, and that the directors may have definitely in mind our position with reference to what has been termed "our application to affiliate with the National Association of Motion Picture Industry," I am instructed by our directors to write you the following:

First—The American Exhibitors' Association, on July 20 1917 tendered, through Wm. A. Brady, not as the president of the National Association of Motion Picture Industry, but as the designated official by reason of his selection by President Wilson, our hearty co-operation and services to help carry on the work set aside by our government for the motion picture industry during the present crisis. We are building a business organization of exhibitors to the end that this may be effectively done and results obtained.

Second—We care not whether we have one or fifty votes, either as directors or members of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry, because voting inside the industry can not interest us.

Third—We are asking nothing of you, and are offering only our affiliation and assistance in a stand with the other branches of the industry for what is healthful, and against that which unjustly attacks

Coming League and Other Exhibitors' Conventions

(Secretaries Are Requested to Send Dates and Particulars Promptly)

Virginia Exhibitors at Ocean City ..... August 30, 31 and Sept. 1
Chesley Toney, secretary, Richmond.

Maritime Provinces League at St. John, N. B. ..... September 9 and 10

Fourth—On the other hand, we will not, at any time, by any unit, vote or combination of votes, permit ourselves to be bound to support any act, measure or effort that is not for the best interests of real exhibitors of America, who comprise our membership, nor for or against any faction in any other branch of the industry that may hereafter develop.

Fifth—We desire to have it clearly understood that our services are tendered, and that no application is made at this time for votes, or for any change in the by-laws of your organization.

Sixth—We ask that the directors at the Meeting August 27, 1917, either promptly reject or accept our proffer of affiliation, assistance and cooperation in such manner as our position may be clearly and definitely interpreted by our officers and entire membership.

Ochs Statements Refuted.

Percy Wells of North Carolina Takes Issue With Maligners of American Association.

INDIGNATION is expressed in strong terms by Percy W. Wells, North Carolina State President of the American Exhibitors' Association at the length to which Lee A. Ochs is using the Trade Review since the convention in an endeavor to belittle his "enemies" at the convention, which he insists on characterizing as "bolters." Mr. Wells is of the opinion that the Exhibitors' Trade Review had best leave off the monopolization of its columns as a medium for the personal laudation of Lee A. Ochs if it expects to exist and be accepted as a bona fide trade publication of the industry.

"It is passing strange," stated Mr. Wells to a representative of the Moving Picture World, "that Mr. Ochs' paper cannot obtain statements for publication denouncing the 'deplorable tactics of the minority' except from those who have been fixed with offices in the Ochs League. This week's issue of the Ochs mouthpiece has an article purporting to come from Nebraska, but which bears certain earmarks of phraseology which savor strongly of a certain member of the Trade Review staff, which starts off with a eulogy of Mr. Ochs and ends with a denunciation of the members of the American Exhibitors' Association. Mr. Thomas, who is supposed to have spoken the words, it will be noted, was made third vice-president by the Ochs machine. It is to laugh at his statement that 'not meaning to boost myself, but the new organization looks good to me!'

"I would like to submit to Messrs. Thomas, Eager and the other gentlemen, who are blindly following a leader whom they have fallen in with, a few figures that have been obtained by Martin Quigley, of Chicago, relative to that 178 to 40 majority which they have grasped as their only chance for an argument. The city of Chicago voted 20 delegates on the convention floor, which would represent 488 theaters, whereas the City License Bureau of Chicago, where the theater owners have to pay their amusement tax, shows that there are only 378 theaters in the city of Chicago, this including theaters which offer only stage attractions. According to the Chicago representation on the floor of the convention there must be 488 bona fide theater owners in Chicago—and every one of them members of the Ochs organization!"

Furthermore the records show that up to July 1st the exhibitors' organization's roster in Chicago showed an inclusive membership of 122 men. Of the 122 men listed 55 are merely managers—not owners—exchange attaches and several men who formerly owned theaters and at present are not actively engaged in any branch of the industry. And only 80 of the 122 have paid dues. Of the Illinois state branch of the Ochs organization there are twelve members, six of whom have never paid dues.

"Another instance of the steam roller scandal is found in the Boston delegation which voted 30 delegates when the Boston license report shows them only entitled to 9. Mr. Ochs, however, had apparently visited Boston before the convention and had acknowledged through the Trade Review that he had promised to give the next convention to Boston, notwithstanding the fact that the convention is supposed to have the privilege of voting on its convention city from the floor. What do you call that but gag rule?

"When 87 men walked out of the convention hall at the Coliseum," concluded Mr. Wells, "and left 74 delegates there, we absolutely had a majority of that convention with us, and I defy anyone to prove otherwise."

Mr. Wells states that he has been in correspondence with many representative exhibitors in the States of North Carolina, South Carolina, Virginia and Georgia, and that almost unanimously every theater owner who has been approached has come out strongly for the A. E. A., which, to use Mr. Wells' words, "is an organization with no commercial alliance, nor any kind of the exhibitor, first, last and always."

MARYLAND EXHIBITORS MEET.

On Sunday night, August 12, a special meeting was called and held by the Maryland Exhibitors' League at their headquarters, in the New Theater Building, 210 West Lexington street, at which reports were submitted by the delegates to the Chicago convention, including Thos. D. Goldberg, J. Louis Rome and Guy L. Wonders and the committee which was working on the projected moving of the film exchanges from Washington to Baltimore, including F. A. Hornig, Louis Schlichter and L. A. DeHoff. Owing to the arrangements for a premiere screening of the Fox feature, "Jack and the Beanstalk," which was held immediately after this meeting, being in charge of Mr. DeHoff, the manager of the New theater, he was not able to attend and act in his official capacity as secretary of the League, so E. B. McCurdy was appointed secretary in his place for the evening. The well arranged private presentation of "Jack and the Beanstalk" took place after the meeting of the League. Among those who attended the meeting and the screening were: Guy L. Wonders, Louis Schlichter, L. A. DeHoff, William M. Tyler, Nick Burns, W. Albers, B. Rosenbauer, M. E. Berger, Joseph Brodie, W. E. Stumpf, E. B. McCurdy, Paul Emmert, Thomas D. Goldberg, Miss T. Marks, Messrs. Cook, Emerick and Volbreck, Harry Lewy, Harry Woods, L. Benesch.

New Exhibitors' Organization.

Asociated Theaters, Incorporated, Formed at Minneapolis for Booking Purposes.

WITH two hundred theaters enrolled and determined not to start its actual business activities until one thousand theaters are stockholding members, "Associated Theaters, Incorporated," was formed at the Hotel Dyckman, Minneapolis, Minnesota, Tuesday, August 14. The following officers were elected, each of whom is also a member of the board of directors: President, H. L. Hartman, Mandan, North Dakota; vice-president, Forest Secor, Forest City, Iowa; treasurer, Henry P. Greene, Minneapolis, Minnesota; secretary, William S. Smith, Menominee, Wisconsin; chairman board of directors, Chas. W. Gates, Aberdeen, South Dakota; general manager, Thomas J. Hamlin, Minneapolis, Minnesota.

The "Hamlin Plan" of booking was adopted, which is intended to conduct the booking of film, supplies and equipment at a minimum expense and solve the present high cost of marketing and distributing by co-operative collective merchandising.

Fiscal offices were opened at once in the Lumber Exchange building, Minneapolis, but the actual opening of the proposed large central Minneapolis exchange and various sub-stations for inspection and shipping may not take place until December, according to Mr. Hamlin.

President Hartman is also president of the North Dakota State Branch of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America. Vice-President Secor is secretary-treasurer of the Iowa Organization of Exhibitors and Exchangemen. Treasurer Greene, of Minnesota, is a director of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' Corporation of the Northwest. Secretary Smith is a prominent Wisconsin exhibitor and his brother-partner was a secretary of the early Wisconsin exhibitors' organization. Chairman Chas. W. Gates is vice-president of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' Corporation of the Northwest. General Manager Hamlin was the founder of Amusements, a territorial theater trade weekly of Minneapolis.

"We have incorporated for $100,000 under the laws of South Dakota, as "Associated Theaters Incorporated," declared Mr. Hamlin. "We have no connection either directly or indirectly with any other organization or group in the motion picture industry.

"No exhibitor is expected to subscribe for more stock than what he would ordinarily pay for ten days' film rental, and no theatre can hold more than $1,500 worth of stock.

"Neither myself or any member of the board are drawing a cent of salary and the entire expense of organizing will not equal ten per cent.

"We expect to do a film rental business alone of fully $50,000 a week," continued General Manager Hamlin, 'and are incorporated to produce, buy, sell, lease and rent film, equipment and supplies, to buy, sell and operate theaters and to book films, vaudeville, tabloids and road attractions."

OKLAHOMA MEETING CALLED.

Members of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America, Oklahoma Branch, will meet at the Lee-Huckins Hotel, Oklahoma City, on August 21, Tuesday. All theater owners and managers in the state are invited to attend, as there is business of vital importance to the industry to be discussed.

This meeting is of more than ordinary importance, as it will in all probability determine whether Oklahoma will remain in the League or join the newly organized American Exhibitors' Association. For this reason it is hoped that every exhibitor in the state will be present to voice his views on this matter. L. W. BROPHY, Secretary.

Composers' Society Moves Against Brooklynites

Three Exhibitors Haled to Court—League to Co-operate With Musicians and to Appeal to Congress.

THE American Society of Authors, Composers and Publishers is pushing its campaign against those exhibitors who are using the music copyrighted by its members. Just at present its legal hand is being laid on Brooklyn men. Last week William Brandt, executive secretary of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America, was served with a summons complaining of an alleged violation of the copyright act and asking damages in the sum of $3,000. The specific offense cited is that his musician played the music of "Naughty, Naughty, Naughty." The latter allegation pained Mr. Brandt at least as much as did the general charge. The executive secretary is the staid head of a family, the father of three children, and his New Albany theater is a family house. He will enter a denial.

Two other Brooklyn prominent exhibitors were summoned similarly to Mr. Brandt. Warde & Glynn, owners of the Century and the Alhambra, in widely separated parts of Brooklyn, both large houses, and Charles Cranides, one of the directors of the Brooklyn league, were served with papers. The alleged damages in each of the latter instances also was $3,000 and counsel fees. The actions are brought in the Eastern District of the Circuit Court of the United States before Judge Chatfield. The defendants are given twenty days in which to make answer. Goldsmith & Rosenthal are representing the exhibitors. They will be paid from the music fund created by the New York exhibitors through the $3 tax levied on the picture men of the state.

On Thursday of last week Mr. Brandt and Sam Grant, of Boston, who has been active in his city in combating the American Society, called on President Weber of the International Musicians. The Boston idea was explained to Mr. Weber and his co-operation was asked to the end that the same methods may be adopted throughout the country.

In Boston, Mr. Grant explained, a hundred theaters have agreed not to use taxable music. An agreement also was sought with the Musicians' Union whereby the members of the latter organization will refrain from using any music on which a tax is charged unless they are specifically instructed by the managers of the houses. The Boston organization took formal action in line with the suggestion and adopted a resolution declaring any member who did to the contrary should be subject to discipline. The Boston organization notified its members that lack of knowledge of the law would serve as no excuse, that they must be on their guard. It is expected the action of the Boston local will be adopted by all the New England organizations and that there will be full co-operation with the league.

Mr. Weber assured Messrs. Brandt and Grant he would be glad to co-operate with the league in having musicians throughout the country adopt the Boston view—that no licensed music be played except on the instructions of the house manager.

There is in preparation a bill for presentation to Congress amending the present copyright law. It is Mr. Weber's opinion the national legislature never intended to make possible the present situation in the music business.

It is reported there is a measure of dissension among the members of the American Society over the apportionment of the money collected from amusement purveyors. It is said one of the most successful of the publishers is asking why those members of the organization whose product is not particularly profitable should be permitted to share and share alike with him.

LEAGUE'S EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE TO MEET.

William Brandt, executive secretary of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America, has received word from all of the national officers of the organization as well as the members of the executive committee that they will be in New York for the coming meeting to be held on August 25. Eugene M. Clarke of the executive committee will come from Mississippi and Frank D. Eager will make the trip from Nebraska. From Chicago will come First Vice-president Joseph Hopp, Financial Secretary William J. Sweeney, Executive Committeeman Alfred Hamburger and Robert Levy.

After settling several important matters to come before the committee the exhibitor members of the Board of Directors of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry will attend a stated meeting of that organization.

Trigger Resigns

Formally Relinquishes the Office of President of Manhattan Local Exhibitors' Organization.

THE special meeting of Manhattan Local No. 1 of the Exhibitors' League to receive the resignation of Sam H. Trigger from its presidency was held at its rooms on Tuesday, August 14. Mr. Trigger called the meeting to order and immediately proceeded to business with the following address:

"Gentlemen: It is a most unpleasant task to be asked by gentlemen purporting to be my friends to explain my conduct. This is the first time in my life that friends have questioned my God-given right to exercise my conscience and my judgment.

"As your president, I entered the hall at the Chicago convention in your behalf and for you. I was not permitted to vote and I was not permitted to speak either as your National vice-chairman or as your president. Was that the treatment you wanted me to have, and did you expect me to suffer such insults? These are two questions, my friends, for you to answer.

"Not being permitted to take part in the deliberations of the convention, refused the right to voice your sentiments and your desires or to vote on any measure, I realized I was not a delegate and left the convention. For this act I have no apologies to offer. That I have aligned myself with the American Exhibitors' Association needs no explanation except that I am glad to do my bit in this organization of business men that really stands for something, and that I believe will accomplish something for you and for me as exhibitors.

"I now hand to our secretary my resignation as president of this local. This act I will also explain. I should not continue as president of a local that is affiliated with a national organization that I do not believe in. A few of you have indicated that you prefer a new president. You should have one. This resignation I owe you, but my personal liberty to exercise my best judgment at all times I do not.

"Now, boys, that my unpleasant task is over, let me just say this in conclusion: Forget our political differences, and let's be the same old friends and pals we have always been.

"I care not for presidencies, but my friends I love. As fellow exhibitors, continue to do as you have done for fifteen years—call on your old daddy day or night—and even if I have turned my sixty-fifth milestone, you will find me so full of enthusiasm for my friends that you can still call me 'Pal.'

"To those of you who join me in the American Exhibitors' Association, I say, 'God bless you.' To those of you who do not, I say, "God bless you, too.'"

Several of the members expressed their regrets at the action of Mr. Trigger and assured him they would ever hold him their friend. It was made clear while Mr. Trigger has resigned as president of the local he had not resigned from membership in it. Nothing was said on that point. The meeting then adjourned to meet again at the call of the first vice-president, C. R. Martineau, to whom Mr. Trigger handed the gavel.

Mr. Trigger's formal resignation was as follows:

To Manhattan Local No. 1.
M. P. E. L. of America:
Gentlemen.—I herewith tender to you my resignation as President of Manhattan Local No. 1, Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America, same to take effect at once.
(Signed) S. H. TRIGGER, President.

PRESIDENT MARTINEAU'S ACCEPTANCE.

Editor Moving Picture World:

Dear Sir: In assuming the presidency of Manhattan Local No. 1 of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America, I take this opportunity to pledge my support to the National League and all its officials and will use my best efforts to promote a closer bond of friendship between all local exhibitors whether in the organization or not.

It will be my greatest desire to protect the individual members from unfair trade methods and abuse and at the same time to work for the best interest of the entire industry.

I will endeavor to see that all differences between branches of the industry and exhibitors are properly arbitrated. I will be at the service of the exhibitors at all times and will do my utmost to assist them in protecting their interests.

BOSTON MOVING AHEAD ON CONVENTION PLANS

Samuel Grant, head of the committee of arrangements for the Boston convention and exposition next year, in a visit to New York last week stated that the municipal authorities were co-operating with the Massachusetts exhibitors in plans for the entertainment of visiting motion picture men. The city officials make no attempt to conceal their satisfaction that the League decided on the Hub for the next gathering place. Mayor James M. Curley has notified Mr. Grant that the city of Boston will give an official entertainment to the visiting exhibitors and film men. It will take the form of an outing down the Bay on one of the big excursion steamers, with stops at some of the picturesque spots. Prominent officials will go along to assist in the entertainment. Also being arranged is a demonstration by some of the municipality's fireboats.

Joseph Girard, Butterfly Player

JOSEPH GIRARD, who fills important roles in "The Double Standard" and "The Lair of the Wolf," two of the latest Butterfly features, dates his connection with motion pictures away back to the almost "prehistoric" period of 1895. At that time, just a stripling of a boy, Girard was doing "heavy" parts on a tour of New England and the Canadian provinces with the Sawtelle Dramatic Company.

The show was not going very well, so the management secured from Chicago what was called an "anamatagraph" as an added attraction. Having secured the machine, their next trouble was to get an operator, for no one seemed able to penetrate its secrets. However, young Girard said that he had been brought up in a print shop and he thought that he could run the thing. So it was turned over to him, with ten dollars a week extra for running it in addition to playing "heavy." There was not much that Joe would not have done in those lean days for ten dollars, but he soon discovered that the "anamatagraph" was a real gold mine. In every town where it was set up it became at once the biggest riot the place had ever seen. For this was the first moving picture which had ever been projected in that part of the country, and just to see them move was enough for the fans. Everywhere the manager was approached by scientific men, doctors, lawyers, mechanics, etc., all of them anxious to study the principle of the new wonder. The manager, not knowing even which end of the thing was turned toward the screen, passed them all over to Girard, who explained what little he know about the wonderful invention. It was something on the order of a graft, however, for every one dropped something into Joe's hand after the demonstration was over.

Joseph Girard.

Girard continued in the "legitimate" for many years, and it was not until 1913 that he entered the picture field as an actor. At this time he left the stage to join Edison, and shortly afterward he became a member of the permanent stock company at Universal City, where he has remained ever since. One of Girard's most successful parts was the mysterious "Voice" in the big serial, "The Voice on the Wire."

VAN DYKE COMPANY RETURNS.

The Van Dyke Company, headed by Jean Sothern, which has been at Atlantic Highlands for some weeks making exteriors for "Peg O' the Sea," a coming Art Drama, returned to the studio this week to put the finishing touches on the production, which is being directed by Eugene Nowland. The trip was highly successful, according to the actors, both from results obtained and for recreation, for the visit was something of a vacation for the players.

Little Picture Actress Saves Mother

AN interesting story appeared in the local papers recently which gave little Anna Mead a place among the heroines of the day. Anna, though not a screen star of note, has appeared in a sufficient number of small parts to say that she belongs, and presence of mind on the occasion mentioned proves that she has the qualifications.

Here's the story:

Anna Mead.

"What was declared to be the most remarkable rescue from drowning in the waters around New York so far this summer was performed yesterday by Anna Mead, eleven years old, of No. 745 Amsterdam avenue. She succeeded in raising her mother to the surface of the waters at the Steeplechase Park bathing pavilion, Coney Island, and thereby saved Mrs. Mead's life.

"Mother and daughter had been in the water together for some time. Mrs. Mead was holding to the ropes, and her daughter was swimming some distance away. The tide was coming in so fast that Mrs. Mead lost her hold of the ropes, toppled backward and disappeared under the surface. The water at that point was over Mrs. Mead's head, and there being no bathers in the immediate vicinity no person noticed her sink.

"It was not until Mrs. Mead had come to the surface for the second time that her feeble cries were heard by her daughter, who went to her mother's assistance. Anna dived several times, as her mother again disappeared before she could get hold of her. When she finally did she came to the surface with her arms around her mother's waist.

"Anna's feat was highly praised by the guards, who declared her a plucky girl.

"Mr. Mead wished to reward the guards for their work, but they refused to accept, saying that if any rewards were to be given the daughter was the one deserving of them."

NEW DIRECTOR FOR EACH PRODUCTION.

M. A. Schlesinger, president of the Mayfair Film Corporation, has announced that he has made tentative arrangements with four of the leading directors of the trade to direct the sparkling Mayfair star, Peggy Hyland, in her forthcoming releases. Mr. Schlesinger proposes to have a new director for each Peggy Hyland-Mayfair production, so that they will lack the sameness so often prevalent.

It is a physical impossibility for any man to conceive new touches and novel effects in production after production, and in this way some degree of variety is certain to be attained. The names of the men engaged will not be announced until they begin their work on the production, but each one has a number of successful pictures to his credit. They will all enter the Mayfair employ, however, with the understanding that their engagement is ended when the production is completed.

Then also each new director will naturally seek to bring out the charm in Miss Hyland which makes the strongest appeal to him and in this way the greatest possible percentage of the public will be pleased. The name of the director engaged to produce the second Peggy Hyland picture, soon to go under way, will be announced later.

BILL DESMOND, DETECTIVE.

William Desmond, Triangle star, who made a record as a Sherlock Holmes in "Time Lock and Diamonds," has been cast for another detective role in a forthcoming production entitled "Flying Colors." Frank Borzage is directing the company.

Big Possibilities for Pictures in the Orient.

Charles Margelis, Back from a Seven Months' Trip from Yokohama to Java, Believes There Is Great Chance for Picture Promoters in the East.

By Hanford C. Judson.

AFTER a seven months' sales tour with the Ince picture "Civilization," Charles Margelis is back in New York and talked interestingly to a World representative of his trip and of business conditions in the East. He was able to place seven copies of the Ince picture for the Harper Film Corporation, but he had to hustle to do it. The chief need of hustling, and he wants to make this point clear to any who may contemplate following with other pictures, is that the East lack laws to protect the film man from "dupers." Let us say that the salesman disposes of one print in Yokohama. If he lets a ship or two go by, he'll find that his picture is in Shanghai before he is and there'll be no need of his going any further. All the prints that are needed will be ahead of him. His advice is, "Don't sell a single copy till there is a man who can go to the East with six or seven copies, all the paper, cuts and advertising needed, who can be on the job and cover the whole East at once."

Chas. Margelis

At Yokohama Mr. Margelis sold his picture to a Japanese theater man, who opened with it at the Imperial theater, where it played for a week with admissions from $2.25, the highest, to thirty-one cents, the lowest. With the print went a trunk of paper, including 250 one sheets, 50 three sheets, 35 six sheets, 10 twenty-four sheets, 2,000 post cards with a set of cuts, as they do not do as good photo-engraving in the Orient as we turn out. All the printed matter they need is a set of samples they can follow, for that will fill the bill. Mr. Margelis showed me specimens of the publicity. Some of it was in English to attract Americans in the East, but most of it merely looked interesting. Mr. Margelis didn't "have time" to translate what it told.

From Yokohama he went to Peking, where he disposed of a print, and from there to Shanghai, to Manila, to the Strait Settlements and to Java. He is enthusiastic at the way he was treated by merchants in the East and the reception he got—after war was declared—by the English clubs and the like. In China, he says, a business man's word is his bond. If he tells you he will be in his office at any time with money to pay for a print, he is there without fail and has real money, not checks. He says that "Civilization" made good in the East and that there is a demand for pictures. It is a fresh field, we understand from him. This is particularly true of picture production with native players. It hasn't been done—or hadn't when he left—and he believes there is a great future for that particular branch of the industry. He showed me a request from an acquaintance in the Orient to send him whatever picture equipment he thought would be good there. He is contemplating making a second trip as a representative of producers and manufacturers in this country. He expects to take a photographer with him with a view to establishing a production plant in the East.

Mr. Margelis was born in Ohio and graduated from the Starling Medical College, but the peculiarities of the practice of that profession were not found to be wholly agreable to him so he became a showman. He has traveled with many celebrated boxers and pugilists, among them Billy Papke, the Australian champion. He has had experience in the film business even before this recent successful trip to the Orient.

He says in closing, "Tell them all to beware of 'dupers' in the East. Move quick if you want to make sales." He also says that in the East it is absolutely necessary to be a man of your word. If you fake once, you won't get a second chance.

A K-E-S-E MUSIC CUE SHEET.

Believing that a music cue sheet would help the picture theater musician to give a little extra punch to Essanay's "Skinner's Baby," the services of George W. Bergnon were engaged and this is the result:

ANNA CASE TO ENTER PICTURES.

Announcement that Anna Case, the beautiful young American soprano of the Metropolitan Opera Company, is to enter motion pictures for a limited period is made by Julius Steger, under whose direction the prima donna's photoplays will be produced.

Miss Case's first picture will be begun in February next immediately after she completes her concert engagements, for which she has been booked ever since the end of her last record-breaking tournee. The story, based upon real life experiences, will relate the struggles against great odds of a poor, but gifted, American girl, who, through force of her character and talents alone, rises to a position of dominance in the world's greatest opera company.

Miss Case has no idea of retiring from concert and opera. She will have ample time for music and pictures, devoting half the year to the one and half to the other. Mr. Steger already has arranged for her first scenario. The picture, seven reels, will be shown first as a special attraction at a leading Broadway theater. Joseph M. Schenck will be Mr. Steger's partner in the enterprise.

JOE FISHER ESCAPES U-BOAT ATTACK.

Among the passengers of the steamship City of Athens, which was torpedoed recently by a U-boat, was Joe Fisher, who was representing Fisher's Bioscope, Limited, of South Africa, in this country. Fisher was on his way home with a consignment of pictures for a circuit of theaters. He was accompanied by a fellow townsman, Charles Moore. Upon arriving at Cape Town Fisher cabled to Henry J. Brock in answer to an inquiry: "Ship sunk; Moore and self rescued; terrible experience; lost everything."

Fisher's friends in New York will be glad to learn of his escape from the U-boat.

Strand to Give Daily Concerts

Beginning September 16 One Hour's Entertainment by Symphony Orchestra Will Be Feature at Big House.

HAROLD EDEL, managing director of the Strand theater, announces that the Strand concert orchestra, which now numbers forty musicians, will be enlarged to full symphonic strength and be known in the future as the Strand Symphony Orchestra.

Daily symphonic concerts of one hour's duration will be inaugurated Sunday, September 16, and will become a part of the regular Strand program from that date. The concerts will commence daily at 2:15 and at 2:30 on Sundays, and will precede the usual presentation of motion pictures and vocal and instrumental soloists.

The Strand Symphony Orchestra.

The owners of the Strand theater attribute the success of that institution largely to the excellent musical program presented in conjunction with the projecting of motion pictures and the orchestra has been gradually enlarged and special efforts have been made to secure the best vocal and instrumental talent obtainable. When the Strand was first opened, in April, 1914, the orchestra was composed of sixteen members. This number was doubled in less than two years, and when Mr. Edel took charge of the theater a year ago the orchestra was enlarged to forty pieces, including the organists.

Mr. Edel was one of the first to put a large orchestra into a moving picture theater. In 1910, when he was given charge of the Alhambra Theater, in Cleveland, Ohio, he had an orchestra of fifteen pieces. He has always been a firm believer in good music as a means of entertainment. Regarding his latest innovation he said:

"I am not inaugurating the presentation of daily symphony concerts in order to increase attendance to our performances. Everyone who visits the Strand must realize that one of our greatest problems is to take care of our patrons. We play to a daily average of 12,000 people. My greatest desire is to give the public the best entertainment at the lowest prices possible, and I think that by giving daily symphony concerts, as fine as the most discriminating music lover could wish, we are presenting the ideal form of entertainment, pleasing those who are familiar with symphonic music and cultivating and educating the ones who are not. I have met very few persons who do not love music, and on the other hand I know that there are thousands of people in New York who seldom have an opportunity to hear real good music on account of prohibitive prices. In this connection let me say that although the symphony concerts will increase the expenses of the Strand Theater over $35,000 a year our prices will remain the same, 15, 25 and 50 cents, and the patrons who come to hear the concerts are entitled to stay as long as they please and attend the regular Strand show which follows immediately after the concert. I have engaged Signor Adriano Ariani, the famous Italian conductor, to direct the concerts."

As a conductor Signor Ariani obtained his experience under Mancinelli and Mascagni. He was Mascagni's substitute director for four years. Since the Augustenm was inaugurated at Rome Signor Ariani contributed with his own work the marvelous development of that great symphonic institution. He also has been conductor of operas and symphonic music at Rome, Pesaro, Senigallia, Bari, Naples, Macerata, Venice, Tolentino, Genoa, Florence, Monte Carlo (Monaco), Oporto, New York, Philadelphia and Boston.

The Moving Picture's Part in the War

Lord Northcliffe Emphasizes It in Speech at Informal Luncheon Following Private Showing of "Retreat of the Germans at the Battle of Arras."

A PRIVATE showing of the fourth installment of the British Official War pictures, "Retreat of the Germans at the Battle of Arras," at the Strand theater, New York, Wednesday morning, Aug. 15, was followed by an informal luncheon at Sherry's, Lord Northcliffe, head of the British war missions to the United States, being the guest of honor. Geoffery Butler of the British Foreign Office acted as toastmaster. Other distinguished guests were M. La Valle, the Belgian attorney who defended Miss Edith Cavel, and Hamilton Fyffe, the well known British war correspondent. Several members of General Waite's staff were also present, covers being laid for thirty-six guests.

After some well chosen remarks by the toastmaster, Lord Northcliffe was introduced. The famous editor of the London Times proceeded to explain the importance which the British Government attached to the series of war views now being shown in this country under the title of "British Official War Pictures," and to voice the opinion that the series is of the greatest value in showing the people of the United States the conditions our soldiers must face while helping to crush the common foe of humanity. M. La Valle followed with a short speech expressing the gratitude and brotherly feeling of the Belgians for this country, and his appreciation of the merits of the pictures shown that morning. M. La Valle is a magnetic speaker and it was easy to understand the passionate earnestness with which he sought to save the life of the brave English woman. Hamilton Fyffe spoke briefly of the immense amount of good he had seen the moving pictures do among the soldiers of Russia, many of whom were not able to read, but were forcibly impressed with the efforts being made by their Allies for the common cause.

The motion picture trade papers were represented by Joseph L. Kelley, Motion Picture News; T. O. Eltonhead, Exhibitors' Trade Review; Dickson G. Watts, Morning Telegraph, and Edward Weitzel, Moving Picture World.

PREPARING FOR ST. JOHN'S MEETING.

A preliminary meeting of local managers and theater men was held last week to appoint a committee to look after the entertainment side of the convention. On the committee were appointed W. H. Golding, president of the League; S. C. Hurley, secretary; F. G. Spencer, of the Lyric and Unique, and vice-president for Prince Edward Island; W. C. McKay, of the St. John opera house; A. B. Farmer, of the Star theater; G. A. Margetts, of the Canadian Universal Film Exchange; Reg. March, of the Pathe; Miss Kathleen Golding and Miss Alice Fairweather, motion picture editor of the St. John Standard. Among the plans are a reception at the Manor House, a favorite place for entertainments situated four miles out of St. John, and a sail on the St. John River.

The president and officers of the Canadian Motion Picture Association of Montreal have been invited to attend. L. B. Ouimet, of Pathe, general manager for Canada, and E. Auger, of the Vitagraph, are to be present as well as other managers who have accepted the invitation of the League.

NEW SOUTHERN PRODUCING COMPANY.

The Diamond Film Company is the title of a new film manufacturing concern, just incorporated in New Orleans. R. M. Chisholm is president of the company and with him are associated a number of southern business men. The company is capitalized for $100,000 and has taken over the plant and studio in New Orleans formerly operated by the Nola Film Company.

Kenean Buel

Selected to Direct the Lee Children for Fox—Has Had Wide Experience.

KENEAN BUEL, one of the veteran directors of the Fox Film Corporation, yet one of the youngest in point of age, has been selected by William Fox, personally, to direct the future activities of the famous Lee children—Jane and Katherine.

These two youngsters, probably the best known children in the films, made an instantaneous and universal success in their first picture, "Two Little Imps," which was directed by Mr. Buel. There was immediate demand from exhibitors and the public for similar pictures by the Fox "baby grands."

Kenean Buel.

The problem of selecting the future director for these children was a most serious one, and Mr. Fox had repeated conferences with his aids and advisers. The most capable directors, not only of the Fox Company, but other producers, were considered. After looking over the lists submitted to him, Mr. Fox said:

"There is no necessity of going outside of our own organization for a director for the Lee children. Kenean Buel is the man. He has already produced a marvelous picture with them, and for years I have watched his work with children. Children like and work with him, and I have the greatest confidence in his ability."

This decision of Mr. Fox places Mr. Buel in charge of one of the most unique and important features of the program of the Fox Film Corporation. He will direct Jane and Katherine Lee in future productions. Already their first picture under Mr. Buel's direction has created a furore throughout the country, and their future pictures may be looked forward to with confidence under the capable direction of Mr. Buel.

Kenean Buel is only thirty-four years old, and graduated from college at the age of eighteen, two years later being admitted to the bar as a practicing lawyer.

Born in the Blue Grass region of Kentucky, it was the hope of his parents that he would follow the law, as had his ancestors. The law, however, was too prosaic and dull for the young Kentuckian, who had an imagination, and wanted to create rather than follow precedents.

The stage lured him away from his Blackstone, and he joined a stock company as its business manager. Owing to the illness of one of his players, he was suddenly called upon to play a part. He next began playing juvenile leads, and made a success. Naturally from this he drifted into playwriting and stage direction and thence to pictures.

Mr. Buel is one of the most modest and retiring men in the motion picture business, and is exceptionally well liked by his players. Together with his wife, he lives on his estate in the Ramapo mountains in New Jersey, and is one of the best known breeders of prize winning live stock.

ROSEMARY THEBY RETURNS TO UNIVERSAL.

Rosemary Theby has recently signed a contract with Universal to appear in a series of comedies with Eddie Lyons and Lee Moran. This will be the second time that Miss Theby has appeared under the big "U" banner. Previous to her present connection she appeared in a series of comedies under the direction of Harry Myers which gained wide popularity. Miss Theby may also be featured in dramatic roles after she has completed the work already laid out.

E. B. Hatrick Promoted

Becomes Secretary of the International Film Service—Organized News Film Service.

ANNOUNCEMENT is made of the selection of E. B. Hatrick as secretary of the International Film Service. Mr. Hatrick's experience covers a wide range of newspaper and film activities. For several years he was employed as a reporter, telegraph editor and bureau manager on the United Press Association. In 1909, he left that organization to accept a position as editor of the Hearst Syndicate and in that capacity he took charge of the news photograph departments of the various Hearst newspapers and welded them into one organization for the gathering and distribution of photograph illustrations for newspapers and magazines. This organization secured some of the most notable beats in the history of the newspaper world, including such famous pictures as the Scott South Pole expedition, sinking of the battleship Audacious, the destruction of the German battleship Bluecher in the battle of the North Sea, first pictures of German invasion of Belgium, etc.

E. B. Hatrick

After the establishment of the news picture organization, Mr. Hatrick conceived the idea of utilizing this institution for the gathering of an up-to-the-minute news film. His theory was that good trained news photographers were better adapted for this work than studio motion picture operators and with the close alliance with the Hearst system of gathering news he would be in a better position to get material more quickly than any film organization. A combination was made with the Selig Polyscope Company of Chicago and in February, 1914, the Hearst-Selig News Pictorial made its appearance on the screen. This reel was issued through the General Film Company and met with instant success.

For two years Mr. Hatrick had editorial charge of this film and later on when the International Film Service established its own system of exchanges, he organized and issued the Hearst International News Reel. He also, at this time, took charge of the organization of the laboratory work for the International, and the scenic, educational and cartoon reels. When the amalgamation was made between the International Film Service and the Pathe Exchange, Mr. Hatrick took charge of the work of combining the two staffs of field operators and of the gathering of all negative for the Hearst-Pathe News.

NORMA TALMAGE WANTS BOOK PLAYS.

Following the phenomenal success of her recent screen adaptation of Cynthia Stockley's novel "Poppy" Miss Norma Talmage has announced that in the future all of her scenarios will be written from books. The avowed intention of the young screen favorite is carried out in "The Moth," her newest photoplay, taken from the novel by William Dana Orcutt which has been announced to follow "Poppy" among the Norma Talmage releases, and in "The Secret of the Storm Country," on which Miss Talmage will begin work next week in Ithaca, N. Y. "The Secret of the Storm Country" was written by Grace Miller White as a sequel to "Tess of the Storm Country," which is also familiar to the film public.

BESSIE LOVE IN "POLLY ANN."

Bessie Love is working on "Polly Ann," in which she appears in the role of an orphan compelled to earn her living as a slavey in a small town hotel. Later she is adopted by a wealthy man, who takes her into his home to replace a dissolute son.

Yankee Plays for the World

Is the Slogan of General Manager H. O. Davis, Who Inaugurates Big Campaign for Foreign Markets.

YANKEE plays for the World" is the new slogan soon to be adopted and carried out in policy by the Triangle Film Corporation as the result of the determination of General Manager and Vice-President H. O. Davis to invade the foreign exhibiting market on a larger scale and along different lines than ever before undertaken in the industry.

Decidedly an aggressive one, the campaign will be based upon Mr. Davis' personal investigations of the field and his belief that the war has stimulated rather than retarded the European and Oriental amusement demand. Distinctive Americanism will be so outstanding in the product that the stamp will be as recognizable as the brand.

"One of the chief reasons why American producers have partially failed in their efforts to get safe and sane export business," said Mr. Davis, "is that they have persisted in giving foreign exhibitors and foreign cinema patrons a product which they can obtain of better quality and more cheaply at home. We have been trying to make French plays and Japanese plays and East Indian plays in the United States when we knew nothing of the customs, likes and dislikes of these peoples. Even if this were not true, we have been offering the foreign consumer nothing that he could not obtain from the producers of his own country, and every nationality prefers to patronize home industry.

"It would be just as logical for American exhibitors to go to France, Japan and India for their American pictures as for foreign exhibitors to buy from us something they can get from their own producers.

"However, it is not reasonable to believe that American producers can compete with foreign producers in their own fields and the Triangle Film Corporation does not propose longer to try. We will endeavor to lead the industry in supplying the already brisk demand for a distinctly Yankee, if I may use the term, film play that does not encroach upon the foreign producer but fills a well established place of its own.

"The American business drama, the so-called Western plays, the comedy drama and the good old "melodrama" are four types of screen productions that the foreign producer cannot make as well as we can, and these forms of drama never fail to attract and retain the interest of the masses in almost every country under the sun.

"Foreign producers have been smarter than we in that they long have realized their failings and have not attempted to invade America with cowboy thrillers or other forms of cinema entertainment, which, they recognized, we were far more proficient in making than they. On the other hand they borrowed freely of American ideas and introduced them to their public when they were keen enough to take advantage of a demand that we did not appreciate.

"They appropriated our custard pies, our chases and our dare-devil automobile and train wreck stunts and let us struggle with vampires and problem plays and spectacles in which we were trying to interpret the Southern European and Oriental nature without knowing how. American producers have not failed utterly, but they have made themselves ridiculous in many instances.

"These principles," continued Mr. Davis, "are applicable to the exhibiting situation throughout the United States for the simple reason that Americans are loyal to their own customs and peculiarities and would rather see American life depicted upon the screen than anything else.

"The vein of humor that streaks every genuine Yankee gives him a keen appreciation of the comedy and comedy drama, his love of adventure and zest for the rough and ragged whets his appetite for the Western 'thriller' and melodrama, and his native ambition and enterprise stir him to enthusiastic enjoyment of the play that shows zeal and devotion to duty attaining success and reward."

J. WARREN KERRIGAN'S CONDITION.

J. Warren Kerrigan whose leg was broken as the result of the falling of his horse at Santa Barbara on Friday, the 10th inst., is now in the Cottage hospital of that city under the care of Dr. C. H. Stevens. Dr. Stevens, who set Mr. Kerrigan's leg, said that he found him in splendid physical condition, which, with his rugged constitution, would make his recovery very rapid and he felt confident that the star would be able to resume his work by the middle of September.

Enthusiastic Over "The Man Without a Country," Featuring Arnold Daly and Directed by Jack Noble.

ONE cannot talk two minutes with William L. Sherrill, president of the Frohman Amusement Company, and listen to his description of "The Man Without a Country," a coming Frohman production, without partaking of the enthusiasm of the manufacturer. The subject is to be in seven or eight reels and will be ready for showing about the first week in September. Anthony P. Kelly is the author of the script, and in the preparation of it he spent much time and study. He has built upon the basis of Edward Everett Hale's dramatic story a structure which comprises many events in United States history. It will interest exhibitors and the photoplay public to know that Mr. Sherrill has obtained from Secretary Daniels, of the Navy Department, permission for the full use of the old frigate, "Constitution," now in the Charlestown Navy Yard. The rights accorded by the Secretary extend to the taking of pictures on or off the historic ship.

Arnold Daly will play Philip Nolan, the Man Without a Country. Mr. Daly has told Mr. Sherrill three reasons why he is anxious his interpretation shall be the best thing he has done in a screen way. You may take our word for it, the reasons seem to be sufficient—Mr. Daly has a real incentive.

"I think one of the wonderfully attractive things about this business is that a man can bring himself to such a pitch of enthusiasm that he sincerely, honestly believes he is going to have the best picture ever made," said Mr. Sherrill. "I can say deliberately that this story makes one of the most unusual scenarios I have ever seen. I believe there is no other player who can portray Philip Nolan as Arnold Daly is now portraying that character. The picture is being directed by John Noble. In the cast supporting Mr. Daly are Duncan McRae, Sydney Bracy, Frederick Truesdell, Charles J. Graham, Jack Sherrill and Anna Lehr and Mrs. Carr.

"We are putting everything into the picture that is absolutely authentic and perfect as to type, period and history. We are spending $15,000 on costumes alone—these are being made especially for the production. We believe we are going to have a great picture, one worthy of the subject and of the times in which it will be released."

SAM E. MORRIS, CONTROLS OHIO TERRITORY.

Sam E. Morris, who has been a member of the Selznick executive staff ever since the formation of the Lewis J. Selznick Enterprises, Inc., has been placed in entire charge of Selznick branches in the large Cleveland territory. This is one of the richest districts in the United States for Selznick contracts, and congratulations are due to Mr. Morris from his many friends in the industry.

Under the Cleveland branch is included the entire state of Ohio and the eastern half of the state of Kentucky. A suboffice is located at Cincinnati. Mr. Morris is well known throughout Ohio, and has previously made a great record through his sales of pictures in this state. His family and relatives reside in Cleveland, and taking charge of the Cleveland office is like going home to Sam Morris.

ACTIVITIES AT GLENDALE.

The Empire All Star Corporation Studios at Glendale, L. I., are in full swing now, with three companies busily at work. Dell Henderson is at work on "My Wife," the great Frohman stage success in which Ann Murdock is starring, supported by a cast whose names include those of Rex McDougal, Hubert Druce, Ferdinand Gottschalk and many others equally well known.

Albert Capellani is directing Edna Goodrich in "American Maid," which it is unanimously agreed is the best story Miss Goodrich has yet been provided with. And John B. O'Brien, who is enthusiastic over his new star, Olive Tell, who, supported by David Powell, is playing the stellar role in "The Unforeseen." "Outcast," the first Empire picture, is to be released through the Mutual Exchanges, September 3.

CAMILLA DAHLBERG WITH METRO FOR "DRAFT 258."

Camilla Dahlberg, who originated the role of Bianca in "The Great Lover," with Leo Ditrichstein, has been engaged by Metro Pictures Corporation to play the important part of the woman spy in "Draft 258," Metro's new patriotic photodrama, which has already been placed in production. Mabel Taliaferro is the star of "Draft 258," which was written by William Christy Cabanne and June Mathis.

Alexandra Carlisle

ALEXANDRA CARLISLE, who plays the star role in the new World-Picture Brady-Made, titled "Tides of Fate," is an English actress of very great celebrity for her rare physical beauty and her surpassing gifts in the art of acting.

Her greatest triumph in London was registered upon her appearance there in the leading role of "Everywoman" some years ago, when the most austere of the English critics hailed her as "the best actress and the most beautiful woman on the London stage."

Alexandra Carlisle.

Miss Carlisle came to America shortly after the production above mentioned and she has remained here ever since. She has been the "featured" player in several dramas and comedies, and last season was chosen by George C. Tyler for the central personage in "The Country Cousin," in which she made a genuine sensation during the long run in Philadelphia.

By an odd coincidence Miss Carlisle's first New York appearance in this drama will occur at the Gaiety theater on the same date as the publication of her picture play, "Tides of Fate."

This drama contains a number of exceptionally thrilling episodes. In one of these a runaway saddle horse, upon which Miss Carlisle as the heroine is taking her morning spin, plunges from a high cliff into the river, from which she is rescued by "the wrong man," whom she marries from gratitude. Later there are two extremely striking battle scenes—one between bandits and the mounted police of Canada, and the other an engagement of United States troops with an overwhelming horde of Moros in the Phillipines.

"Tides of Fate" is a "big" picture in every sense of the term, and in the making involved an expenditure that would have amply justified its issuance as a ten-reel special but for the World's loyalty to the regular program policy.

ALICE BRADY LEAVES WORLD FILM CORPORATION.

Alice Brady has completed her contract with the World Film Corporation, and she declines to renew it. She severs her connections this week with that firm, of which her father, William A. Brady, is managing director, and she announces that she is now at liberty. She may accept any one of several offers that she has had from other motion picture producers, and she may possibly return to the legitimate stage. She has two plays under contract, and if she appears in them it may be under the direction of her father in his capacity as theatrical manager, but she is not to be any longer a star for the World Film Corporation which turns out "Brady-made Pictures." She has been with that company for two years, and in that time she has won wide popularity as a "movie" star. The World Film Corporation recognized this fact when her contract expired on Tuesday (Aug. 14) and it offered her a very large increase of salary, but the increase was not sufficient in her opinion, since she had already received large offers from other companies, and she declined to renew her contract. Negotiations have continued throughout the week, but Miss Brady has announced definitely that she has severed her connections with the World Film Corporation.

THE PARALTA PLAN BOOK.

The Paralta Plan book, which Paralta Plays, Inc., has been advertising very extensively in the trade papers of late as an aid to the development of picture theater patronage and the elimination of waste in the management of theaters, has been issued from the press and thousands of copies are now being sent to exhibitors throughout the country who filed their applications for them during the past three months.

This book comprises 64 pages. It reviews the economic history of the trade, it shows the "leakage" which results from the present forms of picture distribution and shows how the four big points of the Paralta Plan will redound to the benefit of the exhibitor.

The book especially dwells on restricted, non-competitive territory, unlimited runs, repeat booking privileges without extra charge, and a twelve month contract, with cancellation privileges to the exhibitor which are exclusively his. Otherwise, under the Paralta Plan, the exhibitor is protected in every way from the conditions he now claims militate most against his interests. He can cancel a Paralta contract, whereas the company cannot cancel on him. The Paralta Plan book is very interesting reading to all concerned.

Grace Darmond.

WHEN Duty Calls," the seven-reel production with which Sanger and Jordan will make their initial bow in the producing field, is a stirring war photodrama in which Miss Grace Darmond takes the leading role. The picture is now in the making at the Norma Talmadge studios under the direction of Capt. Harry Lambart. Miss Darmond, probably the youngest leading woman in the film firmament, occupied the stellar role in Pathe's thrilling serial, "The Shielding Shadow," which is shortly to be seen in New York at one of the leading Broadway theaters. It was Miss Darmond's brilliant work in this picture, after it had been seen at a private view, which caused Sanger and Jordan to immediately offer her a contract as leading woman in "When Duty Calls" and several other pictures they contemplate producing.

Grace Darmond.

"When Duty Calls" is not a war picture in the sense that the audience is thrilled by the sight of marching soldiers and the usual scenes which accompany a film of this class, but it is a photodrama which will appeal to every mother in the country who has a son of draft age and is willing to send him to the front with a mother's blessing.

The young leading woman has a checkered career as bride and mother whose husband has answered the call of his country. At the same time she has ample opportunities of displaying the fine dramatic qualities which she showed she possessed in the Pathe serial, "The Shielding Shadow." Miss Darmond lays claim to being the most married star in filmdom, as in her brief twenty years she has been led to the altar no less than three hundred times. True, Miss Darmond's experiences have been in front of a motion picture camera, and at present there is a prospect that she will continue on her way as a blushing bride, at least in the movies, for some time to come.

H. NEWMAN OPENS IN OSSINING.

On Monday evening, Aug. 20. the Victoria theater threw open its doors to the public in Ossining, New York, under the management of H. Newman. Mr. Newman formerly ran the Majestic in Holyoke, Mass. The Victoria was formerly known as the Roe theater, but has been renamed by Mr. Newman, who has remodeled the lobby, added a fine new electric sign and made other improvements. He expects to run first run pictures, selecting his program from state rights and other features and in this way will secure an entirely different program from other theaters in his vicinity.

Among the Picture Theaters

Colonial Theater, Columbus, O.

Manager Marcus Has His House Decorations Harmonize With the Different Seasons of the Year—Admission Prices 10 and 20 Cents.

DO ATMOSPHERIC conditions in a photoplay house count? They do as is attested by the policy pursued by M. Marcus, who is the manager of the Colonial theater in Columbus, Ohio. The accompanying pictures of the stage, foyer and lobby give a very good idea of the floral decorations for summer used recently to beautify the Colonial. These embellishments have occasioned many favorable comments from the theater's large patronage, and it is the intention of Mr. Marcus to have the decorations conform with the different seasons of the year. The decorations, whether they are flowers, banners, festoons, or bunting, for any one season do not remain up during the entire period of that season, but are changed every two weeks or so.

Formerly used as a burlesque house and as the home of stock, the Colonial has been transformed into a veritable garden, and under the directing hand of its manager it has been developed as the ideal home of photoplays, playing to capacity audiences every day at ten and twenty cents. Mr. Marcus believes that appearances help make a theater, and it is not too much to say that for attractiveness, lobby effects, and stage settings, the Colonial compares favorably with any other theater between New York and Chicago.

Of special interest is the lighting system. Lights are changed each week, the colors so arranged as to harmonize with the settings and the particular picture shown. Everything in the house suggests quietude and harmony. The energetic young manager came to take charge of the Colonial after it had proven a failure as a photoplay house. He came with ideas of his own, and was given carte blanche to put them into execution. The result is that the Colonial is now on an excellent paying basis, and that its clientele is steadily growing.

Another element that made for the success of the Colonial is the musical entertainment. Music as an essential to the proper enjoyment of motion pictures was recognized by Manager Marcus as a direct necessity, and instead of the loud blare and the illogical orchestration so common in many photoplay houses, the music fits in and harmonizes with the picture.

Before the pictures constituting a show are screened for the public Mr. Marcus views each one privately. He also has the musical score selected for each picture tried out during the private running of the program to further satisfy him that there are no inconsistencies. Should any unsuitable cue be found in playing the selection which was not observed when it was picked, it is altered immediately, so that each score is in perfect harmony with the action in the picture, and in shape to be presented to the patrons of the Colonial.

St. James Theater, Asbury Park, N. J.

Rosenberg Opens 2,360-Seat Picture House on Jersey Coast —His Third Venture There—Typhoon Fan Ventilation System Used.

THE accompanying illustration is a photograph of a wash drawing of the new theater which was opened recently in Asbury Park, N. J., by Walter Rosenberg, manager of the Savoy theater, 112 West 34th street, New York City. This makes the third venture on the Jersey Coast for Rosenberg, for he controls and operates the Savoy theater, also in Asbury Park, and the Broadway at Long Branch.

The St. James has a seating capacity of 2,360, which entitles it to the distinction of being one of the largest motion picture houses in the State of New Jersey. Thomas W. Lamb, who was the architect of the Rialto theater, New York City, designed the St. James, and the exterior is built of red brick laid up in black cement with panels of yellow buff. A scheme of color decoration different from that common in decorating the interior of theaters has been inaugurated in the St. James. Instead of the usual gold, brown and red motif the color scheme is black and gold, which is calculated to eliminate whatever glare that may be produced from the ceiling and wall lights.

The dimensions of the structure are 100 by 156 feet, and it is proposed to operate the St. James all the year round. The Typhoon Fan system of ventilation is used, and a Moeller pipe organ furnishes the musical accompaniment to the pictures. Ample provision was made in building the St. James to house "legitimate" shows should it ever be decided to change the policy.

$80,000 PICTURE HOUSE FOR MADISON.

An $80,000 theater will be erected on East Mifflin street, Madison, Wis., taking the place of the Strand and running through to East Dayton street. Concrete, tile, marble and iron will be used in the construction of the playhouse, which is to be one of the largest and finest moving picture theaters in the northwest. It will be fireproof throughout.

Star Palace, Patchogue, L. I.

Oldest Theater on Long Island Still Going "Strong" After Twelve Years—Has Been Remodeled from Ttime to Time to Bring It Up to Date.

THE Star Palace, the oldest theater on Long Island, is at Patchogue, under the management of George T. Holmes. It has been under the same management since its inception twelve years ago. This is a long life for a motion picture theater. It began in 1905 in a small store which seated 116 persons. This was before the days of motion picture studios. Pictures were being made on the roofs of office buildings. Few pictures were as long as one thousand feet. The exhibition of a moving picture was mainly a stunt. And yet Mr. Holmes made good and has kept it up ever since.

The first building of the Star Palace was operated for two years. Then a larger house was built two doors below seating four hundred persons. This building was occupied until three years ago when the present building was erected.

The present building, the third Star Palace, is the largest theater in Suffolk County. It was erected at a cost of $30,000 and has a seating capacity of over fifteen hundred. It is a two-story concrete structure, the facade decorated with artistic plaster figures in relief. It carries a vertical electric sign bearing the word, "Palace," surmounted by a five-pointed electric star. The building is flanked by two ornamental columns for street lights standing at the curb. On each side of the arch, which gives entrance to the wide and spacious lobby, is an electric arc. The arch is set with electric lights. Altogether this arrangement gives a very attractive appearance by night, and serves to beautify the high road on which the theater is situated. The large lobby offers lots of space for the display of posters advertising the daily attractions. The admission prices are fifteen and twenty-five cents daily, both matinee and night.

This was the first theater on Long Island to have an orchestra. There are now six pieces in the orchestra. The stage is decorated with a special scene set made by the Lee Lash Studios. The size of the picture projected is seventeen by twenty-four feet. A Johns-Manville booth is used and Simplex projectors. This theater had the third Simplex that was built.

The publicity department of the theater is under the management of Earle Holmes, whose enterprise won for him second prize in the Bluebird advertising contest. As an example of what he can do, this is what happened when "The Eagle's Wings" was shown for two days for the benefit of the Red Cross. He used a Ford tractor as a street advertisement and thereby attracted one thousand children into the theater from the nearby village of Hagerman, L. I. Further, he induced a local weekly newspaper, "The Argus," to issue a special edition advertising the picture. This is an unusual feat. Mr. Holmes attributes the success of his theater directly to the Moving Picture World, from which he has gleaned many a money-making point.

MANY IMPROVEMENTS FOR GRAND OPERA HOUSE.

Always on the lookout for the comfort and convenience of their patrons, the O'Donnell-Eskridge Amusement Company, of Washington, Ind., at a cost of $3,000 has installed in their Grand Opera House there a new ventilating and air-cooling system. Situated between the ceiling and roof of the building is a double set of eight-foot typhoon multiblade twin blowers, with ventilators located in another part of the building, which provide an outlet for the vitiated air. The fans are operated by a ten-horsepower electric motor. This equipment insures a constant supply of fresh, cool air at all times, which is particularly pleasing to the audience during the hot summer months.

The company also announces that late in the summer the upper part of the theater will be remodeled, the present balcony and offices removed and a new semi-circular balcony built, allowing an unobstructed view of the screen from every seat, and increasing the capacity of the house by about 350. Four new boxes will be added, new orchestra chairs installed, and the entire theater redecorated. As a result, Washington will have one of the most attractive and up-to-date houses in southern Indiana.

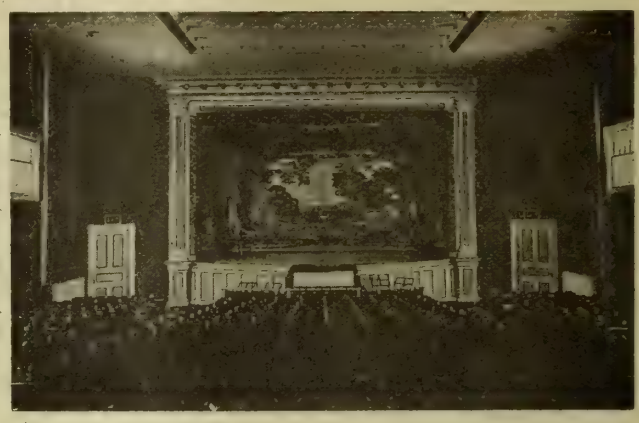
Opera House, Wolfville, N. S.

Town with Only 2,000 Population Maintains 500-Seat Photoplay Theater—Students of Seminary Attend Show in Body When Educational Film Is Run.

THE Opera House at Wolfville, N. S., formerly owned and managed by the late W. Marshall Black, has been taken over by several St. John men. A. E. Mason, formerly of the Imperial theater, has been appointed manager and is already in Wolfville. Mr. Mason has been for some years chief electrician and operator at the Imperial and will be qualified by his experience to manage the theater. He has a personal interest in the business.

The town of Wolfville has a population of 2,000, and is the center of a large farming district. There is a seminary there and when an educational film is run the authorities co-operate with the theater and announce the picture at the college, the students sometimes attending in a body.

The Opera House has perhaps the finest set of properties in the Provinces, and can handle any of the better class of road shows. The house is used (as so many of our theaters are) as a sort of social center, and on Sundays meetings of various kinds are held, recruiting, patriotic or lectures.



Interior of Opera House, Wolfville, N. S., Canada.

The house is decorated in old rose and cream. It possesses two picture machines and its own electric light plant. The city current is alternating, so a Mercury Arc Rectifier is used.

Music can be furnished by piano or organ, and the theater is equipped for orchestra. Admission is ten and fifteen cents, the management paying the war tax. The admission was raised recently to meet this tax. Only evening shows are held. The programme changes three times a week. There is a seating capacity of five hundred. The seats are opera chairs.

YOUNG BUYS GRAND THEATER AT LEXINGTON.

John C. Young, who for about two years has been associated with Clyde Wright as part owner of Wright's Grand theater, Lexington, Mo., has purchased Mr. Wright's interest in the house. Mr. Young, who will now assume full charge, is well fitted for his duties as he has had several years' experience in the motion picture business. This change is due to Mr. Wright's recent illness, together with the great increase in his duties as Justice of the Peace. He has proved himself to be an enterprising manager and a great believer in the efficiency of advertising, and his many friends regret to see him give up the business with which he has been associated for several years.

Old Mill Theater, Dallas, Texas

E. H. Hulsey Rehabilitates House Damaged by Fire—One of the Prettiest Theaters in the City—Uses No Gaudy Announcements in Lobby.

ON May 19 last the re-opening of the Old Mill Theater in Dallas took place. The original building was so badly damaged by fire on the night of February 24 that the structure had to be practically rebuilt. As can be seen from the accompanying view of the exterior the architectural design resembles that of a mill. There is the flanking column at each side, wide at the bottom and slightly narrower at the top, where an immense exhaust fan in each has been placed, calling to mind the fan shaped wind wheel which is so important a part in the old-time mills. Then further enhancing the illusion is the old fashioned shaped window in the columns and in the center part of the structure, and the gradually sloping roof which projects just a little beyond the front and back of the building.

One of the distinguishing features of the rehabilitated Old Mill is the attractive electrical display over the main entrance. This shows a woman standing at the edge of the roof in a diving position. The next figure shows her in the air, while in the third position the figure is partly submerged in the "water." Each of the figures is outlined in colored electric lights, and the splash caused by the "body" touching the "water" is also brought out by the alternating lighting and dying out of incandescent lights. Then there is the water wheel of the mill and the "water" gushing under it and the spray from the blades as they leave the water. This is a two-side sign; that is to say, it can be seen from either direction on a line parallel with the building line.

The front of the Old Mill is faced with tapestry brick lined with white cement. There is an artistic canopy running the entire length of the building and extending to the edge of the sidewalk with art glass in the squares in the drop. In keeping with the handsome appearance of the front is the method in which the announcement concerning the current and future programs is made. All paper used is placed in glass covered brass frames. No gaudy posters are employed, but artistically painted signs, giving the names of the pictures, the featured players, and other data pertaining to the subjects. The flooring of the lobby is laid with large and small squares of tile in attractive design, and the box office has a wainscoting of marble which is topped with plate glass running along the sides and front. A pretty wood carved design bearing the name of the theater surmounts the glass sides and finishes off this part of the theater. The lobby as well as the front is abundantly illuminated, and four wide entrance doors lead into the auditorium. The doors are finished in mahogany. Each one is beautified with fifteen squares of beveled glass.

The fine impression of the house that is created upon the mind by the graceful lines of the exterior is not weakened one iota when the interior is approached. Here, too, the lines are graceful, and the various colors used in the decorations blend harmoniously. And so the conception that the Old Mill theater is a thing of beauty, a worthy addition to the list of excellent motion picture theaters in Dallas and a credit to the name of E. H. Hulsey, general manager of the company operating the house, and to the other memmers of the concern, is firmly entrenched in the mind of the observer.

A few words of detail on the embellishments of the interior will not be amiss. Silk tapestry of rosy hue adorn the walls, and the quiet elegance produced by this warm decoration is enhanced by the arrangement of ivory colored panels in relief. Ivory and gold is the color motif of the ceiling, and this has been relieved by hand painted floral effects. All electrical fixtures are finished in gold leaf while the draperies are in blue silk velour. This is in striking contrast to the ivory colored carpet, the plainness of which has been broken by figures in blue. Then there is the flower receptacles and bird cages in willow with stands to match, adding to the individuality of the Old Mill.

Each one of the 1,500 seats has a mahogany colored frame with Spanish leather upholstering. Indirect lighting is used, and a vacuum cooling system. Music is furnished by a large pipe organ. Until six o'clock a section is reserved for children under twelve years and unaccompanied women. The uniform of the ushers smacks of the military, and each man is drilled in courtesy and politeness.

Capacity houses have been enjoyed since the Old Mill was re-opened, and the admission prices are 10, 15, 25 and 35 cents.

ALLENTOWN'S STRAND TO OPEN IN SEPTEMBER.

Situated in the heart of the City of Allentown, Pa., at the corner of Eighth and Hamilton streets, the Strand theater, representing an investment of over $100,000, is nearing completion, and will be opened early in September. The location of this house is admirable, as it faces the terminus of the trolley lines from Philadelphia and surrounding towns.

Gennert and Stuckert, who are the managers as well as the owners, have spared no expense in making this house, so far as beauty and comfort are concerned, one of the most attractive houses in that part of the state. The ventilating plant, which is being installed by the American Heating and Ventilating Company, will supply 25 cubic feet of air per minute for each patron.

Built of steel, brick and concrete, the building occupies a plot 46½ by 170 feet, and is equipped with a large number of exits so as to enable the theater to be emptied within a very short space of time. Another feature which not only adds to the safety but also to the comfort of the patrons is the wide spaces between the rows of seats. Other conveniences for the patrons include rest rooms, sanitary drinking fountains and a spacious foyer; in fact, the management is providing numerous new and novel features which should, together with the high class of pictures to be shown, insure a large clientele.

"Rose Breeding" (Universal).

IN THE Universal Screen Magazine No. 31 will be found some valuable information concerning the breeding of roses. For those who love flowers or are interested in the development and culture of roses this subject will be found unusually interesting. The illustration reveals the manner in which the seed from selected plants is fertilized, ripened and later germinated in sandy soil. The subject is well illustrated and sub-titled with care.

"An Under-Sea Garden" (Mutual-Gaumont).

In Reel Life No. 67 will be found some interesting views which have been photographed on the floor of the ocean at Miami, Fla., by E. B. Gray. In the picture are shown the coral reefs at the edge of the gulf stream, the plant life of the ocean, and the fish swimming about in their own domain. This is an intensely attractive subject which will find favor with all.

"Beach Sports in Southern California" (Paramount-Bray).

In the eightieth release of the Pictograph will be found some inspiring views of beach sports on the Californian coast. Among these is surf riding, which originated with the Hawaiians. Here we see men and women indulging hilariously in the sport of riding a plank over the waves. Splendid exhibitions of swimming are also included, and one of the features of the picture is the work of A. Dahlquist, a member of the San Diego Life Guards, who demonstrates some daring feats.

"Bruges, Belgium" (Mutual-Gaumont).

Views of the old city of Bruges, Belgium, comprise a part of Tours Around the World No. 40. Bruges is the capital of West Flanders and is of unusual interest on the screen at the present time because of Belgium's place in the great world war. The canals which intersect it have caused it to be known as "The Venice of the North" and add much to its picturesqueness. The city is noted for its wonderful chimes, and the places of interest which are shown are the famous belfry of Bruges, the Lion's Bridge, and the Gruthouse, a seignorial residence of the fifteenth century.

"The Land That Does Not Wiggle" (Educational-Bruce).

On his way through Texas and New Mexico Robert C. Bruce picked up a great deal of interesting material, photographing for us the idiosyncrasies of the "Land That Does Not Wiggle." Evidently the stillness of the sandy wastes and rocks over which he chose to travel impressed him in this manner. One of the first things in picture that impresses us is a sand storm. Then there is the little mission made of mud, and the chocolate colored houses with their chocolate colored inmates. There are typical New Mexico scenes in abundance, and views of the Rio Grande and cactus covered wastes. This is a remarkably attractive picture, at the close of which are some night scenes on the desert. Here we are reminded that because of its beautiful nights men answer the wail of the desert.

"The First American Apartment House" (Educational-Bruce)

"The First American Apartment House" appears on the same reel with "Nature's Theatricals," a study of the Grand Canyon. The apartment house referred to is that embodying the homes of the Cliff Dwellers, which were photographed by Mr. Bruce at the Canyon of El Rito de Los Frijoles, N. M. It has a courtyard 200 feet in diameter and possesses 180 rooms. On the walls in the back rooms there still exist the remains of adobe plaster used in lining them. The subject is unusually well illustrated in the usual interesting style of Robert C. Bruce.

"Nature's Theatricals" (Educational-Bruce).

"Nature's Theatricals" presents some of the most beautiful views of the Grand Canyon of Arizona that have ever been photographed. Here we see the tourists descending into the canyon by way of the Bright Angel trail, and are given several views of the sides of the great abyss. Then we are told that only amateurs get their knowledge of the canyon by following the trail into its depths. Others of wider vision sit on the edge of the precipice and watch for "Nature's theatricals" in the play of the elements about its rim. Before and after the storm are beautifully described in film, and with our photographer we watch the mystery of the clouds as they pour like great white streamers from canyons into other canyons of greater mystery. A truly beautiful picture.

The School vs. The Theater

W. D. McGuire of the National Board of Review Points Out Wisdom of Utilizing Theaters for Film Entertainments.

IN SPEAKING of the work of the National Committee for Better Films to a representative of the Moving Picture World, W. D. McGuire, secretary of the National Board of Review, said: "It is not unusual in the development of many social movements, for dangers to crop up, that were not at first anticipated. The enthusiasm with which local committees are forming in different communities to further the Better Films Movement is also giving rise to a danger which may develop unless motion picture exhibitors show themselves willing to grasp the opportunity offered. I refer to the question frequently asked by these committees as to whether it is wise to give motion picture entertainments in the school buildings. We all recognize that the people are coming into their own as far as the schoolhouse is concerned. The time is rapidly passing when either the principal of a school or the local school board may consider the school as their personal property, and they no longer feel that they have the authority to deny the unlimited use of the school building to the people of the community—the taxpayers—to whom the property really belongs. This was brought out forcibly at the Chicago convention of the National Council of Community Center workers whose slogan is the unlimited use of the schoolhouses by the people themselves.

"When it comes, however, to transferring the motion picture entertainment of the community to the school building, even as a community center, danger arises. The school stands for concrete education and this fact is very apt to be implied in the whole atmosphere of the place. It is particularly well-grounded in the minds of young people who spend so many hours a day under the schoolhouse roof. The motion picture theater, on the other hand, represents 'entertainment' in their minds and this type of entertainment while possessing educational value of a high order, nevertheless imparts its enlightenment, for the most part, sub-consciously rather than consciously. It is apt, therefore, to be more permanent.

"The local committee on Better Films, therefore, working for permanent results, will do well to utilize the motion picture theater as the field for their operations rather than attempt to transfer the entertainment to a school building where the surroundings do not normally lend themselves to enertainment as an end in itself. Whether or not the local committee is inclined to transfer its activities to the schoolhouse depends largely upon the measure of cooperation shown by the local theater manager. It is fortunate that in most localities up-to-date managers are quick to show the utmost cooperation, realizing that to work in the public interest is to their personal financial interest also.

"The National Committee for Better Films has urged from its origin the avoidance of the so-called educational pictures, at any rate as the backbone of the program. The finest dramas with a strong human interest element are those which appear month after month on the bulletin of the National Committee as having been used most successfully. There are conspicuous examples among producing companies making photoplays of this type consistently. It may be stated with reasonable assurance, that the entertainment which will not please the older people of the community will not be successful with young people. The heart, rather than the head, must govern in selecting the pictures. Strong, vital drama, presenting manhood and womanhood at its best, are needed. Lessons—'moral' or otherwise—should be avoided. Inspiration to act and think rightly is the best kind of education and the moving picture entertainment attracts thousands when pictures possessing these qualities are shown.

"The theater, not the schoolhouse, is the place for the motion picture show. Much is gained and nothing lost by using this natural channel for the entertaiments. It all depends on the cooperative spirit shown by the exhibitor."

White Plains Gets Busy

Local Committee for Better Films Makes Plans for Future Entertainment and Welfare of Community—Theater Manager Cooperates.

RECENTLY at White Plains, N. Y., a meeting was held to arrange for special moving picture shows for that city. A strong group of representatives of various women's clubs was organized to further the interest of the Better Films Movement in White Plains, and a local exhibitor was consulted. Unfortunately he allowed other matters to press upon his time to the extent that the women of the committee gained the impression that he did not wish to cooperate with them. They immediately turned their attention to the school building and started their plans to organize regular performances in the schoolhouse weekly. At this point the manager realized the opportunity that was slipping from him and assured the ladies that by a return to the original plan they could count on his utmost cooperation. Conference meetings have been held during the summer and the movement is well under way toward getting the first of the Better Film performances started at White Plains immediately after the opening of the schools in September. Mrs. R. P. Ray, wife of the city superintendent of schools, has been active in the movement since its origin. No one realizes better than Mrs. Ray the advisability of using the regular theater for the special performances, and the danger of making the program "educational." The committee, headed by Mrs. A. K. Griffin, has the matter in charge. Publicity plans are being worked out and everything points to carrying out the plan most successfully. Mr. W. D. McGuire of the National Board of Review to whom we are indebted for this information says: "Frequently the motion picture exhibitor does not realize the Better Films Movement is his movement and that the organization of a local committee is one of the best mediums of publicity his theater can obtain."

Moving Pictures in the Orient

Interesting Matter Gleaned from J. W. Allen, Paramount Representative Recently Returned From the Orient.

OUR San Francisco correspondent, T. A. Church, sends some interesting facts in connection with the moving picture's place in the Orient. These facts, learned in an interview with J. W. Allen of the Paramount Pictures Corporation, will be found good reading, and are as follows:

The Orient, the land of mysticism, but also the land of wonderful commercial possibilities, is succumbing slowly but surely to the charm of moving pictures. This is the news brought home by J. W. Allen, of the San Francisco branch of the Progressive Motion Picture Company, distributors of Paramount Pictures, who returned in July from a trip to China, Japan and the Philippine Islands, made for the purpose of studying conditions from first hand and of placing Paramount service. During his absence of six months and two days he secured a fund of valuable information that will be used to advantage and succeeded in booking a large amount of business, considering the present development of the field.

Mr. Allen was accompanied on the trip by his wife, and the first stop, after a brief visit to Honolulu, was made in Japan. From there they went to Manila and spent two months in that city and other communities of the Insular possessions of the United States. There are several moving picture houses here and Paramount pictures are being shown in a splendid new one, the Lyric theater, on the main street of the city, which was opened on June 1. While prominent as a business thoroughfare, this street is one of the shortest of similar importance in the world, being but about four blocks in length.

From the Philippine Islands Mr. Allen and his wife went to Hong Kong, the British port in China, and then to Canton, Shanghai and the northern provinces, two months being spent in this country. Much has been written concerning the moving picture industry in China, but Mr. Allen found but little to substantiate the reports that have come out of that country either concerning the number of theaters, their ownership or the methods of conducting them. "China, with a population estimated at four hundred million souls, has within its great confines only forty moving picture houses," said Mr. Allen, "or one for every ten million persons. On the face of it this country should present wonderful possibilities for moving pictures, and it does, but any development will be slow. Moving picture theaters are found in the treaty ports, but there are great cities in the interior where there are no theaters and none are wanted at the present time. A vast amount of poverty and ignorance must be overcome and changes made in local government before moving pictures will be popular." In many places attempts have been made to introduce this form of amusement, but without much success. Soldiers would insist on being admitted free to entertainments and would start disturbances which the civil authorities would be unable to quell, with the result that the latter in many cases are now refusing to grant permits to would-be exhibitors in order to preserve order. This is merely one of the many problems met with in attempting to introduce moving pictures in China and illustrates the fact that it is not solely a question of educating Chinese to appreciate screen productions.

During the stay of Mr. Allen in Japan he visited the leading cities, including Kobe, Osaka, Kyoto, Tokyo and Yokahama. He found that this country possesses splendid possibilities as a market for moving pictures, with this form of entertainment steadily growing in popularity. However, there are many problems to be overcome by the American manufacturer in marketing his products there and business cannot be transacted on American lines. Quite a few Japanese films are being made, but these do not approach the American product in quality. These native productions are divided sharply into two schools, those of the old, or Shogun days, which have to do with the legends and myths of old Japan, and those of the new Japan, whose actors play parts of modern dramas. Practically all of the work is done by men, it being very seldom that a woman portrays a character before the camera.

The wrestlers of Japan, long idols of the people, are commencing to appear in moving pictures. These are trained from boyhood for their future occupation and the course of training they receive and the system of feeding that is followed make giants of them and they appear almost like a different race, compared with the rest of the people, who are small.

One of the distinctive features of moving picture entertainments in Japanese theaters is the use of the film explainer, or kabutsan, as he is known. This personage occupies a prominent place on the stage and explains the action on the screen while the films are being slowly run through. He gives his interpretation of what the actors in the production are saying, runs the gamut of emotions, with deep bass tones for the villains, shrill shrieks for woe, and changes to suit the action of the picture. Frequently he gets an entirely different impression from that intended by the director of the picture, but if this is noticed by the audience it is never shown.

Moving pictures are projected in an entirely different manner in that country than in the United States, and machines of Japanese manufacture are used almost exclusively. These are sold at less than one hundred dollars gold, so there is no chance for any business there by American manufacturers under present conditions. Films are run through the machines at a very low rate of speed and the intermittent movement is supplanted by a device which serves the same purpose, but which does not admit of a fast motion.

Contrary to the general impression, but few of the Japanese sit on the floor in moving picture houses, but the parts of the theaters arranged for sitting in this manner are considered the best. Music is furnished by a native orchestra, which performs after the kabutsan has finished his work. All attempts to introduce American music has failed, being acceptable to no class of Japanese. The patronage is drawn almost exclusively from the middle class, the members of the old school not caring for modern invention and the poorer classes unable to go. Japanese exhibitors do not use film titles, leaving the interpretation to the kabutsan, but in China these are translated and are shown in both English and Chinese.

While in Tokyo Mr. Allen made a trade showing of Paramount pictures and the leading film men of the Empire were on hand to view them. A story of his trip appeared in the "movie magazine" published by the Katsudo-Shashin-Zasshi Publishing Co., with pictures taken at a welcome party tendered himself and Mrs. Allen at Mikawaya Hall on June 20, by Shiho Okamura, publisher of the Katsudo-Shashin-

Zasshi. The dinner served here included almost twenty courses and was an interesting experience, in which the manipulation of chopsticks formed no small part.

Mr. Allen is now attending to his former duties as manager of the San Francisco branch of the Progressive Motion Picture Company, but these have taken on a different aspect since his return from the Orient. Instead of being merely a distributing point for the Pacific Coast, in itself a territory of no mean importance, San Francisco has become the distributing center for the biggest territory in the world, serving five-eighths of the entire population of the globe. Paramount pictures have been placed in this new field and the seed that has been sown is expected to produce an abundant harvest in years to come, when the sleeping East awakens.

British Notes

THE most important news item of the week is an announcement by the Chancellor of the Exchequer (Bonar Law) respecting the increased entertainment taxes which should have come into operation the beginning of this month but which have been postponed until October. Mr. Law has made the following concessions: The admission tax of one penny to entertainments will apply up to and including seats of the value of four-pence instead of three-pence originally proposed. The duty on seats over the value of seven shillings and six-pence but under ten shellings will be one shilling and six-pence instead of two shillings. On admissions over half a guinea but under fifteen shillings, two shillings instead of three shillings, and on seats over fifteen shillings the duty payable will be at the rate of six-pence for each five shillings (or part of five shillings) over and above the two shillings on the initial fifteen. Upon introducing these amendments into the Finance Bill Mr. Law stated in Parliament that the Government has no desire to pose as a killjoy and it realizes the necessity for legitimate entertainment at this time of nerve strain. The concession cannot be extended to six-pence seats because over eighty per cent. of the entire revenue from this source comes from tickets of six-pence or less. Mr. Law added that "the reduction of the higher priced tickets is to encourage higher forms of entertainment." The announcement has naturally given satisfaction in all sections of the trade but particularly to exhibitors. They are, however, determined to keep the entertainment duty at its present level if humanly possible, especially in regard to six-pence seats.

The news of the sudden death of Sir H. Beerbohm Tree must have occasioned bitter disappointment to his many film producing friends in the States, particularly in Los Angeles, whither he had definitely planned to return in the autumn. The late Sir Herbert was the first great luminary of the "legit" theater to realize, seven years ago, that the cinema was more than an ingenious toy and to bestow his patronage upon it. Since this, his first appearance in Barker's "Henry VIII," down to the Triangle "Macbeth," the industry had a consistently firm friend in the famous actor-manager.

The call upon the exhibitor to show on his screen slides and films in aid of war and other charities without including the large number of appeals from different Government departments has never been so great as now. So much so that a number of showmen are inclined to the opinion that they are being taken advantage of by charitable institutions out for free publicity. The Edinburgh branch of the Exhibitors' Association has decided to show no further films or slides of this type until they have been approved by the secretary, and even then only upon condition that acknowledgment of the exhibitors' services is made in the press.

If there is one question more than another that a certain London newspaper keeps on flashing before its readers it is "when is Charles Chaplin going to enlist?" According to this paper and the inference of the articles the war will cease the day Chaplin appears in France, so perhaps this is one reason why its owner is visiting America to coerce Charlie into joining for immediate service. A telegram published on Saturday and attributed to the Los Angeles correspondent of the Boston "Christian Science Monitor," states that the famous comedian has already enrolled in the U. S. A. citizen army for training, cancelling all future arrangements for film production. All this makes interesting reading, but the balance of opinion, in the trade and out, concurs that Chaplin could render no better service than by keeping on, "keeping on."

MOBILIZE PARK SHOWS FOR WAR TIME.

This year the whole scheme of the Boston Park Shows has been changed and they are "mobilized for war service." Incidentally they are showing that motion pictures have definite usefulness to convey information to the people in times like these. Current record films are used, but not anything of a dramatic or story character. Four to six reels are run a night. The length of the program is an hour and a half to two hours. The singing of national or patriotic songs by the audience, with words thrown on the screen, is a prominent feature. Several sets of slides are used in each program, which makes it easy to emphasize whatever subject is current, as, for example, the Liberty Loan when that was being pushed; the Red Cross war fund campaign; recruiting for army, navy and Marine Corps and, later, food conservation.

The film material found to be especially desirable for the purpose includes the Universal, Pathe and Mutual News Weeklies, Selig "Following the Flag," Federal's "America Is Ready," Pathe's "Our Fighting Forces" and Metro's Army and Navy pictures.

FIRE UNDERWRITERS ISSUE BOOKLET.

The National Board of Fire Underwriters, with offices at 76 William street, New York, has prepared for the Council of National Defense a booklet of directions for the prevention of fire. Its title is "Safeguarding Industry." The booklet contains twenty-four pages. Sixty-six thousand copies have been mailed to manufacturers, and the board states if any concern has been overlooked it will be glad to forward a copy on application.

The purpose of the publication is the highly important one of preventing fires in industrial plants working under the abnormal conditions of wartime emergency. The cover carries a signed statement especially written by President Wilson, as follows: "Preventable fire is more than a private misfortune. It is a public dereliction. At a time like this of emergency and of manifest necessity for the conservation of national resources, it is more than ever a matter of deep and pressing consequence that every means should be taken to prevent this evil."

always with a good idea of what should be kept up. With twelve 8 by 12-inch pages there should be more space for the program announcement instead of merely a third of one page, and even a dub printer should know better than to use all full face where he is so crowded. That page three should be given to the editorial head and the three programs alone, which would permit a proper display, using one of the many forms of program shown in this department; for example, the Colonial, Camden, N. J., which would work well here. This chain of houses is almost too generous with its general reading. The house should come first always, no matter what the form. Recently all three houses bought Liberty Bonds with the day's taking. There was a patriotic parade when the Mayor ordered all business places closed in the afternoon, but between five and eleven the houses ran full blast and then bought Liberty Bonds. Naturally they got local mention, the daily paper giving them a three-line twenty-four-point head on the first page as part of the general whoop for the day. In the same paper there is announcement of F. H. Richardson's tour and his comments on the town, for F. H. used to shove a locomotive through the town when it was only a narrow gauge road and a narrow gauge town. Now both are broad gauge.

Another Red Cross Scheme.

T. L. Little, of the Majestic, Camden, S. C., sends in a ticket used for Red Cross week with this explanation:

I am enclosing to you a coupon ticket that I am using for Red Cross Week, June 18 to 25, and which so far is meeting with unusual success.

The Boy Scouts and the local branch of the Red Cross Society are both taking an active interest and selling these coupon tickets. I am taking my highest average week receipts and giving to the Red Cross all over and above that. I figure now that the Red Cross will receive as their part $100 for the seven days.

There is practically no inducement in cut rates, as the 80-cent coupon is sold for 70 cents, making the straight seven days at 10 cents, there being one 10-cent-20-cent day.

MAJESTIC THEATRE

The ticket is a straight cardboard strip 2¾ by 6 inches, as shown, the stubs being perforated to permit them to be torn off, the first date being at the top. Presumably some box office stamp was used as a counter check; certainly some such safeguard should be used. Mr. Little is taking no chance. He gets his top receipts and turns over to the beneficiaries a stipulated percentage of their sales, or a percentage of all the takings above a certain sum. The straight commission basis is the best rule, since it requires them to work and yet gives them a direct check on results. But any scheme is good that declares the house in on the movement—any movement—for public good. Between the Liberty Bond sale and the Red Cross movement, the picture theaters have presented themselves in a wholly new light to the public.

Doubles on the Kids.

The City theater, Newark, N. J., has found it pays to cater to the children. It anounces two special bills a week through vacation time. We print the announcement:

> With the view of making the City theater attractive to its younger patrons during vacation days, Wednesdays have been selected to furnish special features for the children in addition to Saturday matinees. The success of the special children's matinee program on Saturday afternoons has not only warranted its continuance, but the setting aside of Wednesdays as well for a similar entertainment. The principal attraction now booked for this new departure on Wednesdays is little Mary McAlister in Charles Mortimer Peck's "Do Children Count?"—a series of twelve two-reel subjects, each unit a complete and distinct story in itself. Motoy comedies, animated photographic comedy conceits enacted by toy dolls and manikins, in conjunction with Ditmar's celebrated animal pictures, are the selections for the entertainment of our younger clientele at the mid-week special children's show. These features will also be a part of the evening as well as the afternoon entertainment.
> The present policy of presenting attractions for the children in addition to the feature for "grown-ups" on Saturday afternoon will be continued. The offerings for children Saturdays will be different than that presented on Wednesday. The programs will consist of the more pretentious children's productions and the better known juvenile subjects. These features will be presented at 1.00 and 3.00 P. M. at the matinee only, and will not form a part of the evening's entertainment.

It might be argued that there is too much propaganda on "Do Children Count?" but we think that it will be found that the pictures will interest the youngsters. Special catering to the kiddies through the summer is a lot better than kicking about poor business. The City is using a neat six page railroad with an informative front page and a space for the star feature there, and a well arranged inside form. The color combination—deep green on lemon—is rich and effective, but perhaps a bit too warm for summer.

Halfway.

Here is a trade advertisement we clipped from the program of the Queen, De Queen, Ark. It illustrates a nice point in advertising. The idea is good in that it offers a specific argument. You save money. How much? The cost of admissions to the theater for a week. But the display does no catch as well as would a

FREE ADMISSIONS
All this week

That would get them started reading because it is something concrete. It is a definite promise and not a broad generality. Precisely the some thing holds good in writing your theater copy. Be definite in your statement. Get attention with a catchline, but make the line important. Think what you want to say, then say it in the most definite and attractive way you can plan.

Boxed Fronts.

The joint program of the Majestic and Colonial theaters, Jackson, Mich., offers some neat wrinkles. We rather like the front page arrangement, for example, in which the stories are boxed. The pages are eight by nine inches, almost too square, perhaps, and the side boxes are each an inch and a half wide. The middle box changes with the cut or may be omitted if the cut is too wide to make up well. The examples show one with and one without the rule box. Both work well. The matter in these boxes runs all the way from advance notices to hints on theatergoing. It is all live material and not merely matter put in there to fill up a space. It all means something to the house and the patron. The inside pages suggest the Kunsky houses in Detroit, which use much the same style program. We particularly like the page on the left, with the time table in the box. There might be room to date the days on both programs, but the weekly date is pretty close, though not close enough to link the day and date. A man may not stop to figure out that in the week of June 24 Thursday is the 28th, and the idea is to get day and date in the memory at the same time. W. S. McLaren shows a nice judgment in his clip stuff, but it is by no means all clip. His original matter is smart and to the point. In announcing "The Slave Market" he starts in with the explanation that it is not another vice trust expose but a good old-fashioned pirate story. That is a far better line to take. The program runs eight pages with a generous support from the trade advertisers, who are not permitted, however, to intrude on the space needed by the house. It is the sort of program that makes business, and the fact that it is in its third volume speaks for itself.

Both if Possible.

W. H. Coon, of the Mission, Amarillo, Texas, writes:

> I am sending you two of my programs for criticism. This is a town of about 18,000 and has three theaters. We put out 1,500 of these programs every week. Our house, which caters to the better class, has a seating capacity of 750, and employs a five piece orchestra. Knowing these things do you think hand bills or newspaper advertising would be the better? We have always used hand bills, but since every house in town is using them at present, we have not been getting the results from them lately that we secured in the past. You will notice the little cut in the center of our program which reads:

> We began using this cut several months ago and have used it continuously. A few weeks ago another house began to use the same style of composition on all advertising matter, but the text reads, "Where all the people go to see the best show." What do you think ought to be done? We have done nothing—letting it "soak" into the public. Do you think that is best?

We have reproduced the cut in question, not that we think it would pay to take the matter to law, but because this appropriation of idea is so common and may sometimes be so important that it will be worth nothing that adaption does not always prove safe. If Mr. Coon has been using his trade mark only a few months it might be necessary to patent the design to enforce protection, but we think that as a general rule the copying of an established slogan with reproduction of the essential features of a design will be held at common law to be a colorable imitation and an attempt to trade upon the merit of the original. An injunction would probably lie against an infringer, but in the present instance it hardly seems worth while to force an issue. Had the design been in use for a year or so, and had it become identified with the house, it would pay to protect the rights. The better plan would be to let the matter lie dormant. The public will make its own deductions. At the same time it is well to remember that it is not necessary to be protected by patent to guard against an attempt to trade on reputation, though it is to be presumed that if a trade mark is worth while, it is worth entering with the patent office.

But the more interesting question is the relative value of newspaper and hand bill advertising. We take it that Mr. Coon by "hand bill" refers to the programs sent, and not to throwaways in the generally accepted sense of the word. We think that a program classes above the general run of distributed matter. It is entitled to a greater distinction, but it should be distributed in some more dignified manner to gain its greater credit. If it is merely dumped upon the front door step along with two or three others, it classes as a nuisance save in the minds of the fans. Given more importance, it might advantageously replace newspaper work, though if there is a daily paper of a considerable circulation, and there is a reading public, the fact that the house appeals to the better class would indicate the fairly generous use of the daily paper. For a long time Steve Farrar, who appealed largely to miners in Eldorado, Ill., found that circulars were best, but Steve has come over to colored programs lately. If he had a larger proportion of newspaper readers from which to draw, Steve would be all for the newspapers. The way to figure it is this: If there is a local paper, does it have a large local circulation? This, of course, means large as proportioned to the town. In a town of 5,000 persons a circulation, locally, of 800 would be large. Some towns have their local papers and yet most persons depend upon the dailies from the nearby cities. All through Maine, for example, the Boston papers have the advantage over the local sheets. It would not pay to advertise in the Boston papers a theater in a small town in Maine, but the Boston papers to some extent blanket the local issues. Here the distributed program would at least get into the homes where the local paper is not seen, and so would be a better publicity medium, but even where this is the case there should be some advertising in the local paper, and it should be well and carefully done, no matter what is used to supplement it. In a town of 18,000 it should be possible to use some pictorial paper advantageously posted. This would be better than hand bills, particularly if there are several sets of hand bills out. Put up paper and make the boards distinctive so that it is easy to see that the paper refers to the attractions at the Mission. Supplement this with a program that has something to read on it other than the formal bill. The Mission program is a four pager with an ornamental front, a well set double middle and an atrocious back page of trade ads held together only by a spinal column of one point rule with ribs of the same material. There is no frame to hold it together and the announcements are so small in proportion to the page that they look positively lonesome. It would be better to take that back page for the house, or at least half the space, running reading matter. Still better would be the use of reading matter on page two, with the program in the Theater Louisiana style on page three and with trade ads decently and re-spectably set on the back page, or the trade ads as they stand with a heading and a narrow column of text between. The ads run 3½ inches wide on a page 6¼ inches wide. There is too much margin. That back page is enough to damn the entire issue. A program must be something people want to see, not something they merely tolerate. If it is the only one in town it may show some results, but if there is competition the best looking bill will be apt to get the more respectful attention, but it must be something that looks like a "really and truly" program and not an experiment on the part of an amateur typesetter. A 750 house in an 18,000 town should be able to use both newspaper advertising and a good program. There must be some printer in Amarillo who knows his trade and the elemental rules of getting out a good job. It will be harder work to supply copy for the right sort of a program, but it will pay.

Too Joyous.

Clearly Miss Pauline Carr has been reading of Douglas Fairbanks and the ample salary a wide smile brings to him, for she is beaming in the ballyhoo used for Keith's Hippodrome, Youngstown, Ohio. The feature was "Womanhood," and evidently the house tied up to the recruiting service, for the officer in the car is Captain Stanley Huntley Lewis. No details are sent with the photograph, but these may be imagined. Note particularly the lettering on the car. Few exhibitors seem to realize that water color can be used on a car without damage if it is carefully washed off afterward. Direct lettering on the car is several times more effective than banners tied on. Directly under Capt. Lewis is "Recruiting Service," lettered upon a bursting bomb, while the hood is lettered with the title of the film story and fact that it has been adopted by the Naval Recruiting Service in its work. The sailor on the opposite running board seems to be in charge of some sort of machine gun. The collaboration with the Navy Department works well both for the house and the Department. More exhibitors should realize that they can help recruiting and themselves at the same time and this in many other ways.

Scott Starts Up.

Having gotten through with the special publicity work for Linder, L. J. Scott is back in the Chicago offices of Essanay, and those who know him from Kansas City days will be glad to see that he is starting up his aids to exhibitors. Mr. Scott knows from personal experience what will and will not make good for exhibitors. His press sheets are not filled with theories but experience facts, and while he says he does not want a comment on his first sheet—for "Do Children Count?"—we do not see what he needs to be so blamed modest for. He will get better as he goes on, for that is his way, but his first contribution is nothing to be ashamed of. We do not grow jealous when the press men follow the lines of this department. We welcome every aid the exhibitor can get, and we are glad to see Mr. Scott where his material will go to Exhibitors generally and not merely to those in the limits of one exchange. Even if you do not use the Essanay features his stuff is a good lesson in general advertising, but we think that many will be led to take up this Keys feature because the press work is made so easy. Here are some examples of preliminary advertising. The cuts in two cases seem to have been taken from a cut up larger plate, but the suggestions are good, and those two on the left we particularly like. But it is as a stunt man that Mr. Scott excels, and it is easier to write advertising than to evolve pulling stunts. Some of the stunts he suggests are new and the others are time tried, but particularly applicable to the present series. That's Scott stunts that fit. We cannot copy his stuff with the same freedom we showed when his work had but a limited circulation, for you can get the Essanay sheet for a postal card, but we want to urge you to make sure you get on the Essanay mailing list. It will be worth while. One very practical stunt is a six page railroad folder for the series, printed in brown on cream laid paper with a blank page for the current house program. This is a new scheme, and a valuable one.

Special Ghost Stories.

The Universal special press sheet for "The Gray Ghost" is a good example of what it should be. It is printed only on one side, and not only gives a number of stories but gives stories of the sort that an editor will print without revision downward. One great trouble with these advance sheets, not alone the Universal but most others, has been the extravagance of tone of the stories. The real trick in press agenting lies in writing stuff that will be printed without undue revision. If you say a story is "superbly wonderful" the entire sentence is apt to be cut out because the copy reader will not bother to write in a new adjective. If you say that the story is of real interest the sentence is apt to stay in, and it is more profitable to the exhibitor to have printed the fact it is of real interest than to have no comment at all. It helps the exhibitor not at all to give him color printing and extravagant adjectives. It does help him to get stuff that his newspaper friends will be glad to print, and service to the exhibitor is the determining factor in sales. One thing that makes the Pathe serials so popular is the adroit press material. Of course there has to be that in the film which will make good, but it is real press work that sells the serial to the public, and so it is the press work that sells it to the exhibitor. This is a point we have been hammering on for several years, and yet it is only lately that there has been much evidence that it has reached home, and some producing exchanges still waste on fancy printing the money they might better put into press work. This does not mean that these press helps should not be well printed. It does mean that the first consideration should be the production of a grade of press matter that will enable the exhibitor to make a profit on his rental investment. The Universal sheet is a step in the right direction and something editors and exhibitors alike should welcome.

All in Red.

J. S. Woodhouse, of the Lagoon, Minneapolis, Minn., gets out a Fourth of July program in fiery red with firecracker border used as dashes. It is appropriate, but it is not easy to read red on white smaller than twelve point, and much of the program is in a small eight point. But it is appropriate for this once, and the program is very well laid. The front page is given to a Jazz orchestra which is featured. The second page also gives prominence to the band, giving the program by days. Page three has readers on the band and four has a story on six children to be seen at the Lagoon in a single week. It is an original story picked up from the program much as a Sunday editor picks his features from the daily news. The children are not all in the same play nor in the same company. It simply struck Mr. Woodhouse that he had some unusual kiddies in unusual numbers, so he made it a talking point. Page five starts off with talk of the plays for the week and then runs into a series of casts, dated, and with a few lines of comment on the play. It is not a formal program, but treats each play by itself. The titles are in eighteen point condensed Gothic (rather a trying face) with an eight point full face dated day and the cast, also in full face, with the comment in eight point Roman following. It is neat and orderly. This runs on the next page, with a page ad for "The Neglected Wife" on page seven and two weeks' advance programs on page eight. It all forms a meaty program that you can read without mentally tiring, and in black it would be easy on the eyes. He runs several slogans at the bottom of the pages. One is "If it's at the Lagoon it's good." It might be well to work the double phrase and run: "If it's good it's at the Lagoon. If it's at the Lagoon, it's good."

A NEW HELP FOR MANAGERS

Picture Theatre Advertising

By EPES WINTHROP SARGENT (Conductor of Advertising for Exhibitors in the Moving Picture World)

A TEXT BOOK AND A HAND BOOK, a compendium and a guide. It tells all about advertising, about type and type-setting, printing and paper, how to run a house program, how to frame your newspaper advertisements, how to write form letters, posters or throwaways, how to make your house an advertisement, how to get matinee business, special schemes for hot weather and rainy days. All practical because it has helped others. It will help you. By mail, postpaid, $2.00. Order from nearest office.

INQUIRIES.

Questions concerning photoplay writing addressed to this department will be replied to by mail if a fully addressed and stamped envelope accompanies the letter, which should be addressed to this department. Questions should be stated clearly and should be typewritten or written with pen and ink. Under no circumstances will manuscripts or synopses be criticised, whether or not a fee is sent therefor.

A list of companies will be sent if the request is made to the paper direct and not to this department, and a return stamped envelope is inclosed.

Triangle Scripts.

RECENTLY we published a letter from the Triangle Film Corporation asking that all scripts intended for Triangle be sent to the company at Culver City, California, and not to the executive offices in New York, where there are no facilities for handling scripts. The item was plain enough in view of other news stories of late, but to make it fully definite it should be noted that the Triangle is the Triangle and Ince is Ince. Mr. Ince is no longer making Triangles. If you intend your script for Ince production wait for announcement of his needs. Meantime, there is a better demand for scripts at Culver City than existed during the Ince regime, and the company promises action within ten days of receipt, but this does not mean within ten days from the time you drop your envelope into the letter box at home.

Credulous.

Lately some magazine stated that a woman was making a good thing selling plots given her by her little children. We did not see the statement in print, but take this from a boob letter, but if such a statement was ever made we believe that the originator of the fable could make Ananias look like a tongue-tied amateur. It is conceivable that now and then some kiddie with an uncanny imagination might evolve an idea capable of being built up into a plot, but that a woman should make a living by marketing these kid plots is unbelievable. It sounds like one of those lies used to sell the Producer's League junk. The point, however, is that it does not pay to believe all you read in the Motion Picture Magazines intended for the general public. It is written to be interesting, and not always does the author cling to the truth with the same fierce intensity that was practiced by G. Washington. Take it with a couple of pounds of salt.

Stories Count.

The other day we noticed that one of the really big New York theatres was taking all of a certain service save the comedies. Another brand, once favored, has been dropped. In one case the comedies are all written by a single hired hand; not a writer, but a hired man. In the other case the stories have become too deadly same because the star will accept only material running in the same narrow lines. In both instances the stories have practically become a detriment to their releasing affiliations because the stories are wrong. High priced players of real merit are failing to amuse because they lack material. And neither company realizes that it is the stories or lack of them, that is to blame. Another brand is replacing these because here are offered stories that are stories and not mere excuse for pie throwing and stunt stuff.

Holding Back.

Evidently writing more for a confirmation of her own intention than with a desire for information, an author says:

> I am by nature born to fight and do not believe in lying flat because sales are slow at present. If I do as you say many do, and stop sending in stories, won't the companies forget a writer? In every studio there must be someone who watches the writer's progress. I think it cowardice to stop.

We disagree with the writer of the above. Editors are not buying, not because, as this writer suggests, they are too poor to pay for scripts, but because they want to hold the job to themselves or because they are not able to judge scripts. Generally it is more a desire to hold the money in the family. Presently these grafters are going to be found out and then kicked out. Manufacturers will find that their much-admired staffs are the chief cause of hackneyed stories and unprofitable releases and will turn again to the great body of writers. There will again be a market. That is the time to be ready to rush in with a lot of really good stories. If you send them in now the chances are that some portion of the idea may linger in the memory of some unscrupulous staff writer and what merit your work has will be taken. Then when you send in to the new editor you meet the "done before," and are naturally suspected of having stolen your own idea. It may be cowardice to stay out of the market, but we are more inclined to believe that it is merely sound sense.

Originality.

We were talking to Marc Edmund Jones the other day and some of his ideas are just as crazy as ever, though he is not talking about them as much as in the days when "Marcemunding" was a synonym for visioning. We always walk soft when we pass Marc Edmund, for we do not know at which end he is loaded. It is just possible that what we now regard as freak writing may, some day, be evolved into the play of the future. At least he is one of the few with the courage of his convictions, and he is not ashamed to offer his freaks along with the bulk of his stuff which conforms to current usage. And if it is not Jones it will very probably be someone like him who will lead the way to the real photoplay. In spite of all that has been said and written, we are not yet arrived at the real photoplay form, and by form we mean the art and not the mechanics of writing. Photoplay form today follows too closely the drama and the fiction story. It must be made more individual, more distinctive, more original before it can properly claim its place as an art instead of a graft upon twin arts. Don't get too fantastic, but do not be afraid to give rein to your fancy. It may be you or Jones or Vachel Lindsay. It probably will not be one of the old line writers.

The Average.

Probably 95 per cent. of the writers of scripts stop with their tenth submitted story. That is an average. Some may write more and others not so many, but of every hundred starters it is safe to say that 95 of them between them produce about 950 plays and stop. The other five per cent. keep on. How many beginners, do you suppose, go into a box factory and master the work after spoiling only ten boxes? It is true that they are broken in on the different machines, and seldom make complete boxes, performing only certain of the operations, but even at that there are few who master the knack with a spoilage of material for but ten boxes. Manufacturers count a certain loss as a part of the cost of breaking in new hands. They expect it. They know it must come. And yet hundreds of would-be writers do ten stories and quit. Most of them, perhaps, should have quit before the first, but unquestionably some of them could master the business if they kept at it. It is because so few do that there is still some room for those left.

Deduction.

Take a long and sharp lead pencil. Now write down the name of Marguerite Clark. Now write down the name of some "vampire" who is more popular than Miss Clark. You cannot do it, can you? You cannot think of a single vampire who is more generally popular than Miss Clark. You cannot think of one who is as popular. You can think of players who are as clever as Miss Clark, perhaps, but you cannot think of one who is as popular. Now write down the Vampire plays in which Miss Clark has appeared. There isn't one, is there? Isn't it obvious that the clean play, well done, is the best seller? Then why not write more of these?

Bribery.

Lately a very new writer wanted to know if there was not "some gathering of those authorized to purchase stories," to which he could submit his story with a reading fee. It would take only an hour, he wrote, to read his five-reel cowboy play, and he was positive that once read, it would be bought, so he was willing to pay the reader for his time. This is the second cousin to the scheme of offering the editor a sales commission, but it is just as effective in spoiling whatever chance there may be. Such editors as still read with a view to acceptance are paid to do their work, and do it properly. If a story has merit, it will be read for that merit and not because an author slips a two-dollar bill into the envelope.

Drags.

All arts have their drawbacks. We have excesses of closups and visions, but paiting has its cubists and impressionists and literature its free verse. We might be worse off.

Manufacturers' Notice.

IT IS an established rule of this department that no apparatus or other goods will be endorsed or recommended editorially until the excellence of such articles has been demonstrated to its editor.

Important Notice.

Owing to the mass of matter awaiting publication, it is impossible to reply through the department in less than two to three weeks. In order to give prompt service, those sending four cents, stamps (less than actual cost), will receive carbon copy of the department reply, by mail, without delay. Special replies by mail on matters which cannot be replied to in the department, one dollar.

Both the first and second set of questions are now ready and printed in neat booklet form, the second half being seventy-six in number. Either booklet may be had by remitting 25 cents, money or stamps, to the editor, or both for 40 cents. Cannot use Canadian stamps. Every live, progressive operator should get a copy of these questions. You may be surprised at the number you cannot answer without a lot of study.

Cannot Get Results.

Bert C. Evans, Saginaw, Mich., is in trouble, as follows:

> Would greatly appreciate your assistance in the following matter, as for some reason I am unable to get desired result. Data is: Two Powers' 6-B projectors, using 60 amperes D. C. Gundlach No. 1 projection lenses, having an effective opening of 1⅜ inches. Back focus of projection lenses, 3.5 inches; ¾ cored carbons above and 1 1/32 Silver Tip below. Project a 17-foot picture at 88 feet.
> Please advise what condenser combination should be used, both plano convex and Meniscus bi-convex; also distance from center of condenser combination to aperture. Enclosed find postage for carbon of department reply, and any additional information will be appreciated.

You say "result is unsatisfactory," but you do not advise as to in what way it is unsatisfactory. I can, therefore, only advise as to the proper lineup of the lenses and aperture distance. Using plano convex condensers you will need a 6½ next the arc, and a 7½ in front, with not to exceed 1/16 of an inch between the apexes of the lenses, and with about 15 7/2 inches from center of condenser combination to aperture. With Meniscus bi-convex you will need either two 7½ lenses, or one 7½ and one 8½, with about 17½ inches between aperture and center of condenser combination. This advice is based upon the assumption that you use 60 amperes. A different amperage will require a different line-up. The reason I give two possible combinations for the Meniscus bi-convex is that the 60-ampere curve comes exactly half-way between the two. In your case I think I would advise the Meniscus bi-convex, because it increases distance Y, which is highly desirable. After installing the new condenser system, remove your objective lens and insert a sheet of white paper exactly the same distance the back surface of the projection lens was from the film. Open your machine gate and project the white light on this paper, and measure its dimensions. You can then see how it compares with your effective lens diameter, and govern yourself accordingly insofar as projection lens diameter be concerned. Will you kindly advise me as to how this works out in your case?

From Nova Scotia.

A. J. Mason, an old-time correspondent of the department, is here again with the following. He writes from Wolfville, Nova Scotia:

> You will doubtless be surprised to hear from me at the above address, but the way of the world is that we change. I have taken charge of the Wolfville Opera House, and am well pleased with the proposition. The theater is a mighty nice one for a town of 2,000; also it has a fine stage, and an operating room 12 x 14, equipped with Motiograph and Edison motor-driven projectors. There is a Mirroroid screen, and projection is first class, with a good operator, Everet Pineo, in charge. I feel that I can make more in this end of the game, though the business will have to be built up, having been run down by carelessness in management, and by poor pictures. (Poorly-selected programmes, Brother Mason means, I take it.—Ed.) The one thing which impressed me most when I arrived here four weeks ago (letter dated July 25.—Ed.) was a photograph of the Operator's Friend, F. H. Richardson, neatly framed and hung in the lobby along with the photos of other stars. The operator has your handbooks, second and third edition, which argues for good results on the screen.
> My former assistant has taken charge of projection at the Imperial (Friend Mason was chief operator at the Imperial theater, St. Johns, N. B., for a long while.—Ed.), and is, I believe, making good. He is deserving of success, and I most earnestly wish it for him. I left because I was told I was as high as I could climb, and that did not in the least meet with my views. I was receiving more than any of the other men, and friend employer well knew I could not secure any-other position as operator at the same or better money anywhere in the Provinces. The answer is that I am here, and well satisfied with the change.
> My operator works daytime at the automobile business, and is considered about the best man in these parts. But what they lack in this part of the province is knowledge of electrical equipment. They send batteries to St. John to be charged, for instance. Friend operator wants me to go in with him. Am not familiar with car wiring. Can you recommend some good work on that subject? Note with much pleasure account of your successful trip. It was amusing at times, and I was surprised, but well pleased at the interest taken in your most valuable lectures, which every right-thinking operator cannot deny are highly instructive.

Am well pleased to hear of Mason's graduation into the managerial class, and trust he will have all kinds of success. And, by the way, what's the matter with you Maritime Province men, anyhow? Have not heard from any of you in Heaven knows how long. If you want to crawl back into your hole you can do it, of course, but it really isn't necessary to yank the hole in after you. Have I got to come up there and poke you up again? I'm some considerable poker, you know!

Cannot say offhand just what book you need, but will look the matter up tomorrow and advise you as to what I discover. What happened to that organization the Nova Scotia men formed last fall? Did it go blooey, or what happened to it?

Reduce Your Lens Ports.

The lens port should only be as large as the actual, effective light ray which carries the picture. The picture-light ray is surrounded by a halo of reflected light which, if it escapes into the auditorium, will do nothing but injury to the projection.

To test this matter, project a film (the clear white light will not do) when the audience is not in the house, and place a cardboard in the light ray right up close to the operating room wall—in the lens port, for instance. You will probably be surprised to find your actual picture-bearing light is much smaller than you had supposed, and that a considerable halo of light surrounds it.

You should then reduce the lens port to a shape and dimension which will barely pass the light ray carrying the picture, and nothing more. Paint the operating room side of the mask dead black, so that the light it intercepts will not be reflected back into the operator's eyes. In making the test for size do NOT use a title, but a rather clear scene—one not too dense. The light which surrounds the picture ray often has the effect, though I am not certain as to just why, of lessening the sharpness of the picture. But even if it does not do this, it does no good and does do distinct harm.

Jimmy-the-Usher Patches.

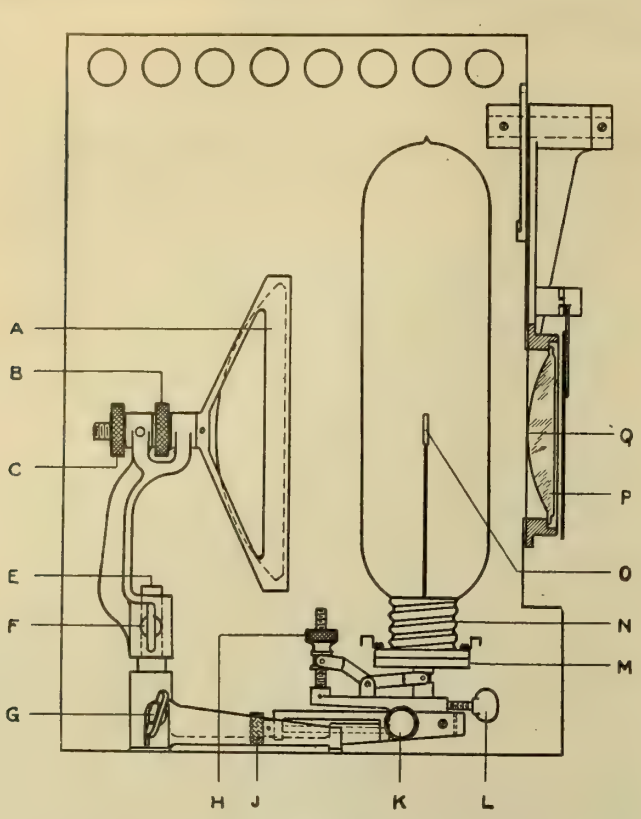
Joe Welch, Indiana, sends in some "horrible examples," together with the following pointed remarks:

> Attached splices are from the subject, "Youth's Enduring Charm," received July 14 from Indianapolis branch of the Mutual Film Corporation. Would call your special attention to where Jimmie-the-Usher got a part spliced in wrong side to. The picture was shipped to us rewound, and presumably inspected, but this is what I encountered on the first run. I hope you will forward these to the main office of the Mutual.

All right, Indiana, I will do that little thing for you, and for the benefit of other operators and exhibitors receiving service from this apparently mismanaged exchange. It is even as Indiana says. A part of the subject was spliced in backwards. Such work is raw. It is outrageous. I have repeatedly said, and I again repeat: THE OPERATOR IS NOT EMPLOYED TO DO FILM INSPECTING, and to compel him to inspect and repair film is nothing less than an outrage and a swindle. The film exchange is presumed to sell service in shape to project. The theater pays for that kind of service. Is it getting what it paid for, when an operator finds such things as this, plus a mess of splices varying from ¼ to ½ of an inch wide? Well, scarcely. The exchange is not, then, fulfilling its part of the bargain, is it? It is selling one thing and delivering quite another, is it not? And this is distinctly dishonest, is it not, both as regards the operator, who is to do the work of inspection and repair, without a cent of pay, and as regards the theater itself?

What It Looks Like and How to Use It.

The accompanying drawing shows the new incandescent equipment being marketed by the Nicholas Power Company and also the instructions for adjustment which are sent with the equipment.



Two sets of condensers are provided in this equipment, the corrugated one being for motion picture work and the other for stereopticon. The required adjustments are given below:

1—With the special moving picture lens in position, move the lamphouse forward so that the distance between the aperture and face of the lens is about 7 inches.

2—Swing the left hand arm and receptacle into position with respect to the condenser lens and secure by tightening thumbscrew "G."

3—Seat the lamp in receptacle "N"; the first position of the lamp necessary is the placing of it so that the plane of the filament "O" is parallel with the front face of the lamphouse. This is obtained by a swivel motion of the receptacle "N" and base "M," after which it is secured in this position by tightening of thumbscrew "L."

4—Place the center of the lamp filament "O" on a level with the point "Q" by means of adjustment "H."

5—Center the filament "O" of the lamp, and the lens, with respect to side movement, by means of adjustment "K."

6—By means of adjustment "J" the lamp can be brought close to the condenser so that the proper spot can be obtained at the aperture.

7—The reflector is a very important factor in obtaining the maximum amount of light. After the lamp has been properly adjusted, it should be lit and the objective lens removed so that the image of the filament may be obtained on the screen. It is necessary, of course, to get as flat a field as possible, and the adjustment of the reflector provides for this. After placing the center of reflector in a horizontal plane with the filament "O," the reflector should be moved forward or backward by means of adjustment "B" until the reflected light is the same size as the filament image. It is then moved sidewise on stud "E" until the dark spaces between the filament images are filled with the reflected light. The reflector and mounting is then secured in position by turning up the thumbscrew "F."

The lamp is now adjusted and in position for operation, allowing, of course, for the usual slight movements of either or both the lamphouse or lamp, backward or forward, to obtain a good spot on the aperture and a flat field on the screen. The other arm is swung into similar position, and adjustments as above described repeated.

When the use of slides is desired, the lamphouse is moved over to the usual position on the sliding rods, and the other set of condensers swung into place.

It must be remembered that when this type lamp is used on the usual 110 or 220 volt D. C. or A. C. commercial service, the proper auxiliary appliances for reducing the voltage and maintaining a rated current flow must be employed. Satisfactory lamp performance cannot be expected unless the lamps are used with control apparatus equipped with means for accurately regulating the current. If these means are carefully used, the saving in lamp renewals will soon more than offset the slightly higher cost of accurate control devices.

A Law Needed.

We have many examples of freak legislation on the books, so why not add one which is needed. It might be a "freak" in one sense, but would act as a protection to the theater, the operator and to the public. I would arise to suggest a law, with severe penalty, absolutely prohibiting the sending out of any film to a theater in other than perfect mechanical condition as regards splices and sprocket holes.

Of course friend film exchange manager instantly declares such a law to be impractical, in that he simply MUST send out uninspected film upon occasion; also there would be difference of opinion as to what constitutes "perfect mechanical condition." But it really is not so impractical as seems at first glance. Mr. Manager does not have to send out film in bad condition. He just thinks he does. I have managed an exchange, and am in position to say that, while conditions arise in which it is a big temptation to do so, it is really not at all necessary. And if it were it would be easy to insert an "uninspected" slip in, directing the operator to inspect and send in bill for the labor. As to disputes, why the court would settle them, would it not? That is what courts are for, I believe. Protection in this matter is needed, and is needed badly. The condition in which some exchanges send out film is shameful. True, there is little to complain of in this respect with regard to properly-managed exchanges, but unfortunately not all exchanges come under that category.

Sample Letter.

The following, which requires no comment other than to say it is one of the many received from local unions all over the country, speaks for itself. It comes from a live president of a live local—a good combination:

Colorado Springs, June 15, 1917.

The Moving Picture World,
New York City:

Gentlemen.—Just a few lines to personally thank you for the visit and splendid lecture of our brother, F. H. Richardson, whom we had the pleasure of having with us June 9, which same we owe to the Moving Picture World, which cannot receive too much credit from managers and operators all over the country. The lecture was without a doubt the most interesting thing to which the writer ever listened; moreover, he never expects to again hear its equal, unless we are so fortunate as to meet Brother Richardson again. And this I sincerely trust may come about. Moreover, let me add that our entire membership, as well as our managers, enjoyed it every bit as much as did I, and all the talk since he left has been of the Moving Picture World and Richardson. Again thanking you for the great work you and Brother Richardson are doing for the good of the entire industry, I am, very truly yours,

O. C. HURT,
President Local Union No. 62,
I. A. T. S. E. and M. P. M. O.

With Regard to Shutters and A. C.

E. W. Humphreys, Woodstown, N. J., desires the following information with regard to the revolving shutter and alternating current. He writes:

Being the manager of a small-town house, with an operator who is rather indifferent as to results, I try to keep up with the Projection Department, and wish to compliment you on the able assistance you so often render to operators.

We use alternating current, 60 cycle, through a Fort Wayne Compensarc. The projector is a Powers' 6A. Our current supply was recently changed from 133 to 60 cycle, and we are still using the three-wing shutter we used when the current was 133 cycle. Ought we change to a two-blader? I do not notice any unusual flicker on the screen, but if we can get a better picture with a two-blade shutter, why it's me for it. We had, of course, to change compensarcs when the current was changed.

Another thing: I notice you often speak of using glass in the port holes. I take it this refers to the observation ports only. Am I correct?

With regard to the port holes, you are not right. I mean there should be glass in all of them. The glass should be old photographic plates from which the emulsion has been thoroughly cleaned The idea is to prevent pulling the foul, hot air from the auditorium into the operating room. The operating room should be supplied with FRESH air, pulled in from outside the building through a special air chute, or else forced in from the air chutes of the house ventilating system. For several reasons, however, it is best to have the operating room ventilation entirely separate from the main house ventilation system. The lens ports may be left open provided they be reduced to the size of the actual light ray.

As to the other matter, it is quite possible that you may use a three-wing shutter with 60-cycle current, or what is supposed to be 60-cycle, and if you are using it without any trouble, keep right on using it. The trouble with 60-cycle current and a three-wing shutter is that, especially if the cycle happens to really be (as often happens) a little less than 60, and you run your projector a trifle fast, its blades will, or may, get into synchronism with the alternations of the current. As you will see by consulting page 16 of the third edition of the handbook, or any standard textbook dealing with alternating current, two times each cycle the voltage of single-phase current sinks to absolute zero, and at this instant or time the brilliancy of the crater is greatly diminished. If your shutter blades should happen for a space of time (it would be almost impossible that the blades would remain in synchronism with the alterations for more than a few seconds at a time) to cover the lens at the exact time when the crater is most brilliant, and uncover it when it is at its lowest point of brilliancy there would be a decided dimming of the light at the screen. Due to the improbability of the shutter remaining in synchronism for any extended period, the effect is usually that of a waving of the light—alternately brilliant and dim. If you have no such trouble, your shutter is not doing this and you should continue to use it.

Might Help.

Frank Shipley, Des Moines, Ia., has the following to say:

> Enclosed find four dollars for autographed third edition of the handbook. I attended your lecture here, and desire to express my appreciation. Have not as yet heard of any resultant progressiveness, but don't belong to the local here, so don't know whether or not they are acting. To my mind the operator may get much good out of a study of "First Principles in Physics" books such as are used in public schools. I have one, and find it deals with many principles the operator comes into contact with. What do you think of the idea?
> Why should the change-over sign be placed in the negative, as you advocate? I use a cross, scratched in a corner of the frame about five feet from the end. I receive films with unnecessary punch marks. Even find them at the beginning of the reel.

Well, brother Shipley, I am a little bit inclined to believe that it will require a pretty heavy jolt to wake up Des Moines as she ought to be waked. There was every indication of extreme sluggishness in that city. Do you mean you are not a member of the Des Moines local? Or that you do not belong to the I. A. If the latter, take my advice and "get in." If merely the former, why you might better put your card into the local union. It needs every live man it can get. As to the change-over sign in the negative, why if put there, then it would be in every positive, and no more trouble about it; moreover, it would be one universal sign, and everyone would soon come to recognize it. The negative is where it should be. Your cross mark is a mutilation, though a small one. But the next man will not know it is there, and will make his own—and so on. Do you see the point? I am very much afraid your copy of the Handbook was not autographed. And if so, it was my fault. Your letter was in the first mail received when I reached New York, and I thumbed through it hurriedly to give just such matters attention. Saw the four-dollar order and word Handbook. Gave address to office force and did not notice the autograph part. Sorry, old man. Yes, the books you mention have much of value, but I fear the average operator would be unable to apply it in his work. However, a study of the books certainly could do no harm.

Pictorial Photography.

The J. B. Lippincott Company has favored us with a copy of "Pictorial Photography," a 300-page cloth-bound book, by Paul L. Anderson, written in response to a definite and insistent demand for an authoritative work on American Photography.

The writer does not pose as an authority on photography, but it requires no exhaustive knowledge to see that the subject is, in this instance, handled ably and well. Mr. Anderson has put out a work which, while it shows his evident familiarity with the science of photography, and the principles which lie at the base of its structure, is couched in language so simple that the layman can readily understand and profit by what he reads. The work is replete with formulas, and will be of decided value to the amateur, as well as to the professional.

I can recommend this book to operators who are amateur kodakers. It will give them the precise information they want in that line; also the chapter on the lens will impart valuable understanding of lens action which will help them in their work—operating, I mean.

Port Shutters.

When in Tucson, Arizona, last April I visited the Tucson Opera House, W. W. Brumberg, Chief Operator, and noticed a very clever and effective method of fusing and of dropping the port fire shutters. Brother Brumberg, a live wire, by the way, promised to send in description thereof as soon as I returned to New York. He has done so.

The drawing consists of the main, upper sketch, and two detail sketches showing parts of the device. A-A are ordinary roller shade fixtures, such as one uses in the home. B is a suitable length of ordinary wooden curtain pole, 1¼ to 1½ inches in diameter, into which are driven iron pegs, such as a small nail from which the head has been amputated. These pegs are indicated by the letter F. C-C-C-C indicates the wall shutters, D-D the uper magazines of the projectors, E-E an iron lever, of suitable length, firmly attached to roller B, as shown in detail No. 1. G-G are film links inserted in master cord O by means of clamps such as are shown on page 225 of the Handbook, the same being indicated by the letter L. M is a film link inserted in the master cord, and located directly over the rewinder. N is a weight attached to lever E.

The action is as follows: should either of the film links break or burn, master cord O would instantly be released at all points, which would cause weight N to pull lever E down, thus rotating roller B and dropping the rings to which port shutter cords are attached off pins F, causing the shutters to fall over the wall openings. The action of the roller is shown in detail No. 2. H-H are metal pieces attached to bottom of upper machine magazines, as indicated in detail No. 1. I-I are similar pins attached to wall of room.

I believe a little study of the sketches will make the entire action clear, and that operators will have small difficulty applying the plan if it appeals to them. Incidentally I saw other more or less similar plans in different cities, and would like to have sketches and description of same. The film link is, in my judgment and opinion, the thing to use. It is far superior to metalic fuses, but must be placed intelligently if one is to receive the benefit. I saw one scheme which particularly appealed to me: An operator had inserted into the port shutter master cord, at the proper place, about eighteen inches or so of fine copper wire. He had then drilled a small hole in the center of the top of his upper magazine, doubled the wire in its center and passed it through the hole. He then rolled about an inch of film tightly and laid it over, or rather under the hole, pulling the wire tight. Of course should the fire get into the upper magazine, the bit of film under the wire would instantly burn, thus releasing the wire, and the master cord, which supported a roller somewhat similar to the one used by Brother Brumberg. Still another scheme I saw was to pass film link G into the lower front of the upper magazine through a very narrow slot. I would ask that these and other plans be sent in, to the end that they be set forth in the department for the benefit of all. Many thanks to friend Brumberg. By the way, Tucson, the wife thinks that Indian made wicker basket from San Xavier mission is just about the finest thing going. It occupies the place of honor on the mahogany (I strongly suspect the genuineness of the mahog part) pedestal, right square forninst the very frontest front window. Personally, aside from the kindness which prompted the gift, I didn't think such a much of it, but gee, you couldn't pry it and friend wife apart with a crowbar.

It is an established rule of this department that no apparatus or other goods will be endorsed or recommended editorially until the excellence of such articles has been demonstrated to its editor.

Motion Picture Standards.

At the last meeting of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers held at the Sherman Hotel, Chicago, Monday and Tuesday, July 16 and 17, the following standards were formulated and approved with the recommendation that they be universally adopted by all manufacturers.

Film Speed: A film movement of sixty feet per minute through motion picture machines shall be considered a standard speed.

Frame Line: The dividing line between pictures on a motion picture film shall be exactly midway between the marginal perforations.

Projection Angle: The maximum permissible angle in motion picture projection shall not exceed twelve degrees (12°) from a perpendicular to the screen surface.

Projection Lenses: The outside diameter of projection lens tubes shall be of the following diameter: 38 mm., 46 mm. and 65 mm.

Projection Lens Foci: The focus of motion picture projection lenses shall increase in ¼ inch steps to 8 inches, and from 8 to 9 inches in ½ inch steps.

Projection Lens Mounting: Picture projection lenses shall be so mounted that the light from the picture aperture shall have an uninterrupted full path to the rear component of the lens.

Picture Aperture: The film picture aperture in a projection machine shall be 0.906 inch wide, and 0.6795 inch high.

Projection Lens Light: The standard height above the floor to the center of the projection lens of a motion picture machine shall be 48 inches.

Film Perforations: The dimensions and location of film perforation shall be in accord with the illustrating diagram herewith. (The diagram is not given here.)

Standard Picture Film shall be 1⅜ inches in width and carry a picture for each four perforations, the vertical position of the picture being longitudinal of the film.

Lantern Slide Mat Opening: A standard opening for a lantern slide mat for use in conjunction with the motion pictures shall be 3 inches wide by 2¼ inches high.

Thumbmark: The thumbmark spot on a lantern slide shall be located in the lower left-hand corner next the reader when the slide is held so as to be read against a light.

Lantern Strip: A red binding strip shall be used on the lower edge of the lantern slide.

As these standards comply with the measurements now generally in use and most of the variations from them were retained by dissenting manufacturers for trivial reasons, the principal one being that there was no recognized authority to recommend a universal standard, it is to be hoped that the few remaining cumbersome departures from standard practice will be speedily abandoned.

The frame time question has caused more annoyance than all the other points put together. The news weeklies will now have no excuse for putting out prints that require the framing lever to be shifted a half dozen times during the showing of a reel.

Camera men whose cameras frame differently than the adopted standard should have their frame line altered to correspond.

Film manufacturers who have not had their cameras lined up have often learned to their sorrow after using different cameras on a picture that expensive scenes could not be used or would have to be retaken in order to match frame lines. Happily most of them have already learned their lesson, and have adopted the frame line now recognized as standard. Unfortunately for a few of the old line companies their frame line is on the center of the perforations, but they will undoubtedly see the wisdom of conforming with the overwhelming majority and drop into line with the rest.

Of course the amount of expense involved in the mechanical work entailed may cause some of them to be tardy in agreeing with the standard, but the cost is a mere bagatelle compared with the future saving in trouble and expense.

The future tendency will always be to conform to standard, and all those who fail to recognize that standardization is just as much for their benefit as it is for the industry at large will inevitably pay for their stubbornness in annoyance at being unable to use standard apparatus without expensive changes and in loss of business from their customers who will prefer to use standard apparatus which is designed to give sure five results with standardized products.

Another feature of standardization that will save many deluded people a large amount of hard earned money is the fact that standardization will discourage many nut inventors with freak motion picture apparatus from foisting their abortions upon gullible people who can be made to believe that film should be run horizontally instead of vertically, or that a slight change in the dimensions of the picture frame or film will produce a miraculous improvement in motion pictures.

The woods are full of self deluded inventors, who have marvelous contraptions which are to revolutionize the picture business just as soon as some kind angel supplies the money for them to work out their ideas.

This little tirade, of course, does not apply to the hundreds of serious workers, who are, day by day, solving the problems that the industry presents with a sane inventive genius and a large admixture of hard work.

The work of the society fills a gap which has yawned unfilled in the industry since its inception, and will be of incalculable benefit and save time, material and money at a time when they are most sorely needed for the welfare of the nation.

Los Angeles writes:

> Some time ago I noticed in your department an article concerning the new Akeley Moving Picture Camera. Is it being manufactured? By whom? And what will be the probable price?
> Lately I have been trying to photograph against the light. There are two difficulties I have run up against. One is exposure; the other is the difficulty of keeping the sun out of the lens. In the majority of cases I have tried to use a lens shield, but find that unless the sun is fairly high in the heavens the sun shines fairly in the lens. In the matter of exposure, I find the faces especially are under-exposed. Then I have increased the exposure and ruined the picture again—over-exposure. I am only an amateur in this game, so if you can tell me how to arrive at a happy medium I will be very thankful. In my ordinary exposures I use the Harvey Meter as a guide, and find it the best thing out in that line, but am up a stump in this particular proposition so am writing to you.

The Akeley camera is not yet on the market. You can probably obtain further particulars from Mr. Carl Akeley, American Museum of Natural History, New York City.

In regard to exposure in back lighting: In calculating exposure for back lighting it is usual to calculate the exposure for the lower tones in the picture, as the high lights where the sun strikes are always over-exposed. It is practically always necessary to use a lens hood or some sort of shield to protect the lens from the direct rays of the sun. When the sun gets low enough to be included in the picture it is then usually too dark for back lighting, and the effect then becomes either silhouette or moon light effect. It is customary in most back lighting effects to light up the shadows by an inclined reflector placed between the foreground and the camera, as shown on rough sketch.

"DOUG" FAIRBANKS PULLS A BONE

Douglas Fairbanks has pulled a bone.

Yes, sir; the Artcraft star has pulled a bone—pulled it right out of the ground on an island "somewhere in the Pacific." And to prove that "Doug" pulled the bone Bennie Zeidman, than whom there is no more veracious fabricator, has mailed us the bone. It is the dryest bone we have ever seen. In fact, it is so dry that we are almost convinced that the "bone-dry" movement was named after the bone that Bennie sent us. But Bennie always did try to prove his assertions, and below is the assertion he wanted to prove, which was pasted on the bone:

"The remains of a prehistoric creature found by Douglas Fairbanks on an island 'somewhere in the Pacific Ocean' named in honor of the Artcraft star by a western Government official. The Douglas Fairbanks Island is now being registered in Washington."

We hate to doubt Bennie's word, and we further dislike to dash his hopes. We will grant him that Mr. Fairbanks found the bone. But we have had the said bone examined by one of New York's foremost specialists. He reports that the bone is the rib bone of a steer, otherwise known as Bull.

GAUMONT CHARACTER ACTOR DEAD.

The announcement last week of the sudden death of Charles W. Travis, well known as a character actor, came as a distinct shock to his friends in the Gaumont Company, where for so long a time Mr. Travis was a general favorite and a leading member of its stock company. Mr. Travis, who was born in Brooklyn in 1865, died in that city following a second apoplectic stroke. For nearly forty years he had been before the public as an actor, practically the last decade having been devoted to the silent drama. That he was an early recruit to pictures will be understood when one recalls that he played the part of the parson in "Davy Crocket," the first picture produced by the Bison Company. He also worked in the first independent picture that was ever produced by a firm releasing under the Carson brand. He later played character parts for the Universal Company, the Ramo Company, the Famous Players, the Fox Company, Humanology, and the Gaumont Company.

Among the Gaumont productions in which Mr. Travis scored were "The Devil's Darling," with Francine Larrimore, in which he took the part of the devil, "The Card Players," "The Idol of the Stage," "As a Woman Sows," "I Accuse," "According to Law," "The Quality of Faith," "Flames of Vengeance" and "Armadale."

"Perfection Pictures"

The Highest Standard in Moving Picture Art Yet Reached Most Likely To Be Announced Officially in the Near Future.

MANY surprises have marked the development of the moving picture industry since it became an industry and ceased to be a novelty or a mere plaything. And by "surprises" is meant important happenings, not mere rumors which have never been realized.

It may be questioned, however, if any of these former surprises will rank with one that is about to come in the near future, almost as certainly as anything human can be certain.

This will be nothing less than the merging some time ago of the interests of some of the foremost of America's producers with the aim of establishing a new high standard in the art of making moving pictures; and these pictures, it is expected, will so clearly demonstrate their superiority that they will be known as "Perfection Pictures."

It is understood that some of America's finest directors have been at work for several months past on these "Perfection Pictures" and that fifteen have already been completed, while as many more are now under way.

These productions are, and will be, comprised chiefly of light comedy-dramas, of five reels or more in length, which will be released at the rate of one a week, the first release to be made sometime in September.

It is said that appropriations have already been made which call for the expenditure of $1,700,000 on productions alone, for the first year.

It is also stated that many of America's foremost novelists, magazine story writers, and the cream of the authors of "best sellers" have been placed under contract, and that some of them have already supplied manuscripts for use in "Perfection Pictures."

Don't ask for names just now. They will be revealed in the very near future, in all probability.

New York Versus London as World's Film Center.

In the discussion which is now being carried on in the London trade press over the possibility of New York supplanting London as the world's film center, the latest issue of the Kinematograph to hand, at the time of writing, has the following expression from E. H. Montagu, European agent for the Selig Polyscope Co.:

It will do no good to grumble about the film export trade going to America. Changed conditions mean changed methods, and people here may as well make up their minds to the fact.

Personally, as the representative of the Selig Polyscope Co., I have first of all to consider the interests of my firm, and I may say I have voluntarily surrendered the right to work certain markets, because, under present-day conditions, it is cheaper and more satisfactory to work them from America.

The trouble with film dealers in this country is that for a long time they have made their money too easily. The experience spoiled them, and they seem unable to grasp the fact that in future they will have to work harder for smaller returns.

As for the agitation to keep London the film-distributing center of the world, it comes too late. The export trade in films is not merely going to New York. A great deal of it has already gone, and no amount of shouting will bring it back.

Chicago Reel Fellows' Club Dissolved and the Organization of Its Successor Discussed.

The first meeting of the reorganization committee of the Reel Fellows' Club of Chicago took place Wednesday noon, August 15, at the Hamilton Club. Messrs. Proctor, Nehls, Belford, Curtis, Ross, Russakov, Hopp and Stoddard were present.

President Proctor took the chair and the meeting at once engaged in the election of permanent officers of the reorganization committee. On a motion made and carried, the following officers were unanimously elected: President, R. R. Nehls; vice-president, R. O. Proctor; secretary, Mr. Stoddard, and treasurer, H. E. Belford. After the election Mr. Proctor resigned the chair in favor of Mr. Nehls.

The meeting then proceeded to a discussion of the present condition of the Reel Fellows Club and the most feasible plan to surmount the difficulties confronting it. Various plans were discussed by the committee, and the following resolutions were finally moved, seconded, and unanimously carried:

Resolved, that the Reorganization Committee of the Reel Fellows' Club of Chicago, pursuant to power vested in it, does hereby declare the Reel Fellows' Club of Chicago to be and the same is hereby dissolved.

Resolved, that this committee proceed at once to wind up the affairs of the Reel Fellows' Club of Chicago, and further

Resolved, that this committee proceed at once to the organization of a new club to be composed of the representative men of different branches of the motion picture industry.

The meeting then appointed a committee for the performance of the above duties, and after a motion duly made and carried, it was unanimously

Resolved, that this committee be equally divided into two sub-committees, known as the Organization Committee and the Finance Committee; that the president appoint all of the members of this committee to the respective sub-committees, and that the president be a member of both committees, and further

Resolved, that the duties of the Organization Committee be to draft and submit to this committee a constitution and code of by-laws for the proposed club and to formulate and submit a plan of organization for the same, and further

Resolved, that the duties of the Finance Committee be,

First: To wind up the affairs of the Reel Fellows' Club of Chicago, this committee being vested with full power to liquidate said club, provide ways and means for meeting the obligations of the same and to deal with the creditors and properties of that Club, and,

Second: To prepare and submit to this committee a financial budget for the proposed club, advising the necessary running expenses for a year of said club, and make recommendations for the meeting of the same.

R. R. Nehls, presiding, then announced the members of the two sub-committees as follows:

Organization Committee, Messrs. Nehls, Curtis, Ross, Hopp, Russakov and Stoddard.

Finance Committee, Messrs. Nehls, Proctor, Bell, Rothacker, Heaney and Belford.

The first meeting of the Organization Committee was set for Thursday noon, August 16, at the Weiss restaurant, in the Consumers Building, and the first meeting of the Finance sub-committee was set for Monday noon, August 20, at Mr. Proctor's office, 207 South Wabash avenue. The next meeting of the Organization Committee was set for Tuesday noon, August 31, at the Hamilton Club.

Before adjourning the suggestion was made that each member of the Organization Committee prepare a roster of the candidates for charter membership in the new club, to be submitted to the committee at the next meeting.

Chicago Film Brevities.

Alfred Hamburger recently brought suit in the Circuit Court against Nathan Ascher, of the Ascher Brothers' circuit, for breach of contract, which involves over $75,000. The particulars of the suit have not been given out, but it is well known in film circles that a strong spirit of rivalry has existed for some time between these owners of large competing chains of picture theaters.

A special meeting of the Advertising Film Producers' Association will be held Monday, August 27, at the Rothacker Film Manufacturing Company's studios. The business taken up will include changes in the constitution and by-laws, standards of practice, the campaign for 1917-18, and other matters of importance connected with moving picture advertising. The Association is the recognized moving picture department of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World.

How moving pictures are made was explained to members and friends of the Chicago Camera Club Wednesday evening, August 15, at the American Film Company's plant, this city, by Charles A. Ziebarth, superintendent of the company. Amateur photographers were also addressed by Mr. Ziebarth on the processes to which the raw film is subjected from its crude state until ready for projection on the screen.

"The Call to Arms," the original title of the patriotic picture on which Mary Miles Minter is now engaged, has been changed to "Her Country's Call."

Beginning Saturday, August 18, Alfred Hamburger will offer his first pre-release program of Paramount, "The Mysterious Miss Terry," in which Billie Burke is featured, according to his contract with that company, which gives him the right to first run of this make throughout the city. A similar contract also applies to Artcraft pictures.

Arthur S. Odin, who owned the Plaza theater at Lansing, Mich., about a year ago, has been at the training quarters for officers at Fort Sheridan for the past three months. Mr. Odin has had an important military career, having served as corporal in the 9th regiment, U. S. infantry, for many years. He was in the quartermasters' corps in Manila for a considerable part of that time, and has also seen service in Cuba. It has not been yet ascertained whether or not Mr. Odin succeeded in securing a commission. It is hoped so, as he is a splendid specimen of a man, both mentally and physically.

On Friday evening, August 17, a benefit presentation of "The Retreat of the Germans at the Battle of Arras" was given at Orchestra Hall, in aid of the First Regiment, Illinois Engineers. These British official pictures were secured by the Citizens Unit of the First Regiment, Illinois Engineers, through the courtesy of Pathe Exchange and Official Government Pictures, Inc., and the occasion marked their first projection on any screen in Chicago. Many of Chicago's leading families were represented in the boxes during the presentation, and numerous parties were present on the ground floor as the guests of other prominent people. The proceeds, which were large, will be devoted to buying extra equipment, clothing, mdicine, etc., for the First Regiment boys. Col. Jamieson, of the British Recruiting Mission in this city, pointed out the military features of the films to those in the large assemblage. Tom North, of Pathe Exchange, Inc., made the arrangements for the benefit.

"The Italian Battle Front," the only official war pictures of that country now in America, will be given a run of 12 days at the Auditorium theater, beginning Thursday, August 23. These pictures show fighting in the Alps, many thousands of feet above sea level; the campaign against and the fall of Gorizia, the great Austrian fortress, and Italy's battles among the clouds and on the sea. A forty-piece symphony orchestra will play the accompanying music.

The opening of "The Crisis" at the Garrick theater, Philadelphia, August 13, was a great success from accounts furnished by the Harris P. Wolfberg Attractions, which owns the rights in that territory. The Wolfberg Co. sent out letters to many exhibitors in adjacent country, inviting them to see the big film drama and promising to pay their expenses. By this means many attended and bookings were largely increased in consequence.

Edward Trinz, nephew of Joseph Trinz, of the firm of Lubiner & Trinz, this city, and formerly manager of the West End theater here, called at the World office August 16. Mr. Trinz recently joined the Second Infantry regiment of the Illinois National Guard, which will leave in a few days for Fort Sam Houston, Tex., where it will remain encamped for some time. He took advantage of this opportunity to say good-bye to all his brother exhibitors, through the courtesy of the Moving Picture World.

A special meeting of the Chicago branch of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America was held in its hall in the Masonic Temple building, Friday morning, when the new wage scale for operators, the music tax, and other matters were discussed.

James Vincent Directs "The Hidden Hand" for Pathe.

"THE HIDDEN HAND," the Pathe four-star serial which will be released in the early winter and which stars Doris Kenyon, and features Shelden Lewis, Arline Pretty and Mahlon Hamilton, is being directed by James Vincent, who has to his credit, the production of many successful features. This is the first serial Mr. Vincent has directed, and he says he is surprised to find that the atmosphere, sets, story and acting required for a Pathe serial are of the kind that is required for the best features.

James Vincent

Mr. Vincent is a native of Springfield, Mass., and was educated in that city. He studied at the Emerson School of Expression in Boston, and took part in the juvenile lead in several dramatic productions, among them being "As a Man Thinks," with John Mason, and "The Man Who Stood Still," with Louis Mann. He took the part of Jack Hale in "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine," dramatized from the novel of the same name. He was leading man for Kalem for several years.

Director Vincent has to his credit the following features: "The Melting Pot," with Walker Whiteside; "Gold and the Woman," with Theda Bara; "Sins of Men," with Stuart Holmes; "Ambition" and "Love and Hate," with Madame Bertha Kalish; "Sister Against Sister" and "A Royal Romance," with Virginia Pearson, and "The Unwelcome Mother," adapted from Isben's "The Lady from the Sea," with Baroness Valkyrien.

Not only can Mr. Vincent show an actor or actress how a certain bit can be put over to the best advantage, but he also can tell when and the reason why. He has a thorough grounding of dramatic principles and believes that the universal language is pantomime, which is only sign language carried to its highest degree.

The story Mr. Vincent has to portray in "The Hidden Hand" is a dramatic one and Pathe expects big effects of his work. It is being produced under the supervision of G. A. Smith, formerly manager of Pathe's serial publicity department, who from his wide experience with serials knows what suits the public taste in chapter photoplays.

NEW THEATER AT TRAIL. B. C.

This week there was opened at Trail, B. C., the beautiful little Liberty theater. Trail is a prosperous little community with the mining business as its chief asset. M. P. Wetherall, formerly of Grand Forks, is in charge of the house. The house was opened with the subject, "Miss George Washington." They wrote the Famous Players Exchange as follows: "The house opened to S. R. O. with 'Miss George Washington.' Fine house, fine pictures, everybody happy."

News of Los Angeles and Vicinity

Universal Studios Busy.

Many New Players Engaged—Eddie Lyons Marries—Other News from Big Film City.

UNIVERSAL CITY is always busy and many companies at work for Mr. Laemmle. We paid a visit this week to the big film factory and found the place a bee-hive of activity

During the past week a number of players have been added at the Universal plant and each has been assigned roles in current productions.

Among these may be mentioned Kenneth Harlan, who recently finished playing the juvenile lead in Lois Weber's latest production. He is now playing opposite Carmel Meyers in "The Dynast," which is being directed by Harry Solter.

Hal Cooley has returned to the Universal City fold. Cooley was with the Universal Company up to a year ago, when he went to the Keystone Company where he played juvenile leads. He also was with the American Company at Santa Barbara. Cooley has been assigned to the company directed by Elsie Jane Wilson in which Zoe Ray, the child actress, is featured.

Another player who has returned to Universal City is Rena Rogers, who will best be remembered for her work in Lois Weber's "Where Are My Children." Miss Rogers is also in Miss Wilson's company.

David Morris has become the leading comedian of Director Craig Hutchinson's aggregation of fun-makers. Morris has had a long experience both in the legitimate and before the camera.

Charles West, who is best known for his Biograph work under D. W. Griffith and who also was with that producer at the Fine Arts studios, is among the newcomers at the Big U City. West established an enviable reputation in the cinema world playing both juvenile and characters. He is now playing opposite Miss Grace Cunard, under the direction of Louis W. Chaudet.

Director Edward J. Le Saint, who is gathering a notable cast for a feature production, will have among his players Mildred Davis as his ingenue.

Eddie Lyons has joined the ranks of the benedicts. His marriage to Virginia Kirtley took place on August 1 and no one knew anything about it—not even the members of the Nestor Company, with whom he has been so closely associated—until the night of August 4, when it was announced at a beefsteak dinner given to the screen scribes of the motion picture colony of the southland and a number of film favorites by Eddie Maier, of Los Angeles. About one hundred were present at the dinner and when the announcement was made the bridal couple was showered with congratulations.

Mrs. Lyons is no stranger to screen fans, for she has been in pictures for several years, appearing with the various companies.

Priscilla Dean, star of the Universal mystery serial, "The Gray Ghost," whose arm was fractured recently while performing a hazardous scene for the seventh episode of the story, again has taken up her work before the camera after an enforced illness of but ten days.

Although she was urged by Stuart Paton, her director, and Henry McRae, Production Manager of Universal City, to take a longer rest, Miss Dean thought her absence would handicap Paton in the filming of the serial and insisted upon picking up her part of the production at the earliest possible moment and her indomitable will and courage could not be denied.

Toreadors Corraled by Fred Palmer.

The Toreadors, that valiant bunch of hot air merchants, under the leadership of Fred Palmer, the comic scribbler, adjourned to the classic environment of Maier's Brewery, on Saturday last week. Charlie Murray and others made several speeches which were very good but not quite as fine as other things more tangible. The steaks were securely planked, in fact we noticed that there was nothing that could be thrown around the room, however there were no casualties. Among those present were Ethel Davis, Lee Moran, Virginia Kirtley, Eddie Lyons, Mr. and Mrs. Roy Clements, Alice Lake, Franklyn Farnum, Mrs. and Mr. Fred Palmer, Miss M. E. M. Gibsone, Doris Schroeder, Mr. and Mrs. Ben Rothwell, Mr. and Mrs. M. Jonas, Mr. and Mrs. Carlyle Robinson, G. P. Harleman, Peter Milne, Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Jessen, Mr. and Mrs. Charlie Murray, Mr. and Mrs. Eddie Cline, Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Selig, Hal Cooley, Harry Wulze, Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth McGaffey, Miss Gene Crosby, Kenneth O'Hara, J. B. Woodside, Sam H. Comly, Allen Hulbert, "Pop" Hoadley, J. Grubb Alexander and the latest stenographic recruit to the navy, Clark Irvine, as well as others whom we missed in the haze.

Fox Company Films Elaborate Battle Scenes.

A BIG naval battle scene was staged by Director J. Gordon Edwards at Balboa Beach this week for the Fox production of "Cleopatra," in which Theda Bara is being starred. The scene is a reproduction of the famous battle of Actium. Participating in the conflict were the war vessels of Octavius Caesar and the galleys of Cleopatra and Antony. In reproducing the battle Mr. Edwards required the services of several thousand men.

About five thousand gallons of crude oil and inflammable materials were used to stimulate the burning of the fleet.

Los Angeles Brevities.

Anita King is with Balboa and will be starred in a series of five-reel features for release on the Mutual Program.

Balboa will send an expedition of camera men to the wilderness of Canada. Balboa wants some unusual scenery for use in a number of productions. The first expedition will be in charge of Cameraman E. L. Chindland, who has been instructed to go as far as he can before cold weather stops him.

The Mena Film Company is the name of a new film producing company in Los Angeles. The company is incorporated in New Jersey. Its officers are E. W. Kuehn, Toledo, president; J. G. Kuehn, Brooklyn, vice-president; Dr. L. W. Jones, Chicago, secretary-treasurer; R. R. Hollister, Pittsburgh, foreign director; C. C. Driscoll, Los Angeles, manager. The company is planning to produce motion picture feature films on popular subjects, and the first picture, which is in progress of production, will be an allegorical Biblical and modern story in a new and unique setting. The company's principal studios are located at Fountain avenue and Berendo street, Hollywood.

The Helen Holmes company is rapidly nearing the completion of the sixth episode of their serial, "The Lost Express." This chapter will be released under the installment title of "High Voltage." As the name implies, electricity plays an important part in the episode.

Upon the completion of "High Voltage," the company is to leave Los Angeles studios for the Yosemite Valley, where they are to make a number of scenes around the mines of that locality for use in the seventh and eighth episodes of the serial.

Fred Wilson, well known for his work with various of the Los Angeles film companies, has been secured by the Signal Film corporation for a several weeks' engagement during the production of "The Lost Express." Mr. Wilson is cast for an important character role in the serial.

A large Barbary Coast dance hall or "Honky-tonk" is being erected on the stage at the Lasky studio for the use of Wm. S. Hart in his first Artcraft production.

Jack Pickford and his company, under the direction of William D. Taylor, have departed for the wilds of Missouri to film some exterior scenes for his forthcoming production for the Morosco Company. The company will be gone for nearly a month.

Vivian Martin, having just completed a production at the Morosco studio under the direction of Robert Thornby, has been granted the long period of two days in which to rest and refresh herself for another attack on the silent drama, which will also be directed by Thornby at the Morosco studio.

Having made such a success in directing the battle scenes of "Joan the Woman" by means of a series of field telephones, Cecil B. DeMille has ordered a set to be used in Geraldine Farrar's forthcoming production equipped with the same instruments. Twelve telephone stations scattered throughout the village will be in constant communication with the director-general who stands on his platform with the receiver strapped to his head and the transmitter swinging from his breast. The cast of Miss Farrar's production includes Wallace Reid, Hobart Bosworth, Raymond Hatton, Theodore Kasloff, James Neill, Walter Long, Olga Gray and others.

Triangle-Keystone fans are soon to be treated to a new style of pantomime entertainment that should find instant appeal. Triangle-Keystone Director Henry Kernan and Jay Dwiggins, the veteran character comedian, have started work on a new series of comedies to be released on the Triangle program at regular intervals. Jay Dwiggins has been with Triangle-Keystone for a year, and will be remembered by many for his work with the late John Bunny in the old days. He will write all of his own stories and appear in the leading role. The series will be devoid of the slapstick tricks and will present human little stories that intersperse comedy with pathos and human touches.

Julian Eltinge and his company, under the direction of Donald Crisp, will shortly depart for the Columbia River, near Portland, Oregon, there to film exterior scenes for the feminine impersonator's second Lasky-Paramount production. The company will be gone about two weeks.

Aileen Allen, Triangle-Keystone champion diving beauty and professional swimmer, added another medal to her ever increasing collection last week when she won the Southern California high diving championship at Ocean Park, California.

Triangle-Keystone Director Robert Kerr has just finished a Triangle-Keystone comedy featuring Bob Millikin, Fritz Schade, Claire Anderson, Andy Anderson, Jack Henderson and Joey Jacobs, and has started another comedy with the same cast.

Olive Thomas, Triangle star, is being directed by Lynn Reynolds in her latest feature entitled "Broadway Arizona." Mr. Reynolds is the author of the story, and at the present time the company is shooting exterior scenes at Big Bear Lake, California.

Due to the illness of Louise Glaum, Director Walter Edwards of Triangle was called upon to find a substitute for his star. Belle Bennett, of the Triangle stock company, was selected and is now playing the lead in his feature supported by one of the strongest casts ever assembled in a Triangle production. Among the most prominent actors are Jack Livingston, Lee Hill and Jack Cunningham.

Under the direction of E. Mason Hopper, the Triangle company, headed by Walt Whitman, is engaged in producing a feature production entitled, "The Tar-Heel Warrior."

"Hill-billies" of the Kentucky Cumberlands offer most of the excitement in Margery Wilson's latest play, "Mountain Dew," which Director Tom Heffron finished shooting recently at the Triangle Culver City Studios. All the characters of mountain life are included in the cast, and Margery Wilson appears in the role of a girl who cannot read or write. Charles Gunn plays opposite Miss Wilson.

Fred J. Balshoffer, president of the Yorke-Metro, stood sponsor for a picnic given to a truckload of youngsters at one of the beaches near Los Angeles this week. In the absence of Mr. Balshoffer, who was laid up on account of injuries received in a recent automobile accident, the party was managed by Tom Walsh, assistant director.

The completion of the new stage recently secured by the Yorke-Metro company has enabled the art department, under the supervision of R. C. Godfrey, who is an expert in studio art and design, to commence the construction of an unusually elaborate ball room set for "Paradise Garden," the Harold Lockwood picture, which is under production by Fred J. Balshoffer.

The Apollo Theater in Hollywood, by arrangement of Manager Young, gave a pre-showing of "Under Handicap," the Yorke-Metro picture which features Harold Lockwood, produced for the Metro release this month. Members of the cast, including Harold Lockwood, Lester Cuneo, William Clifford and others, and also the studio force of the Yorke-Metro were present.

With a company of fifty people Director Rupert Julian went to Seven Oaks, California, this week to film scenes of "Julio Sandoval," a five-reel play. Monroe Salisbury and Ruth Clifford are the leading players. The story was written and prepared for the screen by Elliott J. Clawson.

Wallace Reid, the popular Lasky player, was temporarily discharged from military service this week by Draft Board No. 14 which met at the Hollywood Board of Trade. Reid claimed exemption on the grounds that he has a wife and six-weeks-old child to support. The board decided it would grant exemption from service to Reid until such a time that the baby has reached an age that will permit Mrs. Reid to resume her own professional work.

Geraldine Farrar, with the same portable dressing room which she used in her production of "Joan the Woman," has departed for the California mountains to film some exterior scenes in her forthcoming production which is being made under the direction of Cecil B. DeMille from the story by Jeanie MacPherson. This dressing room, no matter where it is set, contains all the comforts of Miss Farrar's room at the studio, even to a telephone.

Italian Letter

By Francesco Manelli.

NOTWITHSTANDING the war, which has caused a slump which amounts almost to a standstill in those industries not directly connected with the supply of munitions, the cinematographic industry has received a new impulse in spite of the increase in the cost of both raw material and labor.

This impulse is rather in the nature of an artistic revival in production than in strictly trade matters which are laboring under the disadvantage above cited, as well as the difficulty which confronts the exportation of Italian films, the rigorous Government censorship and American competition.

This new impulse has taken the form of the following of the example of Gabrielle D'Annunzio by many men of letters in devoting much of their time and effort to the production of scenarios for the adaptation of their literary or theatrical works to the screen. D'Annunzio himself has recently given to the screen "The Crusade of the Innocent," an original subject that, while it brought the author twenty-five thousand francs and is said to have cost the producers six times this figure, proved a failure both artistically and financially—an unfortunate contrast to the splendid success achieved by the same author's "Cabiria." Among the distinguished authors who are now writing for the screen will be found many who, but a short time ago, thought so lightly of the picture as to refuse to admit that it was vested with either artistic conception or idealism.

Their opinion on this point was probably influenced by the fact that the growing popularity of the motion picture had considerably reduced their earnings from play-writing which had heretofore been one of the most lucrative fields of their endeavor.

Becoming convinced at last that the cinematographic industry did possess merits of its own, several of these literary lights organized a society of which the principal object was the forming of a Cinematographic Literary Trust, which was bound to publish only their own productions, each member bound himself to write three or four scenarios per annum and all agreed to pool the profits for equal division.

This trust was formed under the name of the Silentium-Film and numbers among its members Marco Paraga, Renato Simoni, Giuseppi Adami, Giovanni Verga, Dario Niccodemi, Alfredo Testoni, all dramatists, a few theatrical critics, and so far they have brought to light "Mimi and the Ragamuffins" by Adami, "Night of Tempest" by Praga, and have ready or in course of preparation "Illusion" by Simoni, "Happiness" by Testoni, "Enemy" and "Scampolo" by Niccodemi, "Angelus" by Giacomo, and "The Wolf Hunt" by Verga, which the Italian censor thought fit to suppress.

The other literary men are working on their own account or for such producing or publishing houses as may pay them best. Adami, of the Silentium trust, has also composed a work for the "Savoia-Film" which is entitled "How a Butterfly Died" and which was interpreted by the celebrated Italian lyric artiste Rosina Storchio. Ferdinando Russo, an exquisite Neapolitan dialectic poet and a celebrated novelist and journalist, has written two scenarios, "The Good Thief" and "The Memories of a Maniac," both of which have been presented with great success.

Another Neapolitan dialectic poet, Ernesto Murola, has given up the management of a dramatic company and passed also into the cinematographic literary world with an original work entitled "O Sole Mio ((My Sun)," portraying the Neapolitan surroundings, with musical accompaniment by the well known Maestro V. Valente.

Carlo Zangarini, known as a librettist, has given up part of his activity to cinematographic work. Among his most recent productions may be mentioned "From Dawn to Sunset," written for the Luna-Films."

Mario Corsi, the keen dramatic critic of the Tribuna, has already written for the Tespi-Film "The Woman Without a Heart," and is now preparing "Friar Sole," a cinematographic vision of the life and epoch of Saint Francis of Assisi.

Count Luciano Zuccoli has given up for the time being novel writing and journalism in order to write "The Old Flame," the interpretation of which he has intrusted to the celebrated French actress, Suzanne Armelle.

Even one of Italy's most eminent parliamentarians, who has also been more than once a minister, has specially composed for a cinematograph film "The Ruler" of Venice, a political and suggestive subject, "The Song of the Flowers."

Other important original works are promised by Sem Benelli, Roberto Bracco, Mario Settimelli, Luigi Barzipi and many others.

The writer, however, who has really distinguished himself in a very short time for quantity and quality of his productions is the well known journalist, Lucio D'Ambra, who in less than a year has written "Miss Cyclone," "The Chess King," "The Towers," "The Alfieri," "They Called Her Cosetta," "Emir Circus Horse," and recently "The Wives and the Oranges," a subject which is out of the ordinary run for the strange nature of its conception and originality of its form, which were all well received by the public.

The public taste is on the verge of changing from blood-thirsty films, that have not as yet totally disappeared from the Italian cinematographic scene, such as the doings of the Apaches, the clever and shrewd deeds of the detectives.

Side by side therewith, and with the tendency to abolish them, there flourish subjects in which art is evident in the conception. Perhaps it may be that the reform of Italian cinematographic art is at hand, which at the same time will determine the reform of public taste. The Italian authors have at last condescended to enter the cinematographic field, which but yesterday they scorned and despised, tempted more by the aspect of lucre than by the desire to ennoble this form of art.

It is an unchallengeable fact that the entrance on the cinematographic scene of the above mentioned well known writers will at all events greatly influence the taste and habits of the public, however, always assuming that the literary and artistic productions of these gentlemen be not swayed by the dictates of a false and damaging commercial spirit, which means appealing to the public by pandering to its vilest instincts.

A proof of the tendency of the Italian public of today to break from the old style of the cinematograph is illustrated by the good reception given to the American films and especially those of the "Triangle Company." It is not the writer's object to draw comparisons between the films of other American companies which have been circulating in Italy and those of the Triangle that have been put on the Italian market but recently; but it must be admitted that the result of this enterprise is beginning to exceed the expectations of the Triangle manager in Italy, Ernest Bru, and his agent for the sale of the concession Kodato Rossi.

The enterprise has been well prepared with excellent advertising, and any new films which appear on the screen are accompanied and frequently preceded by articles in the Italian dailies, wherein are found unconditional praise instead of criticism.

Milan led and Rome followed, in according a magnificent christening to the Triangle, suffice it to record that within a fortnight no less than eight projections were given in presence of packed houses and an enthusiastic press. The debut took place with the film "The Coward." The local press at once recognized in this work, as well as in all the other productions of the Triangle, an unconditional superiority over the Italian productions and they also admired the novel method of advertising the trade mark of the Triangle, which is everywhere conspicuous, adorning hoardings at every street corner. It has been announced in print that the Triangle is the gospel of the cinematograph, and more particularly in Rome, the announcements bear a text similar to that of the National Loan: "Do Your Duty, See the Triangle Film!" and the people rushed and admired.

Perhaps the public does not admire completely and unconditionally, as the Italian public are still accustomed to the old familiar faces, real Italian types, such as Bertini, Borelli, Menichelli, divas of the Italian silent art; but the die has been cast, with the works of the Italian literature on one side and the films of the Triangle on the other, although elements in direct competition as it were, still they serve together to raise the Italian public taste, and to launch the national output in a field in which hitherto it had no competitors, and in which it now feels the necessity of fighting merely for existence and the necessity of improving.

"QUEEN OF THE SEA" NEW KELLERMANN PICTURE.

"Queen of the Sea" is the title decided upon for the new sub-sea picture in which the marvelous Annette Kellermann will be presented by William Fox as his premiere for the season of 1917-18.

Miss Kellermann and a company are now at Bar Harbor, Maine, and work has begun under the direction of John G. Adolfi. The new picture of which George Bronson Howard is the author will be entirely different in action and story to "A Daughter of the Gods."

"Efficiency Edgar's Courtship"

The First Venture of Taylor Holmes in the Silent Drama Pronounced Success—Ably Supported by Virginia Valli, Ernest Maupain and Rodney LaRock.

Reviewed by James S. McQuade.

THE stage creator of the roles of Bunker Bean and Frank Craven, which won him high favor among dramatic theater-goers will capture a fine following among photoplay theater fans by his first essay before the camera, if my opinion is worth anything. In "Efficiency Edgar's Courtship," by Essanay, Taylor Holmes has not only given us a delightful and mirthful characterization of "Efficiency Edgar," but he has succeeded in "putting over" comedy points and subtle humor in a singularly effective way before the camera. In this Mr. Holmes is aided by clever subtitles, when the pictures alone are unequal to the task of expressing the full meaning. The method of Mr. Holmes is marked by a resourcefulness that is never lacking, whether it be mobile facial expressiveness, intelligent gesture or in happy "bits" of business. He is distinctly a comedian of the higher class, who makes his appeal to the intelligence of the spectator and not to his ordinary risibilities. Indeed, in this instance, he is compelled to do so by the nature of the story itself; for a less delicate handling of the part of Edgar would deprive the photo-comedy of much of its cleverness and the spectator of much of his pleasure.

"Efficiency" Edgar, or Edgar Bumpus as he was christened, believes that efficiency in love-making is quite as desirable as efficiency in business, and he employs it in his pursuit of Mary Pierce whom he has selected as the adorable object of his love. Mr. Pierce, her father, a grouchy old gentleman, is made to feel sorely the effectiveness of Edgar's efficiency, as he is checkmated at every move and is finally compelled to give his blessing to the young lovers. Young Mr. Wimple, a rival for Mary's hand, self-centered and bumptious, also becomes an easy victim and drops out of the story unhonored and unsung.

The Mary Pierce of Virginia Valli is quite creditable and Rodney La Rock's Wimple is satisfying. In his characterization of Mr. Pierce, the much-tried father of Mary, Ernest Maupain has added another splendid type to his long list of character successes before the camera. His make-up in the role, as is his wont, is an artistic study.

The production was in the care of Director Windorn, who is to be congratulated for careful and highly intelligent work.

The release will be made September 3 through K-E-S-E, Inc.

"Nearly Married" for Madge Kennedy.

Madge Kennedy's second Goldwyn production will be the famous stage success, "Nearly Married," by Edgar Selwyn, Goldwyn having purchased this delightful farce comedy during the current week. "Nearly Married," when presented several seasons ago in New York, was an all-season success at the Gaiety theater and played to tremendous audiences throughout America. At the time of its stage presentation it gave Bruce McRae one of the best roles of his career and also brought the beautiful Ruth Shepley into greater prominence.

"Babbling Tongues"

Seven-Part Ivan Photoplay Is Thoroughly French in Subject and Treatment and Contains Many Tense Dramatic Moments.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

ONE is at a loss at first to understand why William Humphrey and George E. Hall should have laid the scene of their seven-part Ivan photoplay, "Babbling Tongues," in France and made all the characters French. The mystery is cleared up, however, before the end of the picture. In fact, most spectators will recognize, as soon as the story is well under way, that only in the land of the tri-color could such a combination of incidents flourish even in screen fiction. This is not to say that "Babbling Tongues" is devoid of merit. It is quite the reverse.

The story is peopled with high-strung individuals who seem to care a great deal more for "dramatic values" than for common sense, and who never lose an opportunity to make the most of the acting possibilities of their lives. Once started, however, it moves smoothly along the track approved of by the novelists and playwrights of France and contains many tense dramatic moments. So well does it hold the attention that it seems nothing short of impertinent to be told calmly, at the finish, that the thing never happened at all, that our sympathy has been obtained under false pretenses and the almost tragic denouement is the trick of a writer for the stage. The theater is the dwelling place of illusion—why shatter the illusion with one stroke of the pen?

The finish is led up to in this wise: An elderly French gentleman, who has been saved from financial ruin by a friend, marries a young wife, and then discovers that the son of his benefactor is living in a garret and undergoing the usual struggle of the unknown dramatist. He takes the young man into his home, and his relatives, friends and servants try to make him believe that the playwright and the young wife are betraying his trust. He will not listen at first, and he is justified in this; but the tongue of scandal is too strong for even innocence to counteract and keeps manufacturing apparent evidence until the husband drives both wife and playwright from his door and forces them into each other's arms. Before they can reach the outer door, however, the scene shifts and shows husband and wife and playwright sitting at a table and smiling happily at one another. The dramatist has been reading his last play to them, and made himself the hero of the story. The thing never really happened at all!

The picture has been given a liberal production, and is artistically directed by William Humphrey. The cast is an able one, James Morrison, Grace Valentine and Arthur Donaldson acting the playwright, the wife and the husband, respectively. Other capable members of the cast are: Paul Capellani, Louise Beaudet, Gladden James, Carolyn Birch, Richard Tucker and Robert E. Hill.

"The Bridge of Fancy"

Little Mary McAlister, Supported by a Cast of Children in the Latest Episode of Essanay's "Do Children Count?" Series.

Reviewed by Arthur W. Courtney.

LITTLE MARY M'ALISTER'S latest episode in Essanay's "Do Children Count?" series is full of children and it is about children. Yet it is a picture that is too sophisticated for an audience of children. It will afford unlimited enjoyment to adults. It is the kind of picture that keeps lovers of children in a continual ripple of laughter from beginning to end. This episode was released August 15. The screen time is twenty-five minutes.

The picture is a fantastic dream of Little Mary's. But it is much better than most dream pictures. After her mother has kissed her good-night and left the room, Little Mary gets up, steals to her mother's room and comes back with her mother's new dress and hat. She is always at her best when she is trying on grown-up clothes. Then she lies down on the bed in all her finery and dreams.

The dream is a delicious burlesque on the story of high society life where the multimillionaire betroths his daughter to a count. The daughter's true lover fights a duel with the count; afterward sets detectives on his trail, and at the betrothal banquet breaks in to announce that the count is an imposter. Jack Paul and Ellis Paul are the children who take the leading parts in this burlesque. They are made up with false whiskers in burlesque style. Even Little Mary wears shoes too big for her. When the count takes her for a joy ride it is in a child's auto propelled by foot power. The children maintain the spirit of the burlesque with great realism. They make believe without half trying and get good fun out of it.

Little Mary's awakening from her dream occurs when she is dreaming that she has fainted and is lying on a couch and that her true, soldier lover is bending over her and kissing her back to consciousness. She awakes to find that the true and only Bo-bo, her bull pup, has climbed on the bed and is licking her face. As this picture dissolves, the audience is as much surprised as Mary.

The sub-titles are very good. In the scene where the father is discussing the marriage settlement with the count, the count asks for a million dollars and then accepts ten dollars on account. The children act this picture better than adults could do because they maintain a serious demeanor through it all. This is the essence of true burlesque acting.

"The Law of the Land"

A Complete Piece of Paramount Artistry with Madame Petrova in the Leading Role.

By Louis Reeves Harrison.

"The Law of the Land," a Paramount subject released on August 12, has a basic idea which will be popular as long as there is rigid enforcement of laws originally enacted for elastic interpretation; its remarkable similarity to the De Saulles case acts as stimulant to close attention, and its artistry of directing and interpretation may be called complete, though there are some minor errors and a motif denied as modern by many critics, the old motif of many stage plays, that of woman's sacrifice in marriage for the honor of the family. In spite of its tendency to theatricalism, the mood of "The Law of the Land" is so admirably preserved by the fine cast and by exceptionally appropriate settings, many of the latter being works of art in themselves, that the whole effect, the illusion, is delightfully preserved. This is more difficult than producers realize, for we are in an era of serving dried fruit, whose live flavor has been evaporated in some other kind of performance, at the dawn of an era when people will demand the fresh article.

Madame Petrova is entirely at home in her emotional role, but her eloquent eyelids lose effectiveness at times from a common studio fault, that of a make-up too obviously artificial, in this case ageing her and wholly unnecessary. She is otherwise in an almost constant state of mental revelation, an impressive exponent of screen psychology, at all times a marvel of dignified grace in movement. It would require an artist like Madame Petrova to portray a character rarely seen as yet, that of the modern woman of high intelligence, of as acute sensibilities as the traditional stage heroine, yet with a high-strung nervous temperament under the control of a sound, normal and well-trained mind. She exhibits many of the subtle half-disclosures of thought and feeling so essential in an interpretation of the up-to-date American woman, demonstrating a higher capability than is called for in any but the most recent stories of human life. In other words she rises to the opportunity afforded her, and goes beyond it with the unfailing intuition of a true artist.

There is a romantic setting at the outset announced to be a scene in the Riviera—by this is generally meant the French Riviera—with a back drop portraying a promontory like that of Monaco, or of Cape Ferrat near Nice. It is entirely appropriate and very well done, but it plants the locality. There is only one gambling casino of note in that neighborhood, that of Monte Carlo, familiar to an enormous number of good Americans, and the games there are roulette and trente et quarente. The latter only is a card game, and the pack is handled by the dealer. The old lady could not cheat at cards there, nor would she be exposed if she attempted to cheat at the tables—it is tried every hour. The proper location for such a scene would have been a private villa. But this is of small importance—it is remarked in the way of suggestive criticism—it does not mar the story, even to the initiated. The whole effect is one of superior and complete artistry, highly creditable to all engaged in the production.

"Durand of the Bad Lands"

Fox Makes Burlesque With Dustin Farnum as Wild Western Hero—It Amuses and Will Entertain.

Reviewed by Hanford C. Judson.

THERE is in the screen writings of Maibelle Hikes Justice, who has furnished the script for "Durand of the Bad Lands," Fox five-reel picture, released August 12, a marked feeling for character and liveliness of humor. Both of these traits are noticeable in this offering. Its hero, Durand, is played by Dustin Farnum, and it is he who performs the exploits. The background is modern with railroads and macadam highways. This bandit is wanted by the sheriff for many high crimes and misdemeanors. Both these men love the same girl and in the end the bad man proves the most desirable. It is he, for instance, who drives off a band of Indians who have jumped a caravan of settlers. That they should have taken the train is part of the humor. These bad reds have killed just exactly nineteen sturdy whites when Durand comes along in time to save three kids. The sheriff finds his holster on the field, and for the added crime of wholesale murder another thou' is added to the reward for his head.

The Governor of the State is inspecting the border, probably as a military precaution, when the same band of Indians race the train and hold it up. The sheriff is on board, but he too has to hold up his hands. The chief runs away with the Governor's daughter, but not until Durand appears—it is he who makes them scamper. He, too, is the man who races after the chief and saves the girl. The sheriff thereupon takes him up, pleas of the Governor notwithstanding. The trial is a comical bit, with the Governor waiting to reprieve the culprit after he has been condemned to "kick off from the nearest tree." The Governor sits there melodramatically to turn the trick at the right time. There is a good deal of freshness in the "comic relief," and that parson must not be forgotten.

lights a cigarette and drops off to sleep while his coat takes fire. Stingaree, the bad-man hero, sees his predicament and gives him the famous white coat to wear. A little group of incidents helps the bad man to recognize Stingaree, and he goes to the police to try for the reward. Howie's bucking horse takes him to a cabin where a pretty young woman gives him a meal. Stingaree, looking for Howie, learns that the man with the coat is helping the police. The girl in the cabin, who helped Howie, turns out to be the wife of the ugly bad man, who has deserted her with all her money, 500 pounds, just the amount of the reward. Stingaree goes out and sees the chief of police and the bad man looking for him. He leads them a chase till at night they fall asleep, one on one side of a stream, one on the other. Then Stingaree changes horses with the chief and leaves his hat. The policeman, by the way, has the 500 on him. Then on the other side of the stream he makes the ugly bad man look, in the distance, like himself, Stingaree. When the sun rises and the two awake to go about their business, they look across and each thinks he sees Stingaree. There's a rifle fight and the ugly bad man, who needed killing, is shot. The reward is taken to the little woman. It's her money.

Official British Government War Pictures

"The Retreat of the Germans at the Battle of Arras" the Fourth Installment of These Remarkable Views From the French Battle Front.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

THE latest installment of the Official British Government War Pictures consists of ten thousand feet of remarkable views from the French battle front, and are entitled "The Retreat of the Germans at the Battle of Arras." The large number of persons that have witnessed the previous pictures sent to this side of the ocean by our Allies in Great Britain need only to be assured that the latest films from the seat of the war are as interesting as the others to insure them equal success in all the picture theaters in this country. Actual warfare as it is now being carried on with the aid of big guns, "tanks," airplanes, bicycle corps and all the marvelous modern machinery that human skill has placed at the disposal of the millions of men now fighting for universal freedom is shown in these pictures, many of the views being taken during the heat of battle. Hundreds of thousands of feet of film were secured, some of it of so ghastly a nature as to prevent its being shown. Enough realism, in the shape of wounded soldiers being treated at a dressing station near the front, has been retained, however, and the joy with which the inhabitants of a village vacated by the retreating Germans welcome the advance guard of victorious English soldiers furnishes further proof of how rapidly the camera has followed the march of events.

The pictures taken from an aeroplane are especially interesting. Views showing the enemy's trenches and camps are included among them. As a finish the spectator is shown how the face of the earth looks to an airman when he is spiraling downward at the rate of seventy miles an hour.

It is the purpose of the British Government to make these views constitute a pictorial history of the British forces in the Great War, and every care is being taken to secure the best material possible. Another interesting fact in connection with these pictures is that over $200,000 has been contributed to the American Red Cross from the proceeds resulting from their exhibition in this country.

"Transgression"

Five-Part Vitagraph Blue Ribbon Feature With Earle Williams Is Fairly Interesting Melodrama.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

MELODRAMA with a society atmosphere classifies "Transgression," a five-part Vitagraph Blue Ribbon feature written by J. Stuart Blackton and Cyrus Townsend Brady. The story turns on a situation that is hardly plausible, but, once it is accepted, it leads up to a well sustained climax, and competent acting by the entire cast, under the direction of Paul Scardon, insures the bringing out of the best points in the picture.

Hal Page, whose brother is mayor of the city, falls in love with a lady who is no better than she should be, and throws over an old admirer in order to accept an invitation to become Mrs. Hal Page. Hal's rival, whose name is Staley, meets him one night at the home of the lady and attempts to shoot him. The mayor's brother seizes a pistol belonging to the cause of the trouble, and when the smoke of battle clears away Staley is lying dead on the floor. Stephen Page arrives at this moment and takes charge of affairs. He hurries his brother off to Spain and tells the woman that the secret must be kept for all their sakes.

The next morning Staley's body is found in an alley. Later on the Shrefton woman marries a crooked politician, and when the District Attorney is about to convict him, his wife goes to the mayor and threatens to tell who killed Staley if Stephen Page does not have the case against her husband stopped. The mayor will not agree, and subsequent developments prove that Hal did not fire the fatal shot, but took the blame in order to shield the woman, Staley being killed in a struggle with her. A love affair which the mayor has with the daughter of the District Attorney is also brought to a happy end. The doubtful point is in having the woman about to give information that would lead to a searching examination into a case of manslaughter of which she herself is guilty.

The acting honors of the drama go to Billie Billings as Caroline Shrefton. Edwards Davis is excellent as the District Attorney, and Earle Williams, Webster Campbell, Mary Maurice, Corinne Griffith, Denton Vane and Jack Ellis keep the performance up to the mark.

The explanation of how this member of the Holland-American line came to be reveals the fact that Pampy's father was an American tourist, who married a native of the Dutch village of Diepenveen and was disowned by his wealthy father. The death of Pampy's mother and the loss of her father's health forced the young girl to become the wage-earner of the family. "A Pawnbroker's Heart."

Keystone Comedies are known by their casts. With Chester Conklin, Ben Turpin, Peggy Pearce, Caroline Rankin and Glen Cavender to take care of the acting end of this rapidly moving farce there is bound to be something, or someone, stirring all the time. "A Pawnbroker's Heart" keeps pace with the Keystone reputation, the characters being reinforced by a number of nicely behaved dummies. There is a plot that struggles manfully not to get lost in the general mix-up and just manages to do it, and a crook finish that involves the robbery of the office safe. The one object of rough house comedy is never absent, however, and that is the one recommendation that has any weight with the man out in front who has paid his money to be amused.

cedents. She only knows that the kindest folks in the world are "Daddy" Crespi and "Uncle" Malone, pawnbroker partners. The two old men send the girl to a fashionable school. Finally pressed by her as to her identity, the kindly men lie and tell her she is the daughter of a deceased English Earl. This leads to many logical plot complications, and matters finally are straightened out when an English Lord discovers through a locket that the girl is his daughter. Thus the romance between her and the Lord's ward is consummated.

Miss Hulette seldom has been seen in a more atractive role than that of Roma. Cesare Gravina and H. G. Andrews have the parts of the pawnbrokers. Their characterizations help the production immeasurably. William Parke, Jr., is the hero; Sidney Mather the heavy.

Director Parke has injected the same convincing and pleasing atmosphere into this picture as he has injected into previous productions. He is especially to be commended on his lightings. The writer seldom has seen better or more effectively lighted scenes than a few darkened room scenes in "Miss Nobody."

"Lonesome Luke's Wild Women."

Harold Lloyd and his co-workers have succeeded in presenting a very good comedy number in the two-reeler titled "Lonesome Luke's Wild Women." Especial note must be made of th exteriors in this number. So beautiful are some of them that they would need no human action at all to make them good screen entertainment. But the action is there, too. Hal Roach dircted the piece. Luke is aided in his comedy capers by Harry Pollard and Bebe Daniels. Most of the scenes are laid in an Oriental palace. These sets are sumptuous, and it is on the thickly-upholstered divans that the "wild" women are found. Luke and his pal, sailors, get into all sorts of complications with the palace guards. It is not so much the story as the incident and individual work of the players and director that make this comedy worth-while.

Constance Talmadge at Work in "Scandal."

The first picture in which Constance Talmadge, who is the latest addition to the Selznick Constellation, will make her appearance as a film star is a powerful screen version of Cosmo Hamilton's sensational serial "Scandal," now appearing in the Green Book.

The role of Beatrix Vanderdyke, "the worst spoiled woman in America," gives Miss Talmadge a most unusual opportunity to show her talents. Indeed, it is a rare thing for a young screen star to be intrusted with the creation of a character so imbued with personality and abounding with opportunity for individual expression.

Cosmo Hamilton, whose "Blindness of Virtue" and "Sins of the Children" place him in the forefront of British novelists, has not only done his most powerful piece of work in "Scandal," but has also written a novel which abounds in the most remarkable way with elements which make for popularity.

Miss Constance Talmadge will therefore make her first appearance as a Selznick star in a play the sheer power and scope of which provide her with an ideal vehicle for her initial stellar venture.

The screen version of "Scandal" is being directed by Charles Giblyn, and in the notable company which has been collected in support of the young star are Harry C. Browne, J. Herbert Frank, Aimee Dalmores, W. P. Carleton, Ida Darling and Gladden James.

Work on the production has been going along steadily for the past two weeks in the Selznick Studio in the Bronx and on the beautiful estate of Commodore E. C. Benedict at Greenwich, Conn. Commodore Benedict has not only placed his mansion and grounds at the disposal of Director Giblyn and the "Scandal" company, but has also graciously played host on his famous steam yacht the Oneida, on which a number of the more important scenes of the play have been photographed.

transferring to the screen a story whose humanness and substantiality is made evident in every foot of the five reels. As a whole the piece is a character study drawn with words by a master of her craft and limned on the screen by a master of his craft. No human note that could have been struck has been left unsounded; the uppermost chord is one of sympathy for vain, optimistic, lovable, self-sacrificing Mr. Opp. Arthur Hoyt takes the title role. He might have stepped from the pages of the book, so well does he fit and play the part.

The story deals with plain folks in a small town. Mr. Opp becomes the guardian of his half-witted sister. Through many vicissitudes he is optimistic, hoping for the best and fighting for the right. He starts a small newspaper, living more on the plaudits of the few inhabitants than on material pay. Finally he makes the supreme sacrifice—he gives up the girl he loves so that he may live a life of service to his sister. The picture follows the story of the novel closely with the exception of the ending, which, in the photoplay, is made more happy than that in the novel.

Director Reynolds' work cannot be too highly complimented. His atmosphere is always flawless and his artistry made evident at all times. His choice of types shows a keen and sympathetic knowledge of the needs of the story. The titles are exceptionally good. Neva Gerber takes second acting honors. She has the difficult role of the half-witted girl and does splendid work, as do also George Chesbro and George Hernandez.

General Film Company.

THROUGH FIRE AND WATER (Kalem).—A continuation of the Stingaree series in two reels. It is a delightfully fresh and breezy story and is sure to make many friends among those who see it. For a longer notice see elsewhere in this issue.

DON'T LOSE YOUR COAT (Black Cat).—This is a two-reel, slapstick written and directed by the leading actor, Ameedee Rastrelli. He is a farmer's son who comes to the city to marry an heiress. A funny situation comes at the end, where he gets his foot caught in a water pitcher.

THE MAINSPRING (Falcon).—This is an excellent four-reel mining story. It was directed by Henry King, the young man who plays the leading part. The beginning is strong, and action that holds the interest fills each reel. Seldom are so many good situations used in a single picture. It starts off as if it might be a detective story, but quickly changes to a story of adventure. The direction and acting is excellent. The fire in the mine, with which the picture ends, is handled with plenty of thrills. Careful workmanship abounds in this picture. Ethel Pepprell plays opposite Henry King.

THE FURNISHED ROOM (Broadway Star).—A two-reel O. Henry story. This is not as good as its immediate predecessors. It is a tragedy with a moving picture happy ending tacked on. The shock we get when we think that the boy has committed suicide by gas in the same room in which the girl did, is not corrected by seeing their meeting in the hospital with the prospect of both recovering. The story of the picture is merely a series of happenings. The girl goes from one theatrical agency to another searching for work and finds none. The only dramatic element is the final situation, the suicide. And this is not an entertaining situation on the screen. The boy is J. Frank Glendon; the girl is Agnes Eyres.

THE SOLE SURVIVOR (Selig).—A two-reel story of adventure in the jungles of Central America. This picture is a long time getting started. The early scenes are poorly directed. But from the time the hunter finds a girl, a prisoner in one of the mad scientist's cages, the interest is strong. When the hunter is put in a cage with a lioness who puts her paws on his chest as he lies on the ground, the interest is stronger. The story-within-a-story construction clogs up the action somewhat. The girl makes a startling change of clothes at the end while she is still in the jungle, where she was shipwrecked and has been a prisoner for two years. She changes from a wild animal's skin, in which she is very attractive, to up-to-date shirtwaist and skirt. In its best scenes, this is a bully wild animal subject.

HER HEART'S DESIRE (Selig).—A one-reel story of the old-fashioned type. It is full of incident but little else. At the reception after the girl's marriage to her first husband, the bride is fondled by one of the men guests. This scene does not look quite right. A flock of sheep in the latter part of the picture makes an attractive background for the girl and her shepherd lover. At the beginning, a little child is knocked down by the girl's first husband in showing that he does not like children. This picture is only fair in its entertainment value.

Art Dramas, Inc.

THINK IT OVER (U. S. Amusement Corp.), August 13.—Catherine Calvert is featured in this five-part comedy-drama, supported by Richard Tucker. He is a middle-aged bachelor. She is a school girl with a wicked guardian. A review was printed in last week's issue.

Bluebird Pictures Corp.

THE SHOW DOWN, August 13.—A desert island and a shipwreck are important features in this five-part photoplay starring Myrtle Gonzales and George Hernandez. The story is pleasing and has been given a careful production. A longer review was printed on page 1231 of the issue of Aug. 25.

MR. OPP, August 20.—An excellent picturization of Alice Heagan Rice's novel of the same name. Lynn F. Reynolds' direction has made the photoplay as good a picture as is the book. Arthur Hoyt draws a fine character. There are smiles and tears in the picture, which is recommended to every exhibitor. A longer review is printed in the review columns.

Fox Film Corporation.

DURAND OF THE BAD LANDS, August 12.—A five-reel burlesque on the once popular wild west melo. It has some things in it that are quite new and most of it is refreshing. It is not an ambitious picture, and one hardly worthy of any specially high commendation, except that it interests and amuses. It is not a scream; but surely it is entertaining. For a longer notice see elsewhere in this issue.

THE SOFT TENDERFOOT, August 12.—A lively comic burlesque with Tom Mix as the astonishing tenderfoot at the ranch. It is a picture to kill worry and will furnish a good time. We can safely say that there isn't a dead yard in its two thousand feet. It is just stunts, but they are often very amusing.

Greater Vitagraph.

TRANSGRESSION, August 20.—A five-part Blue Ribbon feature with Earle Williams, this picture is a fairly interesting melodrama and is well acted by the entire cast. It is reviewed at length on another page of this issue.

BOBBY, THE PACIFIST, Aug. 27.—A very good addition to the one-part Bobby Connelly comedies, this release shows that there are times when the most ardent pacifist finds that the only thing to do is to fight. The small star acts with his usual effectiveness.

WORRIES AND WOBBLES.—A comedy number, by Lawrence Semon and Graham Baker. This centers about a married man who comes home with a jag and finds his wife waiting for him in anger and tears. A burglar appears and the police are called out. This has no particular plot and develops only a fair amount of humor, though well handled for this type of humor.

CHUMPS AND CHANCES.—This is an amusing one-part, rough-house farce, written by Lawrence Semon and Graham Baker. Everyone works with a will all through the reel and risk life and limb with equal abandon.

Ivan Film Corporation.

BABBLING TONGUES, August.—William Humphry and George E. Hall are the authors of this seven-part photoplay, which is French in story and a good example of its class. The cast, headed by Grace Valentine and James Morrison, does it justice. A longer review is printed on another page of this issue.

Jewel Productions, Inc.

PAY ME, August.—Dorothy Phillips heads the cast of this five-part western melodrama, written and directed by Joseph De Grasse. The picture is red-blooded and is admirably acted and produced. A longer review is printed on another page of this issue.

Kleine-Edison-Selig-Essanay

EFFICIENCY EDGAR'S COURTSHIP (Essanay), September 3.—A high-class comedy of excellent merit. Taylor Holmes, in the title role, makes a pronounced hit and he is ably supported by Virginia Valli, Ernest Maupain and Rodney La Rock. On another page, in this issue, will be found a detailed review.

THE LITTLE CHEVALIER (Conquest No. 5).—This is the four-reel dramatic feature of this program. The story is by M. E. M. Davis. Shirley Mason plays the leading part. The action of the story takes place in Louisiana before the Revolutionary War. The boy and the girl are representatives of French families. The girl's father killed the boy's father in a duel in France. The girl, dressed as a boy, is The Little Chevalier, who defends the honor of her family. Later, when she is dressed as a girl, the boy meets her and falls in love with her. The part of the boy is played by Ray McKee. Richard Tucker is the villain, a secretary of the Governor of Louisiana, who attempts to prevent the marriage. This is a fairly interesting costume play.

GOLD AND DIAMOND MINES OF SOUTH AFRICA (Conquest No. 5).—This is a half-reel showing how gold and diamonds are taken out of the earth in South Africa, with instructive street scenes in large cities of the district.

THE DINOSAUR AND THE BABOON (Conquest No. 5).—This is a half-reel manikin play by Willis H. O'Brien. The figures are very jerky in their movements. The comedy is low, but not vulgar. It is not especially interesting.

BIRDS OF A FAR-OFF SEA (Conquest No. 5).—This is a half-reel showing the bird life on an island three hundred yards square off the southern tip of Africa. There are Solan geese, cormorants and penguins. These are interesting scenes and beautiful, too.

SOLDIERS OF THE SEA (Conquest No. 5).—This is a full reel showing the activities of the U. S. Marines, interspersed with many strained patriotic sub-titles.

THE BRIDGE OF FANCY (Essanay), August 15.—A 25-minute episode in the "Do Children Count?" series. Little Mary AcAlister heads a cast of children, among whom are Jack Paul and Ellis Paul, in a burlesque on the high society story of the millionaire's daughter, who is betrothed to a bogus count. This is an excellent picture for lovers of children. It is reviewed in this issue.

OPEN PLACES (Essanay), August 20.—This is a five-reeler written and directed by W. S. Van Dyke. Jack Gardner is a constable of the Royal North West Mounted Police. The story is about life on the northern border of the United States. Ruth King is a school teacher in Montana. She marries a bad man, but does not find out how bad he is until afterwards. Carl Stockdale is the husband. This photoplay lacks interest.

Metro Pictures Corporation.

MISS ROBINSON CRUSOE (B. A. Rolfe), July 30.—The star of this five-part comedy is Emmy Whelen, the English musical comedy star. The scenes are laid among the Thousand Islands and are often picturesque. The story is frothy and passably well acted. A longer review was printed on page 1228 of the issue of Aug. 25.

Odgen Pictures Corporation.

THE LUST OF THE AGES, August.—A pretentious subject in seven parts, featuring Lillian Walker. It is a preachment against the love of gold and the money power. The story branches in so many directions there is a failure to consolidate interest. The picture is reviewed on another page.

Paramount Pictures Corporation.

THE VARMINT (Lasky).—Jack Pickford and Louise Huff are costars in this five-part story of colloge life taken from Owen Johnson's well-known novel. The picture duplicates the success of the printed book. It was reviewed at length on page 1230 of the issue of Aug. 25.

HASHIMURA TOGO.—A story of Japanese character, with exquisite settings by Mr. DeMille and an admirable portrayal of the leading role by Sessue Hayakawa.

THE LAW OF THE LAND.—An unusually successful adaptation, artistically done throughout, of strong interest and with Madame Petrova very effective in the leading role.

Pathe Exchange Inc.

MISS NOBODY (Astra), August 19.—A five-reel Gladys Hulette subject that has all the elements that appeal. It is an especially good picture for neighborhood audiences, in that besides being entertaining it is thoroughly wholesome. The story tells of a girl who is educated by two old pawnbrokers. They tell her she is a lady, which leads to many amusing complications. It later develops that the girl really is a lady. A longer review is printed in the review columns.

THE DICE OF DEATH (Astra), Sept. 2.—Episode No. 9 of "The Fatal Ring" serial. The instalment moves rapidly and contains its full quota of excitement. The story develops to the point where the spectator is led to believe that Pearl has been stabbed by the plotters and closes at the most exciting moment.

LONESOME LUKE'S WILD WOMEN (Rolin), Sept. 2.—A two-reel comedy number, with Harold Lloyd, Harry Pollard and Bebe Daniels. It is a good number. The exterior scenes are very beautiful in themselves and the interiors, which show an Oriental palace, quite sumptuous. The release relies more on incident and the individual work of the players and director than the story. It tells of two sailors who reach a shah's palace and harem. Reviewed in the review columns.

CENTRAL COLORADO (Combitone), September 2.—A one-reel scenic-educational release of merit. Most of the footage of the reel is devoted to instructive and beautiful scenes showing gold mining in the Cripple Creek section of Colorado. Through the agency of the camera the spectator is brought through every interesting point of a gold refinery. The latter portion of the reel is devoted to footage containing well-photographed scenic views of the same general geographical section.

FINE FEATHERS (International), September 2.—A split-reel embracing an educational-industrial and a "Jerry on the Job" cartoon. The first sections shows from beginning to end the processes by which ostrich-plume fans and boas are made. The cartoon is especially funny. It shows Jerry in the uniform of a National Guardsman and his trials and tribulations in guarding the Mexican-American border.

OFFICIAL BRITISH GOVERNMENT WAR PICTURES.—The fourth installment of the Official British Government War Pictures is called "The Retreat of the Germans at the Battle of Arras," and is equal in interest to the previous numbers. A long review will be found on another page of this issue.

Triangle Film Corporation.

GOLDEN RULE KATE, August 12.—This is a five-part Western melodrama in which the title role is excellently played by Louise Glaum. The story is full of interest and its possibilities have been fully realized by the producer and the cast. It was reviewed at length on page 1231 of the issue of August 25.

A PAWNBROKER'S HEART, August 19.—Chester Conklin and Ben Turpin are the principal peace-disturbers in this one-reel Keystone comedy, directed by Eddie Cline. It moves with the regulation Keystone speed and has its share of amusing situations. A longer review is printed on another page of this issue.

WOODEN SHOES, August 26.—The scenes of this five-part photoplay are laid in Holland, and the star, Bessie Barriscale, plays the owner of the pair of wooden shoes charmingly. The production is complete in every detail. A longer review is printed on another page of this issue.

Universal Film Manufacturing Company.

WHY THEY LEFT HOME (Joker), Week of August 72.—A comedy number, by C. B. Hoadley, featuring William Franey, Zasu Pitts, Lillian Peacock and Milburne Moranti. The country youth and his sweetheart join a show troupe and some entertaining comedy ensues. This contains a number of quiet chuckles and is quite amusing, though not unusual in plot.

THE HANDS IN THE DARK (Star Featurette), Week of August 27.—A two-reel subject, by E. M. McCall, featuring E. N. Wallack, Rex Roselli, J. Warren Kerrigan and Edith Johnson. This is a melodramatic offering, in which the hero quarrels with the girl's father. The butler, taking advantage of this circumstance, kills the old man and steals the jewels. The hero is sentenced to death and on the eve of execution a chase ensues to obtain a pardon from the governor on the grounds of new evidence. This has been done so often that it is hard to put new thrills into the situation. It is well handled and has the advantage of strong presentation. On last reel is also a short scenic, "Old French Towns."

THE HOUSE OF SHADOWS (Universal Special), August 27.—Episode No. 10 of "The Gray Ghost." This installment introduces a number of weird and mysterious happenings, in which The Gray Ghost appears simultaneously in two places. He first disappears from the place where he is lying, presumably dead, and then shows up in the house of mystery and at the police station. These new developments stir the interest considerably and keep the observer wondering what the solution will be.

BUSTING INTO SOCIETY (Joker), Rel. Week of August 27.—A comedy number, featuring Gale Henry and Milton Sims. The former is a poor girl with social aspirations and her lover is a hod carrier. The father wins a lottery prize and they break into social life. This has not a very strong plot, but contains some good burlesque touches and will bring numerous smiles.

JUNGLE TREACHERY (Bison), Rel. Week of August 27.—A two-reel subject, by W. B. Pearson, featuring Fred Church, Eileen Sedgwick, Fred Montague, Charles Brinley and others. The hero goes with a party to make a survey of some African jungle land. Adventures with wild beasts and war with the natives are interesting features. The night photography is good. This is stronger than the average two-reel subject.

THE WINNING PAIR (Gold Seal), Rel. Week of August 27.—A three-reeler featuring Ruth Stonehouse. It is unfortunate if she is to become associated with parts which requires the telling of a number of falsehoods. Her hobby in this picture is collecting many pairs of boots for herself. At a country hotel she is mistaken for a "female drummer." She acts out the part with great success. The entertainment value of this picture is not high.

SCANDAL EVERYWHERE (Victor), Rel. Week of August 27.—A comedy number, by R. A. Dillon, featuring Max Asher as chief of the bell boys in a hotel. He flirts with the wife of one of the guests, who turns out to be a sleep walker. The humor is slightly rough and not particularly strong, though inoffensive. The closing scenes, where the characters bound up and down the skyscraper, are novel and interesting.

THE NIGHT CAP (Nestor), Rel. Week of August 27.—A one-reel comedy subject, by Virginia Kirtley, featuring Eddie Lyons, Lee Moran and Edith Roberts. The young men retire, on the eve of Eddie's wedding day, and Lee wears a girl's night cap. He is mistaken for a girl and trouble follows. A slightly risque situation, presented with just the right sort of juvenile humor to keep it from being offensive. A good comedy of the type.

PROPS, DROPS AND FLOPS (L-KO), Rel. Week of August 27.—A two-reel comic, featuring Gladys Varden, Bert Roach, Walter Stephens and Harry Griffith. The first reel introduces a number of stage hands and some chorus girls behind the scenes of a theater. Some of the incidental business is funny, but none of it very strong. The action in the second reel is better and holds the attention closely. There is a lot of good knockabout business and a number of interesting features, including the knife throwing and fire scenes. This will succeed with audiences who like plenty of comic action without much plot.

World Pictures.

THE LITTLE DUCHESS (Peerless), August 20.—The juvenile star, little Miss Madge Evans, contributes largely to the success of this five-part photoplay which deals with an orphan who becomes a member of the English aristocracy. The production is an all around good one. A longer review was printed on page 1229 of the issue of August 25.

PATHE PROGRAM FOR SEPTEMBER 2 FULL OF GOOD THINGS.

Baby Marie Osborne in a five-part Gold Rooster play, "Tears and Smiles"; Pearl White in the ninth episode of "The Fatal Ring"; Mollie King and Creighton Hale in the first episode of "The Seven Pearls"; "Central Colorado," which is the 21st installment of the "Know America" Pathe-Combitone series; Harold Lloyd in a two-reel "Lonesome Luke" comedy called "Luke's Wild Women"; a split reel international cartoon and scenic and the Hearst-Pathe News Numbers 72 and 73, make up the Pathe program for the week of September 2. In diversity of subject matter, quality of content and box-office value of the stars it would be hard to excel this program.

Independent Producers Meet

Discuss Formation of Buyers' Organizations—Lee Organization Rapidly Forming—Final Meeting of Lesser Organization Called.

IMPELLED by the knowledge that two organizations of state rights buyers were forming, virtually every representative independent producer attended a meeting held in the Hotel Astor, New York, on Saturday, August 18. The meeting was held behind closed doors, and no definite announcements were made. It was learned, however, that the meeting was called by the producers of state rights pictures for the purpose of considering ways and means of "protection" against any possible attempts at arbitrary price-fixing or any other factor detrimental to their interests that might result in the event that an organization of buyers became powerful enough to dictate.

It was not given out just which of the producers attended or were represented at the meeting. It is known, however, that, since the formation of the First National Exhibitors' Circuit and the imminent formation of the organizations promoted by Sol L. Lesser and Joseph F. Lee, the producers have had their ears to the ground ready to "unionize" at short notice if need be.

Conjecture has it that the producers, if they organize formally and if the occasion arises, will fight as a unit to protect their interests against any possible dictatorial terms laid down by any organization of buyers. The life of the state rights market, they say, lies in its competition. If any group of buyers form a "trust," they say, they in turn will have to unite for strength.

As the situation looms up at present everybody on the producing side of the fence is marking time waiting for the buyers to start playing the music, and everybody on the buying side, besides watching each other, as a body is waiting for the producers to start playing the music. The situation may be likened to two boys ready to fight, each with a chip on his shoulder, but each too good a friend of the other to knock the chip off.

Lee Organization Rapidly Forming.

Joseph S. Lee announces rapid progress in his endeavor to bring together prominent state rights men in all parts of the country. The organization work has progressed to such a point, it is stated, that a representative has left New York on a tour that will, according to Mr. Lee, result in the acquisition as members of several of the biggest men in the field.

During the week there have been several conferences in which Louis B. Mayer, of Boston; Harry Crandall, of Washington, and Mr. Lee were the leading figures. Indications point to an early announcement of future plans.

Meeting of Lesser Organization Called.

The final meeting of the National Organization of State Rights Buyers—the organization promoted by Sol L. Lesser—has been called for Wednesday, August 22. It is announced that at this meeting all details that must be worked out before the organization begins active operations will be concluded.

Mr. Lesser still is confined to bed with typhoid fever, but is convalescing rapidly and is expected to be about in a few days. He is in constant touch with his lieutenants and despite his illness is directing the work of organization.

NETTER GETS "REDEMPTION" FOR OHIO.

Leon D. Netter, of the Masterpiece Film Attractions, Cleveland, has purchased "Redemption" for Ohio. Netter closed the "Redemption" deal almost at the same time that he purchased for the same territory "The Cold Deck," the new Hart picture. Masterpiece also controls in Ohio "The Garden of Allah," "Beware of Strangers," "The Ne'er-Do-Well and several others.

Hart Picture Selling Rapidly

Stephen A. Lynch Enterprises, Inc., Sell Big Block of Territory—Mayer, Lesser, Rosenberg and Netter Among Purchasers.

WITH about as little blaring of trumpets as a picture ever was given, the Stephen A. Lynch Enterprises, Inc., already have disposed of a great bulk of territorial rights to "The Cold Deck," a seven-reel Western subject in which William S. Hart is the star. The picture is the last one made by Hart while he was with the Triangle Film Corporation. Its production was supervised by Thos. H. Ince.

Louis B. Mayer, of Boston, has purchased the rights to the feature for Maine, New Hampshire, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Vermont and Connecticut. Sol L. Lesser, acting for his All-Star Features Distributors, Inc., of San Francisco, directed from his sick bed the purchase of the film for California, Nevada and Arizona. Rights to "The Cold Deck" for Oregon, Washington, Idaho and Montana have been purchased by M. R. Rosenberg, of the De Luxe Feature Film Company, Seattle. Leon D. Netter, of the Masterpiece Film Attractions, Cleveland, purchased the subject for Ohio.

"DEEMSTER" SOLD FOR EIGHT MORE STATES.

The Arrow Film Corporation, through its president, W. E. Shallenberger, has disposed of "The Deemster" for two more territories, comprising eight States. D. P. Davis, acting for the All-Star Features, Inc., of Jacksonville, Fla., bought six Southern States, including North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Alabama, Florida and Mississippi, and A. H. Blank, president of the Mid-West Photoplay Corporation, of Des Moines, purchased Iowa and Nebraska.

The Stillman Theatre, Cleveland, showed "The Deemster" last week and achieved wonderful results, it is reported. Cleveland critics waxed eloquent over the manifold beauties of story and production. Cleveland, it should be noted, has the largest Manx population in the world—not even excepting the Isle of Man. And by reason of this fact, rather than in spite of it, the financial returns in Cleveland mounted high.

WOLFBERG GETS "ON TRIAL."

It is announced at the offices of the Harris P. Wolfberg exchange, 602 Lyceum building, Pittsburgh, that the First National Exhibitors' releases would be distributed in Ohio through the Wolfberg exchanges. So far these releases consist of Essanay's "On Trial" and forthcoming Chaplin pictures.

Mr. Wolfberg, who also owns "The Crisis" and "The Deemster" for Ohio, Western Pennsylvania and West Virginia, will open offices in Cleveland and Cincinnati immediately.

Members of the Exhibitors' Circuit state that the distribution of their pictures was intrusted to Mr. Wolfberg because of his reputation for honest methods and square dealing with the exhibitor, and the high degree of efficiency of his exchanges.

SHORT FEATURES GETS OLD BIOGRAPHS.

Short Features Exchange, 729 Seventh avenue, New York, has purchased 50,000 feet of Biograph film. It is announced that the 50,000 feet are the pick of 300,000 feet examined. The pictures obtained include short subjects featuring Mary Pickford, Mae Marsh, Lillian Gish, Dorothy Gish, Blanche Sweet, Robert Harron, Henry Walthall and the whole list of other stars who had their start with the old Biograph company. Many of the pictures were directed by David W. Griffith and Mack Sennett. The exchange reports that the purchase included paper and other advertising matter.

HORSLEY STATE-RIGHTS MARY MacLAREN FEATURE.

Mary MacLaren Photoplays, made under her new contract with David Horsley, will be sold on the state rights basis. This is the announcement made by David Horsley in New York, where he has closed negotiations in four States for the first of her new seven-reel features, "The Counterfeit Soul." Mr. Horsley reports contracts signed for New York, New Jersey, New England and Pennsylvania.

BUYS "REDEMPTION" FOR NORTHWEST.

M. R. Rosenberg, of the De Luxe Feature Film Company, Seattle, has purchased "Redemption," with Evelyn Nesbit and her son, Russell Thaw, for Oregon, Washington, Idaho and Montana.

Unique One-Reel Star Series Announced

Photoplay Magaz'ne Will Present Films Showing Big Stars Away From Studios—James R. Quirk Tells of Plan.

TWELVE single-reel subjects—one reel per month—of bizarre and unique views of the foremost players of cinemaland shortly are to be presented by the publishers of Photoplay Magazine under the title of Photoplay Magazine Screen Supplement. The twelve subjects will, in the very near future, be offered state rights buyers in the various territories.

Picture to yourself the contents of Photoplay Magazine come to life and you will have a fairly accurate idea of the nature of the newest novelty in motion pictures. Imagine scenes and closeups of such favorites as Mae Marsh, William S. Hart, Henry Walthall, Charlie Chaplin, Lucille Lee Stuart, Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Drew, Antonio Moreno, Bessie Love, Warren Kerrigan and a host of others in their homes, playing with their pets, swimming, motoring, fishing, making up in their dressing rooms and you will still further comprehend the sort of material that will be presented in Photoplay Magazine Screen Supplement. Exhibitors will not find it hard to appreciate the box-office possibilities that lie in this sort of an offering. These subjects will literally transport the fans to the homes of their favorites and permit them for the first time to actually behold their idols doing the hundred and one things of which they are reputed to be fond, but which never heretofore have been seen on the screen.

James R. Quirk.

"I am sure we have something wholly new, wholly different, to offer," said James R. Quirk, publisher of Photoplay Magazine, in discussing the forthcoming series presenting "The Stars As They Are." "It is not an idea conceived in a moment and executed the moment afterward, but the result of an idea which has been growing gradually and rounding into shape as time passed. We could have launched our first release months ago, but have refrained from doing so until we were sure of our ground—until we had collected material enough for months in advance and knew that the high standard we hit in our first release could be consistently maintained and even improved in subsequent issues. Right now we have on hand material enough for our first nine releases and our cameramen are supplying it at a rate that will easily enable us to keep that far ahead of our release schedule.

"In offering these films we are going to give big exhibitors a chance to secure them for certain zones or territories, as well as state rights buyers. By that I mean if we receive a more attractive offer from John Doe, who conducts a string of fifteen or eighteen theaters in a certain territory, than we do from Richard Roe, who always snaps up a state rights bargain in that territory, John Roe, the exhibitor, will be given careful consideration when it comes to placing our franchise in that zone. Exhibitors controlling theater chains will thus be offered a chance to show the films in their houses as first-run offerings and then to sub-lease them to other exhibitors in the territory at a price which will enable both the original lessees and the sub-lessees to make a profit.

"The trade is aware that Photoplay Magazine has always stood for quality—that it has begged, demanded and boosted for the better class, higher-grade type of photoplays—higher standards of direction, better photography and the employment of the foremost artists of the world. Now, therefore, its own debut in the film world as a manufacturer of films will have to bear out its past stand as a quality medium, and the trade may rest assured that nothing short of the best in every technical detail will be acceptable to it. The stars, of course, will be top-notchers—kings and queens of the cinema world. The camera work is in the hands of experienced, proven men of ability. The developing, tinting, toning and printing of Photoplay Magazine Screen Supplement will be handled by experts. The sub-titles will be as near perfection as money and brains can make them. In short, neither time, money nor effort will be spared to make our venture a real step in advance of anything that has gone before.

"The definite release date of our first Photoplay Magazine Screen Supplement has not yet been set, but within a week or two at most announcements will be made."

More "Parentage" Territory Allotted

Seng Will Inaugurate Bigger Campaign—"Parentage" to Go to Responsible Persons Only.

FRANK J. SENG, owner and distributor of "Parentage," announces that the Peerless Feature Film Exchange, of Philadelphia, will handle his unique feature in Eastern Pennsylvania, Southern New Jersey, Delaware, Maryland, District of Columbia and Virginia.

"Parentage" has been selected by the Stanley, the finest photoplay theater in Philadelphia, as its big attraction for the third week in September.

Commenting upon the large volume of direct inquiries for "Parentage" received from practically every buyer and exchangeman of prominence in the country and his reasons in particular for closing with the present holders of territorial contracts, Mr. Seng says: "When an exhibitor advertises he usually gets what he ought to receive—increased business. But his returns do not stop there. Every advertisement, rightly executed, creates good will and tends to establish his house as a factor in his community. In like manner do I regard the advertising that has already appeared and will continue to appear, featuring 'Parentage.'

"I am most sincere in my desire to create good will among state rights men and among exhibitors," says Seng, "hence my determination to spend exactly ten times more in each territory as it is disposed of than was set aside for the initial marketing campaign. And I would also like to impress the trade with the sincerity of my statement when I tell you that I have been more interested in the capabilities of the organizations who are handling 'Parentage' than in the size of the offers made."

To date, Mr. Seng says, he has found it advantageous to dispose of certain territories on a percentage basis, but a great many outright sales will be made and made as rapidly as the purchasers satisfy the owner of "Parentage" that they want to help the exhibitors make money and will co-operate with them to that end.

Exhibitors in the area of Greater New York who desire to book "Parentage" are referred to Lewis J. Selznick, of 729 Seventh avenue; those of New York state outside the metropolitan district should communicate with Veribest Pictures, Inc., 47 Swan street, Buffalo; those of Northern New Jersey should get in touch with Frank Gersten, Inc., 707 Times building, New York City; those in Eastern Pennsylvania, Southern New Jersey, Delaware, Maryland, District of Columbia and Virginia must look to the Peerless Feature Film Exchange of Thirteenth and Vine streets, Philadelphia, and Illinois and Wisconsin exhibitors should address their applications to the Lewis J. Selznick Productions, 110 South State street, Chicago.

"Garden of Allah" Sold for South

William N. Selig Also Announces Other Productions That May Be State-Righted.

THE All-Star Features Company, of Jacksonville, Fla., are the latest buyers of territorial rights for "The Garden of Allah," having purchased the rights to Georgia, Alabama, Florida, South Carolina, Mississippi, Tennessee, Louisiana and Arkansas.

Following the exploitation of state rights for "The Garden of Allah," the Selig Polyscope Company is turning its attention to several other big features which have been completed or are nearing completion. While William N. Selig has not definitely announced his plans concerning these latest features, it is presumed that several may be marketed along the lines of state rights successes such as "The Crisis," "Beware of Strangers," "The Garden of Allah," etc.

"Who Shall Take My Life?" a Selig feature combating the evils of capital punishment, is said by those who have seen private presentations to be an absorbing drama. The play was written by Maibelle Heikes Justice. The production features Thomas Santschi, Fritizi Brunette, Bessie Eyton, Eugenie Besserer and other well known stars. Colin Campbell was the director in charge.

"The Railroader" is another gripping drama bearing the diamonds trade-mark and presenting George Fawcett, the well-known star, as the lead. Mr. Fawcett takes advantage, it is said, of a large number of opportunities to perform clever character work. "The Railroader" was adapted by Gilson Willets from "Caleb Conover," the world-famous novel written by Albert Payson Terhune. Colin Campbell also directed this drama, which is said to carry some wonderful effects.

"The City of Purple Dreams" is another story filmed by the Selig Company and pronounced wonderful by those who have seen the play. It is adapted from the novel of the same name. Thomas Santschi stars and Colin Campbell was the director in charge. The scenic effects are said to be beautiful.

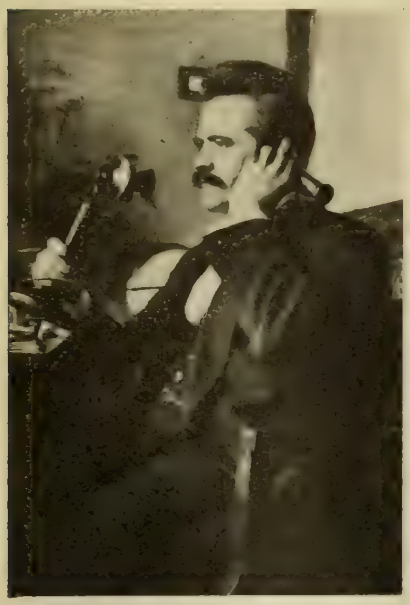
THIRD COMMONWEALTH COMEDY FINISHED.

"His Watery Waterloo," the third of the Commonwealth Comedies, was completed this week with Lou Marks playing the leading role supported by George Humbert, Leon Miller, Iva Edmondson, Leo Daly, Dorothy Gorden, Pauline Taylor and Irving Browning. The pictures were directed by Frank Donovan. Hughie Mack and Lou Marks are the Commonwealth stars. Both are famous for their comedy work and known throughout the world of motion pictures. A new one-reeler is being produced each week at the Commonwealth Studios in Cliffside, N. J., for early release.

Malitz Heads Piedmont Corporation

Is General Manager of Concern That Takes Over Hawk Film—Personnel of Piedmont Augurs Well for Future.

PIEDMONT PICTURES CORPORATION of New York, Paris, London, and Tokio, have taken over the business of the Hawk Film Company, and have opened new headquarters at 729 Seventh avenue, New York. Piedmont Pictures Corporation, as successor to the Hawk Film Company, operates now with a stronger and entirely paid-up capital, it is announced. Its object is to represent prominent producers as exclusive selling agents, and at the same time act as confidential purchase agents for prominent buyers throughout the world.



Felix Malitz.

Felix Malitz, general manager, has a splendid reputation. As organizer and commercial manager of Pathe Freres, for whom he has handled their entire American business as vice-president and general manager, he built up the entire Pathe Exchange organization in this country, and has for many years been generally connected with the film business in America and abroad. Assisting him are Joseph Lamy, export manager; Arthur Ziehm, Mr. Lamy's assistant; G. A. Enugler, manager of the distribution and service departments, and Harry Rubin, manager of the film and technical departments. These men are virile and young, yet long enough in the business to be thoroughly conversant with its various needs.

The Piedmont Corporation purposes to be an outlet for any manufacturer who will offer pictures which are sufficiently interesting to command the approval of the Piedmont expert export staff at the New York office. Their headquarters here acts as the dynamo whose power for real, live motion extends to every nook and corner of the world. Scores of salesmen and foreign correspondents in all the capital cities of Europe, North and South Africa, East and Far East assure a quick, courteous and satisfactory response to all.

The Piedmont Pictures Corporation also handles foreign productions in the United States. It is just about to put on the market a series of interesting British features dealing with the war viewed from the British side. These productions have met success all over England and the Allied countries, and should also appeal to the American public.

Noble Completes Feature

Director Finishes Special Length Picture Under Own Management Showing Son.

AFTER ten weeks spent in the making of a special picture which represents his idea of the acme of motion picture production from the standpoint of direction, acting, story and photography, John W. Noble has completed his first important contribution to the state rights market.

The drama, which is a bold treatment of a large and pertinent subject, is said to promise to cause a sensation by its clever presentation of a phase of the war little understood by persons as far removed from the trenches as Americans. It was the discovery of the story which prompted Mr. Noble to produce a special feature under his own management.

Mr. Noble's record as an army officer, who was promoted for brave and meritorious service in the face of the enemy while fighting for Uncle Sam in the Philippines, is as well known in army circles as his record for staging such productions as "Romeo and Juliet," "The High Road," and "The Awakening of Helene Ritchie," is known in the world of motion pictures. He has been on the lookout for an exceptional story ever since the beginning of the world war, because of his belief that a powerful drama inspired by the conditions in Belgium and France was sure to make its appearance sooner or later. The story selected suggested to him the drama he sought, and as soon as he had read it, he decided to make it the basis of a special state rights production staged under his own management, so that he could devote all of the time and money necessary to the creation of a picture worthy of a great subject, and also carry out his own ideas of what constitutes effective stage direction.

Jules Burnstein, who has sole charge of the business management of Mr. Noble's special feature, promises that it will interest producers and dramatists as much as it does exhibitors and the general public.

Lillian Walker Signs With Ogden

Eight Pictures Starring Her Will Be Made—Other Plans Announced.

LILLIAN WALKER has signed a two-year contract with the Ogden Pictures Corporation to appear in sixteen super-productions to be produced eight a year, at a salary said to be one of the largest ever paid to any star. The contract contains every detailed provision, providing for the proper exploitation of the productions. It requires that on each release a minimum sum of $12,500 shall be expended in advertising.

The company has placed at the disposal of Miss Walker a complete dressing room installed in a limousine. A provision unusual in contracts with stars appearing in motion pictures, but which is contained in Miss Walker's contract provides that she shall expend out of her own moneys a sum sufficient to provide a minimum of four new gowns and a complete change of wearing apparel suitable to each gown, for each production. All plays which are to be staged with Miss Walker are first to receive her approval and she is to have an equal voice in the casting of her leading supports.

Further plans of the Ogden corporation are made known in the announcement that four of the eight Walker productions to be made during the next twelve months will be made in the East and four in the West. The entire studio and technical staff will be employed by the Odgen studio in preparing the third production, while the second production is being made in the Eastern studio.

Work has already commenced on the second release, which promises to be as big a production as "The Lust of the Ages." No details as to the supporting cast or the character of the story are forthcoming and will not be given publicity until the company has completed the taking of the scenes. No expense will be spared in any of the operations connected with the Lillian Walker productions; a technical staff from the director and his assistants down to the merest property boy stand engaged for both studios. Lester Park, general manager of the company, will divide his time between the Western and Eastern studios.

HONEYMOONERS BEGIN WORLD TOUR.

For the purpose of obtaining a novel series of films, the Peter Pan Film Corporation is sending on a trip around the world E. Richard Schayer, formerly publicity manager for Lewis J. Selznick, and Mrs. Schayer. H. C. Allen, president of the Peter Pan Corporation, has adopted this method of producing pictures of especial interest. The party that is making the trip includes besides, the two principals, W. F. Aldrich, the cameraman, and Mrs. Aldrich and "Bill," Mrs. Schayer's Irish terrier.

Mr. and Mrs. E. Schayer.

The pictures will not be ordinary travelogues in any sense, it is announced. The idea is to get off the beaten track, and to make the films a record of personal, human experiences — not merely a series of views of foreign lands. They will be taken from the angle of the traveler trying to do and live as the natives of other countries, and will be full of humorous and human interest. The by-paths of the world are overflowing with ungathered picture material, and thé best way to get it is not by making it but by really living it.

The new releases will be entitled "The Honeymooners," and while no definite time has been allotted to their production, it is expected that they will be completed in about two years. The party left New York on August 1 for San Francisco, from which place they sailed for Honolulu on the Matsonia, where they arrived on August 16. The first picture will be made in Hawaii and Mr. Schayer will recruit what company he needs from the natives.

BUD FISHER AN EXECUTIVE.

Bud Fisher, who has left his office to go to the Plattsburg Officers' Training Camp, came into the industry only a little over a month ago, knowing nothing about the distribution end of the business, and in that short space has accomplished an almost unprecedented sale of territory for the Mutt and Jeff Comedies. In fact, with the exception of a few straggling territories, he has sold out the entire world for the new series. He did this solely by the application of common sense and sound business principles of other commercial enterprises.

He has shown a keen perception of the intricate conditions of the industry, not only disposing of his cartoons to the advantage of the film corporation, but also to the advantage of the exchange. By selecting exchange men in harmony with his ideas, he has made it possible to work side by side and to obtain the most efficient results. Of course the exchanges have a tangible asset in addition to the films themselves in the tremendous advertising campaign that Mr. Fisher has inaugurated, whereby the Mutt and Jeff cartoons appear in 278 of the best dailies in the country and are seen daily by an audience of 17,000,000 people. This is a large campaign.

FOREIGN BUYERS VISIT STUDIO.

One of the largest groups of foreign film buyers ever gotten together gathered at the King Bee Studios at Bayonne on Tuesday, August 14. Their activities practically cover the world of the industry. The party was organized by Mr. Garrett, president of J. Frank Brockliss, Inc., and consisted of Mr. Wainright, buyer for the English cinematograph trade; Mr. Mattsonn, the representative of the trade for Scandinavia and Northern Europe; Mr. Ono, representing Japan and the Far East; Mr. Cropper, who buys for the Middle West in the United States, and Madame Schuepbach, buyer for the Mundusfilm Company of Paris. Nat Spitzer, general manager of the King Bee Company, and Mr. Bernstein, the president of the same corporation, acted as hosts with Mr. Garrett, who is known intimately to all.

Foreign Buyers at King Bee Studios.

They met at the Brockliss offices and motored out to the studios at Bayonne, where they saw the comedian, Billy West, at work. Interesting entertainment was provided for them by Mr. Gildstrom, who directs the Billy West Comedies. He had concocted a scene in which the whole party appeared in conjunction with the company. Billy West himself entered into the spirit of the thing and was at his best. This scene Mr. Gildstrom promises to release in one of his forthcoming pictures.

SPITZER RETURNS FROM EXCHANGE TOUR.

Nat H. Spitzer, sales manager for the King Bee Company, has returned from a trip covering all the exchanges handling Billy West Comedies through the West and South. Mr. Spitzer is delighted with the outlook for the Billy West releases, and feels that conditions for them could hardly be better.

In an interview he gave a summary of his ideas on the situation in the Western and Southern markets.

"I found that the demand of the majority of the exhibitors who are guided by the likes and dislikes of their patrons was for booking short feature subjects, particularly comedy. Two-reel comedies of the better class are extremely popular throughout every section of the country, and since the various exchanges are demanding exorbitant rentals for their long features, which are beyond the reach of the average exhibitor, they are making up their programs from the shorter subjects, primarily a number of two-reelers and one-reelers. This is corroborated by the fact that the independent exchanges are demanding more and better shorter subjects. As an example of this our Chicago exchange has booked our pictures with the Lubliner-Trintz circuit, the Ascher Brothers and the Hamburger chain of theaters of that city. That shows the present prevailing tendency.

"I am well satisfied with the progress that the Billy West Comedies are making at present, but in order to advance them to the highest point of efficiency we have mapped out a national advertising campaign, the details of which are now being completed. This will include a series of novelty ideas for exhibitors, and for the exchanges, unique poster, and advertising matter as well as some new ideas in publicity."

BROCKLISS GETS FOREIGN RIGHTS TO LION COMEDIES.

The A. Kay Company announces that it has consummated a deal with the firm of J. Frank Brockliss, Ltd., whereby the latter secures the exclusive foreign rights to the Lion Comedies and the picturized versions of the famous Walt Mason stories.

The Lion Comedies, which are of a slapstick nature, are made by Masterpictures of Houston, Texas, under the supervision of Mr. Harold J. Binney, who for many years has been active in the production of comedies. The Filmcraft Corporation, which has arranged with the George Matthew Adams Service to picturize the famous Walt Mason stories and rhymes, recently entered into an agreement with the A. Kay Company to give the latter the world rights to their product to be known as the Walt Mason Stories.

Keenan and Edeson to Star

They Will Appear in "The Public Defender," to Be Produced by Harry Raver.

FRANK KEENAN and Robert Edeson have been engaged by Harry Raver to appear in a special production of "The Public Defender," by Mayer Goldman and Frank Harris of the New York bar. Alma Hanlon will be seen in the leading female role. An exceptionally strong cast has been secured for the new Goldman-Harris story, including John Sainpolis, Florence Short, William Green, J. K. Roberts, John O'Keefe, Irving Southard, Mrs. C. M. Heaten, Harry Mack, Jane Newcombe, J. J. Turner, Robert R. Lawrence, Louis Sterns, Blanche Thode, Edith Hartman, J. J. Tanner, James Gaylor, C. A. Ellwood, John Martin and James Sullivan. Burton King will direct.

The story is based on Mayer Goldman's book of the same name. It discusses a subject which seriously affects the rights and liberties of the masses. The basic idea is that it is as much the function of the state to shield the innocent as to convict the guilty, and that the "presumption of innocence" requires the state to defend as well as to prosecute accused persons.

Frank Keenan will be seen as the ambitious district attorney who has promised himself a seat in the Governor's chair. Robert Edeson will interpret the "Public Defender" who gives the accused an even break under the law. John Sainpolis is "The Murderer" of the story and Alma Hanlon is the girl who moves heaven and earth to save him from the electric chair.

Mr. Raver announces the production as the first of a series of exceptional pictures to be issued by him on an open-market basis under the brand name of "Important Productions."

STANDARD FILM BUYS COMEDIES.

The Standard Film Corporation, of which R. C. Cropper is president, has purchased distributing rights to the Christie Comedies for Iowa, Kansas, Missouri and Nebraska. These are a class of photoplays known as "society comedies," having as their principal ingredients attractive, youthful players, including in the case of the Standard's purchase, Betty Comyson, Neal Burns and Billie Rhodes, and depending for their appeal on a certain freshness and breeziness of plot rather than upon the "eternal slapstick."

Mr. Cropper, in speaking of his purchase, said that he fully anticipated a remarkably strong demand for this class of film, and that his anticipations were being fully borne out by the eagerness of exhibitors to book the Christies. It will be remembered, in this connection, that the Standard recently bought the Middle West rights on the Billy West comedies also.

The Standard Film Corporation is one of the largest independent film exchanges in the Middle West, with offices at Chicago, St. Louis, Kansas City, Minneapolis, Omaha and St. Louis. Phil L. Ryan, the sales manager, is at present making a flying visit to the St. Louis office, as an exceptionally strong demand is expected in the territory of that office for the Billy West and the newly-purchased Christie Comedies. He is conferring with "Barney" Fegan, the genial and highly efficient manager who has succeeded J. Erwin Dodson in the St. Louis territory of the Standard.

LOCAL ADVERTISING FOR "THE LUST OF THE AGES.

In connection with the sales work of selling the territory of the Ogden film "The Lust of the Ages," in which Lillian Walker is starred, much attention is being devoted to sales ideas and plans for use among exhibitors. The theory behind this effort is that a picture provided with a sales plan is a picture many times more valuable to its state right owner and to its exhibitor.

So the enterprises which succeed in winning the rights on "The Lust of the Ages" for any given territory will find themselves in a position to let the picture practically sell itself. There will be prepared, in advance, everything that the exhibitor will want to know. There will be given to the exhibitor little stunts of all kinds, which he can use in his lobby, on his billboards, in his local newspapers for both editorial and advertising use. There will be ideas for his magazine, if he prints one, suggestions for envelope stuffing which can be sent out in his weekly mail announcements, and moreover, and perhaps of greater importance, there will be plans suggested for creating a local excitement.

In this connection it is interesting to note that the A. M. Swedy Company, who have been engaged to prepare the advertising for "The Lust of the Ages" is headed by Charles D. Isaacson, who was responsible for the campaign on "The Exploits of Elaine."

WARNER BROTHERS GET MUTT AND JEFF.

The Warner Brothers, who have been closely associated with all branches of the motion picture industry, last week acquired the rights to the new Mutt and Jeff Comedies for New York and northern New Jersey from the Bud Fisher Films Corporation. They announce very successful booking for these comedies already, and predict great popularity for them in the new territory.

Manufacturers' Advance Notes

American Bids for Laboratory Work

Will Develop and Print for the Trade—Offers Ample Facilities.

MANY manufacturers of film will be interested in learning that this week the American Film Company, Inc., announces the opening of its huge laboratories to any in the trade desiring printing and developing work of the highest class. A weekly capacity of more than 1,500,000 feet of film is claimed by the American plant in Chicago and apparatus of the latest type is available now for all who care to make use of it.

The American's productions, released through the the Mutual Film Corporation, have long been notable for their technical perfection. The same staff of experts which supervises the handling of the pictures in which are starred such screen favorites as Mary Miles Minter, Helen Holmes, Gail Kane, Juliette Day, William Russell, Charlie Chaplin and Margarita Fischer will have charge of all the commercial work undertaken for patrons of the American laboratories.

"Times without number we have been begged, implored and entreated by film manufacturers, state rights men, etc., to handle developing and printing for them, but have always had to refuse," said Manager Richard R. Nehls of the American Film Company, Inc., in discussing the matter with an interviewer in his Chicago office. "The increase in our facilities permits us, for the first time, to offer our laboratories to outsiders. Manufacturers who are spending huge sums for famous stars, high salaried directors, noted authors and stage settings that run into thousands of dollars, can now rest assured that the technical work on their productions can be handled by experts with all the care, skill and attention to detail that have made our own attractions notable in the motion picture field.

"Believing that a number of film makers are really seeking technical work of the highest class and will be satisfied with nothing short of that, we have arranged to offer our vast resources in the way of printing and developing to such of the trade as are seeking quality work. American film productions have always been praised for their tinting, toning, printing and developing. They are uniform in quality throughout. Every stage of the work is handled by experts. Ten years of experience is back of every print we turn out today. Our mechanical equipment is unexcelled. Every bit of apparatus in our huge laboratories is of the very best. The films that are offered us for development and printing will be handled by the same corps of experts that handle our own productions—the American features starring such favorites as Mary Miles Minter, Gail Kane, Juliette Day, William Russell, Margarita Fischer and Charlie Chaplin.

"In addition to all the above advantages, the central location of the American Company's plant (Chicago being the hub of the whole country) alone would justify any film manufacturer in placing his developing and printing work with us, purely on account of the saving in time and money in shipping his positive prnts to the exchanges. Hours of time and hundreds of dollars in transportation charges can be saved by printing and developing in Chicago and distributing positive prints from the most central point of the country."

Three Essanays for September

Larger Subjects Will Feature Taylor Holmes, Mary McAlister and Jack Gardner.

TAYLOR HOLMES, the stage star, heads Essanay's schedule of feature releases for September in "Efficiency Edgar's Courtship," released September 3. Little Mary McAlister will follow him in "Pants," and Jack Gardner will complete the month's program of five-part pictures with the fourth of his series of Westerns, entitled "Men of the Desert."

"Efficiency Edgar's Courtship" will mark Taylor Holmes' first appearance as a screen star. His most recent stage production, "His Majesty Bunker Bean," ran an entire season in Chicago, duplicated that success on Broadway, and then toured another season throughout the country. "The Third Party," "The Million" and "The Commuters" were among his previous hits.

Trade showings of the picture are now in progress at all branch offices of the K-E-S-E Service.

"Pants" will be released September 10. The production is the first five-reel picture in which Mary McAlister has been starred. The idea of the story is that it takes something more than wealth to make a child happy.

"Men of the Desert" will be released September 24. Like its predecessors, "Land of Long Shadows," "The Range Boss" and "Open Places," this picture presents a story of the red-blooded West. Mr. Gardner is supported by Ruth King, Carl Stockdale and Essanay's original Western company formed for this series.

NEWARK UNIVERSAL IN NEW OFFICE.

The Newark office of the Universal Film Exchange of New York has moved to 25 Branford place. Here they are in more commodious and convenient headquarters and are in the position to give real service to exhibitors. M. H. Goldstein, formerly manager of the Mutual in Jersey, has been installed as manager.

DOROTHY BENHAM IN NEW WARREN SUBJECT.

Little Dorothy Benham, daughter of Harry Benham, who played one of the leads in Edward Warren's "The Warfare of the Flesh," is an industrious little lady in spite of the fact that she is only five years old on her next birthday. Ever since war was declared she wished to help wherever she could and she has recently turned her energies towards knitting for the "Sammies."

Little Dorothy is playing quite an important role in Mr. Warren's coming production, the title of which has not yet been announced, and when she appeared at the studio the other day she not only brought her knitting with her but she insisted on working on it in her scene, although the scenario didn't exactly call for it. Mr. Warren did not want to discourage the little patriot and as it fitted in right well with her posing for the day he allowed her to continue her knitting. The incident not only adds a touch of novelty to the scene as shown on the screen, but is quite inspiring as well.

Goldwyn Names First Eleven Pictures

Mae Marsh Figures in Five, Maxine Elliott and Madge Kennedy in Two Each.

WHEN Goldwyn Pictures Corporation, almost a year ago, announced its intention of making a large number of costly productions, perhaps as many as a dozen, in advance of its first release the following September, few were willing to believe the new company.

With release of its first picture, "Polly of the Circus," but three weeks distant, Goldwyn announces the definite completion of seven productions, besides two other pictures in course of production and a tenth huge picture, with Mary Garden as the star, to be under way in a fortnight.

Considerably more than one million dollars has thus far been invested in the pictures made or in the making, this amount not being inclusive of any of the cost of distribution overhead or the operation of the Goldwyn branch offices.

Organization has been effected throughout the United States; Goldwyn Pictures Ltd. of Canada is actively operating in the Dominion, and arrangements are virtually completed for prompt operation of Goldwyn organizations in England, Australia, South America and other more distant lands.

To date, and as applied to future extensions, Goldwyn expects to own outright or control its offices in all parts of the world, so that Goldwyn Pictures will not at any time pass out from under the solicitous attention of the factors who produce them in America.

Thus far the completed Goldwyn Pictures are: Mae Marsh in "Polly of the Circus," by Margaret Mayo; Madge Kennedy in "Baby Mine," by Margaret Mayo; Maxine Elliott in "The Eternal Magdalene," by Robert McLaughlin; Jane Cowl in "The Spreading Dawn," by Basil King; Mae Marsh in "Sunshine Alley," by Mary Rider; Maxine Elliott in "Fighting Odds," by Roi Cooper Megrue and Irvin S. Cobb; Mae Marsh in "Fields of Honor," by Irvin S. Cobb.

Pictures now in the making at Goldwyn's New Jersey studios are: Mabel Normand in "Joan of Flatbush," by Porter Emerson Browne; Madge Kennedy in "Nearly Married," by Edgar Selwyn; Mae Marsh in "The Cinderella Man," by Edward Childs Carpenter. And, early in September, Mary Garden, just returning at that time from France, will begin work on "Thais," by Anatole France.

The order on which the productions have been named above is not necessarily the order in which they will be released. The thing of biggest import, perhaps, is the fact that not one penny of exhibitor money has been received or applied to production costs from the day the company was formed down to the present moment, and there will be no alteration of this policy. Goldwyn, from the outset, was, through its owners, prepared to finance itself. In pictures it has been more or less customary to expect the exhibitor through deposits, advances or money paid for franchises to provide producers with the money with which pictures were made. President Goldfish and his associates disapproved of this method from the start.

Next in importance is the Goldwyn policy of distribution and salesmanship which has resulted in the application of real merchandising principles to film renting and distribution.

"A TRIP TO CHINATOWN" (Selig).

"A Trip to Chinatown" is considered one of Charles Hoyt's merriest comedies, and the Selig Polyscope Company promises that not a laugh has been lost in the two-reel Hoyt comedy, "A Trip to Chinatown," released in K-E-S-E on Monday, August 20.

Scene from "A Trip to Chinatown" (Selig).

The comedy has to do with the adventures of a race track tout and policemen, the tout's enemy. Giving wrong tips on the races, the tout seeks the seclusion of a "Chink" laundry, hits the pipe and is immediately transported to the Orient, where he meets a beautiful Oriental princess. And oh, joy! the policeman is discovered to be a slave in the palace.

Then things begin to happen. Seeking revenge on the policeman, the tout persuades the princess to match the slave with a gigantic wrestler, a swordsman and a fierce lion. The slave overcomes them all and wins the admiration of the princess. The tout makes his escape, is pursued, discovered, and—he awakens in the laundry and finds the policeman is again after him!

The all-star comedy cast that has proven so popular in previous Hoyt comedies contribute to the merry action of "A Trip to Chinatown." The players include Amy Leah Dennis, Wm. Fables, James Harris and Fanny Cohen. J. A. Richmond directed the production.

MAE MURRAY BUSY ON INITIAL BLUEBIRD.

Mae Murray and her director, Robert Leonard, are busy at Bluebird's studio in Universal City, Cal., preparing Mr. Leonard's screen version of "Princess Virtue," drawn from Louise Winter's magazine story of the same title. The principal members of Miss Murray's support have been conscripted by Production Manager Henry McRae because of their established reputation for excellent achievements. For Miss Murray's leading man Wheeler Oakman was selected as one of the most popular of the younger leading men of the screen.

Mr. Oakman has built up an enviable reputation for himself during an engagement of more than two years with Kathlyn Williams at the Selig studios. He played the leading juvenile role in Selig's "The Rosary" and "The Spoilers" and was the principal player in "The Ne'er-Do-Well." More recently he has been playing opposite Mabel Normand.

Another well known screen actor who has been engaged to support Miss Murray is Harry Von Meter, who had been with the American company for nearly four years before joining the Bluebird players. Paul Nicholson, Jean Hersholt, Gretchen Lederer, Clarissa Selwin will be others in Miss Murray's support.

EDITH STOREY COMMENCES WORK FOR METRO.

Metro Pictures Corporation has chosen as Edith Storey's first Metro vehicle "The House in the Mist," a novel by Octavus Roy Cohen and J. U. Giesy, authors of "The Matrimaniac" and other successes. A six-reel special production will be made of "The House in the Mist," work on which will begin immediately at the Metro studio, 3 West Sixty-first street, New York, under the direction of Ted Browning.

The role of Carma Carmichael affords Edith Storey boundless opportunities. In "The House in the Mist," in addition to her magnificent acting, Miss Storey will ride, shoot and swim. "The House in the Mist" is frank, out-and-out melodrama—a real mystery story—with a wonderful girl as its heroine.

A notable cast has been chosen to support Miss Storey in her initial Metro production. Bradley Barker will play Jack Carrington, the hero who shares the adventures of the heroine. Harry S. Northrup, Metro's popular "villain," well known on both stage and screen, will have an important role in "The House in the Mist." Another player of importance will be Frank Fisher Bennett, the Francois Leblanc of "The Jury of Fate." James J. Dunne, formerly of Thanhouser, where he was associated with George Foster Platt, will assist Tod Browning in directing "The House in the Mist."

SPLENDID OUTLOOK ON THE COAST.

Reports from Los Angeles, San Francisco and Seattle branches of General Film just to hand give a most promising outlook for motion picture business. Writing from the field, General Sales Manager S. R. Kent, who has been on a tour of inspection, says:

"I find conditions on the West Coast have much improved, and I think that our three offices out here are going to do a corking business in the next ten or twelve months. Also I find many exhibitors are trying to get away from the burden of high prices for over-rated features and are taking up our 'Variety Day' service."

The "Variety Day" service of General Film is the recently suggested idea of reserving one or two days a week for short subjects of feature quality to compose the whole show, instead of headlining a five-reel feature. The plan has been adopted with great enthusiasm by General Film exhibitors in many parts of the country. It seems to be particularly well liked on the Pacific Coast, where it has been longest in vogue. This is hailed as a sign of enduring popularity for the idea.

RUSHING WORK ON "MAGDA."

Clara Kimball Young is working fast on "Magda," her initial production with her own new organization under the management of Harry I. Garson. This haste and long hours is the result of the shift in plans to first produce "The Marionettes," over which a question as to the American rights was brought forth by the Charles Frohman Estate.

Supporting Miss Young is Thomas Holding, who was brought to this country by Hugh Ford, appeared in the Famous Players productions of "The Eternal City" and as leading man for Pauline Fredricks, covering a period of three years. Mr. Holding also played the lead with Jane Grey in "The Fighting Chance," "The Great White Trail," and others of this successful production. Others in the cast are Edmund Fielding, George Merlo, Edward Kimball, Alice Gale, Kitty Baldwin, Maude Ford and Valkyrian, all well known artists.

Emile Chautard, whose successful productions have rapidly brought him to the front as one of the foremost directors in America, is enthusiastic over the results already accomplished.

Mutual Offers Two Features a Week

President John Freuler Announces Schedule Involving $5,250,000 Worth of Pictures a Year to Commence September 3.

FIVE and a quarter of a million dollars worth of feature productions per year will be marketed by the Mutual Film Corporation, according to a policy effective September 3, it is announced from the Chicago offices of John R. Freuler, president of that concern. The Mutual has adopted a policy of "big stars only" for its feature productions, which, beginning in September, will be issued to exhibitors at the rate of two a week. Mr. Freuler also announces the complete schedule for two months of releases at this rate, including:

SEPTEMBER 3.—Mary Miles Minter in "Charity Castle," the first of a new series of Mutual-American productions starring the delightful actress and the first Minter picture under the direction of Lloyd Ingraham, late of Fine Arts.

Edna Goodrich in "Reputation," the first of the series of Mutual star productions, featuring the celebrated stage beauty. "Reputation" is the story of a small town girl who went to the city, met a he-vampire and came back with a Reputation. It was directed by John B. O'Brien.

SEPTEMBER 10.—Gail Kane in "The Specter of Suspicion," the fifth of the series of Mutual-American star productions in which the beautiful and talented Miss Kane plays the leading role. "The Specter of Suspicion" deals with a bride whose family closet is the abiding place of a skeleton and furnishes the basis for a thrilling drama. It was directed by Henry King, who scored such a big success with "Souls in Pawn," Miss Kane's latest photoplay.

Ann Murdock in "Outcast," the first of the Charles Frohman stage successes in motion pictures. Miss Murdock is one of the most famous of American actresses, the product of the school of the celebrated genius of the drama. "Outcast" is a picture adaptation of the Broadway hit. Miss Murdock is supported by an all star cast. The production is the first to be released from the Empire All Star studios.

SEPTEMBER 17.—Juliette Day in "The Rainbow Girl," which is the first of the Mutual-American productions starring the Broadway star, Juliette Day. Miss Day scored her most recent stage success in "Upstairs and Down" and has been at the American-Mutual studios since early in the summer working under the direction of Rollin S. Sturgeon.

Margarita Fischer in "The Girl Who Couldn't Grow Up," the fifth of the series of Pollard-Mutual star productions featuring Margarita Fischer. Miss Fischer has not appeared on the screen since the release of "The Devil's Assistant," early in the spring, closely following the completion of which she was taken ill.

SEPTEMBER 24.—William Russell in "Sands of Sacrifice," a corking five-reel drama starring the heroic Mutual-American star. "Sands of Sacrifice" is the first of a new series of William Russell productions directed as were the pictures of the previous series by Edward S. Sloman.

Julia Sanderson in "The Runaway," the second of the Frohman productions and the first of the series featuring Miss Sanderson. "The Runaway" is the picturization of the stage success of the same title in which Miss Sanderson scored on Broadway. It was produced under the direction of Dell Henderson.

OCTOBER 1.—Mary Miles Minter in "Her Country's Call," the second of her new series of Mutual-American star productions in which Miss Minter carries the role of a patriotic little girl. "Her Country's Call" was directed by Lloyd Ingraham.

Edna Goodrich in "Queen X," the second of the series of productions starring Miss Goodrich. "Queen X" is from the story by Edwin M. Stanton, assistant United States attorney of New York, who conducted a crusade against smugglers and put his experiences into a five-reel photodrama. The picture was directed by John B. O'Brien.

OCTOBER 8.—Gail Kane in "Southern Pride," sixth of the Mutual-American series starring the Broadway favorite, in which she plays the role of a beautiful Southern girl. The production was under the direction of Henry King.

Anita King in "The Girl Angel," first of a new series of Mutual Horkheimer productions starring the popular motion picture star. Miss King has played leading parts in "The Heir to the Hoorah," "Maria Rosa," "The Race" and "Golden Fetters." She has been engaged by the Horkheimer studios to produce a series of star productions for release on the Mutual schedule.

OCTOBER 15.—Juliette Day in "Betty and the Buccaneers," a story of pirates bold, produced at the Mutual-American studios under the direction of Rollin S. Sturgeon. "Betty and the Buccaneers" is Miss Day's second production under the contract for which she deserted Broadway for the camera.

Margarita Fischer in "The Miracle of Life," sixth of the series of productions starring the well-known and popular screen star.

OCTOBER 22.—William Russell in "The Sea Master," the second of the new series of William Russell productions, in which he appears as an entirely new sort of a hero. The picture was directed by Edward S. Sloman, who is responsible for staging the successful series of recent Russell productions.

Ann Murdock in "The Beautiful Adventure," the second of Miss Murdock's productions and the third release of the Charles Frohman stage successes in motion pictures. "The Beautiful Adventure" gives Miss Murdock a role admirably suited to her abilities. It was staged under the direction of Del Henderson.

"This collection of pictures, now complete and ready for delivery to our half a hundred exchanges, represents a year of planning and effort and the most careful consideration of the picture market," observed Mr. Freuler.

"I am convinced that the motion picture theaters will find this fall and winter a particularly prosperous season. The circulation of money is lively and despite high living costs the people who constitute the big majority of motion picture patrons have more money to spend than ever."

THE WEEK'S WORK IN THE FOX STUDIOS.

Gladys Brockwell has just completed "The Soul of Satan," to be released August 20, for the William Fox productions. She will begin another feature shortly under the direction of Bertram Bracken. In the supporing company appear Bertram Grassby, Charles Clary, William Burress, Joseph Swickard, Gerard Alexander, Norbert Myles, Lucille Young, Frankie Lee and Marie Kiernan.

The Foxfilm comedy issued on August 20 will be "A Domestic Hound." Hank Mann is the featured player.

Owing to changes which were imperative in George Walsh's "The Yankee Way" several additions have been made to the cast. The new line-up will consist of Enid Markey, Josef Dowling, Charles Edler, James O'Shea, Edward Sedgwick, Edward Cecil and Tom Wilson.

Part of the cast has also been selected for the first of the series of Standard Pictures in which Jane and Katherine Lee are to appear. Richard Turner, William T. Hays and Robert Vivian have been chosen for leading roles.

Valeska Suratt's newest William Fox feature, on which work was begun a short time since, has been titled "A Rich Man's Plaything." Randolph Lewis wrote the story and Carl Harbaugh is the director.

To make for the increasing comedy output of the organization two more "lots" and stages have been added to the grounds the company already occupies in Hollywood, Cal.

HARRY CAREY IN "STRAIGHT SHOOTING."

Harry Carey, widely known for his vigorous handling of western types, will make his first appearance in a Butterfly production on August 27, when he will be starred in "Straight Shooting," a drama of the cattle country. Molly Malone will be featured in Carey's support.

"Straight Shooting" has been written by George Hively and produced by Jack Ford. It tells the story of the warfare that used to be so common between the cattle barons of the "open range" and the incoming settlers, or "nesters" as they were contemptously called.

"Thunder" Flint, overlord of a vast grazing territory which he holds in defiance of law and order, has sent forth the ukase that all settlers on land that he desires for his steers must vacate without delay or suffer the consequences. Flint is a power in the territory, one that no man has ever dared offend. But when his messenger delivers this ultimatum at the home of "Sweetwater" Sims, leader of the nesters, he meets with an unexpected rebuke from Joan Sims, the fearless daughter of the household.

As a result of this questioning of his authority, Flint has Ted Sims, the girl's brother, shot from ambush, and at about the same time he hunts up "Cheyenne" Harry, a notorious gunman of the plains, to lead an attack upon the nesters which will put them to rout. While the plans for this cowardly attack are maturing, however, Cheyenne meets Joan and her father by accident. Their desperate plight appeals to his latent manhood, and in a denouement which brings all of the range vagabond's better instincts into play, we find his talents for straight shooting and hard riding used to defeat the designs of his former chieftain. Carey has never had a role better suited to his straightforward style of acting.

Important Plans for "O. Henry"

"The Defeat of the City" Opens Four-Reel Series of the Famous Author's Stories.

ALL the curiosity that has been accumulating in regard to General Film's forthcoming O. Henry stories in more elaborate picture form is now to be satisfied. The title and release of the first four-reel O. Henry has been determined. It will be "The Defeat of the City," scheduled for September 1.

Other details of the plan for O. Henry pictures include the information that one four-reel picture is expected to be presented every two weeks, and that a series of at least ten may be expected.

Another bit of welcome news to the trade emanates from General Film in this connection. It is that the two-reel O. Henry pictures will continue, owing to tremendous demand for short-length features of high merit. Confirming hints that have been given already, Western O. Henry stories are being produced. These will be put into the two-reel division, and one of them will alternate every two weeks with a four-reel O. Henry. Many of the O. Henry stories with Western atmosphere were published in his "The Gentle Grafter" series, and for the initial release "The Atavism of John Tom Little Bear" has been chosen, it being one of the favorite Jess Peters adventures.

Three most competent Broadway Star Feature directors are now working to provide the O. Henry pictures for General Film. At the Eastern studio Thos. R. Mills, the first of several clever people to be made famous with O. Henry productions, and who directed over a dozen of the first twenty releases, has finished "The Defeat of the City." Also working at the Eastern studio is Martin Justice, who did "A Departmental Case," "The Coming Out of Maggie" and "The Discounters of Money," three already current two-reel subjects. At the Hollywood studio David Smith is doing the "Jeff Peters" stories and others with a Western setting.

HELEN HOLMES IN NEW MUTUAL SERIAL.

Helen Holmes, fearless daredevil of the screen, in the early chapters of the newest Mutual chapterplay, "The Lost Express," is going to set the nerves of even the most blase and thrill-hardened exhibitor atingle by her utter recklessness, performed with an apparent nonchalance that bids defiance to death.

In one of the earliest chapters of the new mystery serial dealing with the total disappearance of an express train while passing from one station to the next, down a perfectly straight stretch of single track line, Miss Holmes fights a hand-to-hand battle with three men on top of a rapidly moving passenger train. Just as she seems certain to be defeated in her struggle, she escapes by jumping and catching an overhead warning signal such as are placed on either side of low bridges, tunnels, etc., and thus is left dangling in midair while the passenger train bearing her enemies is whisked away from beneath her.

Announcement of the exact release date of the newest Mutual-Signal chapterplay starring Helen Holmes, and directed by J. P. McGowan, will be made within a few days. Exhibitors are already besieging Mutual Exchanges with applications for bookings on this forthcoming Helen Holmes thriller, for past Helen Holmes successes have thoroughly demonstrated the drawing power of this star and the theaters which have "stood 'em out" for night after night with previous serials built about the dare-devil personality of Miss Holmes are anxious to again line up the crowds in front of the box-office.

"THE DEAD LINE" FEATURES BEATRIZ MICHELENA.

In the role of Star Dowell in "The Dead Line," Beatriz Michelena is said to evidence a wider variety of Western accomplishments than shown in any of her previous photodramas of the untamed frontier. Horsemanship, for which she has always been renowned, is, according to studio reports, the very least of her troubles in this latest and most strenuous of her Western productions.

She whirls a revolver around her finger with all the nonchalance of a true cowboy and throws a lasso with undeviating accuracy. When she ropes and "hog-ties" the boastful sheriff that rides into the mountains to arrest her she goes about it in a business-like manner that can leave no doubt as to the genuineness of her Western schooling. The producer is announcing her as the female "Bill" Hart, and predicts that her proficiency in "The Dead Line" will make the original "William" look jealously to his cowboy laurels.

Scene from "The Dead Line."

The picture is being filmed in the Santa Cruz mountains and is scheduled for independent release early this coming fall. William Pike, Albert Morrison, Clarence Arper, Cliff Thompson, Jeff Williams, D. Mitsoras and Katherine Angus are among those who make up the supporting cast. George E. Middleton is the director.

"BETWEEN MAN AND BEAST" (Selig).

"Between Man and Beast," the two-reel jungle drama released by the Selig Company in General Film service on Monday, August 20, was directed by Colin Campbell from the story written by W. E. Wing. One thrilling incident in the drama is the care given a lost baby by a gigantic ape which carries the little one into a tree in search of food and then makes a home for the baby in a cave. Other animals of the jungle also participate in the action of the drama.

"Between Man and Beast" is the tale of the adventures in the heart of the jungle of a young man and his wife and baby. Pursued by a villain who plots their deaths, the little family becomes separated and then it is that the ape cares for the lost child.

Bessie Eyton is starred in the drama and is ably supported by Wheeler Oakman and others. The photography and wild animals' jungle scenes are said to be all that can be desired.

Exhibitors are demanding realistic dramas of the jungle and the Selig Company is releasing a series of jungle pictures in General Film service that are not only produced by the best directors, but also exploit stars whose names bring in the money at the box office.

"HONOR SYSTEM" OPENS IN CHICAGO.

William Fox's stirring cinemelodrama, "The Honor System," which has been playing to capacity in the New York and New Jersey territory, will open its first engagement in the West on Monday, August 20, when it takes the screen at the big Studebaker Theatre in Chicago.

On August 26 this production will be available to exhibitors everywhere. Bookings for it can be made now at the nearest William Fox exchange. As "The Honor System" is a Standard picture, the policy that "You cannot book it until you see it" will apply.

LOEW SIGNS FOR CONQUEST PROGRAMS.

Marcus Loew has signed in behalf of eight New York theaters of his circuit, to show Conquest picture programs produced at the Edison Studios and released through George Kleine's K-E-S-E distributing organization. The theaters selected by Mr. Loew to show these pictures are: The New York Theater, Greeley Square, Lincoln, National, American, Orpheum, Boulevard and Avenue B.

Drama and Comedy in "U" List

President Carl Laemmle Writes Amusing Skit for William Franey—J. Warren Kerrigan Is Starred in Strong Tabloid Drama.

THE Winning Pair," a Gold Seal comedy drama, featuring Ruth Stonehouse and Roy Stewart, heads Universal's regular schedule of releases for August 28th. August 27th is Butterfly Day, as usual, signalized by the releases of "Straight Shooting," in which Harry Carey is starred. Eugene B. Lewis as author and L. W. Chaudet as director are responsible for the "Winning Pair." The story details the adventures of Jack Croft and Beatrice Moore, son and daughter, respectively, of two gouty and grouchy shoe manufacturers, formerly business partners, but now bitter enemies, following some trivial difference in which neither would admit himself at fault. There are many amusing turns to the story which move at a rapid pace.

Eddie Lyons and Lee Moran will also be seen on the same date in a Nestor comedy entitled "The Night Cap." This rib-tickler was written by Virginia Kirtley, who has recently become the bride of Eddie Lyons in real life. It details the unusual consequence following the night "at the lodge," when Eddie and his pal return home to find that the former's wife has gone out for an evening's entertainment with her mother. The boys are forced to break into the house, but are mistaken for burglars by an over-zealous policeman. Having finally cleared themselves to retire to bed only to find themselves in a still worse predicament. Roy Clements directed the production.

"Props, Drops and Flops," a two-reel L-Ko comedy, will be the offering for Wednesday, August 29th. This riotous sketch of life behind the scenes in a burlesque theater will add to the prestige of Neal Smith and J. G. Blystone as director and supervisor, respectively. In this unreal domain behind the footlights the head property man reigns an absolute monarch over the destinies of manager, artists, stage director and other workers of humbler sphere. When the assistant property man rebels chaos reigns until the fire department finally comes to the rescue with a watery but effective solution. The 87th issue of the Animated Weekly will be released on the same date.

J. Warren Kerrigan is the star of "Hand in the Dark," the feature scheduled for release Thursday, August 30. This tabloid thriller was written by E. M. McCall and William Parker and was personally directed by Henry McRae, production manager at Universal City. Kerrigan is supported by Edith Johnson. The story has to do with a young man who is in love with the daughter of an immensely wealthy miser. When the father is mysteriously murdered circumstantial evidence makes it apparent that Kerrigan is the author of the crime.

The manner in which the girl in the case solves the mystery of her father's death, incidentally saving her lover's life, adds several unusual thrills to a well acted and adequately directed production. William Franey will be seen on the same day in a Joker comedy, entitled "Why They Left Home." This clever burlesque was written by Carl Laemmle during a recent visit to Universal City at Franey's special request, and bears witness to Mr. Laemmle's versatility. It is a caricature of life behind the scenes in a theater, and depicts the events that take place during the production of a melodrama with the rather significant title, "The Salary of Sin." Franey is capably suppressed by Lillian Peacock and Milburn Meranti. W. W. Beaudine is credited with the direction.

"Scandal Everywhere," featuring Max Asher and Gladys Tennyson, bears the date of Friday, August 31st. A Victor comedy, written by R. A. Dillon and produced by Craig Hutchinson in this production shows in a realistic manner the dire fate that overtakes a trifler with more susceptibility than discretion. The 34th issue of the Screen Magazine released simultaneously with the Asher Comedy will contain many timely subjects, including picture of the new food conservation work for the Government.

On Saturday, September 1, Eileen Sedgwick and Fred Church will be featured in a two-reel Bison, entitled "Jungle Treachery," written and produced by W. B. Pearson and Rex Hodge. An unusually gripping story in an exploring expedition in Africa, this production has been widely heralded as a thriller with several wild animal scenes of great novelty. Gale Henry and Milton Sims will also be seen in a Joker Comedy known as "Busting Into Society," written by Tom Gibson and directed by Allen Curtis. The 16th issue of Current Events will make the third release for the day, bringing a week to a close with up-to-the-minute scenes of important happenings in the world of work and play.

NO RAGGED CLOTHES IN NEW FREDERICK PICTURE.

From the part of a scrubwoman, toiling with mop and brush in a seven-story office building to the young wife of a successful husband, playing about in Long Island summer society, Pauline Frederick makes a big jump from her last Paramount picture, "The Love that Lives," to her newest one, "Double Crossed," recently completed and scheduled for release in September. In "Doubled Crossed" Miss Frederick as Eleanor Stratton, beautiful young society matron, much in love with her young broker-husband, has a chance to display her beauty and charm, as well as some wonderful gowns and jewels. Miss Frederick will be supported by Crawford Kent, of recent musical comedy fame, as a new leading man. Others in the cast include William Riley Hatch, Clarence Handysides, Harris Gordon and Joseph Smiley.

"PANTS" (Essanay).

Jealousy has no place in the make-up of Little Mary McAlister, Essanay's juvenile star, who is soon to be seen in a five-reel feature of her own entitled "Pants." At a private showing of this feature recently she was an interested spectator, closely scrutinizing every scene regardless of whether she appeared in it or not.

At the finish when asked how she liked herself in it she said,

Scene from "Pants" (Essanay).

"Oh, I think I did pretty good in some parts, but wasn't my leading man just grand?"

She had reference to a boy about ten years of age who recently applied at the studio and stated so persistently that he felt he would make good if given a chance that he was finally cast for a part in "Pants." His work proved a surprise to everyone except Director Berthelet, who stated after the day that he considered the youngster a perfect foil for the little leading lady.

The combination of these two forms such an appealing team that in all probability they will work opposite each other in several of Mary's future photoplays.

MISS MINTER IN "CHARITY CASTLE."

Truly a sparkling production is "Charity Castle," the American Film publication of September 3. Of delicate texture, beautiful settings, tasteful appointments, rich in good humor, this first of Mary Miles Minter's productions under her new contract and directorship of Lloyd Ingraham, is offered by Samuel S. Hutchinson as something out of the ordinary even in high-standard American enfilments.

The story is by C. Doty Hobart; the screen adaptation by Doris Schroeder. In a word the plot may be stated as: How a happy little girl sets a certain little world aright after it had all but dried up through chronic grouchiness. As Charity, Miss Minter appears in a role different from any before given her—a combination role—that of an orphan, ward of a rich young spendthrift who knows the joys of living, and general peacemaker in aristocratic misunderstandings. That she is delightfully successful is the verdict of all the judges who have had previews.

In her spare time, Charity spins fairy yarns to the Prince, the four-year-old she has adopted. Clifford Callis, an endearing babe, plays the latter role.

Alan Forrest is cast as Miss Minter's chief support, the "goldcoast" youth who becomes her champion through the lure of fairyland. He is subsequently disinherited by his rich father and remains persona non grata until Charity redeems him.

Spottiswoode Aitken, the eminent character actor, is assigned an important part in the production, while Henry A. Barrows plays the grouchy millionaire.

Other members of the cast are Eugenie Forde, Aston Dearholt, Robert Klein, George Ahern and Gordon Russell.

WALLACE REID IN ROMANCE OF WAR.

War is the theme for "The Hostage," Wallace Reid's starring vehicle to be released by Paramount in September. Beulah Marie Dix, who wrote the internationally famous war sketch "Molloch," has again taken the war note as her subject and woven into a thrilling story a romance that is said to suit Reid especially well.

Reid is admirably suited for the part of the young lieutenant. His physical prowess and good looks are said to stand him in good stead in a most exacting role. Dorothea Abril in the part of Nathalia is Mr. Reid's new leading woman. She is one of the cleverest of the Paramount ingenues and her splendid work in "The Little American" with Mary Pickford is a matter of recent remembrance. In the cast supporting Mr. Reid are C. H. Geldert, Guy Oliver, Noah Beery, Gertrude Short and others.

H. H. Cudmore in New York

Is Introducing the Sheck Invention—An Improved Mazda Lamp for Theaters.

H. H. CUDMORE of Cleveland, Ohio, well known in electrical circles through his connection with the Mazda Lamp Industries and recently made general manager of the Argus Lamp & Supply Company of Cleveland, will be in New York this week to personally superintend the installation of the New Sheck Adapters, by which motion pictures may be projected with Mazda incandescent lamps, in several of the larger motion picture theaters in the city. Motion picture people throughout the country are keenly interested in the practical demonstrations of the new Sheck Adapters, for they promise to revolutionize the motion picture business from the exhibitor's standpoint.

H. H. Cudmore.

The new appliance which Mr. Cudmore will personally introduce in New York is the invention of Oscar M. Sheck of Cleveland, one of the best-known electrical engineers in the country. By his invention it is possible to use the Mazda incandescent lamps with the ordinary equipment in any motion picture theater.

In discussing the merits of the Sheck invention with a number of electrical engineers who visited the Argus Company's plant in Cleveland recently, Mr. Cudmore said he was confident that the new device was the most important step that had been taken ahead in the motion picture business in a number of years.

"We are of the opinion," said Mr. Cudmore, "that the development of this new Mazda lamp and the co-incident invention of the Sheck Universal Adapter will revolutionize the entire field of motion picture projection. We have had lamps running in theaters for more than a year, and the proprietors of these theaters are enthusiastic over them.

"We claim that we give better screen illumination; that we do not tire the eyes; that we entirely eliminate flicker on the screen, and that we materially lower the cost of projection. One item of greatest importance is the fact that the new lamp method of projection does away with all the poisonous gases in the projection booth which have been proven so injurious to the health of operators."

The New York theaters where the new projection method will be demonstrated will be announced later, and the entire motion picture trade invited to see for themselves just what the lamps can and will do.

STRONG K-E-S-E PROGRAM FOR SEPTEMBER.

Kleine-Edison-Selig-Essanay program for September looks unusually attractive and was arranged, K-E-S-E's Publicity Department states, with a view of giving exhibitors every opportunity to "make good" with their patrons with the inauguration of their fall and early winter campaign.

"Efficiency Edgar's Courtship," released September 3, produced by Essanay, featuring their newest star, Taylor Holmes, who is credited with several big hits on the speaking stage, is the first September K-E-S-E release.

This will be following September 10 by another Essanay feature, "Pants," presenting fascinating little Mary McAlister, as star. "Pants" was written especially for this little girl who is scoring such decided success in the Essanay series, "Do Children Count?"

Mr. Kleine will announce the name of the K-E-S-E September 17 release in a few days and promises that it will be an exceptionally strong production.

"Men of the Desert," featuring Jack Gardner, an Essanay production, will be presented September 24.

LONGACRE DISTRIBUTING CHANGE OFFICES.

The Longacre Distributing Company, distributors for Alice Howell Comedies, has moved from the seventh to the fourth floor of the Mecca building. On August 20 the big subway and elevated station advertising campaign goes into effect. Mr. Kelly, the sales manager, feels that this campaign will go a long way toward gaining the popularity that Alice Howell Comedies are worthy of.

COMING FOX FEATURES.

Forthcoming Fox features include "Every Girl's Dream," a picturesque romance of old Holland with June Caprice in the stellar role. This will be released on August 27, and in it Harry Hilliard appears opposite Miss Caprice. This is the dainty Fox star's first production under the direction of Harry Millarde. In addition to Mr. Hilliard Miss Caprice's support includes Kittens Reichert, Margaret Fielding, Marcia Harris, and Dan Mason.

On September 9 Mr. Fox will release the latest Virginia Pearson picture. This is "When False Tongues Speak," a gripping story by George Scarborough, known to every playgoer as the author of "The Lure," "At Bay," and other stage successes. In it Miss Pearson is said to have abundant opportunity for the exercise of those artistic abilities with which she is so highly endowed. In addition to an unusual and thrilling story, and a star of first magnitude for its interpretation, "When False Tongues Speak" was directed by Carl Harbaugh, which, in itself, is a guarantee of excellence. And Miss Pearson is supported by an admirable cast. This includes Mr. Harbaugh, Hardee Kirkland, Claire Whitney, Carl Eckstrom and William E. Meehan, famous as the comic crook in "Turn to the Right," and who portrays another crook in "When False Tongues Speak."

GRAND OPERA STAGED IN "THE LUST OF THE AGES."

The Ogden Pictures Corporation's initial release, "The Lust of the Ages," contains almost every element that enters into an extraordinary attraction; extraordinary photographic effects and camera work, dramatic scenes, light comedy, heart interest and pathos, and even grand opera is portrayed. One and a half acts of the opera "Faust" is portrayed in the production, and Harry Revier, the director, was fortunate in securing the entire troupe of an Italian Repertoire company, then playing a short engagement at Ogden. The entire troupe was transported to the studios of the Ogden Pictures Corporation, together with that company's scenery and orchestra, and one act and a half of the opera "Faust" was photographed. This practical working out of another problem saved a tremendous amount of time and expense in rehearsals and completing the scenery necessary to be used in the scenes. It is this fidelity to details that is one of the marked characteristics of "The Lust of the Ages," and no subterfuge was resorted to to substitute the sham for the real.

"REPUTATION," EDNA GOODRICH'S FIRST MUTUAL PICTURE.

Edna Goodrich, famous beauty of the stage, will return to the screen September 3 in "Reputation," the first of her series of star productions for Mutual. Miss Goodrich has been at work for months on the series of photodramas which she is making under her contract with John R. Freuler, president of the Mutual Film Corporation. The first of the series was finished some months ago, but it was decided that the third must be well under way before the date of the first release was announced.

In the meantime great interest has been aroused in the forthcoming Goodrich pictures. In addition to "Reputation," "Queen X" has been completed and "A Daughter of Maryland" is so far under way that it will be finished before "Reputation's" release.

Scene from "Reputation" (Mutual).

The fourth of the series will be "American Maid," preparations for the production of which are already started. Miss Goodrich will be directed in "American Maid" by Albert Capellani, the noted stage manager who has but recently come into the Mutual organization.

Miss Goodrich is as well known as any woman who has appeared on the American stage in the last ten years. She is celebrated in America and Europe as a beauty. She is one of the wealthiest women of the stage and is commonly acknowledged to have been the highest salaried showgirl who ever appeared on Broadway.

Stage Plays in Pictures

Brady Says "Stage Hits" Make Most Enduring Screen Successes and Offers Some.

THE history of motion picture success," said William A. Brady, director general of World-Pictures Brady-made, that the biggest and most enduring hits are screen adaptations of stories which have been highly favored by the public in the speaking theater. This applies not alone to program features but to special price pictures, and the fact accounts for the oral theater. Between Sept. 17 and Oct. 15 we shall publish rights to stage plays.

"The World corporation has been exceptionally fortunate in acquiring these productions heretofore, and they have invariably turned out so very well as to more than justify our faith in them, going to show that there is little, if any, difference between the tastes of moving picture audiences and those that assemble in the 'regular' playhouse.

"All this is preliminary to the announcement that World Pictures will immediately present an altogether remarkable series of screen versions of dramas which have enjoyed big careers in the oral theater. Between Sept. 17 and Oct. 15 we shall publish no less than four such productions, and I desire to invite the closest of scrutiny as to their quality.

"The first of this series is 'Betsy Rose,' the title role of which is acted by Alice Brady. This story by H. A. Du Souchet, author of 'My Friend from India,' not alone had a notable stage career, but was widely circulated in book form. It carries a strong dramatic plot and faithfully reproduces certain events of importance in the history of our country.

"The second of the quartette is 'The Corner Grocery,' in which Madge Evans is featured with Lew Fields. The original of this comedy with serious touches was produced by Adolph Philipp in New York, where it had a record-breaking run, although under the disadvantage of being interpreted in a foreign tongue.

"Third in the set is 'Shall We Forgive Her,' the central personages of which are assumed by June Elvidge and Arthur Ashley, with John Bowers playing an important part. The stage version of 'Shall We Forgive Her' was written by Frank Harvey, a very well known contributor to the literature of the theater, and it has been played repeatedly throughout the country.

"Finally comes 'The Burglar' with Carlyle Blackwell, Evelyn Greeley and Madge Evans at the head of a particularly effective company. The story first appeared as a novel from the pen of Frances Hodgson Burnett, who was also the writer of 'Little Lord Fauntleroy.' It was made into a drama by Augustus Thomas, and quite possibly contributed more to the popularity of that justly famous author than any of his other plays.

"The qualities which made 'The Burglar' one of the very greatest successes in the history of the American stage have been fully preserved, and perhaps emphasized, in its transference to the screen. Certainly it never was played better than by Mr. Blackwell, Miss Greeley, little Madge Evans and the other members of the silent cast.

"I am willing to let my judgment of values stand or fall upon the assertion that 'The Burglar' is the best picture play in five reels that ever was published.

"Indeed, I will go further and donate ten thousand dollars from my personal funds to the Red Cross if within a space equal to that consumed in the production of these four World Pictures the same number of special price pictures of as good quality have been made—the decision to rest with a jury of exhibitors. This is a challenge for a comparison between regular World program fair price features of five reels each and an equal number of special price pictures no matter how long or pretentious."

SELIG PRODUCING "THE STILL ALARM."

"The Still Alarm," that sterling melodrama, known to thousands of theatergoers of the past decade, will be produced on a lavish scale at the Selig studios, Los Angeles, under the direction of Colin Campbell. Always a play of spectacular appeal on the legitimate stage, it will prove much more so in the screen version, where effects not possible to producee on the stage will be shown in realistic vividness. This is one of the few successful stage plays that lends itself admirably to picturization, having a splendid plot and allowing much of the action to center about thrilling fire runs and other spectacular effects. The cast, which is a large one, will be headed by Thomas Santschi, Bessie Eyton and Fritzi Brunette. Whole streets of substantial-looking buildings are being erected on the Selig lot for the forthcoming production for the sole purpose of being burned down.

RELEASE OF "RED ACE" AND "GRAY GHOST."

Owing to the great demand for serials in the fall the Universal Film Exchange of New York has decided to release the "Red Ace" and "Gray Ghost" in close proximity to each other.

On August 27 the "Red Ace," starring Marie Walcamp, will be available to exhibitors, while the "Gray Ghost," starring Eddie Polo, will be open for bookings on September 17.

An advance showing on the "Red Ace" has been arranged for Monday, 11 a. m., at the Broadway theater. Universal announces that while Marie Walcamp did some very clever work in the famous serial "Liberty," in the "Red Ace" she surpasses all past efforts.

BRENON FINDS ACTOR TO PLAY KERENSKY.

Up in Yonkers there lives a young man named W. Francis Chapin who has been acting in pictures and plays in a small way for some time, but now is in a fair way to become famous. Herbert Brenon is finishing his feature "The Fall of the Romanoffs," which as the title indicates is an authentic version of the recent Russian Revolution interwoven with a charming romance and story of adventure and action. All of the central figures in the present Russian situation necessarily play parts in "The Fall of the Romanoffs," for the picture scenario is by such famous writers as the Czar, Czarina, Rasputin, Grand Duke Nicholas, Iliodor, Prince Felix and the other real characters who figure either in the Revolution or the events leading up to it.

The outstanding figure of the Russian Revolution, the one character whose prominence demanded an equal position in the picture was the new-found "Man of Iron," premier and military dictator, Alexander Kerensky, the absolute one man force holding the myriad of puzzled factions in Russia together. For weeks Brenon employes sought the actor for this role. Agencies have been combed and players by the score have been examined and rejected by the Brenon Studio, since the director insisted upon an exact double of "The Man of Iron." Finally the right actor was found—his name is W. Francis Chapin. He is not a Russian, but his resemblance to Kerensky is so startling that "The Man of Iron" seems to have stepped from the Sunday photogravure sections right to the Brenon screen. Mr. Chapin has been posing before the Brenon camera for the past week and with the taking of his scenes the big feature will be ready for assembling.

MACK SENNETT BEAUTIES WILL BE IN FRONT.

Mack Sennett's first Paramount comedies to be released the latter part of September will feature all the famous Sennett comedians and beauties—they call the bathing suit girls "Sennetts" out on the Pacific coast. The casts give slight idea of what to expect. In "Roping Her Romeo," Polly Moran plays a girl sheriff, Ben Turpin a wealthy waiter, Slim Summerville a gambler, and Ethel Tearle a girl from the city. Fred Fishback is directing.

In "A Bedroom Blunder" Charley Murray plays a "good natured husband who likes to flirt with the girls." The girls in the case are some more Sennetts whose bathing suits add a touch of interest for the tired business man. Mary Thurman, also with some remarkable attractive costumes, plays a "young wife who loses her necklace." Wayland Trask plays her simple husband and Eva Thatcher plays Murray's equally simple wife. Eddie Cline is doing the directing.

"The Pullman Bride" features Gloria Swanson as "the girl in the case," a beach maiden of imposing and impressing beauty. Mack Swain as a "waiter posing as a man of wealth," and Chester Conklin as an adventurer. Clarence Badger is the director.

"THE CINDERELLA MAN" FOR MAE MARSH.

Goldwyn has purchased from Oliver Morosco and Edward Childs Carpenter, the author, the famous all-season New York success, "The Cinderella Man," and without any loss of time whatever Mae Marsh began work before the camera in this production this week.

The director of this production is George Loane Tucker, the successful English director, whose recent film productions under his own auspices have attracted widespread attention in the industry. Mr. Tucker's affiliation with the Goldwyn directorial forces has been impending for a long time, and his work with Mae Marsh may be expected to add still further to his reputation.

Triangle-Keystones of All Variety

Human Interest Comedies as Well as Slapstick Will Be Offered With Well-known Keystone Players for September Release.

THE Keystone plant is the busiest picture foundry in California at the present moment, more than twelve companies being engaged in turning out comedies for the Triangle company. An innovation in this famous brand of entertainment is promised in a series of comedies to be made by Director Henry Kernan and Jay Dwiggins, the veteran character comedian.

Dwiggins has been prominent in Keystones for a year and was for some time associated with the late John Bunny. He will write all his own stories and appear in the leading roles. The series will be devoid of the slapstick stunts which characterize most of the comedies. They will present human interest stories of a comic nature, described by Dwiggins as "lessons in how to enjoy living at the age of fifty." Caroline Rankin, the straw-figured Keystoner, will be the leading woman in these productions.

Other comedies now in the course of production will present the old-time riotous sort of entertainment which has become the steady diet of picture fans. Director Robert Kerr has just completed one of this type with Bob Milliken, Fritz Schade, Claire Anderson, Jack Henderson and little Joey Jacobs, and is ready to start another with the same cast.

Aileen Allen, the diving nymph, who captured another medal for high diving at championship contest held at Ocean Park, California, will be featured in several aquatic stunts with the famous Keystone bathing girls in forthcoming releases.

The first September Keystone release is "A Shanghaied Jonah," presenting Billy Armstrong, Maude Wayne and Guy Woodward as the chief fun-makers.

Louise Fazenda, Charlie Murray and Slim Summerville head the company of "His Precious Life," scheduled for September 9.

The Keystone beauties will be out in force with the release of "Hula Hula Land" on September 16. Billy Armstrong, Maude Wayne and Guy Woodward are the featured players.

"The Late Lamented" is the lugubrious title of the September 23d issue, Mary Thurman, George Binns and Claire Anderson acting as the chief mourners.

A production built along the lines of "Oriental Love" is listed for the week of September 20. It bears the title of "The Sultan's Wife" and presents Bobby Vernon, Gloria Swanson and Joseph Callahan in an Oriental laugh mixture.

INITIAL ELSIE FERGUSON SUBJECT FINISHED.

With the completion of the big Algerian street scenes for Elsie Ferguson's initial picture, "Barbary Sheep," early last week, the production of this super-photoplay drew to a close at the Famous Players-Lasky studio in Fort Lee. For practically two months work on this gigantic production has been in progress under the direction of Maurice Tourneur and it is announced that the film is the most elaborate ever staged at this studio in New Jersey.

Advance reports indicate that Elsie Ferguson will score an immediate triumph as a photoplay star. One of the most beautiful women of the speaking stage, she has always been identified with the true dramatic art such as evidenced in her many famous stage characterizations. Her rare personal charm is faithfully reproduced by the camera, it is announced, and that her popularity of stageland will more than be duplicated on the screen is readily anticipated. Supporting her is an exceptional cast, including Lumsden Hare, Pedro de Cordoba, Macy Harlem, Alex Shannon, Maude Ford and many other talented artists of the cinema.

SELIG'S "A TRIP TO CHINATOWN."

Monday, August 20, is the release date in K-E-S-E for "A Trip to Chinatown," the merry comedy written by Charles Hoyt and presented by the Selig Polyscope company. The comedy cast includes Amy Leah Dennis, Wm. Fables, Charles Harris, with J. A. Richmond the director in charge.

The story of Hoyt's "A Trip to Chinatown" is one full of fun. A follower of the race track touts the wrong horse to the visitors. He is chased out of the betting ring by a policeman.

The tout is penniless and finally seeks comfort in a Chink's laundry, where he sniffs a narcotic and falls asleep and dreams. He dreams that he is transported to a palace where he meets a beautiful princess. Granted a personal slave, he recognizes in that attendant the policeman who chased him out of the betting ring. He thirsts for revenge.

First there comes a gigantic wrestler, who, after a fierce match, is overcome by the slave. A swordsman is produced. A brief but sharp engagement, and again the slave proves the victor. A potion causes the slave to fall in love with the old maid attendant, who really wishes the race course tout to attend her.

And then the slave is thrown to the lion, but makes the lion eat out of his hand. The bravery of the slave wins the love of the Princess, and the tout escapes just in time to awaken in the "Chink's" laundry and to be thrown out by the Chinaman. He falls right into the arms of the policeman and is jailed.

There are said to be a succession of clever situations and funny episodes, while the photography is all that can be desired.

"THE WAR AND THE WOMAN" (Pathe).

In "The War and the Woman" Thanhouser has contributed to the Pathe program a picture that is beyond all question the best that Florence La Badie has ever starred in—a picture that is justly entitled to the much abused word "big." It will be released as a five-part Gold Rooster play the week of September 16. Ernest Warde, son of Frederick Warde, the famous actor, not only directed the feature, but plays in it an important role so capably that his honors are even as actor and director.

"The War and the Woman" is a timely story, dealing, as it does, with a girl who, despite her alien parentage, is a true blue American. Her stepfather is suspected by the Secret Service of being a spy.

For intensity of dramatic action, for excellent acting, for artistically staged production, this picture is sure to be highly praised. Exhibitors showing Pathe Gold Rooster plays may be certain that their audiences will be highly pleased with it. It will undoubtedly play many "repeats."

"THE SPREADING DAWN" JUST COMPLETED.

After nearly three months of most exacting effort through the very hottest season of the year, Jane Cowl finally has emerged, tired but triumphant, from her first screen production for Goldwyn Pictures. Her vehicle, "The Spreading Dawn," from the story by Basil King, author of "The Inner Shrine," has just been completed at Goldwyn's Fort Lee studios.

For this picture Miss Cowl has been surrounded by an excellent cast, very largely of her own selection. It comprises players of note who have achieved success with her in some of her notable plays such as "Within the Law" and "Common Clay." Orme Caldara was engaged for Miss Cowl to play the leading male role opposite to her as in the two plays mentioned. In addition there are Henry Stephenson, Charles Hammond, Edith McAlpin, Lettie Ford, Marion Knapp and Antoinette Erwin in the cast.

CHANGES IN UNIVERSAL SCHEDULE.

Universal announces changes in its weekly schedule of releases which are designed to strengthen the list and meet the demands of a majority of exhibitors.

The Powers' cartoon that has been released on Saturdays will be withdrawn, and a two-reel Bison will be released regularly in its place. The plan of releasing a three-reel Bison on alternate Tuesdays will also be discontinued. All three-reelers shown on Tuesday hereafter will be of the Gold Seal brand. Victor comedies will be made in single reels instead of double-reel lengths, as heretofore. They will continue to be released on Friday, together with the Universal Screen Magazine.

These changes will be put into effect beginning the week of August 27.

GARSON ORGANIZES COMEDY COMPANY.

The Fun-Art Film Company has been organized by Harry I. Garson, who is also personal manager for Clara Kimball Young, to produce a series of two-reel pictures. Mr. Garson has signed a contract for five years with the well known and youthful vaudeville team of Ray and Gordon Dooley. These comedies will be known as the "Dooley series" and it is Mr. Garson's belief that he has a real find in his team of clever artists, who are nineteen and twenty years of age, respectively. The first release will be sometime in September.

Paramount Announces September Releases

Exceptional List of Stars and Authors Selected for Second Month of Star Series Distribution.

WITH the announcement of its September releases Paramount establishes more firmly than ever its determination to improve the quality of production and to place before the exhibitor under its new Star Series selective booking system an even higher grade of photoplay than that upon which it has established its reputation in the motion picture field.

For September there will be seven Paramount pictures starring Marguerite Clark, Pauline Frederick, Fannie Ward, Julian Eltinge, Mme. Petrova and George Beban. Among the authors of the August Paramount releases there appeared such international celebrities as Sir Arthur Wing Pinero, Owen Johnson, Wallace Irwin and George Broadhurst. The authors of the September productions are equally prominent, Gelett Burgess, Mary Roberts Rinehart, Charles Kenyon, Carolyn Wells, Beulah Marie Dix, Dolf Wyllard and Hector Turnbull being among those who contribute the basic stories for the month's selections.

September will mark the advent of Mary Roberts Rinehart upon the screen as an author, the adaptation of the first of her celebrated "Sub-Deb" stories, starring Marguerite Clark, being scheduled for release in the latter part of the month. This production will be called "Bab's Burglar," and the titles of the others in the series will be announced later.

The first production for the month will be George Beban in "Lost in Transit," which was written for Mr. Beban by Kathlyn Williams, the well known photoplay star. Wallace Reid follows Mr. Beban in "The Hostage," a timely story written by Beulah Marie Dix, well known playwright and author of "Molloch."

Charles Kenyon, whose "Kindling" made him world famous as a dramatic author and who has already written successful productions for Paramount, is the author of "On the Level," in which Fannie Ward will appear. Pauline Frederick, leaving her rags and tatters far afield, appears as a society belle in a powerful drama written especially for her by Hector Turnbull. It is called "Double Crossed," and has to do with political intrigue in high circles.

The next production in the list is "Exile," written by a poet and artist of literature, Dolf Wyllard. This is a story of the Far East starring Madame Petrova, which has been staged in an extremely comprehensive and absorbingly interesting manner by Maurice Tourneur. Gelett Burgess and Carolyn Walls furnished the literary inspiration for Julian Eltinge's first screen appearance. This, "The Countess Charming," written especially by these two celebrated authors in collaboration for Mr. Eltinge, is of course designed to give full scope to the remarkable dual personality of Mr. Eltinge which arises from his ability as a feminine impersonator.

As has already been stated, the seventh production to be listed for the month is Marguerite Clark in "Bab's Burglar," the first of the Mary Roberts Rinehart "Sub-Deb" stories.

Dwan Favors Timely Topics

Triangle Director Believes in Subjects Dealing With Current Life of American People.

ALLAN DWAN, who supervises all Triangle productions made in the east, is gradually putting into operation a distinct policy of picture making, which he correlates with the editorial policy of the Saturday Evening Post insofar as he aims to specialize in pictures treating of timely issues touching on the every day life of American people.

As indicative of his general policy of production, "The Food Gamblers," recently issued, is a striking example. It is entertainment that treats constructively of a national evil, and one which is receiving the attention not only of one class of people, but virtually every family in America. "A Successful Failure," "The Man Who Made Good" and "American, That's All," all treat of some particular phase of business life as faced by young America. "Grafters," which is scheduled for the August 26 program, is an amusing arraignment of the idle youth who believes he knows all the tricks of business.

Dwan does not take up masculine problems exclusively, as demonstrated by the announcement that "The Man Hater," the Saturday Evening Post story by Mary Brecht Pulver, is shortly to make its appearance in picture form with Winifred Allen in the leading role. It presents an entertaining study of feminine psychology.

Another Saturday Evening Post story now in the course of production is "Cassidy," by Larry Evans. Dick Rosson will appear as the boy of the streets to whom the author says, "There's many a man with God's own soul who never had a chance." Larry Evans in this story has depicted as vividly the squalid phase of New York life as did Dickens that of his London.

"The Haunted House," which will be released in September with Winifred Allen in the leading role, presents a picture of striking contrast to that of "Cassidy." The locale is a little New England village where bigotry and false prejudices still find root. Miss Allen appears as the housekeeper for a sullen, reticent uncle who works for the railroad.

A number of other plays are being put into production at this studio, situated on the old Clara Morris estate near the Hudson, and all of them are said to have subjects of actual news value.

Triangle Divides Exchange Work

One Branch to Have Charge of Sale and Release of Program Productions; Other to Handle Paralta Plays and Hart-Fairbanks Series.

DUE to the volume of increased business, the New York exchange of the Triangle Distributing Corporation has announced that hereafter the exchange will be divided into two separate departments, one having charge of the sale and release of productions appearing on the Triangle program and the other to handle special productions. The former will be known as the Program Department, and the latter as the Series Department.

The Series Department will have charge of all Paralta releases, and also the Fairbanks and Hart reissues, which are to be released September 2 and 16 respectively. Entirely distinct sales and service representatives will be located in each department, devoting their time exclusively to the special work of the respective branches. It had originally been planned to keep the exchange as one office, handling both the program and the specials from there, but the volume of business already undertaken made this arrangement impossible.

"THE CITY OF PURPLE DREAMS" (SELIG).

"The City of Purple Dreams" is the latest of Selig film features to arrive in Chicago from the Pacific coast. The drama is a faithful version of the book of the same name. Colin Campbell was the director in charge and Gilson Willets wrote the scenario. Some of the features of the film drama as described by those who have seen the play are said to include a succession of wonderful lighting effects, including a bird's eye view of Chicago after nightfall; a succession of elaborate interiors of a millionaire's home; th night at the opera and other effective details.

The plot of "The City of Purple Dreams" is laid in Chicago and many familiar scenes in the Windy City are presented. The players include Thomas Santschi, Fritzi Brunette, Frank Clark, Bessie Eyton, A D. Sears, Eugenie Besserer, Cecil Holland, Harry Lonsdale, and others. The continuity of the story is said to be all that could be hoped for and the acting clever in every detail.

Colin Campbell staged "The City of Purple Dreams."

EFFICIENCY VIA EXPRESS.

In the 82d release of Paramount-Bray Pictograph, the "magazine on the screen," the subject, "Efficiency by Express," is a graphic story of the development and operation of one of the most important industries of this country. The Bray Studios, Inc., producers of this release, were privileged to have the co-operation of the greatest of all express companies, and many of the scenes were taken in the busiest express office in the world, where thousands of express shipments pour through daily, and where efficiency of the highest order is needed to keep the influx and outflow of parcels on the move.

VICTOR MOORE IN "EGGED ON."

Victor Moore releases August 20 his latest comedy by Lois Zellner, called "Egged On." Vic. is entrusted with a gunpowder formula, which has been put into egg shells to take to the American munition manufacturers. It is supposed to be the most deadly weapon of its kind invented, so in order that nothing should happen to the eggs, Vic. puts them in a hand-bag, which he keeps close to his side.

On arrival in the States he loses the bag and his wallet full of money. He is unable to cable home, so he takes a job for five dollars as a sandwich man, advertising a clothing concern, to enable him to cable home for money. He is met by other sandwich men, who insist that he show his Union card, which he cannot, so they make him join the union. This costs him five dollars, and he is left flat again. Other misadventures overtake him. This farce is in line with the best pictures Moore has made.

Bluebird Features

Shifting of Stars and Directors Necessitates Change in Schedule.

WITH the prospect of a general shifting around of stars and directors in the Bluebird program, there comes from the city department of that organization reference to several productions either complete or under way that will be of interest to the exhibitor who includes "Bluebird Day" as a part of his weekly arrangements. The list of stars to be consistently presented in the series embraces Mae Murray, Dorothy Phillips, Violet Mersereau, Franklyn Farnum, Rupert Julian and Ruth Clifford, and Carmel Meyers. There will be occasional offerings by other prominent players, to provide variety and consistency to the program.

Franklyn Farnum will become a lone-star with the presentation in October of "The Maverick," a production by Joseph De Grasse. Mr. Farnum and Brownie Vernon will be seen together for the last time in "A Stormy Knight," to be released Sept. 17, and Miss Vernon will shortly appear as co-star with Herbert Rawlinson in "Sky High," directed by Elmer Clifton.

Dorothy Phillips, who has heretofore been directed alternately by Ida May Park and Joseph De Grasse, will have Miss Park as her sole director in future, starting with "Bondage," a prospect for the October schedule. Miss Park and Miss Phillips have begun work at Universal City upon "The Boss of Powderville," a story written by Thomas Addison.

Violet Mersereau is working on "The Girl by the Roadside," at the Bluebird Leonia (N. J.) studios, and Mae Murray is preparing her first Bluebird under direction of Robert Leonard on the West Coast. Rupert Julian will make a select number of features in which he will co-star with Ruth Clifford. These offerings will result in establishing the Julian productions among Bluebirds.

Carmel Meyers will become a new star in the Bluebird group when she is presented in "The Dynast," a production directed by Harry Solter, who has also prepared "Bitter Sweet," an Ella Hall feature for release among autumn Bluebirds. Kenneth Harlan and Charles Hill Mailes will be prominent in Miss Meyer's supporting organization. Among other features to become Bluebirds will be "The Man of God," directed by E. J. Le Saint and featuring William Stowell; "It's Up to You," a feature for Herbert Rawlinson and Brownie Vernon, and "The Cricket," produced by Elsie Jane Wilson, who gets credit, along with Ida May Park, as woman director of Bluebirds.

"THE BANKER" (Selig).

Charles K. Harris, the noted writer of songs and stories, claims that his best work is "The Barker," the Selig Red Seal play released on Monday, August 13, in K-E-S-E service. Lew Fields claims "The Barker" is one of the best productions he ever appeared in. William N. Selig shared no expense in doing the picture, and with adequate support and good photography which are promised, "The Barker" should prove an unusually meritorious release.

"THE MARTINACHE MARRIAGE" (General Film).

The second of the new four-reel dramas from General Film comprising the Falcon Features is primarily a "heart" story. It is from a magazine romance by Beatrix Demarest Lloyd.

Scene from "The Martinache Marriage" (General Film).

Margaret Landis is featured as the heroine and Philo McCullough as the hero. The love interest is enacted against a strongly dramatic background.

In "The Martinache Marriage" the title refers to the name of the bridegroom, but there are two Martinache men to reckon with as eligibles for the hand of the girl. A very novel triangle is introduced, there being no problem, but a wholesome competition that is worked out in a human and pleasing way.

An excellent cast and production have been given "The Martinache Marriage" under the supervision of H. M. and E. D. Horkheimer. Mollie McConnell, Leota Lorraine, Julien Beaubien, Vincent Beresford and Frank Brownlee are other members of the cast.

"THE AUCTION BLOCK," BY REX BEACH.

One of the country's most successful newspaper editors owes much of his success to the fact that he never overlooks the weather. When it is very hot and everybody knows it's hot, he has a first page "story" setting forth the hourly temperatures and other data of sweltering interest. When there is a big storm or a cracking cold spell his readers are put in possession of all the details. The editor scores by telling his readers what they know all about.

Rex Beach has followed the same psychological process in making a motion picture from his splendidly successful novel of New York life, "The Auction Block." This picture, now undergoing the final polishing process, is to be released throughout the country by the Goldwyn Distributing Corporation under the terms of contract recently entered into between Mr. Beach, Benjamin B. Hampton, president of the Rex Beach Film Corporation, and Goldwyn.

MYSTERY PICTURE ON BLUEBIRD PROGRAM.

Rupert Julian and Ruth Clifford will be stars of the Bluebird release for week starting Sept. 17—a study in psychology, written by Elliott J. Clawson, and produced by Mr. Julian, and entitled "The Mysterious Mr. Tiller." There are so many unusual twists to the plot, plus a surprising outcome, that Bluebird believes the feature will create an unusual interest when shown to the public.

Mr. Julian and Miss Clifford will be supported in "The Mysterious Mr. Tiller" by Lloyd Whitlock, E. A. Warren, Fram Brownlee, Wm. Higby, Harry Rattenberry and Wedgewood Nowe. Another Rupert Julian picture, "The Desire of the Moth," arrived from the West Coast last week and was shown to Bluebird executives and will be prepared for release later on.

"Triumph," starring Dorothy Phillips, and "A Stormy Knight," having Franklyn Farnum and Brownie Vernon as stars, will be Bluebirds for Sept. 3 and 10, respectively. In "Triumph," William Stowell and Lon Chaney, who have always supported Miss Phillips in Bluebirds, will appear together in her company for the last time, other plans having been made for their future employment on the program.

"A Stormy Knight" will present Mr. Farnum and Miss Vernon as joint stars in Bluebirds. Mr. Farnum will hereafter go it alone, and Miss Vernon will have as her future screen-mate Herbert Rawlinson, who will be added to Bluebird's list of stars. There is a strong element of mystery in "A Stormy Knight" to precede the arrival of "The Mysterious Mr. Tiller."

L-KOS FOR SEPTEMBER.

General Director J. G. Blystone of L-Ko Comedies has issued a series of merrymakers for September that promise, according to President Julius Stern, to maintain the best traditions of that popular program of comedies. Phil Dunham, who lately gave up acting as a featured L-Ko comedian, has supplied two subjects, and Noel Smith and Vin Moore have each directed one of the September shows.

"Backward Sons and Forward Daughters" is the title of Phil Dunham's release for September 5, with Lucille Hutton and Billy Bevan featured. The same director also produced the September 26 release, "Entangled Tanglements," with Miss Hutton and Mr. Bevan also featured.

Noel Smith directed "From Cactus to Kale," the September 12 release, in which Gladys Varden and Walter Stephens are supported by Katherine Young, Harry Griffith and Bert Roach. "From Ranch to Riches," the L-Ko for September 19, was produced by Vin Moore and will have Myrtle Sterling and Al Forbes featured.

Triangle Announces Features for September

Plays Starring Louise Glaum, Olive Thomas, Bessie Love, Dorothy Dalton, Margery Wilson and Others, Listed for Release Soon.

TRIANGLE opens the fall season with a flourish of stars in production of unusual stories, some of which have appeared in national magazines or in book form. Notable among these is "The Man Hater," by Mary Brecht Pulver, published in the Saturday Evening Post of June 9. It will reach the public in picture form on September 2 with Winifred Allen in the leading role, and will be shown first at the New York Rialto Theater. Jack Meredith had the role of the rugged blacksmith, the first man to attract consideration from the girl. A number of scenes in which the little star appears with the four children of which she is guardian gives a humorous, human appeal to the play. Albert Parker directed the production under the supervision of Allan Dwan. The cast includes, beside Miss Allen and Mr. Meredith, Harry Neville, Jessie Shirley, Marguerite Gale, Robert Vivian and little Anna Lehr.

Dorothy Dalton will appear the same week in "Ten of Diamonds," adapted for the screen by L. V. Jefferson from the story by Albert Cowles. Jack Livingston, J. Barney Sherry, Billy Shaw and Dorcas Matthews support the star. The story is designed to show how a woman's life may be directed by the man or men with whom she comes in contact. Miss Dalton vivifies the role of Neva Blaine, a cabaret girl in a cheap resort.

Jack Livingston has the leading male role. Other important parts are presented by J. Barney Sherry, Billy Shaw and Dorcas Matthews. Raymond B. West was in charge of the direction.

A play that will be heralded by the Triangle company as an extraordinary program feature, warranting special attention from the exhibitor because of its unusual box-office value, is "Idolaters," starring Louise Glaum, which is scheduled for the week of September 9. It is similar in action to "The Wolf Woman," which is said to have been one of the most valuable box-office propositions ever put out by the company. George Webb was secured for the leading male role opposite Miss Glaum, and Hugo Koch was engaged for another important part. Other prominent players who appear are Thomas S. Cuise, Milton Ross, Dorcas Matthews and Lee Hill.

The production was placed in charge of one of Triangle's best directors, Walter Edwards, who carefully rehearsed the play with Miss Glaum.

"The Sawdust Ring" indicated what Bessie Love could do in a worthy play well directed. Following "Wee Lady Betty," to be released August 26, the little star, set to work on "Polly Ann," scheduled for place with "Idolaters" on the September 9 program. The story of "Polly Ann" is woven with bright threads of humor, the star shining in the role of a happiness-giver.

Margery Wilson in her first starring play, "Mountain Dew," will come to the screen on September 16. The locale of the story is Kentucky, the home of Miss Wilson, who appears as a mountain girl brought up where law is made by feudist clans. Julien Josephsen and Monte M. Katterjohn are the authors of the piece.

Belle Bennett, a new Triangle star, makes her bow in "The Judgment of the Guilty," by Edith Kennedy, on the same week that Miss Wilson appears in her first starring vehicle. It is a story of the West, presenting three forceful characters, that of two men and a woman.

Roy Stewart and William Desmond are presented on the program of September 23. Stewart in "Devil Dodger" is a Western gun man, whose daring gives him his satanic sobriquet. Desmond in the part of a young college man who turns detective, just as an experiment and because he is in need of a meal ticket, is the star of "Flying Colors," written by John Lynch.

"Broadway, Arizona," is the title of the next Olive Thomas play, now in the course of production. It will be released on September 30 on the same program with "The Hell Warrior," featuring Walt Whitman. Miss Thomas comes forth this time as a Western dance hall girl, as famous along Broadway, Arizona, as she is in real life along Broadway, New York.

BIG LINE OF ADVERTISING MATTER FOR NEW COHAN PICTURE.

An exceptional line of advertising and publicity matter for George M. Cohan's second photoplay, "Seven Keys to Baldpate," has been prepared by the exploitation department of the Artcraft Pictures corporation. A twenty-four sheet, which has been proclaimed by many to be the most attractive piece of paper prepared this season, shows the popular actor-author-producer in one of the big scenes of the photoplay. The line of lithographs includes one twenty-four sheet, two six sheets, two three sheets and three one sheets, all of unusual design and appearance. Attractive store cards, slides and a novelty key puzzle are other splendid business stimulators prepared by Artcraft for this film. A large assortment of newspaper cuts and mats of complete advertising layouts, together with special articles in mat form, have been prepared by the publicity department, and a complete press book containing ten pages of stories, ranging in size from squibs to lengthy interviews, give the exhibitor plenty of material for his local publications.

Get Roach Comedies from Pathe

Big Distributing Company Announces a Number for Immediate Distribution.

ACCORDING to an announcement from Pathe, the big distributing company has scheduled for release during August, September and October a number of unusually strong comedies produced by Rolin under the direction of Hal Roach. They are: "Lonesome Luke, Mechanic," two reels, August 19; "Lonesome Luke's Wild Women," two reels, September 2; "Over the Fence," one reel, September 9; "Lonesome Luke Loses Patients," two reels, September 16; "Pinched," one reel, September 23; "By the Sad Sea Waves," one reel, September 30; "Birds of a Feather," two reels, October 7; "From London to Laramie," two reels, October 21.

The two-reel pictures are Lonesome Luke Comedies and the one-reelers will be known as Harold Lloyd Comedies. These will alternate with the Luke two-reelers till further notice, and a Lloyd one-reeler will be announced for the open dates in October.

In the Harold Lloyd one-reel comedies the star is seen in a characterization entirely different from anything he has yet done. It is absolutely distinct from "Lonesome Luke."

In all these pictures Harold Lloyd is supported by Bebe Daniels and Harry Pollard. Bud Jamieson also appears in most of them.

"Lonesome Luke, Mechanic," is a side splitting burlesque on the modern garage with Luke using the gasoline pump as a fire extinguisher.

"Lonesome Luke's Wild Women" shows Luke and Snub in incredible adventures at the Palace of the Shah on the "Isles of Gek."

"Over the Fence" is a splendid baseball burlesque in which Harold Lloyd as a studious young man comes to bat in the nick of time and saves the game. The first part shows him as the enterprising proprietor of a tailoring establishment of the "We-Press-'Em-While-You-Wait" variety.

"Lonesome Luke Loses Patients" shows the incorrigible fun-maker as the Doctor Killem of an up-to-date sanatorium.

In "Pinched" he has many an embrace in the long arms of the law, is lodged in jail for a robbery he didn't commit and escapes only after a series of laughable adventures.

"By the Sad Sea Waves" introduces Lloyd as a pseudo-life saver who makes good against his will.

There will be one, three and six sheets, a stock one sheet, and a slide on the "Lonesome Luke" two-reel comedies and a one-sheet on the Harold Lloyd one-reelers.

"THE MYSTERIOUS MR. TILLER" (Bluebird).

Several months after "The Mysterious Mrs. M." arrived at theatres where Bluebirds are shown comes "The Mysterious Mr. Tiller" to cast the spell of uncertainty and suspense upon the screen. Elliott J. Clawson wrote this combination of psychology and detective business and Rupert Julian made the production. Bluebird is starring Mr. Julian and Ruth Clifford in the net result, set for release Sept. 17.

"The Mysterious Mr. Tiller" will be the third Bluebird in which Mr. Julian and Miss Clifford have jointly starred. "A Kentucky Cinderella" served to introduce them to the regular program and "Mother of Mine," set for release Sept. 3 as a Bluebird extraordinary, in the States Right division, will further increase their vogue.

Brownlee, E. A. Warren and Lloyd Whitlock will be supporting members of a cast selected from end to end to fit the Bluebird purpose of getting the right players to fill the exactions of specific roles. Sensations and surprises are promised in the unravelling plot and a "surprise finish" caps the climax. It is declared that "The Mysterious Mr. Tiller" will be among the best of fifty-two answers in the year to the question: "Why Bluebirds?"

Exhibitors Promised Good Things

Grant Wilbur, Catherine Calvert, Jean Sothern and Marian Swayne in Coming Plans of Art Dramas.

DIFFICULTIES in revising the Art Dramas schedule, to allow the immediate release of the newly-acquired Crane Wilbur features, have at last been circumvented, and the new order of productions is here given forth for the first time. As far as is known, this order will be followed exactly.

According to the new schedule, exhibitors of Art Dramas may look forward to a rich variety of popular productions, headed by stars of ability and renown. Two Crane Wilbur Horsley pictures are promised in close succession, and there will be also Jean Sothern, Marian Swayne and Catherine Calvert, in plays of distinction.

"Think It Over," which was due for release August 13, is a U. S. Amusement Corporation production, in which Catherine Calvert is starred, supported by Richard Tucker and a cast spesially selected for the various characters. This play is a breezy, swift-moving comedy, written by H. Blache and directed by him. This was followed by "The Little Samaritan," a much-heralded play which will, according to those in authority, live up to its advance notices, if not surpass them.

With Marian Swayne as star, Joseph Lovering as director, and Reverend Clarence J. Harris as author, "The Little Samaritan" is made up of the same triple alliance which produced "Little Miss Fortune," the picture which was such a sensation all over the country.

"Behind the Mask," another U. S. Amusement Corporation Art Drama in which Catherine Calvert is starred, again supported by Richard Tucker, was directed by Mme. Alice Blache from the story by Charles Dazey, one of the most capable and clever scenario writers before the public. In this story he has constructed a plot which will astonish by its novelty. It was adapted to the screen by Frederick Rath.

The second Horsley-Art Drama starring Crane Wilbur will follow "Behind the Mask." This is "Blood of His Fathers," and is a scientifically correct study of heredity. Mr. Wilbur plays three characters in the course of the narrative. "Blood of His Fathers" is somewhat of a novelty in form in that it is told with a prologue, a device somewhat common in stage plays, but almost unknown to motion pictures. The prologue takes place during the Civil War, and Mr. Wilbur is in that period of the story a disreputable captain of guerrillas, who wander the country pillaging and destroying. The remainder of the story is modern.

"Blood of His Fathers" was written by J. Francis Dunbar and directed by Harrish Ingraham, the two men who were responsible for the strength of story and excellence of production of "Eye of Envy," Mr. Wilbur's first Art Drama.

"Peg o' the Sea," a Van Dyke picture starring Jean Sothern, will follow this. Winifred Dunn wrote the story from which this is taken. The staging of the picture has been practically completed except for a few interiors. This week the company returned from Atlantic Highlands, where the sea scenes were taken. It is expected that the remainder of the photoplay will be completed by the end of the week.

An untitled picture in which Catherine Calvert is starred will follow this. The U. S. Amusement Corporation is at present working on the new play, and it is to be finished in a week or so. More details regarding its nature will be given in a later issue.

"Unto the End," third of the Horsley Art Dramas starring Crane Wilbur, is the next in order. This is a somewhat tragic drama, deeply moving in its wealth of pathos. It relates a story of love which endures, despite all obstacles and difficulties, until the death of the lovers. The last scene of "Unto the End" is said to be one of the most intensely emotional moments ever screened. The heroine, afflicted with leprosy, has been sent to an island in the Pacific—one of the Hawaiian group. Here her lover goes in secret, for no one is permitted to visit the dwelling of the living dead. He arrives to find her dying on the shore. Picking her up in his arms, he enters the sea, and wades out toward the setting sun until he and his mate have been swallowed up by the waves.

SELIG "WORLD LIBRARY NO. 15."

Historic Monterey, California, is presented in Selig World Library No. 15, released in General Film Service on Wednesday, August 22. In 1602, Don Sebastian Vizcaine entered Monterey Bay and took possession of the soil in the name of King Philip III of Spain. Monterey was the capital of California when the latter was a Mexican province. California's first theater, first frame house, first brick building. The home of Robert Louis Stevenson. Russian Art Film Attracts Many Inquiries Received in Response to Advertising and Inspection.

PRELIMINARY announcement, made in the Moving Picture World last week by N. S. Kaplan, that his Russian repertory of the films would soon be released in the United States, has brought hundreds of communications to the offices of the Russian Art Film Corporation, in the Godfrey building, at 729 Seventh avenue, New York City. There appears to be a widespread interest in the project of presenting to American playgoers many new personalities in stories worthy of their abilities. Mr. Kaplan is enthusiastic at the response of the exhibitors who read the advertising pages of the Moving Picture World.

"The reception given to our general announcement amazes me," said Mr. Kaplan. "I had thought that the exhibitors of America would be interested to know what was being done in Russia to further the art to which they are devoted, but I had no idea that the response would be so conclusive. My desk is literally covered with telegrams and letters asking for particulars regarding the system of release that we shall follow in presenting Russian Art films to the trade in America. To all inquiries I have replied that I don't know; the reception given to the first picture which we present on Broadway in a few weeks will determine our plan of action. In Russia we have a motto or saying: 'Be sure you're right, then go ahead.'

"The Russian Art Film Corporation intends to be right before it goes ahead. We have completed the tremendous task of sorting and assembling for American production the greater part of the fifty negatives which I brought from Moscow. From half a dozen the final choice will be made as to the initial production. We don't say it will be the best picture drama of the lot—in fact, we believe that it will not be—but we promise that it will be representative of the generally high level of the art as it has been developed in the famous Moscow theater of Russia. We shall let the critical authorities and the exhibitors who know what their patrons want tell us what our policy shall be."

PRINT OF FIRST KERRIGAN PICTURES.

Carl Anderson, president of Paralta Plays, and other officers and directors of that corporation have seen a run of the first print of J. Warren Kerrigan's production of Peter B. Kyne's "A Man's Man." They express their approbation in very enthusiastic terms.

"A Man's Man" will be released through the Triangle Distributing corporation in September. Prior to the release a special invitation showing will be made.

"OUTCAST" (Empire-All Star).

At a final viewing of their first release, "Outcast," the Empire All-Star Corporation, who are releasing through the Mutual Exchanges, feel quite sure they have a picture that is going to be something of a surprise to those who believe that plays have to be materially altered for screen showing.

Much of the scenery was taken from the Frohman storehouse and costumes were faithfully reproduced. Miss Ann Murdock, who is starring in the film version, herself long a Frohman star, declares herself to be more than pleased. She and David Powell, who is playing "Geoffrey," the same role he played when on tour with the original "Outcast" company, often discussed various little incidents that cropped up, and their memory helped to straighten out many mooted questions.

Dell Henderson, who directed, declares that he asks for nothing better than that all plays should adapt themselves to the screen as well as "Outcast" has. And so those who declare that a good story is equally good whether it be used for magazine, stage or screen use, win their point.

"FROM CACTUS TO KALE" (L-KO).

Under the supervision of Director General J. G. Blystone of L-Ko comedies, the release set for September 12, under the title of "From Cactus to Kale," is said to have developed some of the most ingenious ideas Director Noel Smith has presented in the L-Ko series. "From Cactus to Kale" is another angle of the art of getting laughs out of Western comedy of the swift-moving, slap-stick sort. Gladys Varden and Walter Stephens will be leaders in the fun-making, with Katherine Young, Harry Griffith and Bert Roach strong in the support. This release is expected to maintain the L-Ko average as one of the best of September issues.

Carry License Discussion to Supreme Court

In Dorchester, Mass., a Protest is Registered at the Erection of a Theater on Codman Square When Other Applications Were Turned Down.

By Richard D. Howe, 80 Summer Sereet, Boston, Mass.

BOSTON, MASS.—An appeal will be made to the Supreme Court of Massachusetts for a decision regarding the law giving the mayor of a city the right to issue licenses to erect moving picture theaters. This is the result of a bitter fight, which has waged in the Codman Square district of Dorchester, a suburb of Boston, between the residents and city officials.

Applications have been made for three separate sites for motion picture theaters in this section of the city. Mayor James M. Curley of Boston refused two of the applicants, but the third application from a concern, of which Patrick Bowen, a former alderman, is at the head, seems practically assured a license. Mr. Bowen already has commenced construction of a beautiful theater in Codman Square without waiting for a permit from Mayor Curley. This action on his part has provoked determined resistance on the part of residents against the license being granted.

Rev. Alfred S. Isaacs, pastor of the Dorchester Temple Baptist Church, is leading the fight of the opposition against the erection of the theater. At a public hearing conducted in City Hall, Mr. Isaacs, among other things, charged "rotten politics" having a great deal to do with the partiality being shown Mr. Bowen.

The pastor declared he would produce witnesses that the petitioners for the license for the theater had secured the signatures through misrepresentation.

He stated the procedure had been first to present the petition in favor of the moving picture house and then, if the resident refused to sign it, he was visited a few days later by other men, with a petition for the construction of "a public building" in Codman Square. The "public building" petition, said Mr. Isaacs, was signed under the impression that it did not refer to the theater.

A petition bearing 1,600 signatures, many of them from school teachers, was presented by the remonstrants.

The mayor, after declaring that he was practically powerless to withhold the license—though he had done so on two previous occasions when moving picture theaters were projected in the same vicinity—he produced a ruling from Corporation Counsel Sullivan to support his claim. He withheld his decision on the matter.

Attorney Joseph F. Warren, one of the protestants, said he would take the matter to the Massachusetts Supreme Court for a ruling on the power of mayors of cities to grant or reject licenses for motion picture theaters.

W. S. Shapiro Now Heads Fox Exchange.

Boston, Mass.—An important change has taken place in the management of the Boston Fox office. William S. Shapiro has succeeded C. G. Kingsley, who has been transferred to the Indianapolis exchange of the Fox organization to fill the vacancy left by Charles E. Phillips, who resigned and accepted a position with Harry Campbell, manager for Goldwyn in New England. Mr. Phillips was assistant under Mr. Campbell when the latter had charge of Fox's Hub office.

William S. Shapiro, the new Boston manager for Fox, has been connected with that organization for about a year and for several months was sales representative in Maine, New Hampshire and Vermont. Mr. Shapiro was very successful on the road, and when Charles Phillips was appointed manager of the Indianapolis office Mr. Shapiro was elected to be assistant to Manager Campbell. He temporarily took charge of the local office when Mr. Campbell joined the Goldwyn forces, but was soon relieved by C. G. Kingsley, who was sent from the Detroit exchange to take charge of the Boston office. Mr. Shapiro was appointed manager of the Fox Standard Productions at that time, but has now been given supreme control of the local exchange. He will also take charge of the standard pictures.

J. L. Reardon Will Open Boston Office for Selznick.

Boston, Mass.—J. Lester Reardon, formerly manager of the Vitagraph, V-L-S-E local exchange and owner of the Cross Street Orpheum, a moving picture theater in Somerville, Mass., has been appointed New England representative for Louis J. Selznick. Mr. Reardon will have entire charge of Selznick pictures in New England and plans shortly to open an office in this city. He is already on the lookout for a suitable location for an exchange. Mr. Reardon reports that he has been very successful since joining Mr. Selznick.

J. L. Levine Manager General Film Exchange.

Boston, Mass.—Jefferson D. Levine, one of the best known film men in New England, has been reappointed manager of the local office of the General Film Company. Mr. Levine was first given the managership of the Boston exchange last winter, when William H. Patten resigned the position, and was in charge up to a few months ago, when Frank Shirley, of the Wilkes-Barre, Pa., office was transferred to the local exchange. He continued with the General Film under Mr. Shirley and has now been given entire control of affairs in the Hub office.

Mr. Levine has been associated with the General Film for more than six years and during that time has been a valuable asset in the local exchange. He started as a poster clerk and was soon promoted to salesman. During his period on the road in New England, Mr. Levine established a lasting friendship with many of the most prominent exhibitors in his territory and increased the sales of the company to a considerable extent. L. A. Hacking, at present a member of the Boston staff of the Vitagraph, who was formerly manager of the General in Boston, soon called Mr. Levine in from the road and appointed him assistant manager, in which capacity he continued until he was elected to take charge last winter, when William H. Patten left the organization.

Enlighten Thy Daughter Doing Splendidly.

Boston, Mass.—President Harry Segal, of the Supreme Photoplay Corporation, who is exploiting "Enlighten Thy Daughter" throughout New England, states that he has received heavy bookings and the big business seems sure to continue. He is also playing the picture on a percentage basis, with two shows now on the road in different parts of New England, both of which are doing well.

Mr. Segal is being ably assisted by his publicity manager, Robert W. Cobe, who is getting out a great line of high-class literature and advance advertising matter on the picture. Mr. Cobe is a theatrical man of known ability, having been with several big companies on the road as press agent. He only recently returned from a flying trip through Maine, New Hampshire and Vermont. He states that his trip playing the picture on a percentage basis was entirely successful and he would have continued it but for the fact that he was called early in the draft and was forced to bring his tour to a close in order to get back home and appear for examination for the new National Army.

Paramount Holds Picnic at Rocky Point.

Boston, Mass.—A number of the employees of the Paramount Boston office held a pleasant outing at Rocky Point, R. I., recently. The party traveled in an auto truck, covered with Paramount "one-sheets," which attracted considerable attention enroute to the recreation grounds. The crowd enjoyed a perfect day.

Castle Square to Open With Pictures.

Boston, Mass.—Remodeling of the Castle Square theater, for many years the home of John Craig's stock company in this city, is going on rapidly, and it is planned to open the house in the near future, showing moving pictures only. Frank Ross, manager of the Lancaster theater on Lancaster street, has been selected to manage the new house. The Castle Square is situated in the South End and should prove a good location for a "movie" house, as there is no other house nearby. The shows will be run at popular prices.

Exhibitors See "Baby Mine."

Boston, Mass.—A large gathering of exhibitors and exchangemen flocked to the New England headquarters of the Goldwyn Pictures Monday, August 13, to view a private trade showing of "Baby Mine," the new Goldwyn production. It was the unanimous opinion of all present that "Baby Mine" is a wonderful picture. The new Goldwyn office is located at No. 40 Piedmont street, Boston.

Maritime News Letter

By Alice Fairweather, The Standard, St. John, N. B.

A Successful Woman Exhibitor.

MONCTON, N. B.—A successful woman theater manager is Mrs. R. H. Davidson, who for some years has been the proprietress of the Dreamland at Moncton, N. B. Mrs. Davidson has recently purchased the theater and quite a strip of land about it which makes her property come well up to the C. G. R. tracks. Later in the year she will renovate the house and improve it greatly in various ways.

As a woman Mrs. Davidson knows how to cater to an audience of women and children as well as to the many men who attend her theater. That she is fortunate in her choice of pictures is shown by the fact that her theater is so popular that special matinees are given for children or extra reels run for them on Saturdays. Mrs. Davidson uses Vitagraph, Metro, Famous Players, Mutual and other features.

Queens Rink to Be Picture Theater.

St. John, N. B.—There is to be another new theater in St. John, or rather an old building is made over into a theater. Robert Armstrong, who for many years managed the Queens rink, is turning that place of winter amusements into a motion picture theater. The theater will have a seating capacity of twelve hundred. The stage is to be very large so that special productions can be accommodated or dances given there. The admission price is to be five cents. No policy of pictures has as yet been decided upon.

F. G. Spencer Considers Building New Theater.

St. John, N. B.—F. G. Spencer of St John has leased the Hayden Gibson theater, Woodstock, N. B., one of the most up-to-date houses in the Maritime provinces. The new owner takes charge September 3. Mr. Spencer now controls the Lyric and Unique theaters, St. John; the Empress, Gem and Star in Amherst, N. S.; the Peoples and Prince Edward theaters in Charlottetown, Prince Edward Island; the Gem in Fredericton, the capital city of New Brunswick, and the Hayden-Gibson theater in Woodstock, N. B. The Princess (and, it is rumored, the Strand) in Truro, N. S. In fact, Mr. Spencer is a sort of theater king in the Maritime provinces He also has in contemplation a new theater (The Strand) in St. John, to be built on King square. Accompanied by Mrs Spencer and several friends, Mr. Spencer is now on an automobile tour about Woodstock and that part of the Province. We do not know how many theaters he may gather in on his travels.

March-Golding Wedding Announced.

St. John, N. B.—There is a wedding which is of great interest to members of the theatrical fraternity in St. John, to take place in August. On the 29th of August Miss Kathleen Golding will be married to Reginald March, manager of the Specialty Import company (Pathe), St. John. Miss Golding is a niece of W. H. Golding of the Imperial theater and was for some time his secretary. Both have many friends in St. John who will wish them every happiness.

Notes Gleaned About St. John, N. B.

Visiting the Metro exchange in St. John, H. H. McArthur tells me that "The Great Secret" begins in the Academy at New Glasgow, August 13, and at the Savoy, Glace Bay, the following week.

The Opera House, Pictou, N. S., used a Metro pictures and liked it so well that they sent for more. W. O. Wheaton is the manager there.

K. Keltie, of the Peoples theater, Yarmouth, N. S., is beginning to show Metro films, opening with Edmund Breeze in "The Weakness of Strength."

Harvey Watkins, superintendent for the Keith interests of Eastern Canada, paid one of his flying visits to St. John, N. B, lately.

Wm. Cranston, the Canadian manager for D. Griffith's spectacle, "Intolerance" and "The Birth of a Nation," was in St. John last week. "Intolerance" is booked at the Academy of Music, Halifax, for a three days' run.

C. A. Ganter, the general manager for Canada of the Mutual Film company, was in St. John recently on his way to Toronto Mr. Ganter has been attending a meeting of the Mutual Managers' Association, which met recently in Chicago and was full of enthusiasm regarding the new plans of his company. With C. Kerr, the local manager of the Mutual, Mr. Ganter spent his few hours in St. John visiting some of the theater managers. It is hoped that some of the Mutual stars may be able to attend the convention.

W. H. Golding has just returned from a visit to Halifax where he found the Halifax exhibitors much interested in the coming convention in St. John and making preparations to attend.

Parcels Post Not a Perfect Film Carrier

Several Exchange Men in Washington Have Reason to Find Fault With Post Office Present Realities—Lost Film, Slack Service and Red Tape.

Clarence L. Linz, 622 Riggs Building, Washington, D. C.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Washington's exchange managers are somewhat disappointed in the parcel post service, for as far as they are concerned it is not "panning out," according to a number of speakers at the meeting of the Washington Exchange Managers' Association, held recently. A number of cases were spoken of where the servic failed to come up to the expectations of the managers. One case in particular covered the loss of four reels of film. It was found where the reels had left the sending office and where they had failed to be received at the Washington office. Further than that, they are "just lost." This happened two months ago and nothing has been heard of the reels in all that time. They were not insured through the error of the sender of the films, so that the exchange cannot recover their value from the Government.

For the most part, the Washington exchanges have given up patronizing the parcel post service because of the lack of "service." Despite the difficulties incident to shipping through the express companies, the latter are far more satisfactory than the former. One of the chief complaints against the parcel post additional to the dissatisfaction over the loss and damage provisions is that if a shipment be refused by the consignee, instead of the postal authorities shipping it back immediately in conformity with the instructions contained on the top of the box, they hold it up and write the shipper of the circumstances and ask that stamps be sent to cover the cost of return transportation. This means a loss of time and consequent loss of rentals.

The exchange managers declare that there is too much idle talk and red tape involved in the parcel post business. Until it can be placed on the plane of the express companies, it is useless for them to avail themselves of the mails for the shipment of films. They declare that apologies do not make deliveries, and when films are lost or there is loss of time, it means money. If any serious difficulties arise between the exchanges and the express companies, it is a very easy matter to secure an adjustment through the New York offices of the companies and by appeal to the Interstate Commerce Commission. Nothing of this nature can be accomplished where the mails are involved.

New Selznick Offices Chosen.

Washington, D. C.—The new Selznick offices, it is understood, will be located in the building at Eighth and G streets, northwest, which is being remodeled to make it desirable as a film exchange building. This property is controlled by Edmund K. Fox, who recently sent out announcements to the effect that he intended turning the building into one that would prove to be within the requirements of the new film regulations recently adopted by the Commissioners of the District of Columbia.

New Theater Planned for Richmond.

Richmond, Va.—Sparklin & Childs are now preparing plans for a large theater to be built in Richmond, Va., to cost about $200,000. The structure will measure 160 by 96 feet and be designed in the most up-to-date method.

Will Study Theater Advertising in South America.

Washington, D. C.—J. W. Sanger, an advertising investigator, counsel and writer of New York City, has just been chosen as the agent of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, of the Department of Commerce, to conduct an investigation of the advertising methods in vogue in Latin America. He will study all of the usual advertising methods in South America, paying particular attention, among other things, to electric sign and motion picture advertising. When the investigation is completed his conclusions and recommendations will appear in the form of a bulletin, and this bulletin, as well as his personal services in an advisory capacity when he returns to the United States, will be available to any American manufacturer or dealer who wishes to promote trade in Latin America by advertising. Any one interested in the forthcoming investigation desiring to consult with Mr. Sanger before he leaves for his trip may reach him at the Division of Commercial Agents, Room 409, Custom House, New York City.

Alaska Eager for Government Films.

Washington, D. C.—American motion picture films are meeting with fine favor in Alaska. As previously reported in this paper late last fall the Bureau of Fisheries sent 100,000 feet of motion picture films to Saint Paul Island, Alaska. The films were selected chiefly with the view to affording recreation and instruction to the natives. They were rented and must be returned this summer. Agent Fassett, in charge of Saint Paul Island, in recommending recently that a new supply of pictures be sent to the Island, stated that the value of the first lot has been almost immeasurable and that the natives would sacrifice anything to secure a continuance of the weekly entertainment afforded by the pictures. It appears that comedies, news and educational subjects are the most in demand. News pictorials on Saint Paul Island, it is said, need not be of current week's events to be of interest. Employees of the Naval radio station on Saint Paul Island have furnished the machines for showing the pictures and are willing to co-operate in this way another year. It is expected that arrangements will be made to send a second set of films for use during the coming winter season.

Philadelphia Season Opens With "Crisis"

By F. V. Armato, 144 N. Salford St., Philadelphia, Pa.

PHILADELPHIA, PA.—The opening of the new theatrical season will be marked by the first presentation beginning Monday afternoon, August 13, for an extended engagement, at the Garrick theater of the spectacular screen version of Winston Churchill's Civil War novel, "The Crisis." The picture will be shown in a manner to suggest Southern hospitality and Southern aristocracy. A double sextette of male and female voices will sing, and there will be music by a large orchestra. Miss Hazel Lee, as hostess, will receive visitors in the auditorium and will see to it that every one is made comfortable. An old Southern mammy will further lend variety to the suggestion of Southern solicitude, and she will be generous in her bestowal of temperance mint julips. A cotton-picking scene will reveal a number of Southern darkies in plantation diversions. Thus it will appear that there will be much of a picturesque character in the exhibition.

Where They All Are Spending Hot Days.

Philadelphia.—Vacations and week-end trips are at present being indulged in by the prominent film men and exhibitors. During the hot spell Stanley W. Mastbaum enjoys the cool breezes at the St. Charles, Atlantic City. Abe Einstein we find cottaging at the shore with his family. Fred and Eugene Felt of the Locust and Belmont theaters, now have easy access to the Atlantic with the aid of their new Mercer car. Lewis J. Swaab and his son Mark are commuting daily to the shore. Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Effinger of the Strand spend the week-ends motoring from one seashore resort to another. Chas. Segal of the Apollo prefers to tour with his family in the vicinity of the mountains around Lancaster. J. M. Graver of the Liberty is taking his vacation and will visit the beautiful country parts up the state and then continue on his way through Maryland. Oscar Morgan of the Paramount was seen dancing on the Steel Pier in Atlantic City last week so naturally, it is easy to guess where he spends his idle hours. George Meeker of the World Film, although very busy, also likes the seashore. George Denhow, Fox; Robert Lynch, Metro; B. R. Thomas, Mutual; Max Milder, Peerless; Harry Schwalbe, Elec.; R. Garrick and Wm. Sachenmaier, of the Interstate; A. Osborne, Pathe; Harold Rodner, Selznick, and Alen May of the Bluebird, are prominent exchange men, all of whom are owners of automobiles of various types which are busily engaged in running down to the nice cool spots near the shore or seeking the shade in the quiet of the mountains. Herbert Givens, Triangle; J. Hebrew, V-L-S-E; George Ames, Goldwyn; J. Buck, K-E-S-E, and Percy Bloch, of the General, are also prominent exchange managers who deserve their vacation whenever they may take them.

Royal Palace Theater Changes Hands.

Philadelphia.—Conveyance was made last week of the Royal Palace theater, 2716-18 Girard avenue, by Charles H. Colburn to John E. Hardy for a nominal sum, subject to a mortgage of $15,000. The property is a three-story brick structure on a lot 36.6 by 100 feet and assessed for $15,000.

Rialto Has New Organ.

Philadelphia, Pa.—The Rialto theater, under the direction of the Stanley Corporation, has installed a new organ. It is one of the finest of its style and it is the intention of the management not only to have special musical scores played that accompany the big featured pictures, but talented artists will give special recitals at every performance. The new organ permits of a wide variety of imitations of various instruments and also has many other stops for voice and effects that make it complete and thoroughly enjoyable in tone and color.

A Fine Lecture on the Great War.

Philadelphia, Pa.—The Philadelphia public had an opportunity last week to hear M. Moncel Knecht deliver a lecture at Houston Hall, illustrated with moving pictures of the war direct from France. Mr. Knecht came to America with Viviani and Joffre, and is a member of the French Commission. He speaks English fluently and is an orator of rare ability. His subject was "The Effort of France and Her Colonial Empire and of Alsace-Lorraine." While the lecture was scheduled as one of the summer school entertainments of the University, the public was also welcome.

Chaplin Comedies on More Liberal Terms.

Philadelphia, Pa.—B. R. Tolmas, manager of the Mutual Exchange, announces that Chaplin Comedy releases in the future will be booked on a liberal arrangement in conjunction with their program.

Western Pennsylvania Theater Jottings.

Philadelphia.—M. Stiefel has made some improvements at the Lafayette theater on Kensington avenue, which included a new crystal fibre screen and two Powers' 6B machines.

Bryn Mawr.—The Bryn Mawr theater after extensive alterations and remodeling at the cost of $6,000, will reopen about Sept. 1 under the new management of W. H. Hassinger. A Kimball organ will also be installed as one of the many features of the house.

Allentown, Pa.—The new Strand theater, which will open here on September 1, will have a seating capacity of 1,000 and be of modern construction throughout. A gold fibre screen will be included in the up-to-date equipment.

York, Pa.—The Jackson theater here is reported to be prepared for their opening during the early part of September. The theater is of the 1,000-seat variety, handsomely furnished and of the best construction. R. C. Jackson & Co., of Lebanon, Pa., who are the owners of this house, also control a chain of theaters in this vicinity.

Charles A. Calehuff and F. R. Bloomfield will shortly start together for an extended business trip throughout the state.

Baltimore News Letter

By J. M. Shellman, 1902 Mount Royal Terrace, Baltimore, Md.

Special Showing of "The Slacker."

BALTIMORE, MD.—Through the courtesy of Charles E. Ford, manager of Ford's Opera House, arrangements were made by Harry Cohen, the live-wire Metro representative from the Washington office, for a private screening of "The Slacker" on Wednesday afternoon, August 15, at four P. M. Mr. Ford went to a great deal of trouble to decorate his playhouse with the national and state colors for the occasion and 1,500 invitation cards were sent out to the British and American recruiting officers and to the state, city and national officials, the greater majority of them being accepted. Special music was furnished by E. V. Cupero and an especially arranged orchestra. Mayor Preston and his staff and many other notables attended and short speeches of a patriotic nature were made by the mayor and his former secretary, Robert E. Lee, during the intermission.

J. J. Hartlove's Big Balihoo.

Baltimore, Md.—To especially call attention to the dare devil of the screen, Tom Mix, in "Movie Stunts," on Thursday, August 9, J. J. Hartlove, manager of the Crescent theater, 1110-12 South Charles street, engaged Indian Joe and his two cowboys to appear in the lobby of the theater in their full Western regalia to balihoo the performance. The lobby was decorated with pelts, skins and banners. Five thousand handbills were issued and distributed and Mr. Hartlove states during the afternoon performance 1,000 people attended the show.

Actress Marries in Baltimore.

Baltimore, Md.—Baltimore was again the scene of a romantic marriage on Saturday, August 11, when Sarah V. Fox, of the "Follies of 1917" company, was married to Robert M. Wilson, a hero of the battle of the Marne, whose home is in Denver, Colo. The romance began shortly after Mr. Wilson returned to the United States last year, and met Miss Fox in Philadelphia.

Big Civic Auditorium Planned.

Baltimore, Md.—According to the Civic Center plans, which are now being drawn up for Baltimore, a vast municipal auditorium, which will have a seating capacity of about 14,000 people and be a one-story building, with architectural embellishments, is to be erected on the ground extending from Gay street back to the Fallsway. It is planned to have entrances both at the front and back and at the side, near the center, a smaller building will be built to seat about 3,000 people for smaller affairs.

Superba Is Improving.

Baltimore, Md.—David Braun, proprietor of the Superba theater, 908 Columbia avenue, which has a seating capacity of about 400, has had this playhouse closed for the past two weeks for alterations and improvements. A concrete floor is being placed in the theater, which is being generally renovated.

York Theater to Open.

York, Pa.—It is now announced by Professor Edward Gentzler, of this city, that he will open his East Lyric theater, which has a seating capacity of about 300, on September 1. This playhouse has been closed during the summer months and when reopened the Universal program will be used.

C. W. Sutton in Baltimore.

Baltimore, Md.—C. W. Sutton, proprietor of the Opera House in this city, visited Baltimore during the week of August 13, and called on his friends at the exchanges. While there Mr. Sutton booked "Pershing in France" for his theater.

New Theater at Buckhannon.

Buckhannon, W. Va.—About six weeks ago H. B. Young, of this city, opened up his new Main Street theater, which has a seating capacity of about 500. It is stated to be a very pretty theater.

Business Notes.

Baltimore, Md.—I. Berman, proprietor of Berman's theater, Baltimore street at High, has had his house closed for several weeks and when opened will be improved.

P. Oletzky, manager of the Baltimore Film Exchange, is now in Atlantic City enjoying a vacation in his cottage.

M. Seigel, Bluebird representative in Baltimore, is now enjoying the sea breezes on his vacation at the Atlantic Hotel in Atlantic City.

Barnett Freeman, Universal representative, has just returned from a vacation which he enjoyed immensely.

William F. Stone, treasurer of the Maryland Censor Board, has been confined to his home since Saturday, August 11, with an attack of the measles.

Miss Rose Wood, of this city, is reported to have gone to New York to join the company of players supporting Marie Doro in photoplay presentations.

Harry Woods, manager of the Garden theater, on Lexington street at Park avenue, in the heart of the shopping district, has innovated the idea of starting his performances at noon in order to give the shoppers a chance to view the full show by 4 p. m., which consists of vaudeville and pictures.

North Carolina News Items

Savings Bank in a Picture Theater.

RALEIGH, N. C.—A freak picture show, the first of its kind probably in the country, will soon be seen in Raleigh. The Superba, operated by F. L. Allen, is closed for alterations and when re-opened will have built right in the center of its large lobby a savings bank—one of the both day and night variety.

Narrow alleyways on either side of the miniature bank building will furnish entrance and exit to the theater proper in the rear. In order to minimize the space occupied by the bank the vaults will be constructed underground, immediately beneath the bank, a narrow spiral stairway leading to the underground strong boxes of the banking institution.

The Superba has a very advantageous location on the busiest block in town, and this ingenius arrangement was the only method by which the day and night bank could obtain a coveted stand.

Wilmington's Royal Closes Summer Policy.

Wilmington, N. C.—The Royal theater, now presenting super-picture productions, will be closed for one week after August 25 and will reopen on Labor Day, playing vaudeville and tabloid musical comedy attractions, the super-productions after that date being transferred to the Grand theater, on North Front street. Both theaters are operated by the Howard and Wells interests.

President Warner at Wrightsville Beach.

Wilmington, N. C.—George C. Warner, of the Ideal theater, Columbia, S. C., is spending the week at Wrightsville Beach with Mrs. Warner and children. Mr. Warner is president of the South Carolina Exhibitors' Association and states that a large delegation of exhibitors from the Palmetto state will attend the joint convention at Ocean View, Va.

IN PITTSBURGH.

Harry Lande Now Controls Quality Film.

Pittsburgh, Pa.—Max W. Herring has disposed of his interest in the Quality Film exchange, 404-406 Ferry street, Pittsburgh, to Harry A. Lande, who is now sole owner of the concern. Mr. Herring announces that he is continuing in the film business and has already secured a number of subjects. He will announce his location in the near future.

Lyric at Uniontown to Be Handsomer.

Uniontown, Pa.—The Lyric theater, Uniontown, Pa., is being extensively remodeled by the owners, the Penn Amusement company. A handsome new front is being installed and the interior redecorated and newly equipped. Manager McCloskey states that the Imp theater, conducted by the same company, will be closed in the near future.

Pittsburgh Revises Picture Theater Tax

Legislative Committee of the League Gets Ordinance of 1913 on Licenses for Theaters Revised—More Favorable Requirements Secured.

From Pittsburgh News Service, 6104 Jenkins Arcade, Pittsburgh, Pa.

PITTSBURGH, PA.—A revision of the tax on moving picture theaters in Pittsburgh has been secured through the efforts of the Motion Picture Exhibitor's League legislative committee, which has been finally successful in having the 1913 ordinance fixing the license tax or fee for all public amusements amended favorably.

The new ruling permits all theaters having a seating capacity of less than 450 to charge a maximum price of 20 cents admission without any additional tax. Heretofore all theaters were compelled to pay a license of $35 per month, irrespective of their seating capacity, provided they at any time charged more than 10 cents admission. In other words, a house having a seating capacity of 200 or less and paying a license of $10 per month would have to pay $35 per month if at any time they charged more than 10 cents admission. A house of 300 seats, which paid $15 per month license, would likewise have to pay $35, provided there was an admission price of more than 10 cents.

As the ordinance reads now the seat grading is as follows: Two hundred or less, $10; 300 or less, $15; over 300, $25, provided that when the seating capacity of the house exceeds 450 seats the maximum charge of admission does not exceed 20 cents. If the maximum charge exceeds 20 cents admission they shall pay a license of $35.

In commenting upon the new tax schedule, Secretary G. A. Sahner, of the Pittsburgh Exhibitors' League, said that the picture theaters have been paying over two-thirds of the city licenses of amusements against the large theaters, basball, skating, billiards, pool, carnivals, circuses, etc. He points out that all of these taxes come in direct competition with the picture business.

John McAleer Heads Pittsburgh F. I. L. M. Club.

Pittsburgh, Pa.—John McAleer, manager of the Independent Film exchange, local office of the Universal, has been elected president of the Pittsburgh F. I. L. M. Club, succeeding F. C. Burhans, who recently resigned. The choice of Mr. McAleer to head this thriving organization of the exchange men of the city meets with much approval, as he is exceptionally well fitted for the work. Mr. McAleer has been prominently identified in the past with various movements here, having been very active in the Pittsburgh Screen Club, and a year ago led the successful fight against a threatened censorship law in West Virginia. Although the F. I. L. M. Club has been organized only about a year it has proven of great value to exhibitor and exchanges alike, and under President McAleer's able guidance the organization is expected to accomplish still greater things in bringing about harmony in the trade.

"Jack and the Beanstalk" Pleases Exhibitors.

Pittsburgh, Pa.—The notable fairy film, "Jack and the Beanstalk," the first juvenile on the Fox Standard program, was shown before a large and appreciative gathering of the trade on Sunday, August 11, at the Olympic theater, Fifth avenue, Pittsburgh. About four hundred exhibitors and their friends were present. A well-attended trade showing of the big William Fox production, "The Honor System," was also held recently at the Olympic.

Press Sponsor for Battle Film.

Pittsburgh, Pa.—The Duquesne theater, Penn avenue, Pittsburgh, one of the city's leading legitimate houses, will open an engagement of Pathe's big war film, "The Battle of the Ancre," the week of August 27. The showing will be under the auspices of the Pittsburgh Press, which paper will spend over $1,000 for publicity in various forms. The proceeds will be donated to the Regimental Fund.

"Fatal Ring" Serial's First Showing.

Pittsburgh, Pa.—The Pittsburgh Pathe exchange on Sunday, August 5, gave a very successful trade showing of the first three episodes of the new Pathe serial, "The Fatal Ring," featuring Pearl White, at the Liberty theater, East End. One of the latest Luke comedies was also shown with good effect. The Pathe exchange announces some of the first run bookings on the new serial as follows: Sheridan Square theater, East Liberty, Pittsburgh, three days; Strand theater, Erie, three days; Orpheum theater, Altoona, three days; Mercer Square, Orpheum, Clarksburg; Thomas, Sharon; Colonial, Farrell; Shapiro, Mt. Union, and the Grand, Bradford.

Harris P. Wolfberg Opens More Offices.

Pittsburgh, Pa.—Right on the heels of the announcement that the First National Exhibitors' Circuit will release through the Harris P. Wolfberg Attractions, Lyceum Theater building, Pittsburgh, and that additional offices will be opened in Cleveland and Cincinnati, it is learned that Mr. Wolfberg has purchased the rights to the Hall Caine masterpiece, "The Deemster," for Missouri and Kansas. This necessitates the establishment of offices in St. Louis and Kansas City.

W. Rhea Johnson, who has covered the western Pennsylvania territory for the Wolfberg exchange for the past six months, has gone to Cleveland, O., to open a new office for Mr. Wolfberg. Mr. Johnson will be the Cleveland branch manager

H. E. Stahler of the Wolfberg Attractions publicity department, is on a two weeks' trip over the eastern end of the territory. He will spend some time in Philadelphia, where "The Crisis" opens for a three weeks' run at the Garrick theater.

Morris Berger Ill.

Pittsburgh, Pa.—It is with much regret that the many friends of Morris Berger, of the Specialty Film company, Pittsburgh, learn that he is ill with scarlet fever in a hospital at Detroit, Mich. Mr. Berger was stricken while on a vacation trip motoring around the Great Lakes.

John Isaac Completing a Theater at Lyndora.

Joseph Spero Joins Specialty Road Staff.

Pittsburgh, Pa.—Joseph Spero, a pioneer film man of New York and formerly special representative for the Metro, has joined the road staff of the Specialty Film company, Pittsburgh.

Loew Secures Two Big Ohio Theaters

The Stillman in Cleveland and the Valintine in Toledo, Each Seating About 1,500, Change Hands—Adolph Zukor Said to Be Interested.

From M. A. Malaney, 218 Columbia Bldg. Cleveland, O.

CLEVELAND, OHIO.—Marcus Loew, the Eastern theatrical man, has invaded Ohio. He has acquired control of two of the largest and finest theaters in the state, and it is reported that he is looking for more.

The theaters are the new Stillman in Cleveland and the Valentine in Toledo. Each seats about 1,500 and are among the most beautiful theaters in the United States.

It is understood that Loew is associated with Adolph Zukor in these enterprises. Mr. Zukor has been in Cleveland twice within the last month and has conferred with Manager Emanuel Mandelbaum of the Stillman, who retains his interest in the theater and will continue to manage it. The bookings, however, will be under the supervision of Mr. Loew.

The details of the Valentine deal have not as yet been given out, but it is reported that Indianapolis capital is represented in the new deal. The theater now is undergoing remodeling and alterations and will be opened soon.

High class pictures will be shown in both theaters, arrangements having been made to book many of the popular stars.

Goldwyn Offices Formally Opened.

Cleveland, O.—The Goldwyn offices have been formally opened on the fourth floor of the Standard theater building, Cleveland, where H. A. Bandy is in charge. The Goldwyn pictures have been booked in the Temple theater, Toledo, and also in a downtown Cleveland theater, the name of which cannot be announced publicly at present.

Sam Deutsch Adds to Sun Theater.

Cleveland, O.—Sam Deutsch, manager of the Sun theater, Cleveland, arrived back in town this week from a three weeks' trip by auto through the east, and immediately set to work to rebuilding his theater.

The Sun will be enlarged by three hundred seats and an elegant marquis will adorn the entrance. The house also will be redecorated.

General Film Offices Will Be Moved.

Cleveland, O.—The General Film company, after having been located at 1022 Superior avenue, East, Cleveland, for over five years, will move about August 20 to the fourth floor of the Standard Theater building on Prospect avenue, right in the heart of the film district.

Manager Flynn expects to take along a black cat which wandered into the exchange a few weeks ago and made itself at home among the posters advertising Essanay's "Black Cat" features. Flynn says all he has to do to draw business into the office is to allow the cat to sit in the doorway for a few minutes. It's a great mascot.

Cincinnati News Letter

From Kenneth C. Crain, 307 First National Bank, Cincinnati, O.

Cincinnati News Weekly Company Expands.

CINCINNATI, O.—The Cincinnati Motion Picture Co., which has for five years been producing a regular news weekly covering the Cincinnati territory, besides engaging successfully in commercial moving picture work, is branching out into other cities. Clarence Runey is head of the company. Ira J. Hoffman, who has been with the company for some time, has gone to Louisville, Ky., and Indianapolis to open up branches in those two cities and will be permanently located in one or the other, with extra cameramen working from the two offices to cover happenings of interest in the vicinity of those cities.

Goldwyn Gives Private Showing.

Cincinnati, O.—Manager C. C. Hite, in charge of the Goldwyn offices in Cincinnati, held the first of his private exhibitions recently at the Nordland Plaza theater of "Baby Mine." Special music added to the enjoyment of the performance, and the quality of the picture created a good impression among exhibitors who saw it. "Baby Mine" and other pictures are being booked by Mr. Hite for early showing in and around Cincinnati.

The Walnut's New Policy Making Good.

Cincinnati, O.—A successful week's engagement of a new Artcraft release, "Down to Earth," shows well for the new policy and the new pictures at the Walnut theater. As recently announced, the Walnut will run Artcraft-Paramount pictures for the coming year, admission 25 cents for the lower floor and 15 cents for the balcony. Manager Libson found it rather difficult when the Walnut was first turned over to pictures to get the crowds Now they are not only coming, but are paying the highest regular scale of prices of any picture theater in Cincinnati.

The Faurot at Lima Makes Improvements.

Lima, O.—The Faurot theater, Lima's leading house, is being extensively remodeled, and when it is reopened for business, which will be the latter part of the month, it will be greatly improved. The chief change being made is the removal of the pillars which formerly obstructed the view on the lower floor. A new floor is also being constructed, and new decorations will freshen up the interior so that it will look like a new building. The work has been under way for some time and is being pushed rapidly in order to reach completion at an early date.

New Demand for Educational-Advertising Films.

Canton, O. — Educational-advertising films produced by various manufacturers for the purpose of showing how their goods are manufactured and used are coming into favor for a purpose which should be very beneficial to all concerned. Inquiries have been received by several local manufacturers who have produced such films asking that prints be loaned to the industrial department of the International Y. M. C. A., which desires to exhibit them at the various army cantonments soon to be opened The films will be transferred from camp to camp by representatives of the Y. M. C. A. without cost to the producers, so that there will be no trouble or expense connected with the work, and the manufacturers have indicated their entire willingness to meet the situation, both from patriotic motives and for their own benefit.

Toledo Men Incorporate New Theater Company.

Toledo, O.—The Valentine Theater company has been incorporated by a number of local men, including Charles K. Friedman, Jacob Kruckman, George E. Dixon and Mark M. Gates, to construct and operate a large moving picture house. The company has a capital stock of $30,000.

Louisville, Ky.—J. G. Conner, representing the Indianapolis Mutual office, was in Louisville recently and closed a deal with L. J. Dittmar of the Majestic Amusement company to run the Mutual feature, "Souls in Pawn," featuring Gail Kane. This is the first time that a Mutual feature or anything other than a Paramount release has been shown in the Majestic, and is quite a feather in Mr. Conner's cap, and also speaks well for the picture.

Buffalo News Letter

By Joseph A. McGuire, 152 N. Elmwood Street, Buffalo, N. Y.

"Italian Battlefront" Pictures at Fort Niagara.

BUFFALO, N. Y.—As a compliment to Col. Samuel W .Miller, commander of the reserve officers' training camp at Fort Niagara, "The Italian Battlefront War Pictures" were shown in the open recently before the members and officers at the camp. William Moore Patch, in charge of the pictures, sent a special set of films and a special operator from New York to give the performance at Fort Niagara. The films have been the attraction at the Teck Theater, Buffalo. A guest at the opening night at the Teck was General Guglielmotti, a hero of the battles in the Trentino and on the Carso plateau. As he entered the box and removed his high military cap, the house, filled with local Italians, arose to greet him. Au augmented orchestra played the Italian national hymn.

Among Western New York Film Men.

Buffalo.—A. W. Root, a former vaudeville agent, has taken over the Palace Theater, Olean, N. Y.

F. N. Zimmerman, of Buffalo, traveling representative of the Bluebird Photoplays, has returned from a motor trip to New York City and is spending two weeks at his cottage at Lake Chautauqua.

F. F. Peters, Hornell exhibitor, is summering at Cuba Lake. Mr. Peters and G. H. Christoffers, manager of the Victor Film, Buffalo, recently enjoyed the scenic beauties of Niagara Falls.

Mr. Hilkert, of Geneva, N. Y., is negotiating for the Johnson opera house property at Seneca Falls. He is interesting Buffalo capitalists to erect a $25,000 moving picture theater on the site.

William L. Sherry and H. F. Brink have several Western New York towns where they secured a fine lot of contracts for the new Star series of the Artcraft and Paramount services. The Buffalo headquarters of these services at 145 Franklin street have been enlarged, giving more office and shipping room.

The Colonial Theater, Rochester, is being remodeled.

Harry Marsey and Al Becker, Buffalo film men, have returned from a motor trip to New York.

A. J. Sardino, former manager of the Savoy Theater and later lessee of the Regent, both of Syracuse, has taken over the Hippodrome moving picture theater, that city. The house is being remodeled and redecorated.

It is said several of the Rochester exhibitors will use features daily after September 1, and advance their admission from five to ten cents.

F. S. Hopkins, manager of the Bluebird Photoplays, Buffalo, will also handle the Alice Howell Comedies for New York State.

"The bookings of these comedies are very satisfactory," said Mr. Hopkins.

Veribest Pictures, Inc., Moves Its Offices.

Buffalo, N. Y.—The Veribest Pictures, Inc., of which George R. Matthews is Buffalo manager, has moved to 47 West Swan street, this city. The location is central and on the first floor.

Ben Fitzer Will Travel for Goldwyn.

Buffalo, N. Y.—George A. Hickey, manager of the Goldwyn Distributing Corporation, Buffalo, has engaged Ben Fitzer as traveling representative of that concern. Mr. Fitzer has been with the Universal and the Artcraft.

Fire in Booth of Amherst Street House.

Buffalo, N. Y.—A film at a moving picture theater at 367 Amherst street, Buffalo, recently burned. The house was emptied quickly. Charles E. Reiner, the proprietor, put out the blaze in the operating booth before the arrival of the firemen. The damage totaled $200. J. C. Koons, the operator, had his hair singed.

STRAY NOTES FROM MIDWEST.

By Frank H. Madison.

Fred Solomon Heads Omaha General Film Office.

Omaha, Neb.—Fred Solomon has been made manager of the local office of the General Film company, succeeding C. W. Taylor, who has been made manager of the Omaha office of the Art-drama exchange. Solomon has been with the General Film company for six years, excepting the time that he was with the V-L-S-E and Mutual.

Theater Notes from Wisconsin.

Madison, Wis.—T. H. Luneman, of Cedar Rapids, Iowa, has purchased the Majestic theater from F. W. Fischer, who has conducted it for the past year.

Lone Rock, Wis.—L. J. Egan and Mr. Brophy have purchased the Harriet Opera House here from Lew Pius.

Milwaukee, Wis.—The Griffith spectacle, "Intolerance," is booked for a late summer date at the Davidson theater.

Superior, Wis.—The Savoy theater has changed to an exclusive policy, using Fox features three days and Triangle service for four days.

IN ONTARIO.

Camp Borden Theater Makes Assignment.

Toronto.—The Summer Theatres Company, Limited, operating the Strand theatre, Camp Borden, Ontario, has made an assignment to J. P. Langley, McKinnon building, Toronto, for the benefit of creditors. This theatre is a huge wooden structure seating 2,400 people, and it has been the principal place of amusement in Camp Borden, Canada's chief military camp. Last year, when there were as many as 34,000 troops in the camp, the Strand did a big business, but this season the number of soldiers in training here has dropped to a few thousand. The theater building was cut in half, but even then it proved too large for the patronage.

Toronto Visitors Will See Best Pictures

Local Theaters Have Prepared Excellent Programs for the Visitors to the Big National Fair at the End of August—Some of the Offerings.

By W. M. Gladish, 1263 Gerrard St., Toronto, Ont.

TORONTO, Ont.—As forecasted in Moving Picture World, many Toronto exhibitors, individually, have picked upon the weeks of August 27 and September 3 for the presentation of special attractions to form an opening of the season of 1917-1918.

Manager Clarence Robson of the Strand theater announces that he will have "Beware of Strangers," the seven-reel special, as his big attraction for the week of September 3. He has been changing programs three times each week during the summer months, but with the presentation of this subject he will return to his fall and winter policy of only one show for the week.

Manager Robson has just reorganized his orchestra, which is one of the best in Toronto. The new leader is Ernest Knaggs of the Toronto Symphony Orchestra and various members are solo-musicians of that orchestra. Robson has signed up his music crew for twelve months.

The Park theatre, Lansdowne avenue and Bloor street, one of the largest outlying houses here, is being painted and redecorated in anticipation of an "opening" about September 1.

Harry Pomeroy, manager of the Photodrome, is proceeding with the establishment of a dance hall, cabaret and model barber shop in connection with his theater for the coming fall and winter seasons.

These, and other "openings" already reported by the Toronto correspondent, will occur simultaneously with the holding of the annual Canadian National Exhibition in Toronto when the city will be crowded with thousands of out-of-town visitors.

"Nation" and "Intolerance" Pictures Still Doing Well.

Toronto.—B. S. Courtney of Toronto, formerly general manager of the Basil Film Corporation, has arrived in France as a lieutenant in a Canadian Forestry Battalion, according to a statement by William Cranston, the new general manager of the company. This corporation controls the Canadian rights for the "Birth of a Nation" and "Intolerance," both of which are still doing big business in the Dominion.

The very first time that the "Birth of a Nation" has been shown under canvas was at Trenton, Ontario, on August 2, 3 and 4, when it was presented in the airdrome there. This airdrome has a seating capacity for one thousand persons. Incidentally, there is only one theater building in Trenton and the Nation film had never been screened there before.

A second print of the "Birth of a Nation" has been doing one and two-night stands in the Canadian West, while the one Canadian print of "Intolerance" has been screened in various Western cities during the mid-summer fairs. It was shown at Regina during the week of July 23 and at Saskatoon during the week of July 30. It was the attraction at the Walker theater, Winnipeg, during the week of August 13. The next stop will be made at Sault Ste. Marie, after which it will come back to Toronto for the two weeks starting August 25.

According to Manager Cranston, both the "Nation" and "Intolerance" pictures are good for at least another year in Canada. Mr. Cranston says that "Intolerance" has been making from $300 to $400 a day at the annual fairs in the Canadian West.

A Power's traveling outfit has been added to the mechanical equipment of the Western "Birth of a Nation" company. This was found necessary, says Mr. Cranston, because in many cases the projection machines in local theaters were in such a condition that the print was becoming damaged.

Roma Theater at Kitchener Damaged by Fire.

Toronto.—Fires in moving picture theaters in Ontario are not very frequent. The Roma theater, Kitchener, Ont., was rather seriously damaged by flames, however, on the night of August 7. The loss is estimated by L. Longo, owner of the theater, at $5,000. The fire started from unknown causes. The business at this theater had been very good all summer and the blaze will cause considerable inconvenience.

Banquet Held to Honor Ben Cronk.

Toronto, Ont.—The film people of Calgary were apparently glad to see Ben Cronk, for four years manager of the Allen theater there, leave for Toronto to assume the management of the new Allen theater here. They were not happy to lose Cronk, but they rejoiced because he was going to a big job. They liked him so well that they held a farewell banquet in his honor, the attendance at this celebration consisting of eighty-three exhibitors, exchange men, Shriners and others. They presented Ben with a valuable gold watch and a club bag, and before they were through they had said all kinds of nice things about him. Mr. Cronk has arrived in Toronto to take charge of the brand new house which is scheduled to open early in September.

Many Pictures Show Glories of Ontario.

Toronto, Ont.—One of the many features provided by the Ontario Government for the Canadian National Exhibition, Toronto, August 25 to September 8, will be a demonstration of the new educational moving picture service. Director S. C. Johnston has had a number of cameramen out for some time taking pictures of Government experimental farms, prison farms and other institutions. Among various other views will be those showing fruit-growing, mining, forestry protection and road-making within the Province. Pictures showing the new farms in Northern Ontario of returned war veterans will also be exhibited. One whole wing of the Educational Building has been turned into a moving picture theater for this demonstration.

More Business Notes.

Toronto, Ont.—Super Features, Limited, Toronto, reports record business in Canada for "The Whip." This picture has had two long runs at the Grand, Toronto, the second of which extended through the month of July.

Charles Stevens, general manager of Super Features, Limited, has purchased the entire Canadian rights for the seven-reel feature, "On Trial."

Atlanta's Rialto Reopens With Fairbanks

Will Be Suitable House for Goldwyn, Artcraft, Paramount Offerings, and Promises Many a Treat to Atlantans During Coming Season.

By Alfred M. Beatty, 43 Copenhill Ave., Atlanta, Ga.

ATLANTA, GA.—The Rialto theater, which has been undergoing extensive repairs, opened Monday morning, August 13, under the joint direction of Jake Wells and John G Evins. The opening of this house inaugurates the plan of Mr. Welles and Mr. Evins to make Atlanta the home of the most superior motion picture theater from every standpoint.

All of the Goldwyn pictures are to be shown with all of the productions supervised or directed by D. W. Griffith, Cecil B. DeMille and Thomas H. Inc. The Rialto will be the home of the Paramount stars. Mr. Wells and Mrs. Evins have seen to it that the already beautiful theater has been completely renovated and a number of important changes made.

The initial attraction this week is Douglas Fairbanks in "Down to Earth."

Joe Marientette, of the Goldwyn Film Co., spent several days this week in Nashville, Tenn., among theaters.

The Strand theater last week played Marguerite Clark in "The Amazons" the entire week. This theater is now under the management of Jake Wells and John Evins, who announce the Strand will in future be a theater playing a feature all week. Crowds are being turned away, the house playing to capacity. This is something unusual for Atlanta theaters for quite a while.

Nashville Elite Opens as Feature House

Crescent Amusement Company Overhauls Big Theater and Changes Program Service from Short Reels to Features—Higher Admission Asked.

By J. L. Ray, 1014 Stahlman Building, Nashville, Tenn.

NASHVILLE, TENN.—The Elite theater reopened its doors to the public on Monday, August 13, after extensive repairs and a complete renovation. Prior to its closing the Elite was one of the most popular of the few remaining five-cent houses on Fifth avenue, Nashville's leading amusement center, but with the reopening there comes into existence a new high-class feature house.

Owing to a wreck, the train bearing the initial program from Atlanta did not reach the city until many hours behind schedule time, and the formal opening was postponed until nine o'clock in the evening, by which time a large crowd had gathered at the doors.

The Crescent Amusement company, which operates the Elite, played a trump card in offering Marguerite Clark for the initial dates in the late Paramount production, "The Amazons." Douglas Fairbanks in his newest Artcraft subject is booked for the second week; both of these films run the entire six days, which in itself is an item worthy of mention in this city. Every indication points to the complete success of the Elite as a permanent feature house, it having followed the course of the Crescent and Fifth Avenue theaters in changing from short lengths to features.

In addition to an unusually attractive decorative scheme on the walls and ceiling of both auditorium and corridor, an immense typhoon fan has been placed over the entrance, augmented by a battery of wall buzzers placed at intervals of twelve feet along both sides, and the customary rotary fans suspended from the ceiling. This makes the Elite without doubt one of the coolest houses in the state.

The semi-direct lighting system is employed, which gives just the proper amount of light for easy access in and out of the aisles, without impairing the vision of the projected picture. An attractive feature of the house, which was not formerly in effect, is the use of white washable seat covers, which adds much to the comfort of the patrons, especially in summer weather. The floor has been covered with a heavy battleship linoleum, and the partitions at the back of the aisles upholstered with a durable leatherette fabric. All doors have been handsomely regrained, and heating apparatus gilded.

The large player orchestra has been removed from near the entrance and a modern Melville Clark Apollo player piano installed at the screen end, and is operated by hand during performances. This instrument was invented by a Nashville man and distributed by a local piano concern, the F. A. Leatherman company.

Wilder Theater Opens.

Chattanooga, Tenn.—The Wilder theater, located at the military camp at Chickamauga Park, was opened to the public on August 13. This theater has a seating capacity of 3,500, being largely for the purpose of furnishing the soldiers amusement. It is under the management of Will S. Albert of the Albert Amusement Company.

Majestic Rejoices at Open Booking.

Memphis, Tenn.—The Majestic Amusement Company, operating the Majestic theaters numbers one and two in this city, recently announced through the press that it was strongly in favor of the open booking plan, setting out its many advantages to the public, and stating that the most famous productions of the day would be brought to its houses at once. Among the larger features to come to the Majestic No. 2 in the near future are William Farnum in "A Tale of Two Cities," Alice Joyce in "Womanhood," etc., with an elaborate assortment of the most popular features, starring Theda Bara, Clara Kimball Young, Douglas Fairbanks, Wm. S. Hart, Valeska Suratt, Geo. M. Cohan, Mary Pickford, etc. The Majestic company is covering a wide field in Memphis, both from a standpoint of quality service and in the number of patrons it reaches through its four houses.

The Lincoln to Reopen.

Nashivlle, Tenn. — Nashville's negro population will be afforded another high-class amusement house in the Lincoln theater, which will be reopened on August 27 with moving pictures. This theater has been opened and closed a number of times during the past several years, its doors having been closed the last time since early spring. William Hartman, owner of the house, will run it as a moving picture house exclusively for negroes, and much of the equipment has been removed from the Excel theater, another negro house, and placed in the Lincoln. The Excel did business for a long time a few doors below the Lincoln on Cedar street, and one of the main reasons for closing the latter house was due to the fact that the other theaters in the same territory interfered with a profitable patronage. However, it is expected that with the Excel out of the way, the Lincoln will enjoy a sucucessful run.

Wolfden Boosting "Hidden Hand."

Nashville, Tenn.—Mr. Wolfden, from the Atlanta office of William Fox, was recently in the city in the interests of the Fox productions, and paid a visit to several local managers. Wolfden is strong for "The Hidden Hand," which is being strongly pushed in this territory. Manager Milton Starr of the Bijou acted as escort to Mr. Wolfden over the city, and both he and the World man found him to be an agreeable sort of fellow.

Knoxville Strand Thrives.

Knoxville, Tenn.—According to local picture men the Strand, which was recently reopened here, is enjoying the best business of its existence. The Strand was formerly owned by Geo. N. Shorey, being known as the Gay, but since being taken over by the Signal Amusement company of Chattanooga has prospered under the new name. An admission scale of five cents for children and ten cents for adults has been established.

Screens Helped J. L. Steurle Pile Up Votes.

LOUISVILLE, KY.—The power of screen advertising was shown in the recent race for honors in the local Democratic primary, in which Joseph L. Steurle, manager of the Walnut theater, and connected with the Broadway Amusement Enterprises, of which he is an officer, ran for city auditor on the Democratic ticket. This year the ticket was split into two factions, the machine candidate being one, while the Brumleve crowd opposed the old political machine. Mr. Steurle ran without support of either faction, being a sort of independent Democrat. However, the machine candidate triumphed with only 158 votes more than received by Mr. Steurle, while the third man was well up in the race. Mr. Steurle at first thought he had been jobbed, and announced that he would contest the nomination, but later stated that he had found no indication of fraud, and was satisfied. He has shaken hands with the nominee and congratulated him on his election.

Mr. Steurle announced last week that he had resigned from the Walnut theater and the Broadway company, the resignation effective August 18, but has reconsidered this action and will continue with the companies as heretofore. This was Mr. Steurle's first political effort and was made possible largely through the co-operation of the local photoplay houses, who, with the exception of two theaters, ran slides for several weeks in boosting Mr. Steurle for the nomination. Running within one hundred and fifty-eight votes of the machine candidate testifies to the power of the screen, and also to the fact that Mr. Steurle had many friends, although he has never been before the public to any extent in the past.

Buckingham Theater Puts Off Opening.

Louisville, Ky.—For the first time within memory the Buckingham theater, the local burlesque house, will fail to open on the scheduled time, which had been advertised as Sunday, August 19. Manager Horace McCrocklin states that, due to a controversy between the Columbia Amusement and the Empire Circuit companies, no shows would start out on the Columbia wheel until the troubles had been adjusted, and in the meantime the Buckingham will remain dark. This theater is the only one in Louisville playing burlesque, and has the exclusive franchise at the present time. Its contract with the Columbia company has seventeen years yet to run, but as all of the burlesque road attractions of size are controlled by the Columbia people, there is small chance of any other house figuring on starting burlesque before the Eastern tangle is settled.

No Sunday Show at Nicholasville.

Nicholasville, Ky.—A pretty little row has been stirred up locally by W. C. Jackson, owner of the Savoy theater, which he recently purchased from Nave & Sparks. Whereas the theater had not been operating on Sunday, Mr. Jackson stated that, starting August 12, the theater would open at 1 o'clock Sunday afternoon and run until 6 o'clock, with a two-hour lay out until 8 o'clock so as not to interfere with churchgoers. However, the ministers formed a committee and protested. Mr. Jackson stated that he had the same privilege of running a picture amusement house on Sundays as the operators of the bathing beach did in charging for Sunday afternoon amusement there. The preachers protested to M. H. Nane, operator of the beach, who agreed to close on Sundays, and residents of the city will not be compelled to do any Sunday bathing at home or in an unfrequented portion of the river. A petition is now being circulated by the church people and will shortly be placed before the city council, this petition asking that the theater be closed on Sunday.

Liberty Theater at Mt. Sterling Open.

Mt. Sterling, Ky.—N. A. Wilkerson, owner of the Liberty theater, formerly the Paramount, recently reopened the house, which has been closed for a year or more. The theater has been remodeled inside and out and under Mr. Wilkerson's capable management should do well, as he has had much experience in the district.

Hopkinsville's Princess Brightens Up.

Hopkinsville, Ky.—Manager Stockley has reopened the Princess theater, which has been renovated and generally done over. The lighting fixtures have been replaced with more attractive ones, bronze rails installed around the balcony, and much paint has been used.

Film Snap Shots from the Middle West

By Frank H. Madison, 623 South Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill.

Among Illinois Theaters.

FOREST CITY, ILL.—The Folly theater is putting out a monthly program in the form of a book mark. The Folly is running "Liberty" and conducting an essay writing contest for children.

LaSalle, Ill.—The Werner theater suffered a film fire.

North Chicago, Ill.—The library board has leased the Auditorium to Mr. Jeffries, who will use the building for a moving picture theater beginning September 1. If the venture is successful a year's lease will be taken.

Decatur's Avon Theater Changes Hands.

Decatur, Ill.—The Avon theater, opened last fall by Joseph Allman, has been leased to outside capital and Manager Carrier and the owner will take up activities in connection with the amusement business elsewhere. The house is closed at this writing and will be reopened after a general overhauling.

E. H. Gilley Heads Escanaba Mutual.

Escanaba, Mich.—Everett H. Gilley has been appointed manager of the Mutual Film exchange, with headquarters in this city. He will have charge of the business in the Upper Peninsula, succeeding Eugene Wilson, who has gone East.

Violet McMillan Home for a Rest.

Grand Rapids, Mich.—Violet McMillan, after completing several features at Universay City, came to her home here for a rest. She will spend her time at her cottage, "Folger Arms," at Whitefish Lake. Late in September she and John Folger, her husband and manager, will go into vaudeville with an act "In and Out of the Movies."

Theater Notes Across Michigan.

Holland, Mich.—The Royal theater closed for several weeks for remodeling has been reopened. The front and interior have been rebuilt and new lighting and ventilating systems have been installed.

Pontiac, Mich.—The redecorated Howland theater has been reopened. The color scheme is sage green, old rose, light tan and old ivory. Over the proscenium arch is an allegorical group suggested by the Swan Song from Lohengrin. Old rose silk hangings are used.

Escanaba, Mich.—The Strand theater has added six girls in white linen to the house staff to serve lemonade to the patrons.

Nashville, Mich.—A. J. Ferte has leased the Star theater from Charles Richardson.

Kalamazoo, Mich.—The Fuller theater has been reopened after undergoing redecorations. It started with feature pictures and will play pictures except when theatrical attractions are booked. Fred Stafford and George Spaeth will be managers.

Taylorville, Ill.—Construction of an addition which will increase the seating capacity of the Empress theater has begun. The changes also will provide room for the installation of a balcony should one be needed.

Lincoln, Ill.—Seven nights at the Lincoln Chautauqua will be devoted to moving pictures which have been selected by Manager Burnstine of the Star theater. Among the pictures selected by him are: "The Boy Who Cried Wolf," "The Message of the Mouse," "Lady of the Lake," "Hansel and Gretel."

Percentage Basis and the Average Exhibitor

World's Detroit Correspondent Asks Theater Managers for Their Opinions—Finds Half Are in Favor and Half Against Percentage Plan.

By Jacob Smith, 503 Free Press Bldg., Detroit, Mich.

DETROIT, MICH.—The Moving Picture World correspondent has been endeavoring to get interviews with leading exhibitors and exchange managers as to whether they would prefer to play a big feature on straight rental or percentage basis. The result has been an even break for both policies. Many exchange men would prefer to get straight rental on pictures which they are somewhat afraid of, and which, to their surprise, often turn out to be big drawing cards; other exchange men prefer to book on percentage only, as it invariably gives them the best end. Then again, the picture stands out on its own merits. Now then, from the standpoint of the exhibitor, he oft would rather book straight rental and take a chance on a picture drawing big business; while others would rather gamble with the exchange man. Where a picture is played on percentage, both the exhibitor and exchange usually go 50-50 on the extra expense of advertising and publicity.

Broadway-Strand Items.

Detroit, Mich.—Harry I. Garson, managing director of the Broadway-Strand theater, Detroit, was home for a few days of last week, and during that time had frequent conferences with the Moving Picture World correspondent regarding future matters.

Mr. Garson announced that he was making comedies, and that if they turned out as good as the first—now being produced—they would be continued at the rate of two a month.

The Broadway-Strand theater will open with its Artcraft-Paramount policy on Sunday, August 26, with "The Amazons," featuring Marguerite Clark. The section attraction will be "The Varmint." The Broadway-Strand will take only the Fairbanks, Harts, Clarks, Fredericks and Jack Pickford pictures, as well as the Clara Kimball Youngs, for the first year.

Fox Manager Gives Private Views of New Film.

Detroit, Mich.—A trade showing of "The Honor System," "The Conqueror," "Jack and the Beanstalk" and "The Spy" is now being made through Michigan by Jos. Kaliski, Detroit manager for Standard pictures. A regular route has been laid out, and exhibitors in the vicinity of each town is invited to attend the screening. Mr. Kaliski says he has instructions from New York to adhere absolutely to the new policy "that the exhibitor must see Standard pictures before he can book them."

J. C. Fishman Gets Christie Comedies.

Detroit, Mich.—J. C. Fishman of the Standard Film Service, Detroit, announces another important acquisition for Michigan—the Christie comedies. Last issue we mentioned that the Standard had secured the Billy West comedies and the Art Dramas. This gives the Standard one of the best line-ups in Michigan, and for an independent exchange the Standard has made wonderful progress. Much credit is due Mr. Fishman and Harry Charnas, of Cleveland, who is general manager of the company. The Standard occupy offices in the Peter Smith building, but will soon move to the new film building.

Third Print of "The Slacker" Ordered.

Detroit, Mich.—Manager George Montgomery has been doing so well on "The Slacker," Metro's latest special production, that he has ordered a third print to take care of bookings in the upper peninsula.

Mr. Montgomery is getting ready for bookings on the new Charlie Chaplin pictures, as they are to be handled through the Metro exchange for Michigan, inasmuch as John H. Kunsky, member of the First National Exhibitors' Circuit, controls the Michigin Metro exchange, as well as the new Chaplin pictures.

William F. Klatt Makes Shining Success.

Detroit, Mich.—Among the men who have made good in Michigan is William F. Klatt, who has leased the Regent theater to Charles H. Miles for vaudeville and pictures. Mr. Klatt was one of the pioneers in the picture industry in Michigan, starting in on Monroe avenue, Detroit. He began just about the same time as did Caille & Kunsky, so that he is conceded to be one of the first exhibitors in the world. His first house was the Bijou. Prices were 5 cents; shows lasted about twenty minutes. The Bijou was a tremendous success. Then Mr. Klatt branched out and secured other theaters, forming the Detroit Theaters, Inc. Recently he disposed of the Vendome and Jewell theaters, and about two weeks ago leased the Regent—his biggest house—to Charles H. Miles. He still has the Rosedale and the Gratiot theaters. He owns all theater property outright, including land and buildings; he also has considerable other valuable property.

H. D. Goldberg Transfered to Cleveland.

Detroit, Mich.—Harry D. Goldberg, who for the past six weeks has been acting as agent for Lewis J. Selznick, has been transferred to Clevland, Ohio.

Selznick Fails to Get Injunction.

Detroit, Mich.—The injunction suit of Lewis J. Selznick against the Harry I. Garson Productions, asking that the latter be restrained from doing business in Michigan, came up before the Detroit Circuit Court on Tuesday, August 14. The court refused to grant an injunction to Selznick as applied for.

Stockholders of New Miles-Regent Company.

The Miles-Regent Co. has been formed with a capital stock of $150,000 to conduct the Regent and Orpheum theaters, Detroit. The principal stockholders are Charles H. Miles, Tom Ealand and Fred T. Grennell. Of course, most of the stock is held by Miles.

If present plans materialize, Bryant Washburn may visit Detroit some time within the next ninety days. His pictures will be shown during the next 12 months at the Majestic theater, Detroit, and it may be that Manager M. W. McGee may be able to induce the Essanay people to let Washburn come over for a day or two and get better acquainted with the patrons of the Majestic. We will say this much for Bryant—he is becoming more popular every day right here in the Wolverine state. As exhibitors say, "he gets me the money."

"The Bar Sinister" has been booked by the Washington theater, Detroit, but no date has yet been set for the showing. "The Bar Sinister" is the first of the M. H. Hoffman Foursquare pictures to be shown in this state. George Weeks, division manager, says that first-runs through the territory have already been secured. He is gratified with business thus far, and looks for really big things during the coming fall and winter. D. Leo Dennison is in Cleveland for him, and Hal Smith in Cincinnati. Besides George has his old-time pep, and that means getting business when he goes after it.

Fire Prevention Bureau for Indianopolis

Commissioner of Public Buildings Plans for Inspection and Control of Film Industries—Got Ideas From Chicago and Cincinnati.

From Indiana Trade News Service, 861 State Life Bldg., Indianapolis, Ind.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind.—Jacob H. Hilkene, commissioner of public buildings, announced this week that he will recommend the establishing of a fire prevention bureau as a part of the city government to assist his department in enforcing building ordinances for fire prevention, especially in relation to the motion picture industry.

The announcement was made by the building commissioner following his return from Chicago and Cincinnati, where he, with E. M. Sellers, manager of the Indiana Inspection Bureau, and H. H. Friedley, state fire marshal, went, at the expense of owners of motion picture exchanges and theaters in Indianapolis, to study methods for controlling the motion picture business in those cities.

Mr. Hilkene says Chicago has worked out a remarkable system for the control of the motion picture industry. The success of the law depends, however, on the efficiency of the fire prevention bureau and the system of inspection that has been established. Mr. Hilkene says the inspectors in this department are under civil service, and that the appointments are divided equally between the two leading political parties.

Mr. Hilkene says he will suggest that Indianapolis be divided into districts so that it would be possible to have a captain of the fire department in each district to serve on the fire prevention bureau. These captains, he says, could extend the inspection of property to all parts of the city and the inspection therefore could be made more thorough. He says he does not believe such a system would prove a big expense to the city.

The building commissioner announced that he also expects to make a few additional changes in the proposed ordinance governing the storage, handling and manufacture of motion picture films, which is now pending before the council. Although he said nothing definite on the subject, he intimated that he probably will support the insurance men in their demands that the motion picture exchanges be equipped with automatic sprinklers. The owners of the exchanges contend that if such a provision is inserted in the ordinance they will be forced to pay out money unnecessarily for fire protection. It is on this question that the exchange owners and the insurance experts have failed to reach an agreement.

Elkhart Exhibitors to Work with Censors.

Elkhart, Ind.—Managers of three of the four motion picture theaters now operating in Elkhart last week responded to an invitation to confer with the city administration's board of moving picture censors, and, at a meeting in the mayor's office, unhesitatingly agreed to co-operate with the board in preventing objectionable exhibitions in the future.

The theaters represented at the meeting were the Bucklen, the Family and the Hippodrome. The board of censors consists of Mayor Smith, Police Commissioners Brown, Earl and Machan, Chief of Police Riblet and Police Matron Fay.

An informal discussion was held regarding certain kinds of shows that had been offered in Elkhart recently and the censors announced the standard below which they think public exhibitions should not fall.

The managers of the three theaters agreed to hereafter refrain from showing so-called "white slave" films, or those revealing the nude human form, or, in short, most any production which seems to be in violation of the rule against "children under sixteen," etc. They also agreed to abstain from the use of objectionable advertising, after one of the censors had pointed out that in his opinion some of the announcements thrown on the screen were immeasurably worse than the films themselves.

Manager Young Will Beautify Orpheum.

Gary, Ind.—V. V. Young, manager of the Orpheum theater and several others, has secured a permit for making extensive alterations in his theater at the corner of Eighth avenue and Washington street, the improvements alone to cost about $2,000. Manager Young will also expend about $10,000 in new equipment and scenery for the theater. He expects to reopen the house some time in the latter part of August or first of September.

Gumbiner Brothers Buy Orpheum at Hammond.

Hammond, Ind.—Gumbiner Brothers, who own a chain of motion picture theaters in Chicago, have added another one to their list by purchasing the Orpheum theater here. The theater, which was constructed in 1911 at a cost of $100,000, has a seating capacity of 1,200 and is equipped for vaudeville as well as motion pictures. The new owners announce that they intend to make material improvements in the place.

C. A. Wagner Will Open Show at Elwood.

Upland, Ind.—C. A. Wagner, who has operated a motion picture theater here for the last fourteen months, has leased the show to George Day, of Muncie, and will move to Elwood, where he intends to open a moving picture house.

More Indiana Holdings for Chicago Firm

Bankers and Merchants Theater Company Takes Over Isis at Kokomo—Spending $75,000 on the Variety at Terre Haute.

KOKOMO, IND.—Through a deal consummated last week the Isis theater, in South Main street, one of the most popular motion picture houses in Kokomo, was added to the chain of theaters owned and operated by the Bankers' and Merchants' Theater Company of Chicago. R. K. Mosiman, manager for the Alhambra Amusement Company, who engineered the deal, will remain in charge of the Isis for the new company. The terms of the deal have not been made public.

The chief reason for making the Isis a member of the Bankers' and Merchants' Theater Company chain, according to Mr. Mosiman, is to try to bring better shows for the local patrons. He says that with the power of the Chicago syndicate behind him he will be able to bring many exclusive film features to Kokomo that could not otherwise be obtained.

With the change in ownership, Mr. Mosiman also announced plans for extensive improvements in the building which it now occupies. A contract has already been let for the extension of the room, which it now occupies, clear back to the alley between Main and Buckeye streets. This will double the capacity of the theater, making it possible to seat more than 1,000 persons. Work on the improvements will be started in about two weeks, according to Mr. Mosiman.

The Bankers' and Merchants' company is at present the owner of the Orpheum theater in Fort Wayne, and the old Variety Opera House in Terre Haute. The Variety is at present being torn down and a modern $75,000 theater is to be erected on the site by the Chicago company. The company is also trying to arrange deals for several other theaters in towns near Kokomo, according to Mr. Mosiman.

Paramount Film Office Opens in Des Moines.

DES MOINES, IA.—A. D. Flinton, district manager of the Kansas City Feature Film company, handling the Paramount and Artcraft pictures, was in town last week arranging with R. C. Li Beau for the opening of the Des Moines office. It is understood that an office was secured on Eleventh and Locust streets, of which Mr. Li Beau will be manager. Li Beau has been the manager of the Des Moines Film & Supply company, a subsidiary branch of the Kansas City Feature company.

Trade Showing of Goldwyn Subjects.

Des Moines, Ia.—On August 22, A. H. Blank has arranged with the Goldwyn company to give a trade showing of "Polly of the Circus" and "Baby Mine" to the Iowa exhibitors. A large showing of the Iowa exhibitors is expected at the Garden on that date.

Mid-West Office in Des Moines Now Releasing.

Des Moines, Ia.—With the arrival of S. S. Schwarz, general auditor of the Mid-West corporation, the Des Moines office over the Garden theater began the shipping and complete booking of the Mid-West output in Iowa and Nebraska. This includes the Selznick, the First National Exhibitors' Circuit productions and all of A. H. Blank's state rights pictures.

Gladys Coburn has been engaged as film inspector, Helen Davidson as stenographer and William Jones as shipper. Schwarz will act as auditor and John J. Shipley will continue to sing the praises of the Mid-West productions.

Over the State with Exhibitors.

Indianola, Ia.—Walker & Thorpe have sold their Lyric theater in Indianola to a Mr. Price, and have purchased the Star theater in Milo from the Newton Theater Supply company of Des Moines.

Minburn, Ia.—C. E. Bassett sold his Pleasant Hour theater in Minburn to Mrs. M. Bryant.

Fort Dodge, Ia.—D. B. Lederman, manager of the Des Moines Laemmle Film service, has purchased the Strand theater in Fort Dodge from Messrs. Julius & Awe.

Onawa, Ia.—Kregston & Wonder purchased the Royal theater in Onawa from Messrs. Fairchild & Payne. This deal makes Kregston & Wonders owners of both photoplay houses in Onawa.

Marshalltown, Ia.—Wilbur Ingledue, owner of the Strand theater in Marshalltown, was drafted into service with the first army and will begin training at Camp Dodge in Des Moines the first of September. Being a perfectly normal young fellow and having no dependents, there was no chance for Wilbur.

Marshalltown, Ia.—Leo Muelhaupt of the Casino in Marshalltown has thoroughly redecorated his house and is planning to run feature photoplays on the first half of the week and vaudeville the latter part of the week.

Some Metro Activities.

Des Moines, Ia.—The new Metro All-Star productions will be open for bookings from the Des Moines Metro office, beginning September 2. Metro has been coming up on to its Iowa and Nebraska business this summer and greater business than ever is expected on these all-star attractions.

With big advance advertising "The Slacker" goes on at the Palace for a week's run the 19th of August. This is State Fair Week in Des Moines and the Palace management are looking forward to capacity houses.

Visitors and Des Moines Happenings.

Des Moines, Ia.—Joe Gerbracht of the Twin Star theater in Ames stopped off in Des Moines on his way home from an extended motor trip to the Lakes. He visited the Midwest and Mutual offices; in fact all the exchanges reported a call from Mr. Gerbracht.

L. A. Sheridan of the local Pathe exchange has purchased a new Dodge touring car and is spending some of his time visiting the nearby towns and rounding up Pathe business.

L. M. Mann, special representative of Triangle out of New York, stopped over in Des Moines on business. It is rumored that a Triangle office will be opened in Omaha in the near future.

The building will cost $100,000. The architects for the new building are Lang & Witchell. It will be located on Elms street near St. Paul street.

Fort Worth, Tex.—The Healy theater has been reopened by J. J. Dillon after being remodeled and improved upon in many ways. The name of the house will soon be changed.

Central City, Neb.—The Empress theater here has been sold to C. E. McDonald, who will manage the theater. It has been managed recently by Kerr Brothers.

Memphis, Tenn.—The Memphis Amusement Company has been chartered by W. L. Hall, E. O. Bailey, W. W. Fisher, C. S. Lancaster, W. Percy McDonald and C. H. Horton with a capital stock of $2,500.

MINNEAPOLIS NOTES.

Northwest Jottings About Theaters.

Bemidji, Minn.—Oliver Whaley has reopened the Elko theater here.

Aberdeen, S. D.—John Ritter has purchased the theater at Morristown, S. D., from C. C. Dunning.

Nashwauk, Minn.—Crockett Brown has opened the Unique theater.

Cando, N. D.—Robert Henkel has leased the Rex theater from Adolph Straub.

Butte, Mont.—The Broadway theater here has been closed to undergo repairs that will bring the house up to a standard few in the Northwest can excel.

Baker, Mont.—Nogren and Hamilton have opened the Lyric theater here.

Meetings of Two Exhibitors' Organizations

Associated Theaters Holds First Meeting for the Election of Officers at West Hotel—Northwest League's Regular Meeting Also on August 14.

By John L. Johnston, 704 Film Exchange Bldg., Minneapolis, Minn.

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.—Two bands of exhibitors, each with really beneficial business to transact, were scheduled to meet here Tuesday, August 14.

The Associated Theaters body organized by Thomas J. Hamlin, former editor of "Amusements," was scheduled to hold its first meeting at the West hotel and incorporate for $100,000, elect officers and take the first step towards organizing. Representatives from six states were expected to attend the gathering.

The Northwest branch of the National league was scheduled to hold its regular weekly meeting, with some real action promised. The members of this body were expected to decide whether or not they would continue to use three and six sheets to advertise future productions. The action of those present on August 14 will mean united activity of the entire organization, and the elimination of three and six sheets will save exhibitors a mint of money in the future if the meeting decides to give the large paper "the air." One Minneapolis exhibitor operating two small theaters informed the writer he would save over a hundred dollars a month by adopting the use of one sheets exclusively, by tabooing threes and sixes.

Harry Cohen Still "Under Water."

Minneapolis, Minn.—Harry Cohen has arrived in Minneapolis again after two days spent in New York headquarters to select a new manager for the local Metro exchange. Harry has been in Minneapolis about once a week, every week since January 1, and many thought he would be able to pick a new "boss" right off the jump. However, applications for the position have been so numerous and there have been so many attempts at politics that Mr. Cohen is still "under water." Walter Strauss has been manager pro tem, succeeding William K. Howard, who left Saturday, August 11, for Jefferson Barracks, Mo., to enter Uncle Sam's regular army. Cohen is contemplating a race with Harry Sherman to see who eats up the most carfare between Minneapolis and New York.

Will Lee Horn Be Manager or Soldier?

Minneapolis, Minn.—"Am I, or am I not?" This interrogation is constantly issuing forth from the lips of Lee A. Horn. Mr. Horn is neither delirious or on the verge of insanity, but he has been appointed manager of the new Longacre exchange here, and due to the draft does not know whether he will be able to hold down the job or not. Lee has received a letter from Uncle Sam inviting him to a medical examination next week. Watch next week's edition for solution to this puzzle.

T. L. Hays Opens the New Garrick.

St. Paul, Minn.—Ruben & Finkelstein's tenth Twin City theater opened to the public here Sunday, August 12, when the New Garrick, formerly called the Strand, began a four day run of "The Little American," featuring Mary Pickford. Messrs. Ruben & Finkelstein sprung a big surprise when they announced the manager for the new house. The executive is none other than Theodore L. Hays, perhaps the best known showman in the entire northwest. Mr. Hays has been actively engaged in all branches of theatrical presentation for over twenty years, and was formerly owner of the Grand opera house and interested in the Bijou and Gayety theaters of Minneapolis.

Harry Hollander Becomes Fox Roadman.

Manager Eddie Westcott, of the Fox exchange, has secured the services of Harry Hollander as roadman for the exchange. Mr. Hollander was formerly with the local exchange, but went to New York two months ago to do work on "The Honor System's" eastern campaign. Stuart Acheson, of the publicity department of the Fox headquarters in New York, spent three days here last week planning a local publicity campaign on future Fox features.

M. MacIntyre Now With Rialto Supply.

Manager S. A. Louis, of the Rialto Theater Supply Co., has secured M. MacIntyre, former Fox road salesman, to cover the Northwest territory for his firm.

From the Twin City Exchanges.

Minneapolis, Minn.—The Friedman Film Corp. has purchased the rights to display "The Bar Sinister" in Minnesota, the Dakotas and Montana, according to an announcement by President Benjamin Friedman. The film will be shown to Northwest exhibitors in a few weeks at some downtown Minneapolis theater.

Manager Harry Graham, of the K-E-S-E exchange, has announced that bookings on "Do Children Count?" Essanay serial, featuring Little Mary McAllister, have not only exceeded expectations, but have eclipsed any record previously made by a serial from his office.

A. A. Hixon has resigned from the sales force of the Elliott & Sherman exchange, and is spending a short vacation before taking up new work, the manner of which Hix is not announcing.

Frank A. McInerny, former publicity manager for the Eliott & Sherman exchange here, and who went East three weeks ago to become publicity manager for Harry A. Sherman's enterprises, has returned. Mr. McInerney states that he enjoyed the trip, but failed to find Mr. Sherman. If records are correct, Mr. Sherman was half way between Minneapolis and New York when Mac started back home.

Manager H. J. Bayley, of the Greater Vitagraph exchange, has supplied each roadman with a chapter print of "The Fighting Trail" serial.

Edward J. Frye, manager of the XL Films exchange, of Great Falls, Mont., has returned West after securing the right to display several Lochren features in Montana. Mr. Frye also controls the Montana rights to "The Battle of Gettysburg," which he has been playing and dividing proceeds with the Red Cross.

Big Week for Picture Lovers.

Minneapolis, Minn.—Minneapolis moving picture followers had a "big" week beginning August 12.

"The Amazons," featuring Marguerite Clark, began a four-day run at the New Garrick at 20 cents admission.

Billie Burke in "The Mysterious Miss Terry" re-opened the Lyric.

Alice Brady in "Darkest Russia" was the attraction at the New Aster.

The Strand offered Florence Reed in "The Eternal Sin."

The New Unique presented Louise Glaum in "Golden Rule Kate."

Special musical numbers, including jazz music and pipe organ solos, was offered at each playhouse Sunday.

August 12 saw all downtown theaters enjoying an overflow business.

The New Lyric, which reopened August 12 after being closed a week, has been redecorated both inside and outside, and now presents an appearance more suitable to the high class of pictures presented at the theater.

Kansas City Exhibitors Face Car Strike

Downtown Theaters Lose Many Patrons When Street Car Men Go Out on Strike—Suburban Theaters Get the Benefit of Hindered Traffic.

Kansas City News Service, 205 Corn Belt Building, Kansas City.

KANSAS CITY, MO.—Trainmen on the Kansas City Railways, the company serving the city with street cars, struck Wednesday, August 8, and in the succeeding days when no city street cars were running the business of moving picture theaters was variously affected. Downtown theaters lost fully 25 per cent. of their business; there were far fewer transients than usual, and those downtown wanted to watch the excitement rather than attend a picture show. In the suburbs the reverse was the effect. People could not get downtown in street cars, and they visited their neighborhood shows.

Interurban street cars were running, but these did not pick up city passengers. The entire traffic was cared for by automobiles. Several thousand motor cars were put into jitney service—and this was another but minor factor in the effect on the theaters: the owners did not have time to drive over to their favorite theaters.

Universal Forms New Butterfly Company.

Kansas City, Mo.—The Butterfly pictures, that in the past have been handled by the Universal Film & Supply Co. will now be handled by a company to be known as the Butterfly Super-Photoplay Company. The new company will be managed by D. O. Reese. The offices of the company will be at 214 East Twelfth street, which is the home of the Universal company. It has been decided to buy two prints of each picture, beginning August 27.

J. E. Dodson Will Assist Manager Reese.

Kansas City, Mo.—J. Erwin Dodson, formerly manager of the Standard Film Corporation at St. Louis, Mo., has been made assistant to manager D. O R. Reese, of the Universal Film & Supply Company here. He takes his new position August 13.

L. J. Doty Will Travel With Supplies.

Kansas City, Mo.—Leo J. Doty is again a member of the Universal company and will take a territory in Missouri and Kansas as a representative of the supply department.

John H. Morgan Goes to Southwestern Kansas.

Kansas City, Mo.—John H. Morgan, formerly of the supply department of the Universal Film & Supply Company, has been transferred from that department to a territory in southern Kansas.

George Leonard Heads Kansas City Triangle.

Kansas City, Mo.—George Leonard has been made branch manager of the Kansas City Triangle office. He will be directly responsible to the home office in New York City for the Kansas City territory, as he has charge of the road men and everything connected with the Kansas City branch. He succeeds C. D. Struble. Mr. Leonard comes here from Jacksonville, Fla. Assisting him is another new man, E. E. Reynolds, who is office manager. Mr. Reynolds was with the General Film Company at Chicago, Ill., for about six years and has had considerable other film experience.

Triangle Roadmen Attend Banquet.

Kansas City, Mo.—The road men of the Kansas City Triangle office were recently called to Kansas City to attend a banquet that was held at the Baltimore hotel. Those attending were E. D. Lappey, E. W. Green, A. Kahn, H. M. Weinberg, Mr. Heins, the sales manager from New York City, and the heads of the different departments, making a total attendance of fourteen men.

Kansas City Triangle Now in Moriarty Building.

Kansas City, Mo.—The Kansas City office of the Triangle Film Corporation has been moved from Nineteenth and Main streets to Twentieth and Grand avenue, in the Moriarty building. The company occupies the entire second floor, giving the office double the space of the former location.

Standard Film Announces Three New Men.

Kansas City, Mo.—The Standard Film Corporation announces the addition of the following new men who will work out of St. Louis, Mo.; Joseph Bloon, Thomas Leonhard and W. H. Hoppe.

W. C. Ansel Transferred to St. Louis Office.

Kansas City, Mo.—W. C. Ansel, southern Missouri representative for the Standard, has been transferred from that territory to the St. Louis, Mo., office.

J. H. Roth to Manage a Freuler Theater.

Oklahoma City, Okla.—J. H. Roth, formerly representative of Paramount and Art Craft in Oklahoma City, Okla., has resigned his position with the company to accept a position as manager of one of the Freuler theaters in Milwaukee, Wis.

A. W. Friemel Joins Kansas City Feature Film.

Kansas City, Mo.—A. W. Friemel, formerly with the General Film, has been added to the sales force of the Kansas City Feature Film Company. He is now working in the Kansas City office, as his territory has not yet been assigned.

W. S. Merrill Now With Triangle.

Kansas City, Mo.—W. S. Merrill, Southern Kansas representative of the General Film, has severed his connections with that company and is now with the Triangle Film.

A. W. Friemel Goes to Paramount.

Kansas City, Mo.—A. W. Friemel, Oklahoma traveler for the General Film, has resigned his position with that company. He is now with the Paramount company at Des Moines, Ia.

C. W. Hardin Goes to Atlanta.

Kansas City, Mo.—Charles W. Hardin, formerly manager of the Metro here, has gone to Atlanta, Ga., to assist in the taking of contracts for additional film for the E. and H. Film Distributing Company, of which he is part owner. He is the second Kansas City man to be associated in that office, the other being Paul Engler, who has been employed by the old International Film Company, the Greater Vitagraph and the Mutual.

Goldwyn Films at Private Showing.

Kansas City, Mo.—The projection machine of the local Goldwyn office having arrived this company held a series of private showings at the office, three being given on August 8, three on August 9, two on August 10, and one on August 11. The local exhibitors were invited to the showing, which was given on "Baby Mine," starring Madge Kennedy. A few out-of-town exhibitors were also present.

W. H. Rosenbloom in Kansas for Mid-West.

Kansas City, Mo.—W. H. Rosenbloom is now working the Kansas territory of the Mid-West Photoplay Corporation, having been transferred to that territory from the Nebraska territory.

With Theaters Across Kansas.

Wichita, Kan.—The Colonial theater here has been opened up under the management of Dan Hosmer, after a complete remodeling.

Eldorado, Kan.—The Opera House here will be remodeled into a first-class modern brick theater.

Ogden, Kan.—Steve Clark is erecting a fine new theater building here.

Burton, Kan.—Edgar G. Rollings will soon open a moving picture theater here in a new building having a seating capacity of 275.

Hutchinson, Kan.—The Pearl theater, at No. 7 North Main street, was badly damaged by fire August 3. The loss amounted to $3,500, of which $200 was on the building, the remaining being on the equipment and furniture.

Pleasanton, Kan.—W. E. Stepp is the new owner of the Regent theater here.

Garden City, Kan.—A new theater and office building will soon be erected here on Main street, for which the plans are now being drawn.

Theater Jottings from Missouri.

Slater, Mo.—Mr. and Mrs. William Jenkins of the Auditorium theater here gave a Red Cross benefit August 7, which netted the Relief Workers $135.70. The first part of the program consisted of an excellent Vitagraph feature, "Aladdin from Broadway." The second part was made up of Slater's best talent.

St. Louis, Mo.—The New Orpheum theater at Ninth and St. Charles street, will be opened Labor Day, September 3, with E. J. Sullivan as manager.

St. Joseph, Mo.—The Crystal theater will open August 19, having been closed for redecorating.

St. Louis, Mo.—The Empress theater here has been completely redecorated and will reopen August 13.

New Theaters and Changes in Oklahoma.

Delaware, Okla.—Ralph Sullivan has bought the interest of Louis Warwick in the Nusho theater. The new firm will be known as Green & Sullivan.

Foss, Okla.—The Empress theater here has been leased by Miss Alma Gilham and Miss Modelle Childress, who will continue the shows at this theater.

Miami, Okla.—The Picher theater here has been leased by W. J. Cotter.

Bartlesville, Okla.—The Odeon theater has been purchased by Messrs. C. E. Oliver, Carl Drath and T. C. Steeper, who have already taken charge of their new holdings.

Ada, Okla.—J. F. Painter of Franks, Okla., has bought the De Sota theater here from Charles Chauncey.

Clinton, Okla.—Charles Duffield is contemplating the opening of a large moving picture theater here.

Healdton, Okla.—The Healdton Amusement Company has been chartered here with a capital stock of $2,000 by G. W. Jennings, J. H. Smith and Fred C. Ryburn of this town.

Denver, Colo.—The Plaza theater was damaged by fire to the extent of $500 recently.

Santa Fe, N. M.—The Paris theater has been remodeled by the manager, who has made it thoroughly modern and up-to-date.

San Francisco Briefs.

Charles Rosenthal, of the M. & R. Feature Film exchange, recently made a visit to the new Los Angeles branch. Its latest release, the Ivan production, "Babbling Tongues," is being shown at the Rialto theater.

Chester Roeder, formerly with the Mutual exchange, is now filling a position with the Progressive Film exchange.

The Progress theater on Fillmore street recently broke all former records for attendance with "The Flame of the Yukon."

H. A. Oastler, of the American theater and Nixon opera house, Winnemucca, Nev., was a recent visitor there, having motored down for a two weeks' stay.

Lotz Out of Pathe Exchange.

San Francisco, Cal.—H. E. Lotz, for the past year manager of the local branch of the Pathe Exchange, Inc., has given up this position and left recently for New York to form new connections. Special Representative Charles A. Meade is in charge pending the selection of a new manager, and will probably remain here for several weeks. Before leaving Mr. Lotz was presented with a gold watch by employees of the local office.

Turner & Dahken Circuit Notes.

San Francisco, Cal.—"On Trial," the initial purchase of the First National Exhibitors' Circuit, was recently presented at the Tivoli opera house with great success, and will now be shown over the entire T. & D. circuit, after which it will be released to other houses that have booked it from Turner & Dahnken. It was not intended to show this production so early, but unforseen conditions arose in connection with the screening of the "Curse of Iku" and "On Trial," and it was hastily substituted in its stead.

Fred Dahnken, Jr., president of the circuit, will go east shortly to attend a meeting of the First National Exhibitors' Circuit, and E. B. Johnson will also be off to attend to business connected with that organization about the 24th of August.

The new office building of the Turner & Dahnken Circuit on Golden Gate avenue will be ready for occupancy within sixty days.

J. T. Turner, vice-president and general manager of the circuit, has returned from a three weeks vacation at Shasta Springs.

Universal Jottings.

San Francisco, Cal.—Dave Bershon, manager of the California Film exchange at Los Angeles, and formerly of this city, was a recent visitor here.

Leon Haas, of the local staff, is enjoying a vacation in the southern part of the state, and while away will explore the mysteries of Universal City.

Ed. Fowler, also of the local force, has returned from a vacation spent on the Russian River.

The patriotic spirit of the day has struck the fair employees of the California Film exchange, and during spare moments all are busy on needle work. Miss Stella Uri has joined a sewing club, while the others are merrily clicking their needles in knitting socks for soldiers.

Here and There Among the Theaters.

Oakland, Cal.—The Beach & Krahn Amusement Co. has awarded contracts for the construction of a moving picture theater on College avenue, near Shafter. This will be the third house in its circuit.

Redwood City, Cal.—A fire occurred recently in the Alhambra theater, which is being remodeled. Repairs will be made and the house reopened at the earliest possible date.

Reno, Nev.—The Majestic theater has been refurnished and opened as a vaudeville and moving picture house by the Nixon estate, K-E-S-E features being shown four times a week.

Hollister, Cal.—Stark & Hodges have purchased the Opal theater. They were formerly of Manteca and Lodi.

Association Gets Down to Constructive Work

United Motion Picture Industry of Northern California Holds Meeting—Industrial Insurance and Billboard Advertising are Discussed.

From T. A. Church, 1507 North Street, Berkeley, Cal.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.—The monthly meeting of the board of directors of the United Motion Picture Industry of Northern California, composed of film exchange men and exhibitors, was held at the Techau tavern on August 8, with a full attendance. Now that all matters connected with organization work are at an end and the campaign for membership has proved eminently successful, this new body of film men is settling down for the constructive work for which it was formed.

At the recent meeting it was pointed out that moving picture houses and film exchanges were being called upon to pay a much higher rate of industrial insurance for their employees than is the case in many other lines and it was decided to investigate this and make an attempt to secure a rate to conform more closely to the actual risk. The organization also hopes to correct some of the faults in the present system of billboard advertising so extensively used here. Much "dead" paper is being left on the local billboards, to the detriment of theater advertising, and it is desired to induce bill posters to remove the notices of special events as quickly as possible in order to make this form of advertising more effective. The strike of photo-engravers also came in for attention at this meeting, exhibitors doing newspaper advertising being seriously affected. At the present time many exhibitors are compelled to have cuts made outside the newspaper offices, a source of considerable expense, and the proposition of curtailing advertising of this kind during the strike was discussed

Imperial to Advance Prices.

San Francisco, Cal.—Owing to the increased cost of film service, advertising and labor, the management of the Imperial theater has had to advance the price of admission to 10, 15 and 25 cents for matinees, and 15, 25 and 35 cents for evenings. This house was one of the pioneers in the 10-cent field and was also one of the first to inaugurate 10 and 20-cent prices. In discusing the advance, Manager J. L. Partington said: "Costs have been steadily mounting skyward and have reached such a point that a higher admission price is absolutely necessary. The public has become accustomed to paying more for everything else and will doubtless see the justice of the small increase asked for high-grade amusement." The Imperial has recently been redecorated, the exterior and lobby made resplendent by a new coat of paint, new lights installed and new furnishings added to the ladies' rest room.

Nat A. Magner Out of the Hospital.

San Francisco, Cal.—Nat A. Magner, of the film exchange bearing his name, has recovered sufficiently from the operation he recently underwent in a local hospital to be out and is again able to come down to his office. His rapid recovery is now expected.

Fine Organ for T. & D. Theater.

Berkeley, Cal.—A large Wurlitzer Hope-Jones unit orchestral organ has been installed in the T. & D. theater, conducted under the management of E. J. Merlin, at a cost of about $30,000, and this is now proving a great drawing card for this house. The task of removing the old instrument and installing the new one was accomplished with a minimum of inconvenience and a piano was used during the time there was no organ in operation. The new instrument was formally presented to the people of Berkeley at a free recital held on Saturday morning, with the well-known organist, Albert Hay Malotte, at the console. In addition to installing a new organ in this theater the owners are expending $10,000 in putting in a tea room and children's play room on the mezzanine floor and in renovating the house. On the first of September prices will be advanced to 15 cents for adults and 10 cents for children. This theater is one of the most important in the chain of houses conducted by the Turner & Dahnken circuit and is being kept up to the minute in its appointments and in the class of service rendered.

K-E-S-E District Manager Visits Coast.

San Francisco, Cal.—E. R. Pearson, district manager for the K-E-S-E., arrived in this city recently for a short stay and after inspecting the local exchange and putting in a profit sharing system, left to visit the Los Angeles branch. Before returning east he will return to this city to make another short stay. This is Mr. Pearson's first visit to this territory and he has enjoyed the trip immensely.

Infringement on "The Slacker" Claimed.

San Francisco, Cal.—When the Turner & Dahnken circuit recently featured the Metro production, "The Slacker," and inaugurated a great advertising campaign, the management of the Strand secured the K-E-S-E feature, "The Man Who Was Afraid" and billed this as A Slacker, "The Man Who Was Afraid." The Metro Pictures Corporation at once applied for an injunction against the New York & San Francisco Amusement Co., the Strand Theater company, D. J. Grauman and Sidney Grauman to prevent them from making use of the term "Slacker" in connection with a photoplay and was granted a temporary restraining order. It is alleged that the order was violated and the matter will be aired at an early date in the U. S. Federal District Court presided over by Judge Van Fleet.

Fine New House for Oakland.

Oakland, Cal.—The American theater, San Pablo avenue and Seventeenth street, was opened on August 4 by C. W. & Rex Midgley under very auspicious circumstances. This theater was formerly known as the Reliance, but had been closed for months and the new owners have remodeled and redecorated it, making virtually a new house of it. The exterior lighting has made this spot one of the brighest places in the downdown district. The large marquee is brilliantly illuminated, while a forty foot sign, with an animated border and bearing the name "American," surmounts the house. An animated electric American flag, 5 by 15 feet in size also serves to attract attention, while a large illuminated sign two blocks away on another main thoroughfare directs attention to the location of the house. The theater, which has a seating capacity of 1,600, was packed at both performances on the opening night, the leading attraction being a Metro production, "The Haunted Pajamas." Many San Francisco exhibitors and film exchange men were present at the opening and the floral tributes were unusually plentiful. Music is furnished by an orchestra of twelve pieces, under the direction of John Warry Lewis, and the American quartette was an added feature on the opening night. The prices are 15 cents for the lower floor and 10 cents for the balcony, a pay-as-you-enter system being used, instead of a box office.

Says There is Money in Second Run Pictures

Seattle Exhibitor in Shopping District Raises Price and Changes from First Run Policy for Second Run Pictures—Makes a Success of It.

By J. S. Anderson, East Seattle, Washington.

SEATTLE, WASH.—Neither the war nor summer weather nor anything, except the car strike, have cut into the profits this summer of John Hamrick, manager of the Rex. Mr. Hamrick's theater is a house of about 600 capacity, situated on Second avenue in the very center of Seattle's shopping district. Until this year the Rex had always been operated as a first run house. In the early spring Mr. Hamrick decided to put on second run pictures. It was just a few months after the admission price had been raised from 10 to 15 cents, but the manager did not lower the price in spite of the fact that the finest run houses in the city charge no more for general admission than 15 cents.

The programs at the Rex are composed only of those features which have played to extraordinary business during their first run in the city. The usual plan is to change twice a week, but when a picture warrants it, it is kept on a full week. For special reasons first run pictures are sometimes shown; as, for instance, after "Hell Morgan's Girl" had played a very successful second run at the Rex, a week or two later it was followed by "The Girl in the Checkered Coat," and the fact that the same cast appeared in this picture that had made such a hit in "Hell Morgan's Girl" was made the keynote of the advertising. Excellent business was the result. Mr. Hamrick has no trouble in getting the same admission price for his second run pictures that the first run houses charge, and the first week of the car strike is the only time this summer when his business has not been satisfactory. After that first week people found out that jitneys were just about as good as cars to ride in, and that the Rex was still showing good pictures, so the second week Mr. Hamrick's business came back to normal and has continued that way.

Seattle Paramount-Artcraft Notes.

Seattle, Wash. — Paramount - Artcraft's selective star series opened simultaneously in Seattle, Portland, and Spokane on August 12, with Margarite Clark in "The Amazons." It was shown at the Coliseum in Seattle.

Clarence Hill arrived from the San Francisco headquarters this week to discuss with H. G. Rosebaum, manager of the Seattle Paramount-Artcraft office, the question of opening a branch in Portland. The territory will be as nearly as possible equally divided. Portland is to have the southern Washington territory below Chehalis.

Guy Navarre, road representative, has just returned from a trip through the Oregon territory, having signed every town he visited.

Miss E. Erickson, formerly head stenographer at the Salt Lake City Triangle office, is now stenographer in the contract department of the Seattle Paramount-Artcraft office.

At the Seattle Triangle Exchange.

Seattle, Wash.—H. H. Hurn, manager of the Seattle Triangle office, reports that the "Flame of the Yukon" broke all Saturday and Sunday records at the Strand theater, Walla Walla, and that similar satisfactory reports regarding this feature are coming in from all over the territory.

Mr. Hurn called a meeting of his three salesmen, W. W. Armstrong, Ed. I. Hudson, L. T. Turner, last week to discuss the handling of the new Hart and Fairbanks reissues in which exhibitors have already shown much interest.

T. Thurston, cashier at the Triangle office, has gone on a short vacation to Mt. Rainier.

Other Notes From the Film Row.

Seattle, Wash.—Fred C. Quimby, Northwest supervisor for Pathe, left this week for Butte.

L. J. Schlaifer went to Eastern Montana this week. His partner, Melvin G. Winstock, was in Portland last week looking after the business of their features.

B. L. Daniels, of Coeur d'Alene, Idaho, wired to the Seattle G. A. Metcalfe store for two Power's 6B machines this week.

Spokane News Letter

By S. Clark Patchin.

Brief Notes of Local Film Circles.

SPOKANE, WASH.—Ruth Corwin, who recently appeared in "Soul Mates" at the Liberty, is a former Spokane girl. Students of the North Central High school, where she attended, made up a party and attended the theater in a body when the fact was learned.

Mary Pickford played to standing room at the Liberty in "The Little American."

Among pictures which drew well in Spokane the week of August 6 were Norma Talmadge in "The Law of Compensation" at the Clemmer; Bryant Washburn in "The Golden Idiot" at the Casino; Mary Pickford in "The Pride Of The Clan," at the Lyric, and Louise Lovely in "The Gift Girl," at the Rex.

Coeur d'Alene Strand Burns.

Coeur d'Alene, Ida.—Fire of mysterious origin did damage to the extent of $30,000 in the building occupied by the Strand theater at 2 a. m., August 9. This building is now being remodeled by a syndicate of which M. B. Daniels is manager and the syndicate took over this and the Lyric of Coeur d'Alene recently.

The blaze started in the rear of the theater when no one was about and the stage and screen and orchestra equipment and many of the seats were burned. The building is owned by John B. Taylor and the furnishings by O. R. Shern. Mr. Daniels says the building will be rebuilt and pictures will be shown as soon as possible.

Ralph Ruffner's Interesting Career.

Spokane, Wash.—From messenger boy for the Western Union to a railroad telegraph operator, then entering the moving picture business on a piano stool, later to be manager of one of the most up-to-date moving picture houses in the northwest are a few of the experiences of Manager Ralph Ruffner, of the Liberty theater, Spokane, Wash., who now has a machine installed in his three-room office suite on the third floor of the building, and a screen covered by dark curtains to be used for showing him special run or open market pictures.

Additional to the above, Mr. Ruffner has been office boy in a railroad master mechanic's office, operator of a steam hammer in a railroad blacksmithy, office stenographer, city ticket agent, baseball player, a moving picture pianist and organist, and now, when he chooses, he handles the mammoth Wurlitzer, Hope-Jones organ of the Liberty with ease. He can handle any angle of the moving picture business from janitor to operator, decorater, general director, publicity and advertising man, and manager, and put in odd times amusing the patrons by furnishing music for them during the pictures. He is a live-wire at advertising, and is always working up something new to attract the attention of the thousands who pass and enter the theater daily and weekly. He is a good publicity man, and gets by with much free publicity in newspapers here by various ingenious means.

Right now Mr. Ruffner is concentrating his efforts in and using his past experiences in his capacity as manager of the Liberty.

Should the regular operator be unable to work and no substitute be immediately available, Mr. Ruffner peels off his coat and goes to work. Aside from putting in about 16 hours a day at the theater or in connection with it, Mr. Ruffner keeps his muscles limbered up by playing with a 100-pound dumb bell which he keeps in his office, and can easily put it up several times with one hand then hold out at arms length with both hands.

In 1907 he was inveigled into the picture show business. A railroad friend induced him to play the piano at his Comet theater in Vancouver, Wash., across the river from Portland, and he later became manager of this theater. He hit on the idea of extending credit to the soldiers of the fort there, who were paid monthly, and each was allowed a credit up to $3 worth of seats a month. On pay day they squared their accounts—"sometimes"—according to Mr. Ruffner. He said the experiment cost him about $20,000, which he carries as souvenir paper and would sell cheap. He managed a small theater at Ranier, Ore., in 1914, then went to Butte, where he made a signal success of the American theater, and came to Spokane in the spring of 1915 to manage the Liberty, where fortune has continued to smile upon him.

Dakota Theater Notes.

Bismarck, N. D.—The Publicity Film company of this city has made for the State Fire Marshal a film which shows modern fire-fighting methods. This will be used by the marshal's office in educational work.

Morristown, S. D.—John Ritter has purchased the interest of C. O. Dunning in the moving picture show.

Among Nebraska Film Men.

Kearney, Neb.—Local exhibitors have ventured Sunday shows. There is a liberal patronage and it is likely that seventh day shows will become firmly established.

Omaha, Neb.—A daughter, Mona Virginia, has been born to Mr. and Mrs. George H. McCool. The father is booker at the local exchange of the Universal.

Havelock, Neb.—The Joy theater has been sold to R. W. Wolverton.

Omaha, Neb.—The Empress theater has added a ladies' rest room, fitted with Jacobean furniture, writing desk, lounge and chairs.

Longacre Gets Portland Connection.

Portland, Ore.—The Longacre Film corporation, releasing Alice Howell comedies under the brand of Century Comedies, has obtained a Portland connection and will open offices with Bluebird at the exchange of the Film Supply company of Oregon. Gus Metzger, manager, reports that his company will also take care of the distributing company's affairs in Seattle and Spokane.

Eastern Triangle Manager Visits.

Portland, Ore.—Gerald Payne, reputed to be the youngest exchange manager in the District of Columbia, honored Portland with a visit August 8, when he stopped off a few hours between trains en route from Los Angeles to the East. He called on several of Portland theaters using Triangle service, and expressed his opinion that business seemed much better than he had anticipated it would be. He was agreeably surprised with the city.

Organist Writes a Song.

Portland, Ore.—E. H. Hunt, organist at the People's, has written and published a patriotic popular song called "Swat the Kaiser," which had its premier presentation at the People's when it was sung by the Portland Ad Club Quartette. Needless to say it went over big.

New Portland Censor Board Meets.

Portland, Ore.—The new censor board appointed by Mayor George L. Baker in an effort to minimize the heretofore alleged censorship unfairness held its organization meeting August 7. Gus A. Metzger, manager of the Universal exchange, has been made a member of the board since the list of appointees was made public last week. A committee consisting of C. W. Meighan, manager of the People's theater; Gus Metzger, and W. P. Keady was appointed to formulate a new set of rules for the guidance of the viewers of the board. It is anticipated that these rules will give everybody a fair deal.

Pathe to the Front.

Portland, Ore.—That local exchanges are receiving patronage in preference to out-of-town exchanges is evidenced by the way the Pathe exchange is coming into favor with Portland exhibitors. Manager W. W Kofeldt has finally landed Gold Rooster features in the People's theater, Portland's big first run house, to start September 16. He has also placed "The Fatal Ring" at the Pantages, and "The Battle of the Somme" at the Majestic.

C. E. Waite, traveler for Pathe, recently returned from a trip South, and reports business much better than expected.

Portland Exhibitors Do Exhanges' Work

Object to Requirement of Exchanges to Make Collections—Have to Keep Wires Hot With Changing Shipping Orders—Long Distance Shipments Blamed.

By Abraham Nelson, Majestic Theater Bldg., Portland, Ore.

PORTLAND, ORE.—Oregon exhibitors are getting tired of doing office work for Seattle exchange. To obviate long distance shipments, the cause of much complaint by Oregon theater men, and loss of business to Seattle exchanges, the distributors recently hit upon the plan of putting in a lot of small circuits throughout the territory. The circuit scheme is not new, of course, but of late it has become quite popular as a means of quieting exhibitors' complaints about high express rates on shipments to and from Seattle.

The circuit plan worked all right as long as the circuits remained intact as the road man originally arranged them, but when one exhibitor happened to drop out the wires began to hum between Seattle and the remaining members of the circuit, and the exhibitors had shipping instructions to worry about. Of late exchanges have become more presumptious and are ordering exhibitors to ship films C. O. D. to circuit members. The C. O. D. amounts vary each week, according to the way the slow pay circuit member sends his check to the Seattle office, and the member making the shipment to him must receive a notice of the amount each week.

It is causing a lot of dissatisfaction among Oregon exhibitors to be compelled to worry about this routine work for the exchanges just to save express charges on long distance shipments, and they are looking forward to the establishment of more exchanges in Portland.

Goldwyn Holds Trade Showing.

Portland, Ore.—C. F. Hill, new manager for Goldwyn, temporarily moved his sales force down from Seattle for the accommodation of Portland and Oregon exhibitors, and held a trade showing of the first productions released under the new brand. The cozy Sunset theater was the scene of the exhibitions on August 9, 10 and 11 before and after the regular shows. The regular Sunset organist was in attendance at all performances.

Nearly every exhibitor in Portland viewed "Baby Mine," and a number of out-of-town men were also present. Among these were George Bligh, Bligh theater, Salem; A. H. McDonald, Rex theater, Eugene; W. S. Humphrey, Savoy theater, Eugene; Henry E. Morris, Star theater, McMinnville; E. M. Thurber, Orpheum theater, Marshfield; W. A. Long, Star theater, Oregon City; C. C. Ferguson, Baker theater, Newberg, and several others.

Harry C. Arthur, traveling representative for Goldwyn, was in Portland assisting Mr. Hill. Mr. Arthur resigned his position as traveler with Fox to accept the Goldwyn appointment. He recently completed a trip south from Portland, and reports excellent business. He says that the Percy-Moran Company, owning the new Rialto in Medford, were the first exhibitors in the Pacific Northwest to sign a Goldwyn contract.

Local Pictures Go Well.

Portland, Ore.—The People's Amusement Company patronized home industry during the week of August 5, and showed a program consisting entirely of Portland made photoplays. Manager Meighan, of the People's theater, intended to show the pictures during the first split of the week only, but the venture proved so successful that they were retained the full seven days.

The photoplays consisted of a six-reel drama, "A Nugget in the Rough," and a two-reel polite comedy, "The Tale of a Dress." They were produced by the American Lifeograph Company under the direction of Louis Moomaw, formerly with Burton-Holmes in Chicago. Both pictures make use of the excellent Oregon scenery to very good advantage. Ruth Weyland, Hazel Hansen, and Harold Grady are featured.

G. E. Jackson Is Appointed Manager.

Portland, Ore.—With the coming of A. S. Kirkpatrick, formerly Portland Mutual manager and now personal representative of John R. Freuler, with headquarters in Chicago, formal announcement of the appointment of George E. Jackson, former Mutual road man, to the office of manager of the Portland branch was made. H. H. Brownell, well known in Portland film circles, is the new traveler out of the Portland office.

Oscar Hanson, booker, will leave Aug. 16 for a tour of the Mutual offices to install a uniform booking system in all of them. This system has been worked out in the Portland office during the past few years.

Mr. Kirkpatrick is making the present tour for the purpose of systematizing operation in all the Mutual offices, and is delivering a personal message from President Freuler to the branch managers of Mutual west of Denver. The managers east of the Rockies were called in conference in Chicago.

The Portland film fraternity was on hand a hundred per cent. strong to greet Mr. Kirkpatrick on his visit here. His rise in the film circles in Portland were rapid. He resigned a position as efficiency expert with the City of Portland to take up the same line of work with the Mutual when C. J. Kerr was manager of the Portland office. He afterwards became branch manager for Metro, then traveling representative for Mutual, and within a few months manager.

Mr. Kirkpatrick is returning to Chicago by way of San Francisco and Los Angeles.

New Mutual Manager for Butte.

Butte, Mont.—With the transfer of manager Caughman, of the Mutual office here, to the position of traveling representative out of Seattle it is announced that G. W. Whitney has been made manager. The Mutual office is enjoying excellent business.

With the Exhibitors.

Grants Pass, Ore.—The Bijou theater, Caldwell Bros., will discontinue pictures in their house for a short time and run a season of stock. While the summer slump has not been as bad this year as usual the theater managers feel that a little variety in shows will be welcome. The Bijou will resume pictures about Sept. 1.

Roseburg, Ore.—The Majestic theater, Frank Boles, is doing exceptionally well this summer.

Marshfield, Ore.—The Noble theater, Bob Marsden, is installing a new Johns organ.

Coquille, Ore.—The Scenic theater has been reopened by C. A. Pendleton.

Albany, Ore.—E. R. Cummings, the new manager of the Globe, recently made a trip to Seattle to arrange service. Mr. Cummings came to the Globe from Marshfield, where he was manager for E. M. Thurber at the Orpheum.

Emmett, Idaho.—J. M. Houston opened the new Emmett theater here September 9.

Portland, Ore.—Pete Sabo reports new installations of equipment at the Crystal theater, Astoria, and the Arcade, Springfield. W. J. White, owner of the Arcade, has sold his Springfield house.

Portland, Ore.—Sam Bernstein, who recently sold the Gem, has purchased the Elite theater in Rose City Park.

BROADWAY STAR FEATURE.

THE ATAVISM OF JOHN TOM LITTLE BEAR (One of the O. Henry Series—Two Parts).—The cast: John Tom Little Bear (Al Jennings); Jeff Peters (Dan Duffy); Blinkly (J. Abraham); Roy Conyers (Roberto Turnbull); Mrs. Conyers (Marye Brittain); Mr. Conyers (H. E. Smith). Directed by David Smith.

John Tom Little Bear, an educated Indian, Jeff Peters, a medicine fakir, and Mr. Blinkly, a would-be actor, are resting in camp. The Indian is cooking a steak, when from the bushes opposite a tiny cloud of smoke appears. The Indian staggers and extracts from his chest a tiny bullet. He runs to the bushes and drags therefrom a boy of nine years of age holding a tiny rifle in his hands. Using stragetic means the fakir obtains from the obstinate child his name and address. It transpires that the boy, Roy Conyers, ran away from home in order to shoot redskins and that the conductor set him off the train at Kansas. After a few days the Indian becomes sincerely attached to the boy, who confidingly tells John Tom that "Papa is a bad man." The fakir advises that the boy's mother should be telegraphed, and accordingly next day Mrs. Conyers arrives.

That night at the hotel the Indian becomes greatly attracted to Mrs. Conyers, but later he confides to Jeff that he realizes only too well the racial distinction. So he determines to seek the white man's surcease—whiskey. Events move rapidly. Mr. Conyers suddenly turns up at the hotel and kidnaps the boy. When the Indian learns of this he gives a frenzied shriek and chases the kidnapper. Mrs. Conyers is frantic with grief and Jeff is striving to comfort her, when suddenly the Indian appears with the boy in his arms. He explains that he has run fifteen miles. Mrs. Conyers hurries her precious treasure indoors, and Jeff leads the exhausted Indian back to camp. Jeff then picks from the Indian's belt a man's scalp, and he visualizes the grim adventure which the Indian must have experiencced in order to rescue the boy. He knows also that John Tom Little Bear may be "Red without—but White within."

FALCON FEATURES.

THE PHANTOM SHOTGUN (Four Parts).—The cast: Van Buren Courtland (R. Henry Grey); Elizabeth Kennedy (Kathleen Kirkham; Frank Marshall (Barney Furey); Hamilton Forbes (Frank Brownlee); Betty Marshall (Gloria Payton); Patton (F. H. Gibson Gowland); Larkins (Wm. Marshall); Harding (Bruce Smith); Capt. Lloyd (Capt. J. E. Nicholson). From story by Stanley Clisby Arthur. Directed by Harry Harvey.

Van Buren Courtland, partner of Hamilton Forbes, loves Elizabeth Kennedy, Forbes' secretary, who is also loved by Forbes. Forbes has Courtland arrested for forgery and, professing friendship, finances his defense. An important state witness becoming confused, Courtland is freed, and after accusing Forbes, goes west to find the bribed witness.

Elizabeth promises to marry Forbes, having been told by him that Courtland is dead. Courtland, seeing the announcecment of the engagement, comes east to stop the marriage, but is told by Larkins, a reporter, that the marriage has taken place, and he is persuaded to leave the city. Larkins, who has all along suspected Forbes of the frame-up, follows Courtland to the pier and sees Elizabeth and Forbes boarding the ship. Fearing trouble, Larkins goes along too. Elizabeth is overcome when she sees Courtland. When he explains matters to her she quarrels with Forbes and moves to another stateroom. That night Forbes is killed and Courtland suspected. Patton, a deck steward, is recognized by Larkins as an escaped convict who had been sent to prison on the false testimony of Forbes. Suspected of the murder, Patton denies his guilt to Larkins, but admits he saw the murderer.

That night Patton is also killed and an attempt is made upon Courtland's life. It is known that a shotgun is used in each case, but none can be found on board. The crew mutiny and the phantom gun saves the captain's life. Larkins is the next to be shot and wounded. Finally, the stateroom of Frank Marshall, a passenger, is fired into. Larkins promises to solve the mystery and flips a penny which rolls under the berth. In reaching for it with Marshall's cane the cane breaks, disclosing a hidden shotgun. Marshall confesses, saying that when his sister died, having been ruined and deserted by Forbes, he had sworn to kill her betrayer "in his happiest hour." Patton had witnessed the murder and Larkins' investigations were becoming alarming, so both had to be shot. Elizabeth and Courtland are now free to marry.

THE MARTINACHE MARRIAGE (Four Parts).—The cast: Sara St. Ypriex (Margaret Landis); Mrs. Martinache (Mollie McConnell); Hermia Martinache (Leota Lorraine); Irene Lawson (Julien Beaubien); Col. Horace Martinache (Philo McCullough); Eric Martinache (Vincent Berresford); Lord Sayle (Harl McInroy); Roscoe Vandercourt (Frank Brownlee). From story by Beatrix Demarest Lloyd. Directed by Bert Bracken.

In Paris Horace Martinache, wealthy young American, aids a ragged young flower girl who was knocked down by his machine. Placing her in a hospital he leaves money to pay for her education when she recovers, and sails for home without further thought of the affair.

Some years later Martinache, still a bachelor, learns that his nephew, Eric, during a trip abroad has fallen in love with an actress and is bringing her home to gain his mother's consent to their marriage. The mother and sisters of the young heir to the Martinache millions are horrified and ask Col. Martinache's aid to break up the match. The latter consents, but orders a genteel and diplomatic method. Madame Martinache is to invite the actress, Sara St. Ypriex, to be her guest in the household, the theory being that seeing a great deal of each other will cause the lover's devotion to cool. Sara becomes a guest at the mansion and is introduced to the social set which passes its week-ends under the hospitable Martinache roof.

Her beauty earns her new suitors, an Englishman, a nobleman of mediocre character, and Roscoe Vandercourt, a rather strong personality. To make the cure absolute Col. Martinache consents to join the house party and pay attention to the charmer. Sara is agreeably startled to discover in him her benefactor, she having been the flower girl of Paris. Col. Martinache is unaware of the coincidence, however, and his love, encouraged by the deeply grateful girl, becomes reality instead of pretense. Matters are aided when she is annoyed by the nobleman and by Vandercourt. Eric shows his fickleness when Col. Martinache is discovered in Sara's room after his response to cries of alarm, Vandercourt, her attacker, having just escaped. Col. Martinache is now committed more than ever to protect her happiness. He proposes and is accepted, while Vandercourt, now discovered to be an international crook, is removed by an avenging hand, Sara's father having traced him to America after a prison term served as the result of treachery.

KALEM.

THROUGH FIRE AND WATER (An Episode of "The Further Adventures of Stingaree"—Two Parts).—The cast: Stingaree (True Boardman); Howie (Paul C. Hurst); Kate Proctor (Edythe Sterling); Billy Shuster (Ray Hanford); Sergeant D'Aeth (Hal Clements). Directed by Paul C. Hurst.

Stingaree and his partner, Howie, while riding across Old Man Plain in the bush country of Australia, save the life of Billy Shuster, a worthless vagabond, when that individual drops a lighted cigarette, falls asleep, and catches fire. Shuster's coat is destroyed by fire, and Stingaree gives him his white one.

At their camp, Howie attempts to break a wild colt, but the horse runs away with him and finally throws him. The accident is seen by Kate Proctor, the "hired help" of Mr. and Mrs. Brockton. She helps Howie to the house and bandages his wounded arm. Stingaree, searching for Howie, arrives at the house. He finds a revolver on a side table, and Kate explains that it belonged to her husband, who has stolen her money and left her. From her description of the man, Stingaree recognizes him as no other than the man he has befriended. Shuster, having recognized Stingaree and read of the 500 pounds reward offered for his capture, is now at the troopers' barracks setting Sergeant D'Aeth on the track of the bushranger.

Stingaree rides back to the spot where he met Shuster, and there, to experience the keen delight of throwing Sergeant D'Aeth off the track, he makes new tracks in place of the old ones which have been obliterated. He rides to a stream, which he enters and rides through. Sergeant D'Aeth and Shuster, following his tracks, reach the stream. They decide that each one shall take a side of the stream and search for the tracks until nightfall. Then they shall camp for the night and meet in the morning. By evening neither has found trace of the bushranger, so they make separate camps for the night.

Before dawn, while both his pursuers are sleeping, Stingaree pays them a visit. Coming to D'Aeth camp, he trades hats with the sergeant, and also appropriates his coat. Now, with Stingaree's fancy striped hat, and a white shirt, the sergeant could easily be mistaken for the bushranger. Then Stingaree visits Billy's camp with the sergeant's horse (which he had exchanged for his own) and changes the sergeant's horse for Billy's. Taking Shuster's hat with him, Stingaree hides in the bushes to await results.

When the two pursuers awake they are astounded at the traisformations. And when Shuster sees the sergeant on Stingaree's horse, with a white shirt and Stingaree's hat, he mistakes D'Aeth for the bushranger. D'Aeth, seeing Shuster on his horse and wearing Stingaree's white coat, mistakes him for Stingaree. Both open fire, and Shuster is the victim.

Stingaree returns to Kate with the 500 pounds reward which he appropriated from the sergeant. He tells her that her husband, whom he found fatally wounded after a flight from the troopers, sent it to her.

SPARKLE COMEDY.

HER PEIGNOIR (One Reel).—The cast: Ami Simple (Tom Mulgrew); Janice Simple (Estelle Wynne); Mrs. Gay (Mrs Herbert); Mr. Gay (Hamilton Crane). Directed by Charles Pitt.

Ami Simple and his wife never tire of telling their neighbors, Mr. and Mrs. Gay, of their wonderfully happy and eugenic marriage. One morning Mrs. Simple, struck by a stunning new peignoir in Vogue, decides to have one and goes at once to her dressmaker. Ami returns home to lunch and cannot get in. With the aid of Gay he breaks in through the window and finds a note on the table which reads: "Have gone to have my peignoir cut out. Janice."

Horrified at the terrible news, Ami calls up the hospital and is told that Mrs. Simple is undergoing ether. Rushing to the hospital he benus over the bed and finds the patient is another Mrs. Simple. He shows the note to the superintendent, who calls in several doctors for discussion. After trying in vain to discover from their medical books what a peignoir is, they conclude it is some terrible new disease and assure Simple that his wife has probably gone to a specialist. Overcome, Simple enters a saloon and manages to take the edge off his sorrow.

Meanwhile Janice returns and Mrs. Gay asks her if the operation was successful. Explanations follow and Janice unwraps a bundle and shows what a peignoir is. Simple wends a crooked path home and when he, too, is told what a peignoir is he flops to the floor.

JAXON COMEDY.

TOUGH LUCK (One Reel).—Pokes and Jabs are behind with their board and are held up by the boarding housekeeper at the point of a pistol. Jabs tells her that they have money hidden in their room and she agrees to wait till they go up and get it. Mrs. Ham goes to market and returns just in time to catch the delinquents about to skip. Jabs escapes, but Pokes is caught by the hair of his head and made to work out the double board bill as cook, waiter and scrub woman. Pokes tries to escape one night, but Mrs. Ham hears the commotion and, mistaking it for burglars, notifies the police.

The cop arrives just as Pokes drops out of the window. They grapple and in the scuffle the cop loses his helmet, revealing Jabs. Mrs. Ham from the window recognizes the pair and is furious. Looking about for a weapon of vengeance, she seizes the packed trunk and hurls it at them. It hits Pokes in the head. Jabs does his duty and arrests Pokes, who appears in court the following morning a wiser and smaller man.

"As good as gold." "As white as snow." "As fine as silk." Why do other papers in this field invariably try to compare with the standard of the MOVING PICTURE WORLD? There's a reason.

SELIG.

SELIG WORLD LIBRARY NO. 14.

Vast Vineyards of California—The grape is the oldest of cultivated fruits. Its culture in California was begun by the Spanish missionaries about 1770. The grapes are picked by hand, placed in boxes and hauled to the wine presses. When grapes come to the winery they are run through a machine which crushes the grapes but not the seeds. Juice is strained from the pulp and placed in reservoirs. Here's some choice fruit.

The American Rattlesnake—The rattlesnake of Southwestern America is one of the most deadly of poisonous serpents, ready to defend itself, it seldom leads an attack. It feeds on rats, squirrels and rabbits.

The Clay Industry—The clay used is a hydrous aluminum silicate, and is formed from the decomposition of aluminous rocks. Women are employed to cast small statues. Toy animals cast from clay. Casting vases. A statuette sculptor.

The Buddhists Pagodas of Burma—About nine-tenths of the total population of Burma are Buddhists. Although banished from Hindustan, Buddhism prevails in China, Siam, Mongolia and Japan, and its adherents are said to number 147,000,000. The Shoay-Dagon at Rangoon, Burma, is the most venerable Buddhist Pagoda in the world, 970 feet high and supposed to have been built 585 B. C. The Pagoda and surrounding shrines are covered with gold leaf. A Pagoda contains some relic of Buddha, or one of his disciples, such as a bone, a tooth, or a hair. Pagodas at Mandalay, India.

THE SOLE SURVIVOR (Two Parts).—The cast: Joan Darcy (Bessie Eyton); John Gaunt (Charles Clarey); The Mad Scientist (Lafayette McKee); His Slave (Roy Watson); Thomas Wynn (Charles Wheelock). Written by James Oliver Curwood. Directed by F. J. Grandon.

Five young men meet at the home of Thomas Wynn and propose that they shall meet again there five years from that date at nine o'clock in the evening if they are alive.

The years pass and the appointed day is at hand. Only three of the five arrive on time. A letter is received from the fourth, who is dying from a bullet wound in a Bombay hospital. The three friends drink a toast to John Gaunt, the fifth and last man, "wherever he may be."

Then Gaunt appears in tattered clothing and tells a strange story. For three years he had buried himself in the wilds of Central America, in search of gold. He became lost in the jungle. He was captured by a mad scientist, who showed Gaunt a beautiful maiden imprisoned in a cage. The girl was classified by the scientist as one of his "specimens."

Gaunt tells a startling story of his hardships, of thrilling adventures and of his escape. He says that on the Coast settlement he was believed to be insane, and asks his friends to go with him to the rescue of the white girl imprisoned in jungle wilds. They go to the rescue and find the girl just in time to save her from death.

Gaunt has learned to love the girl and on the homeward journey asks her for her hand in marriage.

HER HEART'S DESIRE (One Reel).—The cast: Andres (Wheeler Oakman); John Fordyce (J. F. McDonald); Carolyn Carter (Bessie Eyton); Mrs. Carter (Lillian Hayward). Written by Lanier Bartlett. Directed by Colin Campbell.

Carolyn Carter obeys the commands of her mother, who is socially ambitious, and marries John Fordyce, a wealthy, disreputable rounder. Carolyn soon discovers, as so many women have before her, that a loveless marriage for gold only causes sorrow.

Matters go from bad to worse and finally Carolyn divorces Fordyce and goes away to live among the simple folk, between the mountains and the sea. There she meets Andres, a young shepherd, who is tending his flocks. Andres longs for an education and the beautiful stranger instructs him in book lore. Then it is that love enters the game and joins the hearts and hands of Andres, the shepherd, and Carolyn Carter, and finally she realizes her heart's desire of marriage for love and children.

GOLD SEAL.

THE WINNING PAIR (Three Parts—Release Week of August 27).—The cast: Beatrice (Ruth Stonehouse); Jack (Roy Stewart); John Croft (Alfred Allen); Ezra Moore (Harry Dunkinson); Gerald McLaughlin (Kingsley Benedict); Mrs. Ezra Moore (Evelyn Selbie); Hotel Clerk (Jack Dill); Mose Cohn (Walter Belasco). Written by Eugene B. Lewis. Produced by L. W. Chaudet.

Beatrice was the twenty-year-old daughter of Ezra Moore, grouchy old millionaire shoe manufacturer. Years before he had been in partnership with John Croft, but the partnership had been dissolved over a trivial matter and the two men had not spoken since. John Croft, Jr., or "Jack," a good-natured youth of twenty-four, is in love with Beatrice.

Jack is cut off by his dad, on his refusal to forget Beatrice. Holding herself in some degree responsible for Jack's embarrassing financial condition, Beatrice pays a call on the superintendent of her father's factory, with the result that Jack goes to work for Ezra Moore.

Ezra Moore specialized in men's shoes and John Croft in women's footwear. Beatrice, a "bug" on shoe leather, always kept on hand a supply of from fifteen to twenty pairs of the "fanciest make." As her father did not manufacture her style of shoes, she bought them wholesale from the Croft factory. The bill for Beatrice's shoes amounted to $380, and when her father received it he became greatly aggravated. The old man pointed out to his daughter how she had been flim-flammed on the prices, and what the prices should have been. To show that she was a good business woman, Beatrice had the Croft concern cut down the price of her shoes to meet her father's figures.

Moore had the gout in a bad way and his physician ordered him to the seaside to recuperate, and Beatrice was obliged to go along. The separation from Jack got on her nerves, so she issued orders to the head of her father's factory to give Jack the territory that embraces the seaside resort. One night, while at a week-end country party, Beatrice gets word that Jack will arrive the following day. She can't wait for the morning train. On the pretext that the message is from her father, that he has taken a sudden turn for the worse, she packs her trunk, which contains her full complement of footwear, and leaves for the seaside. On the way her car is wrecked and she is obliged to take refuge in a prominent hotel. The attaches of the hotel assume that she is a saleswoman and this suspicion is confirmed when her shoe trunk falls and bursts open, scattering her footwear over the floor. The trunk is put in the sample room. That night, Gerald McLaughlin, head of a large string of shoe stores, comes in with Jack and the latter is told about the line of shoes a new "drummer" has brought to town. Jack consults the register and wonders what Beatrice can be doing there.

The following morning Beatrice learns from Jack that she is supposed to be a shoe drummer. This appeals to her, and she decides to go through with it. The result is that she lands a half-million-dollar order from McLaughlin for his twenty-six stores. She sends the order to Jack's father. It is followed by a personal letter from McLaughlin to Croft, congratulating him on having such a "saleswoman."

Later Jack learns that an army purchasing agent is about to place an order for 350,000 pairs of shoe. With the aid of Beatrice he secures the order and sends it to Moore's factory. The constant effort of Jack and Beatrice has been to effect a reconciliation between their fathers.

SCANDAL EVERYWHERE (Rel. Week of Aug. 27).—The cast: The Western Man (Max Asher); The Soubrette (Gladys Tennison). Scenario written by R. A. Dillon. Produced by Craig Hutchinson.

The soubrette in the country hotel is flirting with a guest. The manager tells the detective to watch her, and she is bawled out for her acts. She leaves the hotel and outside meets Max and his wife. She flirts with Max, and his wife catches them and, bawling Max out, pulls him into the hotel. Max goes to the hotel desk to register, and catches the detective watching him. He slams the detective's head on the hotel desk and, going upstairs, shoots at him when he sees the detective examining the register for his name.

The detective grabs a water pitcher to throw it at Max, who shoots the pitcher out of the detective's hand. Max goes to his room, while the detective, to spy upon him, bores a hole from the room above and sends the plaster down on Max. Max shoots up at the ceiling, and then goes upstairs, to find the soubrette in the room, she returning after the detective vacated it.

She invites Max in, and he orders refreshments when the bell hop comes in answer to Max's shooting at the push button in the room. The detective takes the bell hop's uniform and, disguising himself, serves the drinks. Instead of a horse's neck drink he brings up the head of a horse (papier mache), and Max starts shooting at him.

The detective runs out and tells Max's wife where her husband is. She goes to the room. Max looks for his money and finds it gone. The soubrette, who has taken it, shoves the money in the detective's pocket, and Max, finding it there, starts shooting at him. They go down in a chase to the lobby where, back to the room again, Max jumps at the chandelier where the detective is hanging, and, missing the detective, hangs there and falls with the chandelier to the floor.

He goes right through the floor, down into the dining room. He goes right through the dining room table and into the lobby, where some cops mistake him for the detective, and he flees, followed by everyone. Max doubles on them, then meets his wife. That lady proceeds to take good care of him in a way he did not expect.

WHY THEY LEFT HOME (Rel. Week of Aug. 27).—The cast: Ira Dewberry (William Franey); Mary Mandrake (Zasu Pitts); Flossie Flatter (Lillian Peacocke); Jack Dawson (Milburn Moranti); Character Man (Burt Law); Ira's Father (Bobby Mack). Scenario written by C. B. Hoadley. Produced by W. W. Beaudine.

Ira, who is employed at the oil station, falls in love with Flossie, wife of Jack, as they drive by. Ira later announces to his father that he is going to the city, and does. Mary, his ex-fiance, learns he has gone to the city and consoles the father of Ira by announcing that she, too, is going to bring Ira home.

In the city Ira meets Hank, a property man in a theater, who invites him to come with him behind the scenes. Mary has wandered into the same theater. A drama, entitled "The Salary of Sin," is on, and during the action Jack threatens Flossie if she does not marry him. Flossie scorns Jack, and Jack thereupon steals a sum of money from a desk, places it under a rug and accuses Flossie of stealing it. Ira recognizes the principals. He takes the action literally, as does Mary, in the orchestra section. Ira has seen Jack place the money under the rug. It looks black for the accused Flossie, but Ira rushes on the stage, interrupts the performance and accuses Jack of stealing the money. There follows a struggle, much to the amusement of the audience and the consternation of Mary, who flees the theater. Ira is thrown out and, explaining to Hank, is told that Flossie has children older than Ira and has been married three times. Ira is disillusioned and Mary, happening on the scene at this critical period, the twain are reunited—happier and wiser.

BUSTING INTO SOCIETY (Rel. Week of Aug. 27).—The cast: Lizzie (Gale Henry); Rupert (Milton Sims); "Lonesome" Larry (Charles Dorien); Father (Charles Haeffli); Mother (Mrs. George Hernandez). Scenario by Tom Gibson. Produced by Allen Curtis.

Rupert helped Lizzie hang the clothes on the line until it broke, and then they repaired to the kitchen, where the feminine head of the family, very much the worse for wear, hung over the ironing board. Lizzie would not hear the pleas of her Rupert to be married, for Rupert was only a hod-carrier. There must have existed in the mind of Lizzie some faint premonition of the riches to be hers, for a few minutes later the male head of the family, also very much used, burst in upon the group with the startling information that his lottery ticket had copped the grand prize and that thereafter no more ironing boards for them.

Rupert and his hod were quickly relegated to the back yard by Papa, and he and Lizzie, with, of course, Mama, went to live in a brownstone front. They wanted to get into society bad. So when the Grand Duke Larry comes along they plan a big feed for him. Larry, however, has his eyes only on their jewels, and after giving the silver the once over and dining in state, he holds them up and is about to make a get-away when the trusty hod-carrier looms on the scene.

He has, in all truth, been sticking around Lizzie pretty much despite being thrown out of the back, front and side doors a couple of dozen times, and when he sees the Grand Dooke's change of front he hops through the window and makes him come through. He covers him with the bread knife until the arrival of the officers of the law, and then the reunited family sit down and do justice to the rest of the ducal dinner, with Rupert the prospective son-in-law and hero of the hour.

NESTOR.

THE NIGHTCAP (Rel. Week of Aug. 27).—The cast: Eddie Latelywed (Eddie Lyons); Edith Latelywed (Edith Roberts); Lee Malatrops (Lee Moran). Scenario written by F. A. Palmer. Produced by Roy Clements.

When Eddie Latelywed went to the club, Edith, his wife, hurries over to her mother's home. The two women settle down to a quiet evening, except for the continual stream of advice and warning against the "wiles" of husbands that the worldly-wise mama gives.

Midnight finds the boys at the club somewhat unsteady—with divers highballs to their credit. They leave and, finding the last car gone, they commandeer a cab which stands alone, the driver having left it temporarily. The drive home is productive of laughable incidents and, arriving at Eddie's house (he having invited Lee to spend the night), Eddie discovers that he has forgotten his key, and the couple attempt to get in via the window. Inside, Eddie finds that he has but one clean pair of pajamas, so Lee dons Edith's lacy nightgown.

Edith and her mother, weary of waiting, start home. By the time they arrive the boys are asleep. They go in and Edith sees the arm and head of Lee, who has put her nightcap on, and thinks the worst. Eddie wakes up, grabs a pistol, thinking burglars are in the house, and, seeing his wife, he drops the pistol and starts to embrace her. But mother-in-law is on the job. She picks up the gun and takes a shot at the form in bed. Lee jumps up, explanations follow, and mama's plans and suspicions are foiled with the couple embracing.

STAR FEATURETTE.

HANDS IN THE DARK (Two Parts—Rel. Week of Aug. 27).—The cast: Jonathan Brewer (E. N. Wallack); Helen (Edith Johnston); Howard (J. Warren Kerrigan); Butler (Rex Roselli). Scenario written by William Parker. Produced by Henry McRae.

Helen, daughter of Jonathan Brewer, came to speak to her father regarding her love affair, but before she could make herself heard the old man, a miserly sort of a person, believed she came to request more jewels, and so paid no attention to her. A half hour before Howard, a clerk, and Helen's lover, had been sent from her father's house, accused of wanting to marry her for the possession of the jewels and coins, for which the old miser, in the neighborhood, was more hated than revered.

But Brewer is not long left to rub together his thin fingers over his earthly possessions, for he is killed. Mutely accused by his cigarette case found in the room, Howard is arrested, then convicted, and the day for his execution is set.

To the mountains with her aunt and butler Helen goes, and on the morning of the execution a forest fire routs them from their beds. The butler, acting suspiciously, arouses the girl, who follows him with a gun and, as the flames creep near, she sees him hastily dig up a bag filled with the precious stones. She covers the man with a gun and the rest comes easy. After a record run to the city and to the death chamber, the fire having broken all connections with the telephone to the city, Helen makes the trip, and she saves the life of her sweetheart.

PROPS, DROPS AND FLOPS (Two Parts—Aug. 29).— Shortly after the day began in the property room of the U-Funny theater there entered Griffith, the company's manager, with his associates from town. There was Mrs. Morris, the heavy, and Gladys, the soubrette. Bert, the head prop man, and Walter, his assistant, made a grab for Gladys, who was none other than the affianced of Griffith. Her suitcases and trunks received first attention, despite Mrs. Morris' fondness for both the property man and his assistant, and when her foot caught in a board in the stage and dangled into the prop room there was almost a stampede as to who should come to her assistance first. The climax arrived when Walter and Gladys were discovered in a small canoe in the middle of the lake by Grimth. The boat is overturned and, with the aid of a passerby, the two vacationists are lassoed, and almost dragged over the bridge's railing to safety. Griffith, unable to stand it longer, enters the water, when the rope is snapped, and there ensues a lively fight, with all emerging and seeking refuge in the park until their clothing dries.

A weary Willie passing along, with a penchant for stealing clothes, further complicates matters so, when the trio does finally arrive, much the worse for wear and tear, at the U-Funny theater, where the curtain is already up, some more things begin to happen. Mrs. Morris is justified in feeling slighted, and she plans a few stunts herself, which deprive Gladys of some of the spotlight, especially as she has arrived after Walter, taken from his duties as head prop man, is mustered into soubrette service. Bert finally helps out and becomes a target for the heavy, who hurls knives, daggers, hatchets and other delicate things at his head, shoulders and limbs, to show that she is an A No. 1 marksman, each time just missing a part of Bert's quivering flesh. Finally, when it comes to throwing the burning torches, a fire is started, and while the firemen are arriving other things start to happen, with Gladys, Walter and Mrs. Morris mixed up in the melee. Bert is finally rescued, after a very horrible experience, and Gladys and the chorus find that they have left little of their original abbreviated wardrobes.

JUNGLE TREACHERY (Two Parts—Rel. Week of Aug. 27).—The cast: Betty (Babe Sedgwick); Nathan Briggs (Charles Brinley); Bob (Fred Church); Big Bill McPherson (Fred Montague); Stenographer (Willard Wayne). Produced by Rex Hodge and W. B. Pearson.

Betty had always been a child of nature. Born in the heart of East Africa, she lived with her father, Nathan Briggs, a squatter on English territory, until now always happy.

Big Bill McPherson, the territorial surveyor to the English Government, is trying to persuade his son, Bob, just out of college and anxious to prove his worth, not to go to Africa, as two parties have already been lost there. But knowing that, if he can survey one hundred miles inland, the Government will pay him five thousand pounds, Bob heads an expedition into Africa, leaving with three men.

Nathan is prospering and has to account to no one. He hates the English, as did Betty until recently, and he is surprised to hear from a native that there is an English camp over the ridge. Betty is sent to find out what the men are in the neighborhood for, and on the way falls down a slide and sprains her ankle. The country is full of wild animals. At twilight the beasts of the jungle come forth for their prey and Betty finds herself in danger. She begins to scream for help. Bob hears the cries. He finds Betty and carries her to his tent, where he makes her comfortable and then proceeds to question her as to how she happens to be in East Africa.

Nathan has become anxious about Betty and starts out to search for her, after ordering the natives to get their forces together to attack the Englishmen. Nathan finds Betty at the tent. He swears vengeance. Betty warns Bob to prepare for fight, and by the time the natives arrive the Englishmen have made breastworks from where they fire. They are victorious in the ensuing fight.

Meanwhile, Nathan returns to his cottage. A lion, being attracted by the odor of meat, has entered the house, and as Nathan enters the door backwards, watching the fight in the distance, the animal pounces on him. He is found badly wounded and, knowing that he is about to die, sends for Betty, begging her forgiveness and confessing to Bob that it was he who had kept the English out of the territory, but pleading with him to take care of Betty.

Bob later drives the first survey line into British East Africa, and returns to introduce Mrs. McPherson to Big Bill, who is as happy over the outcome as they.

JERRY'S EUGENIC MARRIAGE (August 30).—The cast: Jerry (George Ovey); Marie (Claire Alexander); Expressman (George George); Pete (C. E. Feehan); Postman (Tom Riley).

Disconsolate, with only Pete, his old-time chum, for companionship, Jerry reads of the recent wedding of a man to a millionairess, effected through a newspaper want ad. To him comes the thought that he might be able to put through a similar deal. Jerry writes an ad calling for a beautiful wife, accomplished and affectionate, and clearly states he has no objection to one of wealth.

Jerry selects the picture of Marie as his prospective bride and wires her to come. Marie joins Jerry and together they go to a minister. Jerry offers his stamps for his fee. The ceremony is about to be performed when the clergyman demands Marie's eugenic certificate. They agree to visit the Eugenic Bureau. Marie is put through a severe test that results in her rejection by the physician. She departs for the railroad station to return to her home, while Jerry decides that matrimony is a pretty tough proposition.

REEL LIFE NO. 70 (Aug. 30).—The majority of people post a letter and give no thought to the intricate system required to speed it to its destination. To show what happens to the missive after it is placed in the box is the mission of "Handling the Mail," a leading section of Gaumont's "Reel Life" No. 70. After screen descriptions of various methods of collection, the work of handling the letter at the post office is described. How money orders are handled is also shown in this section.

"Using the Abalone," a little-known industry of the Pacific coast, is an entertaining series of pictures of the abalone shells, which are so popular in making jewelry, furnishing ornamentation for various articles, and as salad forks, jewel caskets, etc. The shells are removed from the rocks by deftly administered electric shocks, a method which brings the shell away intact.

"Beach Sports of California" will fascinate every one who loves the great out-of-doors. The pictures show fair bathers riding the "sport-fish," the newest sport of California beach resorts. There are also pictures of girls dancing on the beach.

A fourth section shows Bobby Feinberg, aged nine years, doing the difficult lassoe stunts which one associates with Will Rogers on the stage and with the cowboy stars of the Wild West shows. There are also two animated drawings of a humorous nature, founded upon pictures which have appeared in "Life." These are "The March of Science" and "What a Bachelor Sees at a Wedding."

MISS NOBODY (Astra—Five Parts—Aug. 19).—The cast: Roma (Gladys Hulette); Crespi (Cesare Gravina); Malone (A. G. Andrews); Jack Thurston (William Parke, Jr.); Roland Fabor (Sidney Mather). Directed by William Parke.

In the life of Roma there was only one thought, who was she? She was nobody. Ridiculed by her schoolmates, she begs her guardians to tell her the truth. With her happiness at stake, they convince her that she is a distinguished English lady. Vacation time at hand, Roma is greeted into society as Lady Partington. She wins the heart of Jack Thurston, a young Englishman. Roland Fabor, a gentleman burglar, admires her. Lord Pembroke, Thurston's uncle, pays him an unexpected visit and learns of his attentions to Roma. Pembroke is an old friend of the Partington family and he knows that Partington never had a daughter. Becoming suspicious, he places a detective on the trail of Jack. Praising her guardians, Roma has Jack visit them. Unfortunately they are pawnbrokers, and this to Jack seems peculiar. Becoming furious at Jack's actions, Roma denounces him and accepts Fabor against her guardians' wishes, as they know his true character.

At a reception given in Roma's honor, Fabor shows his true colors by stealing a necklace from one of the guests, and immediately leaves and goes to Roma's guardians to have it redeemed. To prove to Roma what he is, they hold Fabor and phone her. Suspecting something, Fabor escapes, leaving the necklace behind. As the detective walks in, Roma has the necklace in her hand and is accused of theft. Pembroke is notified by the detective that he has the goods on Roma. In the presence of Jack, Roma pleads with Pembroke to assist her. She shows him her locket. Opening the locket he steps back astonished.

THE FATAL RING Episode No. 9, "The Dice of Death"—Two Parts—Astra—Sept. 2).—The cast: Pearl Standish (Pearl White); The Priestess (Ruby Hoffman); Richard Carslake (Warner Oland); Tom Carlton (Henry Gsell).

Unaware of danger and ignorant of the fact that the Violet Diamond is not within the safe, Pearl Standish endeavors to open it. The result is an explosion which wrecks the room and hurls Carslake and Pearl to the floor. Tom and Spider learn Pearl's whereabouts. Dopey Ed, Carslake's henchman, regains his senses and shakes Carslake. His first thought is the ring and he eagerly searches the pockets of Carslake. Regaining consciousness, Pearl sees Ed. She throws herself upon him. Pearl opens his hand and the Diamond falls to the floor. Picking the Diamond up, Pearl rushes to the other room, only to be encountered by Ed again, and is knocked to the floor. Tom and the Spider arrive. Dopey Ed sees them and eludes them by jumping through the window. As they pass Carslake, he appears to be unconscious. Going to Pearl, they revive her. Carslake rises and, seeing the Diamond on the floor, picks it up and escapes.

The next afternoon Carslake, unaware of Dopey Ed's attempt to double cross him, plots with him to regain the setting for the Diamond. He sends his men to Pearl's home and by a trick they draw Pearl out into the garage. Binding her hand and foot, they bring her to Carslake's den.

Tom, worried, returns to the Standish home in an attempt to persuade Aunt Ella to prohibit Pearl's further quest for the ring. The phone rings and Tom answers it. Carslake is speaking. "The setting for the Diamond is in the top drawer of her dresser. Bring it to the Grand Central at three o'clock." Tom consents. Tom is at the station at the appointed time and, placing the setting in the ring, passes it into Carslake's pocket. Wiggsey Benson, a successful pickpocket and one-time confederate of Carslake, sees the incident between Carslake and Tom. Walking up to Carslake, he shakes him by the hand and at the same time fetches the envelope from his pocket. Realizing his loss, Carslake immediately follows Benson, and is in turn followed by Tom. Tracking him to an apartment, Carslake enters, while Tom remains outside.

Pearl finds herself locked alone and, in looking for a means of escape, she accidentally touches a wainscoting. Its secret compartment opens and to her surprise she finds the Violet Diamond. Overjoyed, she attempts to escape, but as she is about to go down the stairs she trips and falls to the bottom. Carslake's men bring her back and, wrapping her in a quilt, they place her on the sofa. She appears to be unconscious. Carslake left instructions that if he did not return by three o'clock, Pearl should be killed, and the hour was not very far off.

Carslake had followed Benson into the apartment. Closing the door behind him, he is astounded to see the Priestess and her adherents. Carslake tries to struggle with the Arabs, but is finally subdued. Death staring him in the face, Carslake promises to get the Diamond for the Priestess. Looking at his watch he sees it is near three, so he warns the Priestess to hurry. Grabbing a taxi they leave. Tom follows them. Nearing his den, Carslake sees Tom's taxi behind him. Sending one of the Arabs off the machine, Carslake has him fire and puncture the tires of Tom's machine. Arriving at his den, Carslake jumps off the machine and rushes in. Throwing the door back, he sees his man plunging the dagger in the wrapped up form on the sofa.

EFFICIENCY EDGAR'S COURTSHIP (Essanay—Five Parts—Sept. 3).—The cast: Edgar Bumpus (Taylor Holmes); Mary Pierce (Virginia Valli); Mr. Pierce (Ernest Maupain); Wimple (Rodney LaRock).

Efficiency wins success in business; why not in love? Edgar Bumpus, a rising young man, applies this reasoning to his courtship of Mary Pierce. He first eliminates Wimple, his closest competitor, who plays a guitar, by learning to play a saxaphone, which makes louder noise, and by sending Mary flowers and candy each time Wimple calls on her. The plan works O. K., until the saxaphone disturbs Mr. Pierce's slumbers. He and Edgar clash and the latter is forbidden to visit Mary any more.

Edgar employs a clipping bureau to send news items to Mr. Pierce which tells of the troubles young girls get into when their fathers refuse to let them have beaux. One eloped with a milkman; another disappeared. This has no effect upon Mr. Pierce, however, except to make him hate Edgar more. However, the youth's persistence finally wins Mary's love. Then Edgar plays his trump card. He gets Mary to sign a legal agreement to forfeit $10,000 to him, unless she marries him. The two then confront Mr. Pierce with this document. Rather than lose the money, he consents to lose his daughter, the only stipulation being that Edgar will throw away his saxaphone. Thus efficiency triumphs.

T. HAVILAND HICKS—FRESHMAN (Three Parts—On Program No. 7—Aug. 25).—The cast: T. Haviland Hicks (Lay McKee); Jack Merritt (Albert Macklin); Theophilus Opperdyke (James Turbell); Brewsters (William Sherwood). Scenario by Raymond E. Dakin.

T. Haviland Hicks contracts an intimate friendship with Theophilus. They are freshmen. Hicks is saturated with good humor. Theophilus' main characteristic is timidity and the least excitement makes him faint. The sophomores, indignant at Hick's abuse of the banjo, prepare to haze him. Theophilus overhears their scheme and warns Hicks. Hicks hurls a defy at the sophomores to the effect that they are welcome to haze him, but if they fail to do so, Theophilus and himself are to be secure from hazing for all time.

They accept the defy and on the appointed night repair to his room wrapped up in pillow cases. Hicks smashes the drop light against the wall and the room is steeped in darkness. When a light is secured, Hicks is not to be found and the sophomores conclude that he has dived through the window. In fact, he is right among them, wrapped up in a pillow case. The duped sophomores plan to avenge themselves. Hicks gets wind of their scheme and awaits developments with absolute calm.

On the fated night the sophomores drag Hicks out of bed and carry him off to their lair. They proclaim him to be the original "missing link" and urge him to do an imitation of a monkey; but he dives through a window into a tennis net held ready for the purpose by a number of freshmen. The pursuing sophomores encounter a superior number of freshmen and are roughly handled.

Thereupon the sophomores post a defy, daring Hicks and his class to substitute the freshman colors for the sophomore colors, which will be found floating from the flag pole at a stated hour. Hicks dons a coat of mail, disguises Theophilus as a gorilla and succeeds in routing the sophomores and hoisting the freshman colors. Hicks becomes the most famous man at college.

"GALLEGHER" (Two Reels—On Program No. 7—Two Parts—Aug. 25).—The cast: Gallegher (Andy Clark); Stephen Hade (Jack Willard); Dwyer (William Wadsworth); Detective Hefflefinger (Lou Stearn).

Gallegher is a fighter by birth, a student of crime by choice, and an office boy at the "Press" by necessity. His ambition, however, is to become another Sherlock Holmes. A sensational murder case is just going the rounds of all the newspaper offices. A millionaire has been murdered and the disappearance of Stephen Hade, his secretary, together with a large sum of money, leaves no doubt as to the perpetrator of the crime. A photograph and a full description of the murderer appear in every paper, and a reward of $5,000 is offered for the apprehension of the criminal. Particular attention is drawn to the fact that the index finger on Hade's right hand is missing. The reporters of the "Press" are advancing their theories of how Hade is most apt to be caught. Gallegher listens. His theory is that Hade will always be found wearing gloves of which one finger will be stuffed with cotton. The only man on the staff Gallegher respects is Dwyer, the sporting editor, who has just received information of a championship fight that is to be staged at the Eagle Inn at Torresdale on Wednesday.

The office of the "Press" receives a visitor in the person of Mr. Hefflefinger of the Secret Service. Gallegher is so engrossed on the detective's conversation that he neglects his office duties and even accompanies him to his hotel, where he astounds him by his knowledge of criminals, and his offer of assistance towards the apprehension of a notorious forger on whose trail Hefflefinger is just bent.

On his way back to the office he passes the railway station, where he sees a man wearing gloves with the right index finger standing out in a peculiar way. Gallegher decides to stick to his trail and follows him to Torresdale and thence to Eagle Inn. There he learns that Hade is going to attend the championship fight, which is to be staged in a big barn at the inn without the knowledge of the police.

Gallegher dispatches a telegram to Hefflefinger, asking him to meet him at the station, and then hurries back to Philadelphia and to the home of Dwyer to convey the news to the sporting editor. Dwyer sends a note to the city editor urging him to hold back the forms for the next morning's issue as long as possible. Accompanied by Gallegher, he hurries to the station, where they meet Hefflefinger. They get to Eagle Inn. Dwyer is admitted to the barn, while Gallegher and Hefflefinger climb to the hay loft, whence they can look down into the arena. While the fight is going on the police break into the barn and arrest everybody, including Dwyer. Hefflefinger secures Hade and being of the Secret Service is permitted to leave with his prisoner.

Gallegher stealthily secures the "copy" from Dwyer's pocket and, by pretending to be the son of the innkeeper, is permitted to get out of the barn to take leave of his father before he is taken to prison. When Gallegher reaches the outside he leaps into a cab and drives away at top speed. What with cold and maltreatment at the hands of policemen he encounters on the way, it is only by dint of grit and cunning that he succeeds in reaching the office of the "Press" just as the city editor is about to give the order to close the forms.

YOUNG SALTS (600 Feet on Program No. 7—Aug. 25).—This subject reviews the life of the marine. At the Culver Naval School the day begins at six o'clock. The morning is spent in such exercises as boxing, racing, scaling fences and playing tennis. This is followed by a Cutter Drill. In the afternoon a race is usually held between cutters. Water sports play an important part in the life of a marine. The film shows the men giving remarkable exhibitions of fancy diving, sliding down the shute, and of the unique "chain dive." It ends with a series of scenes which show that marines are not only sailors, but crack soldiers as well.

HOLY LAND (400 Feet on Same Reel as Foregoing).—This scenic of the Holy Land opens with a view of the Garden of Gethsemane, now a Russian monastery. Other views include a panorama of Jerusalem from the Mount of Olives; of the busy mart in what was once the Pool of Siloam; of lepers and beggars wailing for alms; of the ancient Wailing Place of the Jews at whose walls men and women are forever wailing, as they did thousands of years ago. Among other scenes are Christian Pilgrims carrying the cross along the way to Calvary; the Gate of Damascus; a caravan going through the desert and the little town of Bethlehem. Views of the latter include women making cakes and using goatskins as churns, people picking olives on the hills around Bethlehem, and tending their flocks today, just as they did centuries ago.

TURNING OUT SILVER BULLETS (1,000 Feet on Program No. 7—Aug. 25).—These pictures were taken at the Philadelphia Mint by permission of the United States Treasury Department. We see raw material transformed into a fiery liquid, cast into ingots and pressed in rolling mills, where it undergoes twenty-eight different operations. Another machine pounds out the blanks, which are annealed, cleaned and rounded off at the adges, at which stage they are cast into the coining machine that stamps out the finished coin. This is examined for defects, counted and weighed by machine.

THINK IT OVER (U. S. Amuse. Corp.—Five Parts—Aug. 13).—The cast: Alice Rowland (Catherine Calvert); Henry Whitworth (Richard Tucker); George Baring (A. Lloyd Lack); James Baring (Eugene Borden); Mrs. Martin (Auguste Burmester). Written and directed by Herbert Blache.

The action of this comedy-drama centers around Alice Rowland, an orphan under the guardianship of George Baring, an unscrupulous man, desirous of her fortune. To gain his ends Baring tries to force Alice to marry his son, James. Alice, however, is under the care of Henry Whitworth, an old friend of her mother's, who, although he has no legal jurisdiction over her, nevertheless thwarts the plans of her guardians in several instances. Baring spirits Alice away from Whitworth and confines her in his own home. She escapes and flees to Whitworth in the middle of the night. Both realize that her guardians can claim her legally, and for a time both are confronted with the problem of escaping them. Alice comes to an amazing decision, which startles Whitworth out of his wits. It is that she shall marry him and thus dissolve the guardianship.

THE SOUL OF SATAN (Five Parts—Aug. 18).—The cast: Miriam Lee (Gladys Brockwell); Joe Valdez (Bertram Grassby); "Lucky" Carson (Charles Clary); Alden Lee (William Burress); "Chicago" Stone (Josef Swickard); Fanny Stone (Gerard Alexander); Jim Calvert (Norbet Myles); Hazel Valdez (Lucille Young); Miriam's brother (Frankie Lee); Miriam's sister (Marie Kiernan). Directed by Otis Turner.

The story centers about Miriam Lee, whose life of drudgery is unrelieved until Joe Valdez enters it. She does not know that Joe in years past had eloped with Jim Calvert's wife and had been driven from the mining settlement where the event took place. Calvert had sworn he would find Valdez and have his revenge.

Miriam's intimacy with Joe has its inevitable result. Her father forces her from the house, and Joe, simulating sympathy, offers marriage. Joe stages a fake ceremony, but the girl suspects nothing. She rejoices in being joined legally (as she thinks) to the man she has always loved, despite his faults.

Joe prospers as the manager of a high-class gambling club, and Miriam herself becomes known as Myrtle Beaumont, Queen of the Night. Through her Joe has been able to win huge amounts from the rich men she has lured to his establishment.

When "Lucky" Carson arrives in New York, Joe plans to ensnare him. He sends Miriam on her usual errand, but "Lucky" understands the game she is to play, and goes through with it. In the incidents which ensue Carson recog-

Fill Up Our Soldiers' Pipes

America's fighting men need tobacco to make trench life a little more comfortable. Here's a chance to treat the boys at the front.

"Our Boys in France Tobacco Fund" has been organized to furnish "smokes" for the American soldiers and sailors in active service.

All labor and administrative expenses are contributed, so that every cent you give goes to pay for tobacco which is purchased in large quantities at a low price.

One dollar buys four packages of tobacco and sends them to France. Each package, costing twenty-five cents, has a retail value of forty-five cents and keeps a man in "smokes" for a week. Every dollar sent to "Our Boys in France Tobacco Fund" buys a bundle of tobacco that would cost $1.80 at your cigar store.

In every package is a post card addressed to a contributor to the tobacco fund. In accepting the package the soldier or sailor agrees to send on the card a message to his benefactor in the United States. According to the plan, every person who gives a quarter gets his receipt from a fighting man in France.

The work of this fund is approved by the Secretary of War and the Secretary of the Navy.

Send as many dollars as you can spare. Write your name and address clearly.

nizes Joe Valdez and telegraphs to Calvert in the West. Then Valdez comes face to face with his bitterest enemy.

Miriam, who has prided herself on having been a faithful wife, now learns that she has never been a wife at all. And in the silence of the night, as Joe Valdez lies dead from a pistol shot of Calvert's, Carson tells his tale of love to Miriam.

A DOMESTIC HOUND (Foxfilm—Two Parts—Aug. 18).—The cast: Hank (Hank Mann); Shorty (J. C. Weldon); Mrs. Hank (Eva Nelson); Mrs. Shorty (Katherine Griffith); The Ingenue (Rena Rogers); The Heavy (Harry Moody); The Cop (Harry O'Connor); The Man-with-Money (Robert Kortman).

Hank is the hound. He has an able assistant domestic hound in Shorty. Both Hank and Shorty are at the beach on a vacation, but they are handicapped in their sightseeing trip by the presence of their wives. The hounds make several attempts to visit the pretty ingenue who has just come from the bath-house attired in her bathing suit. They do succeed in escaping from the hotel at which the spouses are staying and meet the ingenue on the beach.

Unfortunately for the hounds, however, the "Heavy" thinks enough of the ingenue to resent the intrusion. He shows his resentment plainly. Hank's face shows it also, when the "heavy" finishes. In the chase that follows, Hank and Shorty run faster along that beach than a man whose clothes have been stolen. Being only mortal, they grow weary of flight and seek refuge under two beach umbrellas.

When they find their wives are the holders of the umbrellas, the outlook does not seem particularly rosy to the hounds. They flee with more determination, if less speed, than before. That evening the two wander to a roof garden. Hank did not know that a man who had a grudge against him had dropped a big roll of bills in his pocket. Consequently, the hound begins dispensing greenbacks right and left until wives, "heavy," cop and the owner of the money appear. Hank and Shorty leave the scene via balloon.

JACK AND THE BEANSTALK (Standard Pictures—Ten Parts)—The cast: Francis and Jack (Francis Carpenter); Virginia and Princess Regina (Virginia Lee Corbin); Prince Rudolpho (Violet Radcliffe); the King of Cornwall (Carmen Fay DeRue); Blunderbore, the giant (J. G. Tarver); the Giantess (Vera Lewis); Francis' Father (Ralph Lewis); Francis' Mother (Eleanor Washington); Virginia's Mother (Ione Glennon). Adapted for the screen by Mary Murillo. Directed by C. M. and S. A. Franklin.

William Fox's version of "Jack and the Beanstalk" requires a modern setting, or prologue, before Jack's adventures begin, bringing the film story right down to every-day reality. Jack, at first, is just a healthy, normal kiddie, who, in modern life is known as Francis, and his little neighbor is called Virginia. When we first meet them in the picture the mothers have gone to an afternoon tea, leaving Francis and Virginia with a nursemaid. She does the most natural thing in the world—reads them a story of "Jack and the Beanstalk." Then the wonderful idea comes to Francis. He is quite sure that all that is necessary to find the enchanted forest is to go and look for it. He has his toy automobile, too. And so he conspires with his little playmate, Virginia, and they start forth, with their dog "Sport," to find the place in the woods where the terrible giant lives.

Fortunately the children take plenty of wraps with them, for the inevitable dark creeps upon them and even the courage of the giant-seeker is taxed a bit as he listens to the screeching of the owls and he feels that sleep is creeping upon him. He cares tenderly for his little friend as she gathers her tiny robes about her, and finds the softest place on the ground. Then Francis himself succumbs, and the Dream God waves his magic wand, and lo, and behold, Francis becomes the Jack of Beanstalk fame, and Virginia is the Princess Regina.

Everybody knows the age-old story of "Jack and the Beanstalk." Jack sells his mother's cow for a sack of beans. Instead of being delighted with his bargain she scolds him roundly and throws the seeds out of the window. They are magic seeds, however, and sprout immediately. The next morning the seeds have become a wonderful vine, which grows until it has reached the clouds.

Jack is filled with the spirit of adventure, and, besides, his fairy godmother has told him that fortune awaits him if he but climb the stalk. Jack starts out and finally reaches the top, arriving in a country where a terrible giant dwells. Here again Jack's fairy godmother meets him and tells him he must slay the giant and secure all his riches, thus avenging Jack's father. While in the lands above the clouds Jack meets Princess Regina, whom he rescues from the giant. Jack finally causes the terrible giant's death and marries the Princess—and they live happily ever afterward.

THE GIRL WITHOUT A SOUL (Rolfe—Five Parts—Aug. 13).—The cast: Unity Beaumont and Priscilla Beaumont (Viola Dana); Hiram Miller (Robert Walker); Ivor (Fred Jones); Dominic Beaumont (Henry Hallam); Henrietta Hateman (Margaret Seddon); Louise (Margaret Vaughan). Written and directed by John H. Collins.

Dominic Beaumont, mender of violins, lives in a country village with his twin daughters, Unity and Priscilla. Priscilla has inherited a talent for music from her mother. Unity is skilled in household duties. On account of her lack of artistic temperament her father considers her "a girl without a soul." Ivor, a traveling musician, is attracted by Priscilla and gives her music lessons. He tells her that she has a great future before her. She is unsuspicious of the man's true character, and knows nothing of the girl Louise, whom Ivor also promised "to make," but who now lives in the city in abject misery.

Unity's sweetheart is the village blacksmith, Hiram Miller. To Hiram has been entrusted the church fund for a new organ. Hiram obtains Beaumont's permission to pay for a term at boarding school for Unity. Ivor tells Priscilla the only thing that stands in the way of her success is the lack of funds. Priscilla thinks of the money in Hiram's desk and steals it.

In Hiram's absence the church committeee go to his rooms to get the money to pay for the organ, which has arrived. They find the money gone. On Hiram's return to town with Unity from her graduation, he is accused of stealing the money entrusted to him. In vain he protests. Miss Hateman, on the committee, is also the village storekeeper, and she says that Hiram has plenty of money to buy dresses for young women.

Unity intercepts a note sent by Ivor to Priscilla, telling her where to meet him, so that they may elope. Donning Priscilla's cape, Unity keeps the appointment, and thinking she is her sister, Ivor takes her to a country hotel. He tells her that through a misunderstanding the minister will not be able to marry them until the morning, but asks at once for the money. The disappearance of the money is then clear to Unity. She denounces Ivor, locks him in the room and escapes. When she confronts her sister, Priscilla confesses to having stolen the money. She gives it to Unity, who promises to shield her.

Hiram is placed on trial. Everything looks black for him, when Unity rushes in with the money. She is accused of the theft. She protests her innocence, but refuses to say who is the guilty person.

Ivor has escaped from the inn and comes for Priscilla. He asks at once for the money. Realizing that it is more for the money than herself that he has returned, she leaves him and rushes to the courthouse, where she tells the truth. Hiram slips from the courthouse, and goes in pursuit of Ivor. He overtakes the musician and takes him back to the village. He hands Ivor over to the authorities.

Priscilla tells her father: "You have always misjudged Unity—it is she who has the soul, not I. I've been narrow and selfish, but I'm going to do better now."

GREATER VITAGRAPH.

BOBBY, BOY SCOUT (Aug. 6).—The cast: The Boy Scout (Bobby Connelly); His Mother (Mabel Ballin); Capt. Barnacle (William Shea).

The picture opens with Bobby engaged in scrubbing his little ragamuffin dog. Then it switches to his mother, who has just been ordered out of her seaside cottage because of inability to pay the rent. She tells Bobby that they must move and the little fellow, saddened, goes for consolation to his friend, old Captain Barnacle. The old sailor hears Bobby's story and, to get his mind off it, takes him for an outing on an island across the bay.

On the island, they prepare to cook dinner and Bobby is sent to gather twigs for the fire. While thus engaged, he sees a pair of gun runners loading rifles on a boat and while he is watching the operations of one the other comes up and makes him a prisoner.

Bobby is tied hand and foot and left in a cave. From the men's conversation, he learns that they are violating the federal law and the Boy Scouts' oath comes to his mind. He gets free from his bonds, and, finding a large-calibre revolver, loads it with cartridges he had taken from the Captain's rifle. He surprises the smugglers at the mouth of the cave and commands them to throw up their hands. They, believing the gun unloaded, rush for him and he fires, narrowly missing one of the men.

Captain Barnacle, hearing the report of the shot, rushes to the cave and there helps Bobby make the men prisoners. They are taken back to the mainland and turned over to the federal officers. Later, Bobby is given a reward by the government for his action and the money saves his mother from losing her cottage.

BOBBIE, MOVIE DIRECTOR (Aug. 16). The cast: Bobby, screen star (Bobby Connelly); Bobby's leading lady (Aida Horton); Bobby's mother (Mabel Ballin).

The picture opens with Bobby trying to work in a new picture when he does not feel like working and the director is despairingly trying to show the little star how to make a proper entrance. Bobby slips away to an adjoining studio, where Anita Stewart and a lot of grown-up Vitagraph stars are putting on a grand ball room scene. He keeps right on moving away from that director until he runs across a friendly driver of a fish wagon who carries him to where a lot of boys are playing marbles.

Bobby is happy. He gets into the game and is having a great time until Aida, his leading lady, perched on a gate, recognizes him.

"I know you," she pipes. "You're Bobby Connolley, who plays in the movies."

The boys all crowd about Bobby. The truant star admits the assertion and adds, when asked what he can do, that "I am a director." Furthermore, he orders them to follow him to the beach where he will show them what sort of a director he is and overrules their decision that little Aida shall not come along.

They all pile into a boat and on reaching the "location" Bobby proceeds to direct the picture "Pokyhauntus," with Aida in the leading role and himself as "John Smith—Injun." Bobby makes real Indians of them and with an old cigar box for a camera leaves little to the imagination.

Meanwhile, Bobby has been missed at home and so has his leading lady and all other members of the "Pokyhauntus" cast. Bobby's mother appeals to Capt. Barnacle, who spies the director and his company through his field glasses and goes to the rescue.

BOBBY, PHILANTHROPIST (Aug. 20).—The cast: The Philanthropist (Bobby Connelly); The Ragged Doll (Aida Horton); Bobby's Mother (Mabel Ballin); Captain Barnacle (William Shea).

Bobby one day sees a big, rough man cruelly treating a kitten. Without hesitating, the youngster steps up to the man and upbraids him for his cruelty and takes the kitten away.

The second occasion of Bobby's chivalry comes a few days afterwards when Booby sees a crowd of boys bullying a newsgirl. Rolling up his sleeves and not stopping to count the odds against him, he pitches into the gang. The little girl, Miss Aida Horton, Vitagraph's 3-year-old, gamely backs up her champion, but Bobby is getting worsted when a policeman happens along and the boys scatter.

Bobby then listens to the girl's story; she is afraid to go home. He promptly takes her to his home, where his mother welcomes her and decides to keep her as Bobby's sister, when she learns she is a waif whose parents are unknown. The little girl is named Mary and Bobby proudly takes her to Captain Barnacle to whom he introduces her as a "good scrapper."

BOBBY, THE PACIFIST (Aug. 20).—The cast: Bobby (Bobby Connelly); Her (Aida Horton); Captain Barnacle (William Shea); Bobby's Mother (Mabel Ballin).

Bobby comes on two boys fighting and when he tries to interfere, the older one turns on him and strikes him. Bobby rolls up the sleeves of his Boy Scout coat and prepares to do battle. Then he recalls the injunction of his pastor, of turning the other cheek when your tormentor hits you on one. He drops his arms and the boy in disgust hits him again and walks away. To make matters worse, his sweetheart has witnessed it all.

A few days later, a ball, thrown in play, strikes a rough man in the face and Bobby, running away, takes refuge in a deserted house. He discovers it is the headquarters of a band of kidnappers and that his little sweetheart is a prisoner in the next room.

Bobby realizes his opportunity is at hand to show her and his playmates he is not a "'fraid cat." He ties a rope across the top of a flight of stairs, and luring the kidnappers from the room knocks them over the rope and down the stairs. Then he barricades the door from the inside and heliographs to Captain Barnacle for help. The captain arrives just as the kidnappers break into the room.

BOBBY'S BRAVERY (Sept. 3).—The cast: Bobby (Bobby Connelly); His Teacher (Mabel Ballin); Steve (George Forth).

Bobby is in love with his school teacher, Miss Cynthia, and dreams he is a big, brave knight and rescues her from a robber band. To demonstrate his bravery he dashes into the school yard and frightens the children out of their wits. Then Bobby decides he will be a knight and his school chums his loyal warriors. So he "knights" them all by a most impressive oath and arms them with sticks. All that is needed now is a bold robber to try to steal Miss Cynthia.

Sir Bobbie and his band are in the wood when the teacher and Steve, who is in love with her, pass, and Bobby hears Steve say something about stealing her and carrying her off. Steve, of course, is a bad robber, and Sir Bobby's work is cut out for him.

One night Steve takes Cynthia for a walk in the woods, and Bobby and his band are on hand to capture the robber. The boys all wear masks and have a sack to tie over Steve's head. The "robber" and Miss Cynthia are seated on a rock and she has just said "yes" when Bobby gives the word. The boys descend on Steve and get the bag over his head, but the man after a brief struggle, throws them off. All flee but Bobby, and he is a much abashed Sir Galahad who stands before Miss Cynthia and tells her the whole story. But she and Steve are too happy not to forgive Bobby and his henchmen, but the youngsters, meeting later, vote to disband after taking a new and more solemn oath to remain "bachelors fourever."

Hal Page becomes infatuated with Carline Shrefton, a woman who lives by her wits. Because of his inheritance she makes a play for him, and throws down her first suitor, Burt Staley.

Both men meet at her house one night; a quarrel starts between them and Staley is killed. Hal's brother, Stephen Page, is Mayor of the city. He arrives at the house, and when Hal confesses his guilt he spirits him out of the city, and arranges things so that Staley's body is picked up in an alley the next day.

One year later Steve is engaged to marry Marion Hayward, daughter of the district attorney. Hayward is about to convict a crooked political band headed by Jim Reede, who, strange to say, is married to Carline. The latter goes to the Mayor and threatens to expose him unless he gets district attorney to let up on her husband.

He refuses. She goes to the district attorney, who also refuses to let duty interfere with friendship. She sends for reporters and just when it looks as though exposure must come, Hal mysteriously turns up. He tells all that he did not kill Staley—took blame to shield the woman Carline. Staley was killed in a struggle with Carline.

Hayward verifies what he says, then sends for Carline and she breaks down under grilling. She signs a confession exonerating Hal. Reede is sent away.

PAY ME (August).—The cast: Joe Lawson, alias "Killer" White (Lon Chaney); Martin (Ed Brown); Hal Curtis (William Clifford); Hilda Hendricks (Evelyn Selbie); "Mac" Jepson (Tom Wilson); Marta (Dorothy Phillips); Nita (Claire DuBrey); Bill, the Boss (William Stowell).

Hal Curtis and Joe Lawson, partners in the Unity Mine, have a disagreement. The latter, in a fit of anger, strangles Curtis, and accidentally shoots Curtis' wife. He then deserts his own wife and child, and elopes with Hilda Hendrick. As they are leaving, Hilda hears the cries of a child, and upon investigating, discovers Curtis' little daughter in the arms of her dead mother. She insists upon caring for the baby, and so Lawson has to consent that Curtis daughter shall be taken along with them.

Seventeen years elapse, in which time Lawson has changed his name to White, and has become the prosperous owner of the Nugget, a dance-hall and gambling saloon, in the heart of the lumber country. There his record as a "bad man" has earned him the prefix of "Killer." His partner's daughter, known as Marta, now a beautiful young woman, is discovered in the fields by a lumberjack, who becomes interested in her at once. That night, much to his disappointment and chagrin, he finds Marta, dressed in a bizarre costume, acting as custodian of the roulette wheel in the "Killer's" establishment. However, he learns with relief that she is forced to do this by her foster-parent, and at once constitutes himself her protector, which is not all to the liking of "Mac" Jepson, also in love with the girl.

Quite by chance, a stranger wanders into the Nugget. He is Hal Curtis, and in the worn, haggard woman who is in the saloon he recognizes Hilda, and questions her as to the whereabouts of his daughter. She points across the room to the roulette wheel, where Marta is presiding. Hal, enraged, swears vengeance on the "Killer," and is backed up by the young lumberjack and his gang from the camps. There is a fight between Jepson and Marta's

WAR PRICES—Going Down
The well-known "Orpheum Collection" consists of melodramatic music almost exclusively, and is one of the best collections of agitatos, hurries, mysteriosos, short plaintives, etc., on the market. Particularly useful in serial pictures for bringing out the dramatic points. My last edition is printed from the same plates as the first, on a good quality of paper, and sells for these reduced prices: Piano (solo), 1st, 2d or 3d series, 35 cents each; Violin (1st, 2d or 3d series), 25 cents each; Cornet (1st, 2d or 3d series), 20 cents each; Flute, Clarinet, Trombone, Drums (1st or 2d series), 20 cents each.

protector, who is none other than "Bill" Lawson, son of the "Killer," whom he deserted. Bill bests Jepson, and brings on a general fight between the lumberjacks and the employees of the Nugget. Just as Curtis, with murder in his heart, aims his gun at the "Killer," a shot rings out and cheats him of his vengeance. Hilda, who has been persecuted and abused by White from the day she ran away with him, is the murderess.

On his deathbed White tries to make what amends he can for his many misdeeds. He dies without his son's becoming aware of his identity, tell him that Marta is not his daughter, but that of Curtis, and the two young people go forth into life together.

BUTTERFLY PICTURES.

THE LAIR OF THE WOLF (Five Parts—Aug. 20).—The cast: Margaret Dennis (Gretchen Lederer); Oliver Cathcart (Joseph Girard); Jim Dennis (Chester Bennett); Raymond Taylor (Val Paul); Robert Shepherd (Chas. Mailes); Bess Shepherd (Peggy Custer); Steve Taylor (Donna Drew); Old Man Taylor (George Berrell). Scenario by E. Magnus Ingleton. Produced by Chas. Swickard.

Oliver Cathcart's manners are perfect, thinks Margaret Dennis, a widow, as she enters his office with her son, Jim, to secure a position from the latter. Cathcart has a charming personality, but behind it lies a sensual and brutal nature. He is feared by his employees, among whom is Raymond Taylor, a young man whose family has been ruined in a financial deal with Cathcart. His mother died as a result and his father, Old Man Taylor, is now a drunkard, depending entirely upon the eighteen-year-old sister, Steve. Raymond and the old man vow to get revenge on Cathcart. Jim learns of Cathcart's bad reputation. Later when she announces that she is going to marry Cathcart, Jim makes his mother choose between him and Cathcart, and tells her he never wants to see her again. They go to a country estate called "The Pines," but by the villagers, "The House of Gloom." Here Margaret learns of her husband's true character.

The garden of "The Pines" is cared for by Robert Shepherd, a good man who worships his daughter, Bess. Near them live the Taylors. Steve and Bess are good friends. Old Man Taylor pals with The Man With the Crutch, a short, thin, sinister, lame man, who also craves vengeance on Cathcart because of the latter's treatment of a sister. He and Taylor plan revenge together, and finally the cripple offers to pay Taylor for committing the murder.

Meanwhile, Steve, full of romance and a longing for adventure, and with the ten dollars she has earned by washing, sets out, dressed in boy's clothes, leaving a note to say that she has gone out to see the world. Raymond visits his people and also Milly, Margaret's maid, and his sweetheart. Margaret gives him a message to take to Jim. Cathcart catches Raymond and Jim talking. He fires Raymond because he will not say what they were talking about. Jim wires his mother that he will come to her.

Margaret, having borne Cathcart's brutality long enough, will not let him in when he arrives at "The Pines." He sends Shepherd to the village for a locksmith, but Shepherd goes only a short distance, for he meets a man who proffers to give the message to the locksmith.

Jim arrives and promises to take his mother away the next day. When he leaves by way of a French window he is seen by Milly and Taylor. He gets caught in a rainstorm and seeks shelter in a deserted hut, where Steve is now trying to sleep. He thinks Steve a boy and they become friends. Raymond finds the note by Steve and, thinking Cathcart responsible, goes to the village tavern to find his father and there tells the landlord that Steve has gone away and that Cathcart has discharged him. Raymond starts out to "get" him.

That night Cathcart is killed. Milly testifies to seeing Jim lurking about "The Pines," to the message sent him by Margaret and to the wire received from Jim. Margaret hires one of the best lawyers available and he soon learn's that Jim's only chance is in finding Steve, who can furnish the only conclusive evidence in his favor, for she knows he was a mile away from the house at the time of the murder.

Margaret can bear the suffering of her son no longer and says she killed Cathcart, but Jim urges the court not to believe her. Then the landlord who heard Raymond's threat to "get" Cathcart testifies, and suspicions is cast at Raymond. Robert Shepherd confesses that he killed Cathcart, because, returning to the lodge the night he was sent for the locksmith, he found Cathcart there struggling with Bess. Cathcart's brutality to her aroused for the first time in his life an overpowering passion of hate, which could be wiped out only by killing. Steve, having read an advertisement that a man's life depended upon her and that she was wanted in court, arrives and relates her story. It frees Jim. Shepherd is acquitted on the plea of temporary derangement.

Some time has passed. An odd wedding takes place in the deserted hut where Jim and Steve first met. The only witnesses of the ceremony are Raymond and Milly. Old Man Taylor, because of the shock to his weak mentality, caused by the murder of Cathcart, dies.

STRAIGHT SHOOTING (Five Parts—Aug. 27).—The cast: "Cheyenne" Harry (Harry Carey); "Thunder" Flint (Duke Lee); "Sweetwater" Sims (George Berrell); His Daughter Joan (Molly Malone); His Son (Ted Brooks); Danny Morgan (Hoot Gibson); Black-Eyed Pete (Milt Brown). Produced by Jack Ford.

"I am only a girl—not a fighter. But I would not wage war on women or—old men," said Joan. Danny Morgan uncovered, stared at her with open admiration, then stuttered: "Neither will I. I'm with you." "Thunder" Flint, cattle king, had reached a cruel resolve—to drive the Nestors out of the country. To "Sweetwater" Sims, their leader, he sent warning, delivered by Danny to Joan, daughter of the Nestors. Flint sends the foreman to find "Cheyenne" Harry for "the work." Harry is found asleep in a saloon, where every one is afraid of him as a "gunman." Harry agrees to meet Flint in Diablo.

At their rendezvous near Diablo, Black-Eyed Pete and his gang are splitting the spoils of a marauding expedition. Harry meets two of the outlaws, who tell him they are cached up near the Big Rock. They seem to be friends.

Danny and Ted, "Sweetwater" Sims' son, enter the saloon at Diablo together. There they come upon Harry, who, hearing that Ted is a Nestor, begins insulting him and shoots at both of them, but they escape. Flint does not place all of his trust in "Cheyenne" Harry, and sends for "Placer" Fremont, a gunman of unsavory reputation. Fremont and Harry meet at the saloon; each is suspicious of the other; each handles his gun while he drinks. Flint enters and sizes up the situation. Harry asks Flint if Fremont is another "killer" he has imported. Flint introduces Harry and Fremont, who merely extend a casual greeting. Flint is surprised and assures them that there is no cause for trouble, as they are both on the same job and there is plenty of work to be done.

Ted and Danny ride to the cabin to tell Sims that Flint's "killers" have arrived and to prepare for trouble. Joan is greatly agitated. The next day Ted goes for a bucket of water and finds a sign warning the public that the spring is private property and that trespassers will be shot on sight. Fremont, hidden in a tree, raises his rifle and fires at Ted, who rolls down the bank—dead. Joan tells her father where Ted has gone; they rush to the spring and are grieving over the body of the boy when Harry rides by. The father tells Harry that he supposes he is one of the "killers," come to gloat over their "dirty work," but Harry insists that he did not know of their trouble, that he is a man and doesn't make war on children and old men. Harry tells Joan that if this is a sample of the work he was brought here for he's through, and from now on she can count on him whenever she needs him. Harry later informs the foreman that he's through with Flint and his outfit.

When Flint hears that Harry cannot be depended upon, he sends Fremont to Diablo to "get" Harry. But Danny, hearing these instructions, warns Harry, who lays for Fremont, and, in the act of being shot, kills Fremont. Flint and his gang start out that night. Danny has told Sims and Joan of the coming raid, and the girl rides out to warn all the Nestors, who ride from all directions to the cabin. Harry meets Joan and tells her that there are so many of the raiders that unless they get help they are lost. He rides to the camp of Black-Eyed Pete, where he asks for help. The outlaws rush to the battle, arriving in time to save the Nestors.

The next day while Joan is caring for Danny's wounds, Sims asks Harry to remain at the cabin, but Harry declines, saying that there is something "just over yonder" which keeps calling to him. He tells Sims that he will let them know at sundown. Danny comes to him as he is thinking out his problem. Harry tells him to go back to the little girl. Joan is disappointed at first to see Danny instead of Cheyenne, who is left facing the setting sun alone.

HER MERRY MIX-UP (Aug. 7).—The cast: The Girl (Margaret Gibson); Her Husband (James Harrison); Her Friend (?) (Ethel Lynne); Her Brother (Eugene Corey); Basement Ben (Eddie Gribbon).

Margaret, in clandestine consultation with a book agent regarding a birthday gift for her husband, Jimmy, is discovered when he returns home unexpectedly. She sends the agent hurrying off and refuses to reveal his identity to her husband, who leaves the house in anger. Ethel, to whom he tells his troubles, later sees Margaret get into a taxicab with her brother, who is spending an hour or two with her between trains. Notified of this, Jimmy, who does not know the brother, follows the pair to a cafe, and later sees Gene kiss Margaret bood-bye.

In the meantime, Basement Ben, the bold burglar, burgles the bungalow of James and Margaret, and when Gene decides to pay a final visit to his sister's home, hides in a closet with the swag. As Gene sits awaiting his sister's return a bill collector calls, and also decides to wait. When the furious Jimmy is seen coming up the walk flourishing a gun, the two take refuge in the same closet that holds the burglar, and all crouch in fear and trembling while Jimmy rages outside. His jealous suspicions are confirmed when he finds on the library table a bouquet of flowers bearing a loving message from the giver, but really left at Jimmy's house by mistake.

While he is out of the room, Margaret and the book agent arrive to make a final decision on the gift for Jimmy, and when Margaret hears her husband approaching she hastily shoves the agent into the closet, which is already full to overflowing. Jealous Jimmy shoots through the closet door when he finds the book agent's hat on the library table, and the four trembling ones file into the room. After explanations are made, Basement Ben quietly sneaks out with his loaded suit case, only to run into the arms of a cop.

A SMOKEY LOVE AFFAIR (Aug. 14).—The cast: The Girl (Betty Compson); The Boy (James Harrison); The Detective (Eddie Gribbon).

Jimmy starts from the office for a two weeks' vacation at the beach. On the train he sees Betty, also bound for the seashore, and attempts to become acquainted with her. Meeting with continued rebuffs, he resolves to win her in spite of everything, and when they arrive at the beach he follows her to the hotel, and incidentally arouses the animosity of the house detective. Jimmy secures a room across the hall from Betty's, and when she orders her breakfast served in her room the persistent Jimmy bribes the waiter to exchange coats with him, so that he may take the tray in to her. Betty calls the house detective, and has Jimmy ejected. When she goes for a ride on the board walk in a motor chair, it is Jimmy who turns up as the driver, and narrowly escapes arrest.

At length the love-sick swain hits upon a means of gaining her favor, and decides to rescue her from a fake fire. Lighting a towel, he places it against her door, and when the smoke pours into her room she is glad to be carried out by her heroic suitor. When she discovers his deception she is furious, and returns to her room. By chance a real fire breaks out, and when Jimmy again cries out a warning at her door she refuses to respond. In desperation he at length breaks in her door, and Betty picks up a shoe and knocks him senseless. At this juncture she is hurried out by firemen, and when she discovers that the hotel is really on fire she returns with the men to rescue the unconscious Jimmy. A kiss restores him to consciousness, and Betty nurses her hero back to health.

THE LESSON (August).—The cast: Helen Drayton (Constance Talmadge); "Chet" Vernon (Tom Moore); John "Galvin (Herbert Heyes); "Tub" Martin (Walter Hiers). Henry Hammond (Joseph Smiley); Mrs. Hammond (Lillian Rambeau); Ada Thompson (Dorothy Green); Harriet Reeves (Christy Walker). Direction Charles Giblyn.

In a small American town, Helen Drayton, the belle of the neighborhood, has for a long time been "going with" Chet Vernon, but while she likes Chet she is inclined to rebel at not being allowed a wider range of choice. So she welcomes the visit of John Galvin, a young architect. A swift courtship is followed by an elopement, and Helen finds herself keeping house for a young husband who has still to make his place in the world. But while Galvin can always find plenty of money to spend downtown, he is stingy with Helen, expecting her to finance a whole wardrobe with a ten dollar bill. Through Mrs. Hammond, wife of one of Galvin's business acquaintances, Helen finds a means of getting money by exercising her talents for interior decorating.

Meanwhile Chet Vernon, tired of the lack of opportunities in the little town, also comes to the city. With a mutual friend he calls on Helen, and they arrange a theater party, Galvin excusing himself on the ground of important business. After the theater Chet, Helen and their friend go to a cafe, and Chet sees Galvin buying wine for Ada Thompson, the niece and secretary of Hammond. He does not tell Helen, however.

The Hammonds invite Helen and Galvin to their seashore home for a house party, and Galvin's attentions to Ada Thompson are very noticeable. Helen suspects nothing, however, until one afternoon, passing a secluded summer-house, she sees something which causes her to rush to her room, pack her grip and hurry to the city. Galvin follows her, and in a stormy scene she tells him that he has not even been supporting her.

Helen then embarks in her decorating business on a large scale, obtains a divorce and eventually finds happiness with her girlhood sweetheart.

PARAMOUNT-BRAY PICTOGRAPHS. — The 80th release of the Paramount-Bray Pictographs shows the working of the Fansworth Institute of New York City, where the deaf and dumb are taught to hear and talk by means of the sense of feeling.

Otto Luck is also seen in this number, in "A Flivvered Romance," perhaps the most amusing cartoon in which this unique character has yet appeared.

The beach sports in southern California showing scores of girls in bathing suits that are not considered conventional at all bathing beaches, also makes an excellent hot-weather attraction.

PARAMOUNT-BRAY PICTOGRAPHS. — The 81st release of the Paramount-Bray Pictographs contain, for the first time after a long absence, another of the inimitable Colonel Heeza Liar animated cartoons. IVAN FILM PRODUCTIONS, INC.

BABBLING TONGUES (Six Parts—August—State Rights Production).—The cast: Paul, a young author (James Morrison); Therese Moreau (Grace Valentine); Jose Moreau, Therese's husband (Arthur Donaldson); Louis Moreau, Jose's brother (Paul Capellani); Marie Moreau, Louis' wife (Louise Beaudet); Felix, their son (Gladden James); Henrietti, his sister (Carolyn Birch); Viscount de Bellerive (Richard Tucker); M. Ettiene Le Moyne (Robert E. Hill). Written by William Humphrey and George E. Hall. Directed by William Humphrey.

Jose Moreau, a rich merchant about forty years of age, is ideally married to Therese, a beautiful woman in her early twenties, who adores him. He is a generous and kindly man; and upon the death of an old and honored friend, to whose assistance in the past he owes his present fortune, he adopts into his household the son of this friend, Paul. Paul is twenty-six years old; he reads poems and writes plays, and is a thoroughly fine fellow. Paul feels an almost filial affection for Mons. Jose and a wholesome brotherly friendship for Therese. He accompanies Jose and Therese everywhere in the social world; he sits in their box at the opera, acting as Therese's escort when her husband is detained by business.

Society, with sinister imagination, begins to look askance at the triangulated household; tongues begin to wag; and gossip grows. Tidings of the evil talk about town are brought to Mons. Jose by his brother, Louis, who advises that Paul had better be requested to live in quarters of his own. Jose repels the suggestion as insulting; but Louis persists that only by such a course may the family name be rendered unimpeachable upon the public tongue.

Paul, to still the evil rumors, goes to live in a studio alone. This simple move on his part suggests to everybody that he must have had a real motive for making it. Gossip increases, instead of diminishing; and the emotions of Therese and Jose and himself are stirred to the point of nervous tensity. Mons. Jose, in spite of his own sweet reasonableness, begins subtly to wonder if there could be, by any possibility, any basis for his brother's vehemence. Louis' wife, Marie, repeats the talk of the town to Therese, and turns her imagination inward, till it falters in self-questioning. The world at large whispers unthinkable and tragic possibilities to the poetic and self-searching mind of Paul. He resolves to seek release in leaving for foreign shores. But before he can sail away he overhears, in a fashionable cafe, a remark which casts a slur on Therese, and strikes the speaker of the insult in the face.

A duel is forthwith arranged to take place in a vacant studio adjacent to Paul's. When Mons. Jose learns about it, he is troubled by the idea that another man should be fighting for his wife, and rushes forthwith to wreak vengeance himself on the traducer. Therese hears the news, and in order to prevent both her husband and Paul from endangering their lives, she rushes to Paul's rooms to urge him to forestall hostilities. Meanwhile her husband encounters the slanderer, and is severely wounded. He is carried to Paul's studio. Hearing people coming, Therese hides herself in Paul's bedroom, where she is discovered by her husband's attendants. Jose, wounded and enfevered, now at last believes the worst.

Paul seeks and slays Jose's assailant. But now the whole world credits what the whole world has been whispering. In vain Paul and Therese protest their innocence to Louis and his wife. In vain they plead with the kindly and noble man they both revere and love. Jose curses them, and dies believing in their guilt. Then at last, when they find themselves cast forth isolate by the entire world, their common tragic loneliness draws them to each other. They are given to each other by the world. The insidious purpose of babbling tongues has been accomplished; Paul takes Therese for his own.

TRIANGLE FILM CORPORATION.

THEY'RE OFF (Five Parts—Aug. 19).—The cast: Rita Hackett (Enid Bennett); Randolph Manners (Rowland Lee); Daniel Hackett (Melbourne MacDowell); Judge Peterson (Walter Whitman); Uncle Mose (Samuel Lincoln). Directed by Roy Neill.

While Daniel Hackett, millionaire broker and turfman, with his daughter Rita was on a tour of the South their machine broke down near an old Southern mansion. Rita expressed a desire of owning a home like it. Hackett became angered when told by the owner, Randolph Manners, that it was not for sale, and informed him that he usually got what he went after. Hackett, learning that the young Southerner was heavily interested in the tobacco market forced him, through his Wall street manipulations, to sell the estate and everything else he owned.

The new owners took possession. Rita found an old crinoline dress which she put on. Thus garbed she accidentally ran into young Manners and his colored servant, Mose. Recognizing the dress as his dead mother's wedding gown, he ignored her. Realizing what she had done, Rita determined to see Randolph and explain. Learning that he had taken a temporary residence in the old training quarters, Rita feigned a fall from her horse near the place. Randolph ran to her assistance and took her to his cabin. Rita burst out laughing and Randolph, realizing the trick she had played on him, became angered. Mose left them alone. When Rita learned how her father had forced the estate from him she determined to regain it for him.

Upon returning to the mansion, her father presented her with the deed to the estate, which she refused, explaining that she had learned how he had obtained it. He was dumbfounded, but instead gave her a black horse, Satan, which he had entered in the coming race, explaining that another one of his horses, Wasp, would win but that Satan would take second place.

Rita found Randolph worried over the fact that his horse, Vixen, had gone lame and could not be entered in the race, but consoled him by telling of her scheme to paint Satan up with white feet and enter him in the race against Wasp, she to be the jockey. Despite Randolph's protests, Rita made him accept a bill of sale for Satan. Rita won the race and also Randolph. Hackett, upon trying to purchase Satan, was told that the mansion would be the only consideration, and agreed. Upon learning that the horse was Satan and the jockey Rita, he became indignant, but after noting the very apparent interest between Rita and Randolph, decided that he hadn't lost anything, anyway.

WOODEN SHOES (Five Parts—Aug. 20).—"Pampy," a Dutch girl, has an invalid father dependent upon her for support. With her companion, Hans, the fat boy, she proves a quaint sight as she clutters up and down the cobbled street in her wooden shoes selling flowers to the tourists who visit the village and serving as their guide. "Pampy's" father dies, leaving her alone and penniless with her only hope for the future being to get to America where her grandfather will provide for her.

"Pampy's" father, before his death, had written to the grandfather about "Pampy," but the answer had been intercepted by the unscrupulous proprietress of the inn where "Pampy" stays. Later on we find her and her companion in America, having come over in the steerage. How "Pampy" found her grandfather as well as the artist for whom she had posed in Holland, and whose interest in her from their separation had developed into a strong love, makes one of the most charming stories ever transferred to the screen.

Censorship is the Bogey Man of the Moving Picture Industry

This is one of the set.

We have prepared and are distributing at cost

A Set of Nine Anti-Censorship Slides

(All Different)

As a means of self preservation Exhibitors everywhere should constantly fight the proposed discriminatory control of their business.

Picture theatre patrons can aid materially in the fight and will if the subject is kept constantly before them.

The set of nine slides, carefully packed, will be sent postpaid on receipt of $1.00.

Gentlemen:

I want you to know that after experimenting with several other makes of machines we have finally decided to again use the Simplex projectors simply because we have been convinced that there is nothing on the market that will give the net results obtained from the Simplex projectors.

As you know, the Rialto standard demands the very finest work possible, regardless of expense, and it is the aim of the writer at all times to improve and to not alone keep up the standard but to make it better and better, and in adapting the Simplex machines for this theatre after these experiments is a tribute to you and your product that I know you will be glad to receive

Very truly yours,

Managing Director

FOTOPLAY YOUR PICTURES

Follow the crowds to the successful picture house. They go eager and expectant and leave pleased and satisfied. They become regular patrons—and bring their friends. They boost the pictures—for better music makes better pictures.

The FOTOPLAYER registers the joys and griefs of the silent drama with masterly expression. Your comedies get bigger laughs—Your dramas become more intense. The traps for laughter—The stops for the tonal beauty of the orchestral organ make your audience catch the thought and the spirit of the picture.

The FOTOPLAYER renders that harmony of music and screen action essential to artistic and box-office success. The instrument may be played manually or by hand-cut rolls—requiring no experienced operator.

The FOTOPLAYER operates all day and half the night—built simple and strong to withstand long and hard service—it is the only practical instrument for your house. The FOTOPLAYER solves your music problem.

We construct orchestral pipe organs to meet your specifications. Write for successful installations

SPEER HOLD-ARK CARBONS

FRONT VIEW

clearly demonstrate the advantages of a metal-coated carbon in the lower holder.

The illustrations present craters that are perfectly formed. The hard core holds the arc—the metal coating offers a minimum resistance—the result is an intense white light, and a picture projected without a flicker.

Exhibitors Are Making Large Extra Profits

Regardless of Population

Theatres in the biggest cities and the smallest towns both, are making $2.00 to $15.00 clear profit daily from the Butter-Kist Pop Corn Machine. This machine is just what every theatre needs to pay off the rising expenses of film rental, etc. Occupies only 5 square feet of floor space—little more than a chair. Plenty of room in the lobby or down by the piano. Pays 233⅓ per cent on investment. Draws people from blocks around. Increases theatre attendance. Actual records from theatre managers to prove it.

BUTTER-KIST Pop Corn Machine

Self-operating—requires no extra help or stock investment. We'll send signed evidence that men in your business are earning $600 to $3120 a year Net Profit from this great invention. No other makes Butter-Kist Pop Corn with the toasty flavor—advertised to millions of magazine readers at our expense. Over 60,000,000 packages sold last year. Send the coupon for photographs, proof of profits, price and easy terms.

Reduce Your Operating Cost and Get More Uniform Lighting

by equipping your present carbon-arc machine with the Sheck Universal Adapter for the New Mazda Projector Lamps.

YOU will want to adopt this new, modern idea because it will make your theatre the most popular in town.

Projection with the new Sheck Universal Adapter and Mazda Projector Lamps has proven a success in the theatres where used on test during the past two years.

Our first announcement received the attention and interest of hundreds of progressive exhibitors.

YOUR theatre can be equipped with the Sheck Universal Adapter without interrupting your program schedule, and at a cost no greater than the saving in bills for electric current effected by the new equipment during the first year.

So at no extra cost you will be able to get better projection on the screen, eliminate "flicker" and eye strain, and therefore get the crowds in your theatre.

This is a progressive proposition for progressive exhibitors. Write for the facts, TODAY!

CLARA KIMBALL YOUNG

and

Her Own Company

THIS supreme screen favorite is the first to be announced in the list of great screen stars and directors, whose productions are to be released and marketed through SELECT PICTURES CORPORATION, details of which organization are presented on the following page.

Clara Kimball Young will be seen as the star of eight pictures to be released during the coming year. The great following which this splendid emotional actress gained with "The Common Law," "The Price She Paid," and "The Easiest Way" will eagerly welcome her appearance in the first of these eight productions — "Magda," a photoplay adapted from the famous play of the same name.

Select Pictures

WITH this announcement SELECT PICTURES CORPORATION introduces itself. SELECT PICTURES will offer to exhibitors the productions of the screen's most brilliant stars and directors. The first of its presentations is described on the preceding page.

SELECT stands for what its name implies; a medium for the distribution of the most select, the most choice, the most individual productions of film manufacturers anywhere and everywhere.

SELECT has advantages not shared by any other distributing organization in the film industry. Its producers are stars and directors whose places as great box-office attractions have been won through years of diligent service to the motion picture public of the world. SELECT'S personnel is composed of men who have fashioned successful careers because their progressive ideas have coincided constantly with the ideas of the progressive exhibitors.

SELECT PICTURES enters the field of photoplay distribution fully grown, its stars and directors bearing names that are household words throughout the land. Its organization is composed of branches situated in all the large cities of the United States. The following SELECT exchanges are now open for bookings:

VICTOR MOORE

"THE CINDERELLA HUSBAND"

By Thomas J. Gray

Released August 27

OUR exhibitors everywhere are calling Klever Komedies "the single reel comedies with a story." Instead of being an insult to the intelligence of even an average man Victor Moore Comedies are really very funny, and "The Cinderella Husband" is a fair example.

Give single reel comedies a chance. You will find these safe, sane and funny. The best theatres show them—why not you?

Goldwyn Pictures

"Polly Of The Circus" Cost $250,000

AND GOLDWYN presents this to the exhibitors of America at the regularly scheduled price with the hope and the certain knowledge that every exhibitor playing it will reap immense profits.

A production so big that it would make a fortune if handled separately—a picture so fine that many who have seen it say: "Why do you let it go out to exhibitors at regular contract prices?"

And it is true that it is worth double or triple the price you pay for it under a Goldwyn contract. . . . But a group of skilled and earnest people have worked a year to make this and other pictures like it, firm in the belief that exhibitors everywhere will support a company capable of such achievements as Goldwyn Pictures.

These productions are worth more than we ask for them and they will make more money for exhibitors than any pictures now being made by any other producing organization in the world.

LONDON FLUSHING PARIS

Mutual Pictures for the Coming Year

By JOHN R. FREULER, President Mutual Film Corporation

In this statement I am privileged to announce to Exhibitors throughout America the plans of the Mutual Film Corporation for the coming year—plans which I believe will mean much to those interested in box-office receipts.

For the Season of 1917-1918, the Mutual Film Corporation will release eight Mutual Pictures—"BIG STARS ONLY"—every month—Two Big Star Features Each Week. These attractions will include the Charles Frohman Successes in Motion Pictures and a complete new variety of high class feature productions by prominent authors and playwrights.

Among the stars to be presented in these coming Mutual Pictures are Mary Miles Minter, Ann Murdock, Gail Kane, William Gillette, Julia Sanderson, William Russell, Olive Tell, Juliette Day, Edna Goodrich, Margarita Fischer, Anita King and others.

These attractions will be of the highest class in every respect. They will be directed by such noted directors as Albert Capellani, Rollin Sturgeon, Lloyd Ingraham, Edward Sloman, John B. O'Brien, Henry King, Dell Henderson and Harry Pollard.

They will be leased to Exhibitors under the Mutual's New Service Contract, providing from five to ten reels daily—one to seven days each week—or they may be booked in series of stars, on open booking or on a basis of two or more Mutual Pictures—"BIG STARS ONLY"—each week regularly.

This new Mutual Policy for 1917-18 has just been put into effect in all our exchanges. Exhibitors who have not yet received detailed information regarding booking dates, prices, etc., should communicate immediately with the nearest Mutual Exchange, before the territory is closed.

Raise your admission to 15c and play Mutual Pictures—"BIG STARS ONLY"—under the new Mutual Policy of TWO-A-WEEK.

READ These Reviews!

Read what the trade journal reviewers say after witnessing the opening installments of Signal's greatest serial:

WILLIAM J. McGRATH In Motion Picture News Says:

"Here is Helen Holmes once again in a railroad story—not a repetition of previous Helen Holmes productions, but something new! It has a mystery angle that is as fresh and as new as a dime out of the mint. It is the ideal serial with every chapter a whetter of appetite for what is to come. As one looks at it he is forced to commend inwardly and outwardly too, the creative ability of Frederick Bennett, well known war correspondent, who wrote the scenario, and the genius of J. P. McGowan who directed it. It is a Helen Holmes picture in the first place and that gives it a great get-away. Then, to cinch the prediction of its success, is that all-absorbing, new and tantalizing mystery tang that is bound to pervade it to the end."

Exhibitor's Herald Says:

". . full of action and suspense. There is no reason why this serial should not excel any of the previous Helen Holmes railroad photo-novels. There is thrill after thrill and every foot of celluloid contains action."

Motography Says:

"It is 'sure-fire.' The mystery element should make it interesting to even those who do not care primarily for railroad thrills."

Exhibitor's Trade Review Says:

'There are no dull moments, no dragging, there is plenty of quick action and an unbroken chain of thrills."

Costs More — Worth More

YOU can't pull a ton with a hair! You can't drive a nail with a feather!! Neither can you run your business successfully unless you constantly work for yourself!!

You rent a special picture! You can only run it for a fixed time at a fixed price. Why? You only rent!

You rent a special picture! It makes a hit. You want a rebooking. You can't get it. Why? Your nearest competitor has already secured it to profit by your work.

You will see, if you analyze this situation, that you are renting star features without protection. Nothing is assured to you.

Now, why not buy the film for a year instead of renting it! Get an unlimited run with a rebooking privilege. Secure control of a restricted exhibiting district under a twelve-months contract, which you only can cancel.

This all costs more, but cutting out competition makes it worth more. You pay for fire insurance as assurance against loss.

Buy the picture to assure profit; don't rent and really only advertise a later run for a competitor. Actual ownership for one year is worth the difference in price.

The Triangle Code

Story. Triangle will secure the best stories that are written — stories that have been widely read — stories by the best known authors in the country — stories with a "punch."

Production. Triangle has always stood for high quality in production — pictures with a real box office value. This same high standard will be absolutely maintained.

Price. Triangle productions will be sold at prices that will enable an exhibitor to pay for his film service and other expenses and retain a profit for himself. The small town as well as the city exhibitor will be considered. No exhibitor need advance admission prices for Triangle plays.

Star. Triangle has made stars and will continue to make them. Read over the list of the stars of to-day and see how many were made by Triangle. Triangle stars, moreover, will be offered at a price that guarantees a profit to the exhibitor.

Equipment. Triangle studios at Culver City and Hollywood, Cal., are the finest in the country. No producing company has at its command studio facilities that are the equal of Triangle's.

Trade Mark. The Triangle trade mark is a real asset to exhibitors, for in the minds of the public it stands for motion picture quality.

Some additional reasons why you should book The Seven Pearls

¶ Feature production is the fourth big reason why "The Seven Pearls" is a serial for you to book to get 15 weeks' big business. The national advertising that is being done on this serial will bring the crowds for the first episode. Feature production, with the box office stars and the great story, will bring them back week after week.

¶ National advertising, is the fifth strong argument for this serial. In all the great Hearst newspapers and magazines "The Seven Pearls" is getting extensive advertising and publicity. In the best newspapers of every big city the same advertising is being done.

It is the Pathé policy to help you get the business on Pathé serials

The praise expressed in the scores of letters from exhibitors who find that

"We believe in giving credit where credit belongs—hence this letter. We started 'The Fatal Ring' on July 21st and we have established a new record for attendance. Last Saturday we opened our house at 1 o'clock p. m. and in 45 minutes we had them standing. That continued until we closed at 11 o'clock at night. Furthermore, everybody was more than pleased with the picture and many compliments were showered upon the management. This is all the more gratifying, as our patrons are very discriminating persons who would not hesitate to say the opposite if they felt it. We have run many Pathe Serials and they have always been money getters."—Gwynn & Blar, Terrell, Tex.

"Pictures That Are Different"

Centuries of oppression and suffering have left the impress of intensity on the Russian people. Eighty per cent. of the population were slaves, released from bondage as recently as 1861.

This intense feeling is reflected in the acting of Mozukin and his wonderful feminine associates of the Moscow Art Theatre.

Their portrayal of the stories of Tolstoy and his celebrated contemporaries visualizes the happenings of real life, expressed naturally by authors who have not stooped to appeal to shallow minds which demand that every story, every play, every picture shall end:

FOLLOWING THE LEAD of the MOVING PICTURE WORLD any amount of so-called exhibitor helps have been advertised.

Every publication having any bearing whatever on the moving picture industry claims a department through which they want to help the exhibitor if he will send his address and the name of his house. It sounds good, but—Just think for yourself a moment.

The exhibitors of today are just as intelligent and in many cases know more and are better posted in the show business than those who have appointed themselves advisors. So why waste your time. If you had a physical ailment you wouldn't run up any brown stone stoop and ring the bell because some doctor put an attractive sign out, would you? Of course you wouldn't. You would look for a doctor who really knew more than you did about every thing physically.

Your business should be treated similarly—it is just as important to life as your body.

When troubles are encountered in the exhibiting end of the motion picture business, look for expert advice—take out your copy of the MOVING PICTURE WORLD and study its special departments. They are compiled and edited primarily for the exhibitor.

The MOVING PICTURE WORLD is the oldest trade paper in the business. It started with the industry. It has a well-known and expert staff of moving picture specialists who have studied the picture business and know what is needed.

If you haven't sent in your renewal, DO IT NOW—or if you are not yet a subscriber, begin today. No successful exhibitor would be without the "WORLD."

Facts and Comments

WILLIAM JOHN WATKINS, a long time and regular editorial contributor to the MOVING PICTURE WORLD, passed from this life on August 22, after a brief illness, at a hospital in Brooklyn, N. Y. The deceased was one of the oldest employees of the Vitagraph company in point of service, having joined that organization in 1900 and continued with it almost to the day of his death. His intimate knowledge of the motion picture business and his early newspaper training made him a valuable commentator on trade subjects. The files of this paper indicate that his first contribution appeared in the issue of February 13, 1909, under the pen name of "The Man About Town," for his identity was never disclosed. From that time until the current issue, with but few omissions, his articles appeared regularly and were read with considerable interest. His last contribution was written the week before his death and appears in this issue. The deceased was a man of education and ability and made many friends. The MOVING PICTURE WORLD regrets his untimely demise and the consequent severance of long and pleasant relations.

A VERITABLE fever of organization seems to have struck the motion picture business. This week's news contributes no less than four efforts among various branches of the trade to get together. Two organizations are of state right buyers; one is of state right producers, and the fourth is of exhibitors on lines similar to both the Exhibitors' League and the First National Circuit. Two seem to have accomplished the work of organization and the others give promise of accomplishing as much. After that time only can furnish proof of their utility. Altogether these efforts indicate a desire to standardize the methods of production and distribution of motion pictures, an end greatly to be hoped for in the present state of affairs.

OPINION in some localities near big camps is, it is reported, reluctant to permit motion picture shows to open Sundays. The soldiers off duty need these places of innocent amusement and the military authorities will perhaps insist that they have them. What the official arrangements in the matter are to be has not been reported as we go to press, but that any arrangements are needed throws a shaft of light into the mental workshops of people who are so hide-bound as to oppose these shows. What some people see is what they have always seen and their make up is such that they'll never see anything else. 'Tis also a safe bet that a majority of them never saw the inside of a picture theater.

SYSTEMATIZING and classifying the information necessary today in any line of business is no easy task, but is, as a matter of fact, a science. The matters covered in each weekly issue of the MOVING PICTURE WORLD are so varied, cover so many different subjects that are of especial importance to every theatre manager that they become invaluable if located at the moment they are desired. It is more than anyone can expect to do, however, to read weekly so much that is pertinent and know just where to lay a finger on it when required. We index as fully as space permits, but some system of filing paragraphs under main heads and sub-divisions for music, projection, advertising, etc., becomes imperative for those who would secure the fullest benefit from this trade paper.

AN exhibitor living in a small village where he can get 250 patrons out to two shows a week will probably do better not to try for a show every night. In places where there is not a great deal of amusement, expectation of picture show night helps advertise it. It may become the village center of interest on two nights of each week. Of course such an exhibitor has to have some other means of livelihood, as he can hardly expect to net more than $10 a week unless he runs it in connection with a candy and ice cream store. In that case he will probably get two dimes from each patron on show nights and the work involved in the show business is like a hobby to him. It may grow, for he is learning a very profitable trade—that of the showman.

The Exhibitor's Mirror

By Louis Reeves Harrison

HOLDING up the mirror to nature" is an expression which has become so fixed in minds critical that it seems to have warped some of them. Not to select an illustration from reviews of our moving pictures, because criticism has not greatly advanced beyond the art of production in this field, we may go to the columns of those who shape the destinies of literature for an example of how critical judgment may be twisted out of shape by limited comprehension of what is meant by "holding up the mirror." A man whose taste is correct in many instances thus reviews a novel which he has evidently read with appreciative pleasure.

"The people of this story are made to talk just as people do talk, and to act just as people do act," and so on, with several paragraphs devoted to the "true to life idea," which besets the amateur when he first begins to wonder where he is at. As a rule, considering how people do talk and do act, is the "true-to-life" stuff fit to print? John wakes up in the morning and manages to remember that this is the day for him to change his shirt. He washes the front of his face, all that he can see, swipes at his hair with a brush, goes to breakfast and reads his paper while consuming eggs and coffee. Intense action!

He now makes a memo of some things he will forget before the day is over and starts for his place of business, following exactly the same route he does every week day of his life. He pursues the same route, does the same general character of work for about half he thinks he ought to get for it, tells a friend at lunch how the business ought to be run, with cynical comment on the boobs he has to work with and for, then there is an afternoon grind. He may meet a friend on the way home and they talk.

"Hello Tom!" "Hello Dick! How's things?" "Oh, so-so. How's things with you—ain't seen ye in a long time." "I'm at the same old place. Wher've-ye ben keepin' yourself?" and the invariable formula ad infinitum. Hold up the mirror to the way people do talk and do act and you only glimpse the periscope. It takes imagination to picture the submarine, just as it did when Jules Verne did not hold up the mirror to his times, when he wrote "Twenty Thousand Leagues Under the Sea." An author who knows his business may exhibit the periscope for the sake of plausibility, but he goes beneath the surface and into the very heart of a complicated mechanism for its true nature and submerged purposes.

Hamlet neither acted nor talked as did the people of his time. Like every true artist, Shakespeare was not engaged in holding up the mirror to such habitual, and more or less artificial manifestations of our inner selves. The true artist does not use a pocket mirror from a lady's vanity bag, nor a shaving glass of distortion. The Immortal Bard went beneath the surface and reflected for all time the secret workings of the human heart and mind. He pictured the battlefield of past habit and present aspiration, the eternal struggle of man with his ancestors.

The time is coming, if it is not already here, when the exhibitor may decide upon the character of what is presented at his theater. He should rise above the narrow limitations of personal preference to high ground of broad scope and vision. This will not be easy, but it is bound to become a big factor in our growth of production and presentation. This is a form of esthetic drama, an impressionist form, its natural tendency away from the unbeautiful and toward the tremendous effect of deep character analysis as opposed to strained and theatrical imitation.

Keep One Eye on the Padding. If there is material enough in a release to fill five reels there will be no injection of extraneous matter, the picturing of scenes foreign to the subject and of characters not essential to the dramatic telling of the story. There must be a firmness of connection between the parts of a feature play, and it usually implies a single line of action from beginning to end, following the movements of one leading character. This makes the telling clearer to the audience. A confused audience is apt to be a bored one in time.

Keep One Eye on Consistency. Not only should the different parts of a play be firmly connected, but there must be an agreement of a harmonious nature between parts so united. A consistent story is what might be called a successful combination of complex motives and situations which fit nicely into each other. The keen critic gives close attention to the coherency of all parts because those releases which stand a second showing and achieve a certain permanence are made of beautifully welded materials, which stand together in a well-united whole effect.

Give Attention to Setting. The drama of character development and soul crisis is opening up to our audiences undreamed-of vistas of beauty and absorbing human interest, but it can be made puerile, if not entirely spoiled, by careless grouping of studio properties, whose ugliness and inappropriateness distract attention, jarring every nerve in the spectators, tearing the illusion to shreds. There is almost as great need of artists in the studio as in the construction of plays for exclusive screen presentation. One can feel whether or not the background is in accord with the scene being portrayed, and its influence on the imagination becomes powerful when it accords with the play's mood.

Look Out for Stale Stuff. The mortgage to be foreclosed on the home; all at stake on a race horse; the villain's dying confession of a crime fastened on the innocent hero; the poor little neglected ingenue in curls who wears a pretty frock in the last act; the sacrifice of a young heroine to a scheming villain for the "honor" of the family; the interrupted wedding between villain and heroine; the two people who look exactly alike; the mistaken identity; the unexpected return of the hero supposed to be dead in battle or drowned at sea. There is an ocean of it on tap.

Shun the Blind Alley. A large number of modern screen stories start out as though they were leading through interesting scenes to some definite end—they seem to have a decided aim, but they end next to nowhere. This is largely due to the fact that they are adaptations of movement without comprehension of motive in the original work. The types in such releases do not represent the characters clearly; the audience becomes confused, and presently the original purpose is diverted by some change made in the studio. If it is a mystery story—it must be a mystery up to the final solution. No play can fix audience attention when it wavers—it must stick to its keynote.

The Weakest Spot can be easily determined by a little quiet thought after watching a private exhibition. Aside from the embrace of two people at the end, does the story have any definite meaning—does the whole composition produce an effect on you? If it is a director's hodge-podge of scenes taken more or less at random and patched up in the finishing room, you may have a feeling of having been at a table bright with flowers and after-dinner speeches, without having eaten anything. The surest test of a play is its firmness of definite purpose.

Look at Ourselves, Our Friends and Others By Sam Spedon

HONESTLY! In the past didn't the people in the picture business remind you of a lot of inexperienced men suffering from nervous prosperity? Men who suddenly found themselves in a business that gave them more or less prominence, without the necessary balance to sustain their position and command the respect of those with whom they associated.

Exhibitors.

They reminded us of the Irishman who attended a wedding and when introduced to the bridegroom as the best man, called him a liar and tried to prove it by licking him. They never conducted their business along business lines, they didn't know how. They agitated everything and everybody. They called the producers, exchange men and themselves liars and other things; organized, spoke in many tongues and never got anywhere.

It Is Different Now.

The old time circus with the sideshows, the shell and three-card monte games is a thing of the past. The days of the ballyhoo and the "ringers" are no longer with us. God be with the fast approaching days of a real "simon pure" business and everything else that goes with it.

Think It Over.

Two church members had a quarrel; one used profane and insulting language to the other. The profane brother was brought up before the consistory of the church on charges preferred by the offended member. The charge was dismissed with the following decision: "Some men swear a little and some men pray a little, but neither of them means anything by it."

Don't Rush Into Print.

When will men who pretend to be business men learn to use their brains and not take things to heart, the petty politics, jealousies and grievances that are nine time out of ten tempests in a tea-pot or a case of spleen. Every once in a while the papers are requested to champion somebody's grievance. Some one has cast an aspersion on his personality or something else. Immediately he wants to rush into print and say worse things about the other fellow. Then the other fellow want the papers to do the same thing for him, to keep up an incessant barking of accusations and denials, which never look well in print. These requests are not confined to individuals, they sometimes come from organizations whose statements are not tempered with judgment and do not use discretion in defining their position clearly or logically, regardless of drawing the papers into their personal or political differences.

Independent Producers.

This term reminds us of the old days of the "Patents Companies." We thought it had become obsolete. It sounds like a contradiction between a combine and an unrestricted opposition. Why not use another term like—unaffiliated. The exhibitors who are looking for a less expensive program no doubt will be glad to know the difference between the high priced and a program that comes within their means. We presume that is the reason for the organization of the socalled "independent producers" without desire to create opposition or confusion. All producers today are independent, or should be, with free rein to compete with each other in quality and price. The exhibitors' preference depends upon their pocketbooks and what will prove most profitable in their theaters.

Have a Look.

At a theater in New York there is comedy being presented at one of the theaters in vicinity of Times Square, entitled "Business Before Pleasure." If you are interested in moving pictures and want to see ourselves as others see us don't fail to take it in when in the Metropolis. It is a full of thought matter. It will make a hit with you because it expresses in actions and the living presence what has often been said in mere words. We are not saying this on the strength of a pass, we paid for our ticket and want another when we feel in need of another good laugh.

Always Two Sides

By Sam Spedon.

WE ARE in receipt of a letter from an exhibitor in Sheridan, Wyoming, owner of a theater seating six hundred and fifty, with a six-piece orchestra. We quote from his letter:

"Hark ye! All faithful subjects will this day (5th day of August, 1917), present themselves body and soul (and don't forget your bank-roll) at the nearest exchange, at which time you will surrender your birth-right and anything else that you may have in your possession. If you don't do this we will strangle you and throw you to the wolves of competition. This is our 'New Policy' and you will find it more equitable than the old one, inasmuch as we make the deposit system easier. Under our old system you deposited the amount of the cost of the last four pictures that you used, now all you have to do is to deposit one-fourth of the cost of the last picture of about twenty-five or thirty stars.

"We got several of these notices. Did you get yours? P. T. Barnum was right. One every minute, we answer the roll-call now. Who's next? But—We have jumped the traces and it is now up to the exhibitors to get busy and trample this blood-sucking parasite who sits in his office in New York demanding his pound of flesh. Shylock was a philanthropist in comparison."

The quotations from the foregoing letter are plainly a travesty on the "new policy" as set forth therein. For the benefit of those who may not know the actual conditions of the "new policy" of which Sheridan complains we give the following illustration: The "new policy" salesman goes into a town of three theaters and offers his star features at a set figure to one exhibitor, who says he can use twenty-four of the features a year; the second exhibitor agrees to use forty-eight and the third exhibitor agrees to book the whole output of the "new policy" company. Naturally the salesman signs up with the third exhibitor to the exclusion of the other two. This is business pure and simple. On the other hand, if three exhibitors are approached and one wants twelve, the second wants twenty-four and the third wants forty-eight, the third fellow gets the first choice of stars. This again is business.

Why Not Try This?

It is not necessary to book any number of star features under the "new policy" week after week. They can be booked a month or two apart if need be. It has occurred to us that high priced star features could be introduced in a regular program once a month, or every second month, during the year as a special or exceptional attraction, which they advertised to be. This would give the exhibitors a chance to show them occasionally and test them without the necessity of going to any great or continued expense. Of course we grasp the competition argument from Sheridan, that the "New Policy" company wants to create with opposition houses. Again it is up to the exhibitors to destroy this competitive opposition by agreeing to make a proposition to the distributing companies that the exhibitors will use the "new policy" star features alternatively. If this proposition is not accepted no harm is done; they can go right on without them. It strikes us as we indite this article that many difficulties of this kind could be adjusted by the combined or concerted action of the exhibitors. You can lead a horse to water but you can't force him to drink.

All Rests With Exhibitors.

Upon the face of such a "new policy" as this letter implies it looks the imposition of a hardship upon the exhibitors who are now struggling under expenses that leave them the bare margin of a living profit. But according to our Sheridan correspondent the exhibitors have met the situation by refusing to accept the "new policy," which is the wise and only logical thing to do. If the exhibitors stand in an organized unit and will not compete with each other in Sheridan, or any other place, then they have mastered the situation and there is no reason to complain. If exhibitors do not hold together in any locality and are willing to compete with each other, the fault lies with the exhibitors and not the distributors.

The Other Side.

We must not forget that the producers of high priced star features, and particularly the one to whom the Sheridan letter refers, are trying to meet a demand for better pictures, which are presumably produced by the best players, writers and director. Necessarily these are expensive mediums and luxuries in the making and exhibiting; just as stage stars and plays of high order are. The producers cannot force anyone to exhibit their pictures. It appears to us that these star feature producers are willing to take a chance in "high art" for art's sake and employ high priced stars, plays and directors for the betterment of motion pictures, hoping to reap a pecuniary reward as well as artistic and public appreciation. For this they should be commended. If Sheridan or any other place cannot indulge in "High Art" and contribute to the producers' reward he (the producer) will have to look elsewhere for it. There is plenty of art in the market and, as we have said before, there is no occasion to be disturbed.

The American Exhibitors' Association Will "Show Us"

THE general manager, C. C. Pettijohn, of the American Exhibitors' Association, is very much elated over the association's progress within the six weeks of its inception. In a clear cut statement Mr. Pettijohn announces that already it has as many, if not more, members pledged than the National League. "By the first or tenth of September we will be in comfortably appointed offices in the Times Building, New York, thoroughly equipped to carry out the Association's business and proceed under full operation without interruption".

We must give Mr. Pettijohn credit for his enthusiasm and devotion to the work he has undertaken. His voluntary reduction of his own salary from ten thousand dollars to five thousand that the difference might be devoted to the general running expenses of the Association's establishment, inspires confidence in the man's sincerity and dispels the many adverse criticisms and rumors we have heard.

The Association is to be commended for its avowed purpose not to accept moneys or contributions from outside sources, to ask no favors from anyone or of any trade paper outside the publication of news of the Association and such publicity as conform to its policies. And not to affiliate with any other organization that might compromise its fundamental purpose as a representative exhibitors' association, working primarily for the exhibitors, in accord with the whole industry, for constructive and not destructive ends.

"Let me tell you something," to quote Mr. Pettijohn, "we mean to show you. And when we do there will be no need to say anything. Keep your ear to the ground. After the convention at Ocean City, Virginia, I hope to publish a full list of our members and then you will see and believe."

William J. Watkins Dead

Old Time Moving Picture Man and Contributor to Moving Picture World Succumbs to Pneumonia.

WILLIAM J. WATKINS, for seventeen years connected with the Vitagraph Company of America, died of pneumonia at the Brooklyn Heights Hospital on Wednesday, August 22. William John Watkins was born in New York City on August 21, 1861, received his education at the public schools and later took a law course at Columbia College. In early manhood, he was associated with a prominent law firm; then moved to Shenandoah, Pennsylvania where he was for eighteen years connected with the local paper, "The Herald". At Shenandoah he became active in politics, being defeated for mayor by one vote.

In 1900 he entered the employ of the "Vitagraph" as bookkeeper and general office man at 116 Nassau street, New York City. Three years ago he was transferred to the studio in Brooklyn in charge of the extras, which position he filled until some four months ago, when in the wholesale dismissal of employees, he was with others of the "old guard" let out. Since then he has worked on and off as "extra". And it was while doing some work of this kind that he contracted a cold which developed into pneumonia and led to his death. The fact that most of the old hands were reinstated, while he, one of the oldest employees was not, preyed on his mind and helped to hasten his demise.

The body reposed at Harry T. Pyle's undertaking establishment on Thursday, where his old friends and associates paid their last tribute. The different departments of the Vitagraph Company and friends formerly with the company sent floral offerings. The body was removed to Point Pleasant, New Jersey, on Friday, where funeral services and burial took place on Sunday, August 26.

Though not generally known to the readers of the Moving Picture World, the deceased had been a contributor to this paper for many years, writing under the signature of "The Man About Town" various observations concerning the trade and the men engaged in it. His last contribution appears in this issue.

ABRAMSON FILMING NEW PLAY.

Ivan Abramson, director general of Ivan Film Productions, is now deeply engaged in filming his new play, "Sins of Ambition." Ivan Abramson's reputation as portrayer of problem plays is well established, and the announcement that with the production now in the making, he has begun on a new line of problems, is quite an interesting statement to the trade. He feels that because of the fact that most directors have not carte blanche in producing their stories, they are greatly hampered when an occasionally problem play is placed in their hands to produce. Not so with Mr. Abramson.

In "Sins of Ambition" Mr. Abramson presents to the public his premiere of the new line of problems which the trade can expect from time to time. At this time he is not quite ready to divulge more than the title of the picture as regards to the cast and expense—is the most elaborate thing yet undertaken by him for Ivan Film Productions.

Activities of War Committees

OF THE MOTION PICTURE INDUSTRY

THE prominent motion picture men who were recently appointed as state chairmen of the National Committee by President William A. Brady of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry, at the request of the President of the United States, have promptly taken up the work of organizing the exhibitors in their respective states for the purpose of utilizing the film and screen to spread broadcast throughout the nation information in regard to the plans and purposes of the various departments of Government during the period of the war.

Of the forty-eight chairmen appointed by President Brady on July 3 only four have not been heard from, this delay being due to the fact that the exhibitors appointed in these localities are away from home and therefore not aware of their selection as representatives of the National Committee.

In a majority of the forty-four other states and the District of Columbia the organization of exhibitors is now well under way, and in several states conventions of the exhibitors have been held which have established new records for attendance, indicating their desire to aid in this patriotic work.

One of the first state chairmen to take up the work was Charles H. Bean, of Franklin, who brought the subject to the attention of his fellow-exhibitors in New Hampshire in the form of a circular letter which was sent to every exhibitor in the state. It was as follows:

> Dear Brother Exhibitors of New Hampshire:
> At the request of William A. Brady, through the President of the United States, I have accepted appointment as state chairman of the National Committee representing our state and it will be my duty to carry out such suggestions or requests as may be sent to me by the War Co-operation Committee of the National Association, comprising the most representative men in the industry, which is now considering plans of which you will be advised in due course of time.
> The President of the United States has honored and recognized the motion picture industry as a great force in assisting the United States Government in the present world crisis.
> The exhibitors of the United States have been asked to work especially with the committee on public information, and there will be two methods in distributing information.
> Our screens (showing slides and short films).
> Four-minute talks in our theaters.
> The motion picture industry has been under severe criticism in the past—perhaps ofttimes rightly. The industry is asking for special consideration by the people in the way of liberal legislation. I believe everything asked for, in reason, will be granted if the motion picture industry shows itself worthy.
> Do your bit big and help carry on this splendid work.
> Inclosed find a card. Will you kindly fill out the same and mail to John B. Jameson, Concord, N. H.?
> I am sure there will be a generous response from every exhibitor in the state.
> CHARLES H. BEAN,
> Representative for the Motion Picture Exhibitors of New Hampshire.
> P. S. Inclosed you will find copy of letter from President Wilson to William A. Brady.

The postal card referred to contained the following pledge:

> I pledge myself that I will do all I can to help with my screen and theater in this great world crisis.
> Name .....
> Theater .....
> Town or City.....

In a report to President Brady on August 20, State Chairman Bean says he has received answers from 90 per cent. of the exhibitors in his state and feels confident the rest will respond, as several are known to be away from home on business trips or on vacations. A convention of the exhibitors of New Hampshire was held at Manchester on August 16, presided over by Mr. Bean, and despite a pouring rain there was the largest attendance ever recorded by the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of that state. A resolution was adopted offering the fullest possible support and co-operation to the President and the various Federal Departments by the motion picture theaters of New Hampshire. Ernest H. Horstmann of Boston, treasurer of the National League, addressed the meeting, setting forth the many ways in which the members of the state league could assist the Government at this time.

Similar activities have been undertaken by Herman J. Brown, state chairman of the National Committee in Idaho, who has advised President Brady in a letter dated August 13 that he has already undertaken the organization of exhibitors in accordance with the suggestions contained in the announcement which accompanied his appointment.

The circular which State Chairman Brown, who is president of the Idaho Theater Men's Association, sent to the theater owners and managers contained the following pertinent statement:

> Your president has accepted the position of state chairman of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry, at the request of William A. Brady. This means a whole lot of work and no pay for me. It means that I will have to do ten times as much as any other exhibitor in the state in Government war co-operation matters. I accepted this for the good of the industry in this state and to help increase its growing dignity. We now have a chance to make the motion picture business a respected business, to take it forever out of the clutches of the petty politicians, to attain to a power that will mean the death of the bum politicians that attack us. We have this chance, but it means that we must get in and realize that an organization can't live on wind and shirkers. You will soon be called on, as I will be called on, to get busy for the United States Government.
> The organization will have to report the theaters who are doing the work of the Government, which says "We depend on the motion picture theaters as on no other institution." It will also have to report the theaters who refuse to do the right thing. I have already assured the president of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry that Idaho will be on deck 100 per cent. strong.

Letters have also been received from the following state chairmen advising as to their plans for organizing the exhibitors in response to the appeal of President Brady: John E. Rickards, Phoenix, Ariz.; H. M. Thomas, Omaha; A. B. Momand, Shawnee, Okla.; H. T. Nolan, Denver; C. W. Meighan, Portland, Ore.; A. W. B. Johnson, Birmingham; Saul S. Harris, Little Rock; Frank A. Garbutt, Los Angeles; Theodore Jelenk, Wilmington; H. M. Crandall, Washington; Howell Graham, Chattanooga; C. D. Cooley, Tampa; William Oldknow, Atlanta; George K. Spoor, Chicago; F. J. Rembusch, Shelbyville, Ind.; C. E. Glamann, Wellington, Kan.; Lee L. Goldberg, Louisville; Alfred S. Black, Rockland; Louis B. Mayer, Boston; E. M. Clarke, Natchez; Thomas Furniss, Duluth; H. Charles Hespe, Jersey City; H. B. Varner, Lexington, N. C.; B. J. Sawyer, Cleveland; Charles H. Williams, Providence; H. B. Hurst, Deadwood, S. D.; E. H. Hulsey, Dallas; Edward J. Fisher, Seattle; A. D. Flintom, Kansas City; F. A. Hornig, Baltimore, Md.

WAR CONVENTION OF BUSINESS MEN.

The National Association of the Motion Picture Industry has received an invitation to send delegates to a special meeting of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States to be held at Atlantic City, N. J., September 18 to 21. The call for this meeting is issued by President R. G. Rhett, who sets forth in a statement accompanying the invitation the reasons for holding the meeting at this time and the subjects which are to be considered.

In view of the prominent part which the motion picture industry has already taken in connection with the war activities the film men will be in a position to relate their activities during the past three months at this meeting, which is to be made the occasion for the business men of the nation to meet in a convention to consider their part and share in the war, with a view to the formulation of generally approved lines of procedure. Consequently this is more than a special meeting, and has been designated as "The War Convention of American Business."

The National Association will be entitled to several delegates at the meeting to be held at Atlantic City, and the invitation will be presented for consideration at the forthcoming meeting of the Board of Directors.

The Roll of Honor

WILLIAM KALISKA, former manager of the Allendale theater and at one time assistant manager of the Strand, Buffalo, when Harold Edel guided the destinies of the last-named house, has received a commission as captain at Madison Barracks. "Bill"—we mean Captain W. Kaliska—has been receiving the handshakes, "good-lucks" and other farewell greetings from the film men in Buffalo. He says he expects to meet all of them "somewhere in France" in 1918.

H. S. Mandelbaum, who was formerly connected with the Cleveland branch of the U. T. E. Corporation, is about to leave for a Southern training camp. He was one of the first to respond when President Wilson asked for volunteers. He is with Battery A, Ohio Light Artillery.

Paul Diemer, who represented the Gaumont Company at the first training camp this season at Plattsburg Barracks, N. Y., has been ordered by the government to hold himself in readiness for extended field service. Mr. Diemer was commissioned a second lieutenant of artillery this month.

Richard C. Travers, the prominent Essanay player, reported at the officers' training camp at Fort Sheridan, Ill., August 27. Mr. Travers traveled through the south until that time, making personal appearances. He is no newcomer to the war game. He served in the Boer war. He is a graduate physician, having practiced medicine for some time. A younger brother is now in the service in France, while another recently was killed on the firing line.

F. S. Fountain, formerly manager of the Seattle Paramount office, is now on active service with the United States Engineering Corps.

R. L. Tracy, of the Cortlandt theater, San Francisco, after three months in the First Reserve Officers Corps has been commissioned a captain.

S. A. LYNCH GOES TO THE COAST.

Stephen A. Lynch, President of the Triangle Distributing Corporation, left New York on Friday of last week for California. Mr. Lynch's visit to the Coast may have something to do with the many rumors that have been circulating for the past three or four weeks relative to the big things that are about to be done in Triangle. Inquiries at the office of the Triangle Distributing Corporation fail to reveal the purpose of his visit to the West, but the opinion prevails that Mr. Lynch has some very definite objects in mind. It can be said that Stephen A. Lynch, who has many business interests, would not take the time to make a trip across country unless the outcome of the trip had to do with some very important matters. Those connected with the motion picture industry are awaiting with interest announcements from Triangle, which will no doubt be made within a very short time.

FLORENCE PRINTY WILL SUPPORT WILBUR.

Crane Wilbur's leading woman in "Unto The End," one of the series of Art Dramas which David Horsley is producing, is Florence Printy, a recruit from the legitimate stage. Miss Printy displays marked ability as a screen actress.

Miss Printy portrays a chorus girl, named Goldie Gay, with whom Jim O'Neil, the character played by Mr. Wilbur, falls madly in love.

Francis Ford, director and star of "The Purple Mask," "The Broken Coin," and other popular serials, will have the featured part in the new Butterfly picture, "Who Was the Other Man?" released September 3. Mae Gaston will be seen in the role opposite Ford.

Colleen Moore, Bluebirder

COLLEEN MOORE has been added to the galaxy of youthful beauties of the Bluebird West Coast studios, among whom may be mentioned Ruth Clifford and Carmel Myers. All three of these young girls have not yet passed "sweet sixteen" and each is a brunette with unusual fair complexion. Miss Moore was assigned by Production Manager MacRae to the Rupert Julian Company, and she has gone to Seven Oaks in the San Bernardino Mountains, where Director Julian has started production upon a new Bluebird photoplay entitled "Julio Sandoval," in which the new addition to the Bluebird forces will play the ingenue role.

Colleen Moore.

Little Miss Moore was born in Michigan, going to Florida when a little child. There she was educated in a convent at Tampa. From early childhood the little lady was interested in theatricals and before she was twelve years old she organized a dramatic club, in which she was a veritable Pooh Bah, serving as director, manager, villain, leading woman, etc.

About a year ago, while visiting in Chicago with her mother, she met D. W. Griffith, who immediately recognized excellent screen material in her and sent her to California to make her appearance in Fine Arts pictures. The day after her arrival she was cast in "The Bad Boy" with Robert Harron. Then followed "The Old Fashioned Young Man," also with Harron, after which she appeared with Wilfred Lucas in "Hands Up," one of the last photoplays made by the Fine Arts before it ceased operations as a producing organization.

Miss Moore is only five feet three inches in height and weighs exactly one hundred pounds. She says she will never grow any taller and doesn't want to tip the scales at any more than her present century weight. "Mother has bought me a copy of 'Eat and Grow Thin,' and that little book is going to be a constant reminder to me to remain at one hundred pounds," said Miss Moore with determination indicated in every word.

U. S. AMUSEMENT STUDIOS ENLARGED.

The United States Amusement Studios, at Fort Lee, N. J., are being extensively remodeled and enlarged. Although this studio is known to be one of the most complete and modern in the country, Herbert Blache is anxious to have it second to none, and plans were just completed by a competent contractor. Work was started as soon as "Behind the Mask" was completed.

The new plans will give almost double the floor space of the present arrangement. New lightings are being installed, extra scene docks are being built, and some large open air stages are to be shortly constructed. The effect will be practically to make the place into an entirely new studio, with every modern improvement.

MOUNTAIN ROMANCE FOR VIVIAN MARTIN.

Mountain romances are something of a specialty with Vivian Martin, who seems to be particularly happy in her interpretation of heroines who work out their destinies in the hollows of the hills amid sylvan surroundings. In "The Sunset Trail" added to the September releases of Paramount, Miss Martin appears as a lonely little girl who longs for youthful associates in her California mountain home.

From the reports of those who have witnessed the filming of "The Sunset Trail" it affords Miss Martin with a part that is not only suited to her particular style of acting, but gives her much new material. It offers, likewise, a splendid opportunity for the others in the cast.

Operators' New Scale.

AT a special meeting of Chicago Local, M. P. E. L. of America, held in its hall in the Masonic Temple, Friday, August 17, the following subjects were brought up for discussion:

The new wage scale of operators' union, Local 110, I. A. T. S. E.; the proposed music tax on moving picture theaters; the new scale of wages of the Chicago Federation of Musicians, and the proposed reduction of electric light bills in certain picture theaters.

After discussing the new wage scale for operators fully, it was finally decided to appoint a special committee of the Chicago Local to act with the executive committee of that body in a joint meeting with like committees of Local 110, to take up and adjust the proposed scale at a meeting in League headquarters, in the Masonic Temple, Tuesday afternoon, August 21.

President Joseph Hopp appointed the following members on the special committee to represent the League: Nathan Ascher, Geo. D. Laing, Harry C. Miller, L. Sigel and Ludwig Schindler.

For the operators, at the Tuesday meeting, there were present: Joseph Armstrong, president; Fred Havill, vice-president; Al. Johnstone, secretary, and Tom Molloy, business agent. There were also present the members of the new wage scale committee, with Mr. Hitchcock as chairman.

These committees went over the proposed new scale of wages very carefully and exhaustively. After a session of three hours they agreed on a number of revisions and on everything pertaining to the wage scale except the clause relating to small houses, which seat less than 300 people. In such cases the League committees were of the opinion that the compensation for operators should be less than the figure which the new scale provides. It is expected by members of the League committees that this matter will be adjusted fairly, and this is all the more likely, judging from the good spirit that prevailed throughout the discussion.

Regarding the music tax on picture theaters, President Joseph Hopp was informed by President Joseph Winkler, of the Chicago Federation of Musicians, that the members of that organization were in harmony with the members of the Chicago Local M. P. E. L. of America, to combat the tax, and President Winkler assured Mr. Hopp that his organization would take immediate action to co-operate with the Chicago Local.

This action by the Chicago Federation of Musicians follows closely that taken by similar federations in New York and Boston, where the members have refused to play any music listed as copyrighted by the Society of Authors and Composers.

The question of the new wage scale of the Chicago Federation of Musicians, which affects only the larger theaters, and that referring to electric light bills in certain theaters, after considerable discussion at Friday's special meeting, were referred to the executive committee of the Chicago Local, which will make a report at the next regular meeting of the League, which will be held on Thursday, Sept. 7, in its hall, in the Masonic Temple.

Prospects Promising for New Chicago Reel Fellows' Club.

At the first meeting of the Organization Committee of the Chicago Reel Fellows' Club, held Thursday, August 16, there were present: Messrs. Stoddard, Bell, Haag, Belford, Nehls and Ross.

It was decided to disband the old club and to reorganize on a more solvent and a firmer basis. It was also agreed that the membership of the new club would be restricted to a higher class of film men and others interested in the film business.

The members of the Committee decided to give up the old club rooms and to store the furniture; also that the new organization would assume the indebtedness of the old, and that all bills payable would be protected.

The first meeting of the Finance Sub-Committee of the Club was held Monday noon, Aug. 20. Messrs. Proctor, Nehls, Bell and Belford were present. Plans were discussed for liquidating the debts of the old club, but nothing definite was decided upon. The meeting was then adjourned.

A full meeting of the Re-organization Committee is announced for Monday, Aug. 27.

The Italian War Pictures at the Auditorium.

These remarkable registrations of the camera opened at the Auditorium, Thursday evening, August 23, and were viewed by a great gathering that taxed the seating capacity of the largest theater in America. The dense throng of spectators served to show the intense interest taken in the tremendous campaign waged on the Italian front by citizens of all types, and the scenes of warfare created impressions of awe, because of the almost insuperable obstacles and conditions encountered and overcome by the Italian soldiers.

Following are excerpts from Kitty Kelly's review, which appeared in the Examiner:

These first Italian war pictures, stamped with officiality by their government, turn a new light on the incredible difficulties of this warfare. The first section is devoted to the Alpine battlefront, and reveals, in scaling the snowclad heights, in transporting guns, ammunition and other supplies, unutterable effort, indomitable will. The persistence shown by these men in struggling through heavy snows, reaching dizzy heights in baskets swung on wire ropes, snowshoeing into action, laboriously by hand dragging heavy guns up the slippery slopes—till artillery is planted at a 12,000-foot altitude—is breathtaking. Hannibal is out-Hannibaled, and, incidentally, Cabiria out-Cabiriaed.

The pictures are excellently photographed and effectively assembled, illuminated with forceful subtitles, mainly quotations from different writers commenting on the situations disclosed. There is a scenic introductory effect and an orchestra that keeps colorful accompaniment.

Chicago Film Brevities.

An advance showing of Essanay's fine photo comedy, "Efficiency Edgar's Courtship", in which Taylor Holmes makes his initial bow in moving pictures, was given at Orchestra Hall, Friday morning, August 24, to a large invited audience. The use of Orchestra Hall was granted George Kleine for the occasion, through the courtesy of Messrs. Wessels and Voegeli, managers of Orchestra Hall, and Pathe Exchange, Inc. The large auditorium was fully occupied, and everybody present was effusive in praise of Taylor Holmes and the supporting cast in Essanay's sparkling production. The presentation was accompanied by Lynne Hazzard's orchestra, an unusual distinction for the private and trade showing of a picture.

Watterson R. Rothacker, president of the Rothacker Film Mfg. Co., was recently appointed a member of the advisory committee of the American Red Cross Bureau of Motion Pictures, by Evan Evans, director of that organization.

"The Sin Woman", an Owl feature, in which Irene Fenwick appears in the lead, has been announced as the leading attraction at the Ziegfeld theater for the week beginning Saturday, August 25.

"The Retreat of the Germans at the Battle of Arras", the latest war picture exploited by Pathe Exchange, Inc., and Official Government Pictures, Inc., has been shown to large crowds all through the week, beginning Saturday, August 18. The critics of the Chicago daily press have devoted large space to these films, which are described as possessing tremendous interest. Strange to say, the run will terminate Saturday evening, August 25, the time, in my opinion, being altogether incommensurate with the value of the films and their great popularity.

The benefit presentation of these pictures, given Friday evening, August 17, in aid of the First Regiment, Illinois Engineers, under the patronage of the Citizens' Unit of that regiment, was a most successful affair. After paying for newspaper advertising (which was very liberal), billboards, mailing circulars, etc., etc., fully $1,500 was netted by the Citizens' Unit. The entire proceeds were devoted to the regiment in question by Pathe Exchange, Inc., and Official Government Pictures, Inc.

Thursday evening, August 23, Manager North, for the interests mentioned, extended an invitation to the Chicago British Committee on allied recruiting and the members of foreign consulates in the city to attend the presentation of the pictures. Addresses were delivered by prominent members of the committee during the evening. For the information of inquirers, it may be stated that these pictures have a length of 4,850 feet.

Adolph Zukor, president of Paramount, was in the city last week. He came on to attend the wedding of a relative.

Oliver Morosco stopped over in the city last week on his way from Los Angeles to New York, and during that time saw his stage production of "Upstairs and Down", at the Cort theater.

Aaron J. Jones has secured the rights to "The Mormon Maid" in the states of Illinois and Indiana, for the Central Film Company.

"Within the Law", a Vitagraph feature on which Major Funkhouser has placed his ban, was given a private showing at the Studebaker theater, Thursday morning, August 23. About two thousand invitations were sent out to experts and prominent citizens. Several addresses were delivered on the occasion by speakers interested in prison reform among women. It is the desire of the Vitagraph Company to secure the opinions of people competent to judge the picture before bringing mandamus proceedings against the city. The stage production of this title was successfully shown in the city some time ago without any interference. Judge McKenzie Cleland was present and said, "It's a very good picture, I think."

It is going the rounds here that Henry B. Walthall has formed the Henry B. Wathall Pictures Corporation and that he will begin work soon in Hollywood, Cal.; also that Mary Charleson will be his leading woman and Reginald Barker the director.

Bryant Washburn, Essanay's popular comedy star in the Skinner series, has been pressed into the service of Uncle Sam's national army from division 55 in this city. Some unkind things appeared in the city papers regarding Mr. Washburn for his claiming exemption from service; but he states that he has at all times been willing to do his duty to his country as a soldier. "If I have been accepted for military service, I am more than willing to go and do my bit, as becomes a true, loyal American", says Mr. Washburn.

It has just been announced that one of the largest theater buildings yet constructed in Chicago will be erected in the near future at the northeast corner of Marshfield Ave. and W. 47th St. The structure in which the theater will be included will occupy a lot 121 by 208 feet and will be two stories high. The building, in addition to the theater, will include four stores and a number of offices. James Svehla, a furniture dealer, will build the structure, the estimated cost of which is $250,000. It is said that the moving picture theater when completed will seat over 3,000 people, and that Jones, Linick & Schaefer may take over the theater on a long term lease.

"The Honor System", by Fox, now showing at the Studebaker, is making a big record. The production has been highly praised by Chicago photoplay critics and the crowded houses daily testify to the popularity of the photoplay.

Thos. J. Furniss, member of the National Executive Committee of the M. P. E. L. of America, was in the city Thursday, August 23, accompanied by Mrs. Furniss. They visited the officers' training quarters at Fort Sheridan, where their son is now in training, and left the same evening for New York.

David Rogers of Minneapolis, national organizer of the M. P. E. L. of America, spent a short time in the city Thursday, August 23, and left the same evening for New York City, where he attended the meeting of the national executive committee and the officers of the League on Saturday.

The Chicago Federation of Musicians, following the lead of their organization in other large cities, has taken a stand against the music tax on picture theaters and will co-operate with the Chicago branch of the M. P. E. L. of America to combat the tax.

Juliette Day, the popular star of the American Film Co., Inc., returned recently to Broadway to fill a stage engagement with Klaw & Erlanger. Just before leaving Santa Barbara, Miss Day donated her high-priced touring car to the American Red Cross, to be disposed of at auction. The machine was purchased by a wealthy mining man, who paid for it several times more than it was really worth.

Marion Davies in "Runaway Romany"

MARION DAVIES is in the motion pictures to stay. At least, the young star who left the cast of "Oh Boy" at the Princess Theater, New York, several weeks ago, to make her film debut in her own story, "Runaway Romany," has decided not to return to the musical comedy stage for the present and this week begins work on her second photoplay.

Following the completion of "Runaway Romany," which is now nearly ready for Broadway showing, Miss Davies went to the mountains for a brief vacation, intending to resume her part in "Oh Boy." But last week she came back to see how she looked in motion pictures and was convinced that the opinion of competent critics was right and that she had a promising career in photoplay if she wanted to pursue it. She surprised the officers of the Ardsley Film Corporation by announcing her change of heart and they immediately submitted to her several scenarios by authors of reputation who are familiar with her stage career and see in her an excellent type for the screen.

Marion Davies.

After going over the scenarios Miss Davies eliminated all but two, then finally she selected the medium for her second picture and is now up Long Island Sound filming the first scenes. It is announced that the company to be seen with Miss Davies in the new play, when completed, will be equal in ability and fame to the players who appeared with her in "Runaway Romany." This company, an unusual one for an untried star in motion pictures, included Joseph Kilgour, Pedro De Cordoba, Matt Moore, Ormi Hawley, Gladden James and Boyce Combe. Many of these players are now engaged in other productions but Miss Davies intends that as long as she remains in photoplay her supporting companies must maintain the standard set by this famous group of actors of stage and screen in her motion picture debut

Theaters and Copyrighted Music

Must Have Permission by American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers to Play Copyrighted Music in Public.

LOS ANGELES motion picture theaters and other places of amusement received an unpleasant shock on Thursday, August 16, in the form of a letter from Philip Cohen, local representative of the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers. The gist of the letter is an ultimatum demanding that the prevalent practice of playing copyrighted music without permission must cease and requesting theaters to get a special license from the organization or face prosecution. The letter reads as follows:

Dear Sir—The public performance of copyrighted musical numbers in a motion picture theater, without permission of the copyright owner, subjects the proprietor of such establishment to very serious penalties.

Under the decision of the Supreme Court of the United States, rendered on January 22, 1917, in the case of Victor Herbert et al vs. The Shanley Company, the unlicensed performance of a copyrighted musical composition, in a motion picture theater, infringes the exclusive right of the owner of the copyright to perform the work publicly. We inclose herewith a copy of the opinion of Justice Holmes.

This society was organized to protect composers, authors and publishers against such rendition of their compositions and for the purpose of licensing the public performance of the works of the members who comprise most of the well known authors, composers and publishers of America, England, Italy and Austria.

Licenses are issued from this office and we recommend your application as early as possible, stating whether for an individual, copartnership or organization. Inclosed herewith you will find application blank for license, upon the basis of which declaration a contract license will be issued for your establishment.

If no license is secured, then you are hereby notified to prohibit the rendition upon your premises of any works of the members of this society.

The penalty under the copyright act for the public rendition of copyrighted musical works without the owner's consent are as indicated by the enclosed contract of the copyrighted law.

The license for motion picture theaters, we are informed, is to be made 10 cents per year for each seat so that a house seating 500 will be required to pay the sum of $50 per annum, 900 seats $90 per year, etc. In cabarets a flat charge of $15 a month is to be made. Hotels will pay from $5 to $15 per month according to class and business.

Some of the best known song writers and composers of the world belong to the society, including Victor Herbert, Ernest R. Ball, Jerome D. Kern, Irvin Berlin, Carrie Jacobs-Bond, George M. Cohan, Earl Carroll, Harry Carroll, Silvio Hein, Chauncey Olcott, Jean Schwartz, Albert von Tilzer, John Philip Sousa, Rudolph Friml, Franz Lehar, etc.

Douglas Fairbanks in Wyoming

Popular Artcraft Star and Large Company on Big Cattle Ranch Filming Scenes for "Man from Painted Post."

DOUGLAS FAIRBANKS and a large company arrived in Wyoming last week and have pitched their tents on the Riverside Ranch, thirty miles from the Laramie Railroad station in Wyoming, where the exterior scenes of "The Man from Painted Post" are being staged by Joseph Henaberry, assisted by Millard Webb, under arrangements with James House to use the Riverside Ranch, which includes 160,000 acres of land and 25,000 head of cattle, taking advantage of the real West for scenic purposes.

Fairbanks has secured Sam Brownell, champion bucking broncho rider of the world, Tommy Grimes, the fearless steer roper, Johnny Judd, fancy rope artist, Jay Miller, Tom Yarberry, Bill Baker, Charley Self and Bill Brown.

In addition to this group of champions who were featured in the recent Frontier Day Celebration, Fairbanks was accompanied from Los Angles by H. A. Strickland, champion bare-back bucking broncho rider, Jack Padgan, Bill Crawford, Ed. Burns, Charles Stevens, Fred Burns, who held the trick roping championship for five years until 1912, Edgar Metchen and Charles McPherson.

Among the players who support Mr. Fairbanks in "The Man from Painted Post" are Frank Campeau, the Western character actor, and at one time the best known player of his type on the speaking stage, as the result of creating Trampus in "The Virginian" and Tony in "Arizona"; Eileen Percy, known for her work in Wild and Woolly"; William Lowery, who played with Mr. Fairbanks in "Reggie Mixes In," one of his first screen productions, and Rhea Haines, identified with Morosco-Jack London pictures.

New Policy for Triangle Pictures

The Advertising of Stars and Individuals Will Be Subordinated to Productions.

STRICT adherence to facts and constructive exploitation that will keep public and exhibitor alike informed of production activities in studios and distributing organization plans will be the keynote of future Triangle Film Corporation publicity.

Advertising of stars and individuals will not be eliminated, but subordinated to the finished production and the exploitation of the brand under which they are exhibited. Casts will be selected for their ability to play the roles assigned rather than for individual fame or personal reputations, and no whim of star or director will be permitted to interfere with the quality on the screen.

Los Angeles Film Brevities.

Juliette Day, the American Film star, has left Santa Barbara for New York, where she will appear in a Klaw & Erlanger production. Miss Day may return to the American Film Company after her New York contract expires.

Samuel A. McKee, proprietor of McKee's Cafe, has filed suit for $100,000 in the Superior Court, against the Universal Film Company and the Superba Theater Company. The plaintiff alleges that the cafe in question is shown at four different intervals during the running of the moving picture "The Double Standard", and the inference is that vice and evil of social character exists in cafes of that description.

Presiding Judge Finlayson issued a temporary injunction restraining the theater from showing any scenes involving the cafe.

The plaintiff also alleges that since the initial showing of the film his cafe has been held up to ridicule, contempt and hatred and that the ill-will of the public will continue unless the picture is constrained by court.

Sub-titles stating that cafes in cities are traps and pitfalls, dangerous to the morality and welfare of the young and inexperienced girls, are shown in the picture and the complainant alleges that showing of the exterior cafe follows immediately after such captions, thereby inferring that his is one of the places referred to.

Al Nathan, manager of the Superba theater, exhibited the picture without the scenes in question being displayed and stated that the deleted picture would continue to be shown throughout the week. The case comes up for a hearing next Monday.

The Triangle-Keystone studios have long been famed for their generous collection of blonde beauties, but now another hue has entered the field and promises to run the first named a close race for popularity. The blondes have been in the majority for a year or more, but if the present pace keeps up the Titian-haired members of the comedy studio are going to outnumber them. The red-haired section now includes Myrtle Lind, Marie Manley, Clara Roberts, Nina Trask, Ruth Churchill, Myrtle Reeves and Dorothy Hagar. The rivalry is becoming so keen that the girls are planning on organizing a basket-ball team or tug-of-war or something, and in the event that they do it has been suggested that they bill their contents, "Peroxide vs. Henna".

A new Christie comedy has been started this week under the working title, "A Blesed Blunder", with Betty Compson, who has just returned from a month's vacation, in the leading role. Jay Belasco plays opposite Miss Compson, and Harry Rattenberry, who has been absent from the studio for several weeks, also returns as a member of the cast. Other parts are taken by Jean Hathaway and Robert McGowan.

Al. E. Christie, director of Christie comedies, has just completed "When Clubs Were Trumps", with Margaret Gibson as the star and the production is now in the cutting room.

Mary Pickford is to have a new job, that of referee in a fist fight between Charlie Chaplin and Douglas Fairbanks, who is about 100 pounds heavier than the comedian, which will be staged at the Mason Opera House next Sunday evening.

The burlesque fight is part of a program offered for the benefit of the French-American emergency hospital, and arranged by Mrs. Frank Wright of London.

Other stars of the film world who wil take part in the entertainment are Julian Eltinge, Wallace Reid, Louise Huff, Raymond Hatton, Mae Murray, Jack Pickford, Olive Thomas and Hughie Mack.

Edna Purviance, Lottie Pickford, Teddy Sampson, Gertrude Selby, Anna Luther and Dorothy Dalton will sell programs.

Another new comedy man to join the Universal Company is Al Santell, who has been added to the directing staff to alternate with Director Craig Hutchinson in staging comedies in which Dave Morris and Gladys Tennyson are the principal players. Last year Mr. Santell wrote and directed Kolb and Dill feature pictures, produced by the American Company and lately has been putting on the Ham and Bud pictures for the Kalem Company.

Claiming that the Fox Film Company had staged a mine disaster so realistically that when the mine exploded they were injured and their property damaged, four residents of Klondike Park this week sued for nearly $50,000 damages in Federal Judge Trippet's court.

The plaintiffs are Walter L. Dunham, Andrew J. Dunham, William Foster and Lillian E. Comfort.

In December, 1916, when the Fox people were filming "One Touch of Sin", and in January, 1917, when William Farnum was making "The Conqueror", "it is alleged the complainants were injured by the blowing up of mines, high explosives and bombs on the Los Feliz road". The film corporation has entered a general denial, setting out the nondangerous character of the explosions complained of, asserting that instead of the dynamite being used nothing more dreaded than black powder was employed. The attorneys for the film company declare that they will bring into court as witnesses 150 "extras" who were working in the scene and were not injured, to testify that the explosion was harmless.

Enid Bennett, the former Ince star, has filed suit in the Superior Court for cancellation of a contract alleged to have been made with Thomas H. Ince personally, and for an injunction restraining the New York Motion Picture Corporation from hampering her in her work.

Miss Bennett entered into a two years contract with Mr. Ince in July, 1916. Since that time, Mr. Ince has severed his conection with the New York Company, and Miss Bennett, saying that she was not aware of the fact that Mr. Ince was the agent of another company, refused to carry out the old contract handled by other persons.

Her salary was $200 per week, according to the complaint, and her work for Mr. Ince was satisfactory. However, she does not want to continue the work under the supervision of others, she said.

Among the many new players recently engaged to work at Universal City are Mattie Cummont and Henry Murdock, who will be under the direction of William W. Beaudine.

Mattie is the short, roly-poly woman who has been working recently with the Fox Company and with Max Linder. She is known as one of the foremost comediennes of the French legitimate stage and photoplay fans with good memories may recall her in French Pathe comedies.

Henry Murdock has been working with the Kalem Company for a year or more, first with its Florida company and more recently with Ham and Bud in California.

Out on the three-acre lot of the Mena Film Company in Hollywood, the big moments in the lives of the early Egyptians is being lived these two weeks under the direction of Howard Gaye. Work has just begun on the multiple reel feature, preparations for the making of which have been in progress for more than a year. E. W. and J. G. Kuehn, men of eastern capital, are at the head of the Mena Company's affairs. The four principals to appear throughout the four episodes of the production are Virgina Chester, Amy Jerome, Frank Whitson and Alfred Garcia. Only a small number of the suporting cast will appear in all four episodes, new support being chosen for each one. It is estimated that the production will take two months in the making.

Crane Wilbur has turned story speculator. He became so fascinated with a serial story that he requested an option on the story's picture rights. This was granted him and he is now purchasing the serial, though he admits that "now he's got it he does not know what to do with it." The chances are, however, that Mr. Wilbur will identify himself with the hero of the fascinating story.

The producing staff of the National Film Corporation, who recently left Los Angeles for New Iberia, La., have transferred their base of operation to Morgan City, where the Company is now at work on the production "Tarzan of the Apes", under the direction of Scott Sidney. The city officials have donated for the use of the company a large warehouse with trackage at one side and a boat landing at the other, so that transportation for location work is reduced to a minimum. A large storeroom has also been secured opposite the hotel, where a force of property men are working in conjuction with the technical staff.

Director Sidney, in view of the desires of local merchants, has agreed that his biggest scenes, requiring the participation of several hundred negroes, will be made on Sundays, so that the usual commercial activities of the city will not be interfered with. A large number of negroes have migrated to the North within the past year, and the wage scale for cannibals has jumped from a dollar a day to $1.75.

"Mother" Lule Warrenton returned to the Universal fold this week. Mrs. Warrenton is one of the best known character actresses of screendom and was associated with the Universal Company for more than three years before she left that organization to produce children's photoplays for the Frieder Film Corporation in Lankershim. Mrs. Warrenton enjoyed a long experience in the spoken drama before going into motion pictures and at one time had her own stock company. In the cinema world she has played with many of the leading stars and for a time directed feature children's pictures at Universal City.

BIOGRAPH STUDIO FOR PETROVA.

Petrova Picture Company, the organization that will produce and market Madame Petrova's personally-supervised pictures, announces that the distinguished Polish actress has leased the Biograph Studio, New York City, until arrangements have been completed for a permanent Petrova studio. The production of the first picture will begin September 3.

Madame Petrova has selected George Irving to direct her first picture. Mr. Irving was chosen because of his splendid work in the direction of "The Witching Hour" and "Jaffray." Another example of his art will be seen in "Raffles," John Barrymore's recently-finished picture.

Two unusually strong stories are now being prepared for production. One is a story written by Madame Petrova, which furnishes a splendid vehicle for her talent; the other is a popular novel full of dramatic situations. These two stories will be the first and second Petrova pictures; both will be in seven reels.

AL GRIFFIN WITH ROLIN.

Alice Brady Forms Own Company

Player to Make Eight Pictures a Year—Has Already Begun Work in New York Studio.

THE sequel to the announcement that Alice Brady has left the World Film Company comes in the news of the incorporation in Albany of the Alice Brady Pictures, Inc., August 25, with a capitalization of $250,000.

Arrangements have been concluded for a studio in the vicinity of New York, and work on her first picture has been begun. It is announced the first production of the company will be the screening of one of the most successful plays in the history of the legitimate theater, a play that almost every film maker in America has tried to produce. Early announcement will be made of the method of distribution adopted by the company. Miss Brady expects to produce eight pictures a year, and her first production will be ready for release October 15.

T. Wigney Percyval

T. WIGNEY PERCYVAL, co-author of "Grumpy" and "The Little Lady in Blue," and incidentally one of the best known actors on the English stage, was lured into the movies this season. Mr. Percyval holds that there is no field so full of "copy" for the novelist and playwright as the movie territory. The only globe-trotters these days are motion picture actors, he declares. They are the only professional travelers left.

T. Wigney Percyval.

The first picture Mr. Percyval played in was "She", laid in Africa. But the long sea voyage to this far away country was obviated by the fact that Florida is so close at hand—and full of native sons of Ham.

"We arrived in our Africa, which is near Tampa, Florida", he said, "and in due course of time the setting for the picture was decided on, and the director gave instructions for us to make up.

"I asked, naturally enough, where we were to dress. The director waved his hand expressively. He took in the whole landscape. 'Anywhere,' he said.

"I proceeded to hunt a convenient cave in which to change myself from an Englishman to an African prime minister. After wandering around an hour I came across a bungalow. I rapped. No response. I tried the blinds. All were securely fastened.

"At last, finding one unlatched, I opened it and went in. The house was deserted. So I adjusted my dressing case and mirrors, made up comfortably and donned my robes of state in privacy.

"I continued to use the bungalow day after day. I called it my house. One day I was dressing when I heard steps on the veranda.

"A man strolled to the window I had been using as my door and greeted me with 'Hello, are you living here now?'

"I replied in the same tone, 'I am' I wasn't sure what his position was, but I waited for him to explain his intrusion on my premises.

"'Just dropped by,' he said casually, 'to see who is living here now. Used to live here myself in happier days,' and he was gone.

"What was his story? I find myself often wondering. Who figured in those happier days?

"I lost him, for he disappeared as suddenly as he arrived, and I am in private life no detective, though I did recently play the part of an English detective in 'Sylvia of the Secret Service' with Mrs. Castle. But I played a stupid English detective.

"I shall continue in the 'movies', in addition to my literary work", Mr. Percyval concluded; "it is the one field of romance, adventure, that has not yet been scratched by the novelist. I mean the experiences of motion picture actors in the strange, new countries they are exploring right here in the United States of America".

Raver Resigns as Art Dramas Head

Will Give His Whole Time to His Own Productions—To Exploit European Spectacles.

THE resignation of Harry Raver, president of Art Dramas, Inc., has been tendered his organization. A successor has not as yet been announced. No changes in the releasing make-up of the program are indicated in the action of Mr. Raver, his reasons for vacating the executive chair being said by him to be personal.

"My resignation need occasion no surprise," said Mr. Raver, "as I have for some time contemplated turning over the reins to one whose sole time and energy could be devoted to the details, leaving me free to supervise my American productions and, as well, the exploitation of a new series of twenty or more European spectacular and novelty productions which I have recently imported, one of which, 'The Warrior,' has just closed a successful run at the Criterion Theater."

Mr. Raver has just completed an important production of "The Public Defender," by Mayer C. Goldman and Frank W. Harris, two prominent members of the New York bar, starring Frank Keenan, Robert Edeson, Alma Hanlon, John Sainpolis and Florence Short. This is to be followed by others of the same type and personnel.

Richard Bret Harte

BRET HARTE wrote of California's first great industry, gold mining, and made the gold camps forever famous, and now a Bret Harte is writing for California's last and greatest industry, the production of motion pictures. His name is Richard Bret Harte, grandson of the famous author, and he has just been added to the scenario staff of the Triangle Culver City studios.

Richard Bret Harte.

The young Mr. Bret Harte believes that if his grandfather were alive today, he would be one of the foremost scenario writers, and he points to the classical stories, "Solomy Jane" and "The Luck of the Roaring Camp", as examples of what the elder artist might have done for the newest method of dramatic expression.

His training for dramatic writing is unusual. While born in Philadelphia, his residence in America was short, for his father took him to England as a little child. He was educated in prominent schools in England and Belgium, later engaging himself with art studies in the Beaux Arts in Brussels. While clever with his pencil, he prefers his typewriter.

And the typewriter he prefers is by no means a usual one. It speaks nine languages. He is a rapid writer, having done special work for the New York and Philadelphia papers, and considerable magazine work. He is a member of the staff of the Overland Monthly, the magazine founded by his grandfather.

His father was an intimate friend of Dion Boucicault, the Irish dramatist, and was considered an authority on French and English drama. His father's connection with the stage offered unusual advantages to Richard Bret Harte to absorb the fundamentals of dramatic contruction.

CHADWICK ON TOUR.

I. E. Chadwick, general manager of Ivan Films, left Saturday, August 18th, for a tour throughout the country in the interest of the Ivan Film Productions, visiting the different distributors, energizing their efforts for the fall campaign.

Mr. Chadwick will not return until the early part of September, and as he is, while attending to business, also trying to get a few deep vacation breaths, his staff at the home office wish him all the enjoyment that he can get while away and hope to see him back in his usual vigor, which those who know him say is sufficient to make things hum.

Olive Tell

THERE are very few stage or screen stars today who can lay claim to have started at the top of the ladder, rather than to have experienced all the bitter before reaching the sweet things in life. Still, Olive Tell, now starring in film features for the Empire All-Star Corporation, and who is actively engaged in filming "The Unforeseen," under the direction of Albert Capellani, spent a year in the Sargent Dramatic School after finishing her education abroad, and from there to the stage, where she played in leading parts from the first, having been engaged by Frohman.

Olive Tell.

Miss Tell has appeared in "Husband and Wife," "Cousin Lucy," "The King of Nowhere," "The Intruder," "Romance" and "Under Pressure," for the stage, while her film work has been limited to three pictures, "The Smugglers," with Donald Brian; "The Silent Master," with Robert Warwick, and her present feature. Miss Tell was also the featured leading woman with the Manhattan Players in Rochester, N. Y., where she played a summer engagement for three consecutive seasons, terminating her present season early to start work for the Empire All-Star productions.

Exceedingly beautiful and talented, Miss Tell brings to the screen one of the most charming personalities of the theatrical world. Accomplished, an expert pianist and golfer, she can be seen at prominent week-end parties of the smart set, and very few golf matches among the women folk at Forest Hills Gardens, L. I., draw much attention unless Miss Tell is a competitor, and she has already won several trophies on the links. Much interest is being manifested in Miss Tell's first starring vehicle, which will be released by the Mutual Film Corporation.

HUMISTON INJUNCTION INEFFECTIVE.

The injunction granted Mrs. Grace Humiston by Supreme Court Justice Ordway two weeks ago to restrain the Universal Film Mfg. Co. from releasing the issue of the Animated Weekly containing pictures of Mrs. Humiston taken at the scene of the Cocchi murder, has been withdrawn upon refusal of the plaintiff to provide a bond of $2,500. Evidently in much doubt regarding the outcome of the case. Mrs. Humiston thought it best not to put up the sum required, thereby rendering the injunction ineffective. The Universal has withdrawn the issue of the Animated Weekly containing the pictures from circulation, however.

The decision of Justice Ordway that news films such as the Animated Weekly are not to be considered in the same class as newspapers seems likely to stand, and may cause considerable loss to the various film concerns manufacturing these features, as any private citizen who happens to appear before the lens of a camera while a parade or other news event is being taken will have the right to sue for damages if the picture is released commercially.

ANDERSON GOES TO COAST.

Monday afternoon, August 20, Carl Anderson, president of Paralta Plays, Inc., left for Los Angeles to look over the important Western interests now controlled by his corporation and allied companies. He will be gone four weeks. This is Mr. Anderson's first visit to the West Coast since the formation of the Paralta Corporations in February and March last.

With the Henry B. Walthall Company added to the Kerrigan and Barriscale Companies as producing units at the Paralto studios, this plant will become a busy place. These companies do not, however, represent its capacity, and at least four more organizations can work there with substantially separate accommodations for each.

"Straight Shooting"

Stirring Five-Reel Butterfly Number Features Harry Carey —A Powerful Story of Western Plains.

Reviewed by Robert C. McElravy.

THE old days of the West live again in such exceptionally realistic offerings as "Straight Shooting." It tells a picturesque narrative of the days when cattlemen made war upon homesteaders. Harry Carey is featured in his familiar role of "Cheyenne Harry," a bad man with a good heart. He has previously done some splendid work in this part, but this number is a step ahead both for himself and his supporting company of rough riders and Western character performers.

The story itself, written by George Hively and produced by Scene from "Straight Shooting" (Butterfly).

Jack Ford, is a clean-cut, straightforward tale, whose thrilling moments would seem fictitious except for the fact that they are bolstered up by actual tradition. It would be hard to get into the pictures any more striking or tragic incidents than have actually occurred in the warfare of the range. Both the author and the director are to be congratulated upon having selected compelling scenes and situations for the production. The Western panorama is set forth in clear, attractive photography and the riding and fighting episodes are enacted with dash and enthusiasm. So successful is the offering that it deserves to rank with "The Virginian" and "Whispering Smith." It has not the humor of the former, but it has a strong human quality and rivals the latter in intensity and conviction.

George Berrell and Molly Malone play the old settler and his daughter, whose home is made the scene of numerous stirring events. Others in the cast are Duke Lee, Vester Pegg, Ted Brooks, Hoot Gibson, Milt Brown and a large cast of rough riders.

"The Jury of Fate"

Mabel Taliaferro Gives Fine Characterization of Dual Role in a Story of the Canadian Forests.

Reviewed by C. S. Sewell.

EXCELLENT characterization of two contrasting roles mark the work of Mabel Taliaferro, who is cast both as Jeanne Labordie, a charming, unselfish girl, and as her twin brother, Jacques, who is pampered and selfish, in "The Jury of Fate," a Metro-Rolfe picture released August 6.

The story by Finis Fox, adapted by June Mathis, is laid for the most part in the heart of the Canadian forests, somewhere in the northern part of Quebec. Henri Labordie's wife dies after giving birth to twins, and he makes an agreement with his friend, Duval Hebert, that Jeanne, when old enough, shall marry Hebert's son Louis. Jacques is the favorite of his father, who, when the story opens, is fast becoming blind; and in order to lessen the blow, Jeanne masquerades as Jacques, after he is accidentally drowned. The father dies soon after and, carrying out his request, she goes to his friend Hebert, learns of the agreement, and agrees to marry Louis Hebert, a weak-natured, dissipated youth, although she is in love with Duncan, a surveyor, whom she has met in the north woods. On the night before the wedding Louis returns from a trip to the north bringing Duncan, who believes that Jeanne has deceived him. Louis hears their conversation, denounces Jeanne, and is killed by being thrown over a banister in a fight with Francois LeBlanc, a halfbreed friend of Jeanne's. LeBlanc and Jeanne return to the forests, and, through the unselfishness of LeBlanc, who himself loves Jeanne, a reconciliation is brought about between Jeanne and Duncan.

There are many beautiful woodland views, and Director Tod Browning has made excellent use of double exposures, Miss Taliaferro playing opposite herself in a number of scenes. Much of the heart interest is supplied by F. F. Bennett as LeBlanc, the halfbreed, in love with Jeanne, a part reminiscent of Poleon Doret in "The Barrier." Albert Tavernier as Henri Labordie, Bradley Barker as Louis Hebert, and H. F. Webber as Duval Hebert are satisfactory in their respective parts, and the photography is excellent.

"Tides of Fate"

World Film Corporation Releases Subject Featuring Alexandra Carlisle in Story of Real Life.

Reviewed by Robert C. McElravy.

REAL life, with melodramatic trimmings at odd moments, is the chief impression made upon the observer by this five-reel feature. It follows the fortunes of a girl named Fanny Lawson, capably portrayed by Alexandra Carlisle. It is Fanny's fate to be rescued from a watery grave by an adventurer named Stephen King. A captain of the mounted police, named John Cross, is recuperating from an illness in the neighborhood. He falls in love with Fanny, but she has given her heart to King and eventually marries him and goes to the city.

Scenes are then shown in rapid succession, picturing the lives of the three principals. At first the observer is conscious of a certain abruptness in the direction, owing to the number of plot threads woven into the story, but this course was apparently necessary and is readily excused when the threads once more unite and the plot comes to a satisfactory climax.

King turns out to be an experienced counterfeiter, who has served a term in prison. After the marriage he becomes indifferent to Fanny and leaves her. Government agents search her apartments and find King's counterfeiting plates. The wife, although entirely innocent, is sent to prison as an accomplice and serves two years. John Cross in the meantime is having adventures with the mounted police in Canada, where he is court-martialed for alleged cowardice. Later he goes to the Philippines, where he redeems his honor. He and Fanny eventually meet again in a New York boarding house, and are in love with one another when King appears. The latter becomes wildly jealous and starts trouble. He is fatally shot by a policeman during the melee, but before his death confesses to his various crimes and clears Fanny's name.

The story is adapted from "Creeping Tides," by Kate Jordan. There is perhaps no special strength about the presentation, although certain scenes grip the attention closely. These include the court-martial, the prison theatrical entertainment and Fanny's escape, the battles in the Philippines, and the fight at the close.

Others in the cast are Frank Holland, William A. Sheer, Charles Graham, Jane Kent and Walter Ryder.

"The Seven Pearls"

Mollie King and Creighton Hale Featured in Pathe's New Serial—First Two Episodes Promise Fascinating Story.

Reviewed by Ben H. Grimm.

WITH the adventurous materiality of the East working at cross purposes with the mysterious craftiness of the Orient, Pathe's new serial, "The Seven Pearls," gets off to a fast and fascinating start in the first two episodes. The two chapters shown for review promise a good serial. Mollie King and Creighton Hale, who already have established themselves in serials, are the featured players in this one. Leon Bary, Henry Gsell and John J. Dunn are also prominent players. Charles W. Goddard wrote the story and scenario. The serial was produced by Astra and the first episode will be released September 2.

Scene from "The Seven Pearls" (Astra).

"The Sultan's Necklace."

The first chapter, in three reels, is titled "The Sultan's Necklace." It plants the leading characters and gets into the story proper in short order. Mollie King is seen as an American girl who has been brought up in Turkey as the daughter of Honest Bey, a former Ambassador. Through an adventure she meets a young American. Later the young American innocently steals a pearl necklace left in the Bey's care by the Sultan. The Sultan demands that the girl become an inmate of his harem. Her alternative is to recover the necklace within six months. The young American learns that he has been inveigled into a gang of international crooks. The action shifts to New York. The girl continues her search for the necklace, the seven pearls of which have been given to seven different persons. A mysterious character enters the action here. He is apparently the member of a secret Oriental order. The pearls are well-distributed in the first chapter and at the close the spectator is anxious to know more.

"The Bow String."

In the second chapter, titled "The Bow String" (two reels), the story moves along more rapidly, the characters having been planted. The chapter turns chiefly around the efforts of the girl to acquire the pearls. The chapter gets its title from the fact that the girl is threatened with the bow string, the contrivance used in strangling women of the harem who flirt. The girl is constantly watched by a lieutenant of the Sultan. In the episode one of the gang of crooks makes the girl's acquaintance. He is caught by her in a house as he is stealing a painting. He overpowers her and is about to make way when the hero enters. The girl gets two of the pearls, but they are taken from her by her guard.

"The Divorcee"

Alfred Vosburgh Gives Excellent Performance as Militant Parson in Blue Ribbon Feature.

Reviewed by George Blaisdell.

THE notable factor in "The Divorcee," a Blue Ribbon release of August 27, is the performance of Alfred Vosburgh as a militant parson. What not too often happens on the screen we have here a player who looks a minister of the gospel. He neither overplays nor underplays the part. His Rev. Jerry Ferguson, the Reno minister in a campaign against the divorce evil or the evil divorce laws, has the face and the bearing of a man of breeding and education. Yet, too, we see he is a man of action, who can ride and shoot, who can impress other men of action with the fact that he is one of them.

Rufus Steele has written a comedy-drama around the divorce colony of the Nevada town which in other days was known the country over as a temporary abiding place of those anxious to be quickly freed from the bonds of matrimony. Mr. Steele has given us some good situations and some excellent titles—the sort that reveal the hand trained in phrasing, in putting something worth while into a few words. As one reviewer remarked, the story picks up sharply when the red blood comes into evidence. And he had the clergyman in mind.

Mary Anderson is Wanda Carson, who goes to Reno to visit a brother who permanently lives in the town. Wanda decides that in order to see anything of the restricted life in the place it will be necessary to enroll as one of the divorcees. To further her scheme she claims as her own the little daughter of her cousin. Then she meets the parson, riding afield arrayed in all the stage cowboy panoply presented him by his in-the-rough friends. The story twists humorously and seriously following the revelations to the minister of one of the genuine divorcees and to Wanda of the depredations of an honest-to-goodness highwayman, the two principals meanwhile concealing their identity from each other.

The action rapid and interesting in the second half of the subject atones for the absence of this quality in the opening. The ending is one that will "send 'em away smiling."

"Pants"

Charles Mortimer Peck's Story Produced by Essanay, with Little Mary McAlister in the Lead, Assisted by a Cast of Clever Players.

Reviewed by James S. McQuade.

LITTLE MARY McALISTER will please her many admirers in "Pants," a five-reel production by Essanay, the story being specially written for Little Mary by Charles Mortimer Peck. While everybody who sees "Pants" will be deeply interested in the amusing escapades in which Little Mary figures, those of us who are zealous for a well constructed plot cannot help wishing that the strong climax, which occurs early in the third reel, could have been avoided, as the spectator's interest for some time afterward is somewhat dulled.

However, as Little Mary is the sun around which every other person in the cast revolves, and seeing that she is delightful, even with faulty construction of plot, we refuse to permit our pleasure to be marred by any technicality.

There is a beautiful lesson for children and grownups also in the screen story of "Pants," as well as a rich fund of humor. Let it be known that "Pants" is the nickname of a wealthy little girl called Betty, whom our Little Mary McAlister impersonates. Betty has an ogre of an aunt, who forbids her playing with the lowlier children of the tenements, and as these are the only playmates at hand, it can readily be guessed that

Scene from "Pants" (Essanay).

Betty will be obliged to mope and cry her eyes out from sheer loneliness, unless she can find a way. Her good uncle champions her one day and tells her to go to the beach and play, promising to stick by her.

On this occasion she wishes to play with the boys; but they are intent on bathing and rebuff her by singing, "Ah-h, we don't want no girls! We're goin' to do something girls can't do," and they rush off and out of sight. In her wanderings Betty chances on a boy's clothing, and finding the role of a girl irksome, she appropriates the pants and a hat, leaving instead her frock and hat. The sequel reveals mirthful complications that are best told by the pictures.

The scene showing Betty entertaining a crowd of her young tenement friends—begrimed and foot-dirty, in her beautiful home, brings laughter and the joy akin to tears; for Betty's kindness makes the whole world kin.

These are only two of the numerous pleasing and mirthful incidents in "Pants," which will be released through K-E-S-E, Inc., Sept. 10.

"The Lust of the Ages"

Ogden Pictures Corporation's Initial Subject Is a Pretentious Subject, Stronger as a Spectacle Than as a Drama.

Reviewed by George Blaisdell.

THE Ogden Pictures Corporation gave a trade showing of its first production on Friday, August 17. In "The Lust of the Ages," a seven-part picture, Lillian Walker is featured. The subject is a spectacular preachment—on the titular side it is a homiletic discourse on the evils of money grabbing; on the dramatic or picture side it is a story within a story, with the same principals employed in each.

Scene from "The Lust of the Ages" (Ogden).

The picture will appeal to those who "dearly love a lord," who are interested in portrayals of persons of wealth and of social position, who enjoy looking upon the habitations of those above the average in means, and who are attracted by mob scenes, of throngs. It will not appeal to those who care for, first of all, a straight and simple story. It lacks heart interest—if there is in the seven reels a situation that makes the pulse beat faster or one that gets under the skin, this writer failed to register it. In presentation there are many photographic novelties, touches that add to the picturesqueness of the subject.

Miss Walker has the role of Lois Craig, a young woman reared in wealth, her father a money grabber, her mother a lover of the home and the family circle. The father dies, and the invalid mother, with recollection of her own experience, warns the daughter against her fiance. Lois discovers her intended husband is of the same stamp as was her father and breaks the engagement, recommending to the young man the perusal of a novel she has written. The reading of the book is undertaken, and we see on the screen the working out of the story.

In the subsidiary tale Miss Walker is shown as a shepherdess in love with a man of the vicinity. The army of Mammon invades the Valley of Content and forces the inhabitants to remove beyond the snow mountains. There had been a series of introductory symbolic scenes, visualizing the story told in Lois' book, in which are revealed the manner in which wealth is wasted, the immoral entertainments that contribute to this end, the destitution of the poor. There is a scene of the prostitute on the street corner, followed by a representation of Christ chastising the money changers. Then, too, there is a present day reminder of the war, in which Miss Walker, as a daughter of the King whose country for forty years has been preparing for hostilities, prevails upon her fiance, a prince, to utilize a liquid fire invention for the destruction of the accumulated gold, with the result that both are executed when detected. The "location" of the Valley is a scenic treat.

It is after finishing this book that Byron Masters, the young financier, played by Jack Mowers, decides to renounce his former beliefs and to take Lois' view of life. The somewhat extended outline of the story will show that there are many angles to the theme of the picture, angles that divide the interest.

MARY MILES MINTER IN "CHARITY CASTLE."

Mary Miles Minter, the "Crown Princess" of the motion picture, whose success in heart interest drama has been of a phenomenal sort, is starred in a new five act dramatic fantasy, "Charity Castle," produced under Mutual-American auspices for release September 3. It was written by O. Doty Hobart.

Director Lloyd Ingraham, one of the leading men of his profession, studied the play for several weeks with Miss Minter and the author before it was decided to place "Charity Castle" in rehearsal.

BILL GILLESPIE JOINS ROLIN.

Bill Gillespie, for three years with the Selig Company and late of the Chaplin studio, is the latest recruit to the Rolin players. Shortly after he signed up he presented the name of a candidate for starring honors in 1935. Her name is Margaret Ann Gillespie and she has just arrived.

"The Mysterious Miss Terry"

A Famous Players-Paramount Production, with Billie Burke.

Reviewed by Louis Reeves Harrison.

THE Mysterious Miss Terry" is self-announced to be founded on the mystery of a certain lady's identity. It strikes a true keynote at the beginning, and its artistic purpose should be unfalteringly firm to the end, the mystery of her identity being the element of suspense on which audience attention depends. This it fails to do. A well-dressed young lady alights from a cab in a city street and tells the driver to wait for her—she is "going around the corner." She there enters what has the appearance of being a magnificent country mansion and fills a valise with loot, even robbing a wall safe, during the temporary absence of the sole caretaker. She makes a successful getaway when he returns and drives to her boarding house, where she pays her overdue bill from the stolen money. Among the table boarders are three men who make various efforts to help and to entertain her. The four are at a private repast when she asks each to make a wish. One wants a few hundred dollars to become a cowboy, one enough to go into "society," the third, nominated as an "author", wants money to publish his book, some typed pages bound at the edge like a play-broker's script, and rolled up like one.

Lack of knowledge of authorship seems to be this story's weak spot. The mystery is not preserved as promised. The mysterious lady is of the highest society and worth millions. Unable to command congenial surroundings, she has sought them in the boarding house under an assumed name. The story now drifts away into a comedy burglary, complicated with a real one, during which the "author" is shot. The mysterious lady takes care of him and provides him with a remunerative position. She gratifies the wishes of the other two men and is arrested for robbing her own house before she reveals herself to the "author" who wanted money to publish his book. She finally marries the distinguished gentleman who had never written anything for which a publisher would pay him, and this vehicle for talented Billie Burke is at an end.

The actress deserves something better than a vehicle, she is delightful in screen comedy with intelligent characterization, and she is good in every dramatic opportunity in this story of mystery which gives up mystifying at the very moment it should be intensifying its plainly announced object. There is good material in the comedy burglary. In fact there is enough material in the play for a well-constructed five-story house, but it has been put together without the plans of a skilled architect. The settings and the effective picture contrasts, light and shade effects, are all good, and there has been an honest effort to keep up to the Paramount standard. That sincerity counts for much, but it has to be supplanted with skill in all three departments of artistry to reach a front place.

"Grafters"

Triangle Cast, Including Jack Devereaux and Anna Lehr, Appear in Crook Story Containing Devious Twists and Turns of a Humorous Character.

Reviewed by Robert C. McElravy.

THIS five-reel subject, written by James W. Adams and produced by Arthur Rosson and Allan Dwan, is another of the familiar "thief comedies" which have been so much in vogue recently, both on screen and stage. It rings in some new changes of the farcical sort and certain developments will furnish an enjoyable surprise for those who have not seen too many of this particular type of offering. Even observers who have become familiar with plots of the sort will follow the story with interest.

Scene from "Grafters" (Triangle).

Jack Devereaux appears as Jack Towne, a young millionaire whose uncle is constantly advising him to be on guard lest he become the victim of grafters. The youth is overconfident and sure of himself, so in order to teach him a lesson the uncle employs certain persons to work a swindle upon him. Anna Lehr appears as the girl in the case, who lures the young man on. Jack at first falls a victim to the game, but later turns the tables on his uncle and the crooks as well. He saves his uncle from a real holdup and later forgives the girl for her deception and the usual love affair follows.

The number is given adequate presentation throughout. Most of the scenes occur in the city, but others take place at a country inn, to which the girl has enticed the young man.

The others in the cast are Frank Currier, Irene Leonard, George Seigmann and Robert Crimmins.

"Outcast"

Hubert Henry Davies Play Given Excellent Six-Part Picturization for Mutual Program with Ann Murdoch in the Leading Feminine Role.

Reviewed by Margaret I. MacDonald.

THE famous Charles Frohman stage success "Outcast" has been filmed for the Mutual program by the Empire All-Star Corporation with Ann Murdoch in the leading feminine role. The production is one of good calibre, and has been artistically directed by Dell Henderson. By reason of the nature of its plot and characters the picture, which is in six parts, could not be recommended among the class chosen for Better Film programs. While by reason of its artistic and entertaining qualities it will be found an excellent box-office attraction.

The two principal figures in "Outcast" are a man and a woman whose experiences in love have been similar. When the paths of these two people cross the woman has become a woman of the streets and the man a drunkard. The soul of the woman being the first to awaken, she lifts the man, and together they renounce the evils to which each has fallen. The jarring note in the morale of the play is the inference which the picture gives of love without marriage. When the man decides to discard the woman and return to an old love, his discovery of the shallowness of the love of the last-named not yet divorced from her husband, causes him to turn again to the "outcast" whose forgiveness he easily wins.

The action of this picture is unusually realistic, which together with its play on human emotions will tend to make it popular.

"The Charmer"

Ella Hall Featured in Five-Reel Bluebird—Directed by Jack Conway—Released August 29.

Reviewed by Ben H. Grimm.

BLUEBIRD'S release for August 29, "The Charmer", a five-reeler in which Ella Hall is featured, is just an ordinary picture. The picture runs along at an easy-going and sometimes slow gait, and the viewer is at no time moved to any great extent by what is going on on the screen. There is no really big situation. The story is only mildly entertaining and ofttimes rather obvious. There is scarcely enough story to bear the burden of five reels. However, the film should make more or less of a hit with juveniles, inasmuch as it centers chiefly around a child who is orphaned when the ship upon which she is traveling is torpedoed. The torpedoing is done by titles.

Scene from "The Charmer" (Bluebird).

The story was written by J. Grubb Alexander and scenariozed by Fred Mynon. Miss Hall has been seen in much more compelling roles than she has in this picture. Jack Conway, who directed the piece, has rather overdone in footage those double-exposure scenes in which a child's beliefs in fairies are visualized on the screen. Miss Hall is seen as an orphan who is adopted by a small-town old maid after the latter has "won" the orphan at a church fair. There are many extraneous bits of fairly humorous child stuff introduced into the action. The girl meets her Prince Charming in the boy who has been sent to his parents' house in the small town. His wealthy mother plans to divorce her husband. The "co-respondent" fails to appear at the trial and Ambrosia, the girl, says that she is the correspondent. The Court soon becomes aware of the fact that the child has confused "co-respondent" with "correspondent" and her appearance in the witness chair leads to the husband's explanation that he told the girl that he, too, was in love with a Lady Fair (his wife), but a wicked witch (Society) iced her heart. A reconciliation instead of a divorce takes place and the girl, ousted by the old maid, gains a home with the re united parents of her Prince Charming.

The photography is excellent and many scenes in the piece are very pleasing to the eye.

In the cast with Miss Hall are Belle Bennett, Martha Mattox, James McCandlas, George Webb and Frank McQuarrie.

"A Bushranger's Strategy"

Latest Two-Reel Episode of Kalem's "The Further Adventures of Stingaree" Is Fair Number.

Reviewed by Ben H. Grimm.

THE latest two-reel episode of Kalem's "The Further Adventures of Stingaree" series is a fair number. The story, while interesting, is somewhat slow in its unfolding on the screen, but in the latter part of the picture the action speeds up to a satisfactory pitch. The release follows the same general lines as those that have gone before. True, Boardman is seen as Stingaree, the gentleman bushranger, and Paul C. Hurst as Howie. The latter also directed.

Scene from "A Bushranger's Strategy" (Kalem).

E. W. Hornung's story tells of how Stingaree and Howie come across a lone violin player in the wilderness. They take him to their camp. A former show girl searching for a man, is forced to go afoot when her horse goes lame. The violin player slips away from camp and binds her. It develops that the violin player is a police spy, but Stingaree has outguessed him and the troopers find only the violinist's horse, where they expected to find the two bushrangers. It develops that the violinist is the man who stole the show girl's money. Stingaree and Howie outwit the police, get the violinist alone, and recover the girl's funds. They send the violinist, barefoot, out on the desert.

Other players than those mentioned are Edythe Sterling, Barney Furey and Jack Waltemeyer.

"Little Miss Optimist"

Pallas-Paramount Five-Part Subject a Well Played All Around Story of Hard Luck and Good Cheer.

Reviewed by George Blaisdell.

THERE is good philosophy in "Little Miss Optimist", the five-part Pallas subject released by Paramount August 26. The picture is wholesome in tone, with a distinct church atmosphere. The latter is not offensively so, if the expression may be used, having in mind the man whose interests and recreations lie in other directions. If it were not for the murder committed, the piece is one that might well be shown within the walls of a church. It is a good human, all-around story, one that should go well in any house.

Vivian Martin is well cast in the role of Maizie-Rosie Garden, the freak name bestowed on the heroine by Gardner Bunting, author of the story. Maizie is a cheerful little person, one who believes happiness to a large degree consists not in what you have, but in what you hope to have. Her philosophy has to take some pretty rough bumps, but it withstands it.

Tom Moore is Deal Hendrie, a down-and-outer, befriended by Maizie, but who comes back under the inspiration of her friendship. Charles West is Ben Cardin, the brother of the heroine, who seems to have more than his share of hard luck. Ernest Joy is John West, a coal merchant, who befriends Hendrie. Charles Gerard is Winter, the embezzling bookkeeper of West, who in a struggle with his employer kills him.

Robert Thornby directs the picture. The story is well hooked up. A battered dime figures much in the tale, and every time it enters it makes more sure the conviction of the murderer. The moment of Winter's uncovering is dramatic. Maizie, hiding from the police, has taken shelter in the church, subsisting on the food left in haste by the members of the guild when they learned of the death of West. She parts the curtains in front of the pulpit, sees Winter shifting the battered dime he has taken from the body, lifting from the plate a good one for it. She denounces the murderer, upsetting the services. A policeman takes Winter away, the organist lover declares himself, and all is well.

"His Wedding Night"

A Two-Part Paramount-Arbuckle Comedy with Fatty as a Soda Clerk in a Country Drug Store.

Reviewed by Arthur W. Courtney.

IN FATTY ARBUCKLE'S latest two-reel comedy, "His Wedding Night", ice cream is laid on thick. This picture is full of laughable bits. Some are just pictured jokes, as when one stops eating watermelon to pick seeds out of his ears. But these scenes are funny nevertheless, even when the material is old.

Fatty is a soda clerk in a country drug store. After juggling an egg and milk he strains it through a comb and brushes off the foam with a hair brush. The India rubber egg is a good bit. He provides beer for a customer with a wink; also an individual bar-rail, a cuspidor and a sprinkling of sawdust. Two sissies appear in this picture. One sprays himself with sample perfume and is provided with a bathtub and towels and a stream from a siphon. Fatty substitutes chloroform for the perfume. This gets him one girl. But another is invulnerable—she even drinks it. A negress comes in for powder and is asked whether she wants face, gun or bug. She says she is not a bug, so she gets charcoal. In the gasoline episode a Ford is charged twenty-six cents a gallon, and when a Rolls-Royce comes up Fatty turns over the ticket and charges a dollar. The chauffeur does not object. He peels a bill off a big wad. Fatty gives him change from a still bigger wad, then sprinkles the road with gasolene.

Fatty overcomes a rival suitor, who then plans to kidnap the bride. Instead of the bride he gets the sissy who delivered the bridal gown and who has put it on to show how it hangs. This comedy will get a laugh out of everyone.

"The Lady of the Photograph"

Shirley Mason Attractive in Five-Part Comedy Drama for K-E-S-E Produced by the Edison Company.

Reviewed by Margaret I. MacDonald.

THE Lady of the Photograph" is founded on a story of which a great deal might have been made. The production in five parts, which was made at the Edison studios, with Shirley Mason in the leading role, is not first class in quality, and there is a feeling that the comedy situations, which in themselves are good, do not "get over". Shirley Mason is charming in the role of a young American heiress who while visiting in England meets her fate when she falls into a pond in quest of a water lily. Raymond McKee as Ferdy Latimer, a disinherited Englishmen, is quite the type, and Royal Byron as John Brown, who made millions in soap, plays exceptionally well. Others of the cast, William Calhoun, Jane Harvey, Dudley Hill and Gerald Pring, do good work in the supporting cast.

As the story runs Marjorie Van Dam, visiting in England, falls accidentally into a lily pond on the Latimer estate and is rescued by Ferdy, the disinherited member of the family. The mutual attraction between the two is discouraged by the girl's parents, who are looking for wealth and social position in a match for their daughter. Ferdy starts out for America to make good, but failing to make the progress expected he attempts suicide in the river and is rescued by John Brown soap millionaire, who in return for his services requests Ferdy to help him to win the girl he loves, who turns out to be Ferdy's sweetheart. In disguise he undertakes the mission and finally attempts suicide again. The end of the matter is that Ferdy comes into his own through the death of another relative and is accepted by Marjorie's parents and the socially ambitious John Brown marries his stenographer.

"The Little Samaritan"

Five-Part Erbograph Comedy-Drama on Art Dramas Program Featuring Marian Swayne—An Excellent Story of Church Life in a Small Town—Written by a Clergyman.

Reviewed by Arthur W. Courtney.

THE five-part Erbograph comedy-drama "The Little Samaritan", released on the Art Dramas program, is an interesting story of church life in a small town. The story was written by the Reverend Clarence J. Harris. The director, Joseph Levering, sometimes forgets he is dealing with church people. The church board has women on it. One of the men is proprietor of a cigar store. The heroine, who is all that a church member should be, scrubs the dog on Sunday afternoon. The young minister comes to town in a cutaway coat that he wears to church on Sunday. He enters the main door, leaves his walking stick and gloves in the pulpit and puts on his hat before he leaves the body of the church. He puts on a high clerical vest on Monday.

Marian Swayne is Lindy, a Polly Anna orphan living with her grandmother, a fine old character type. She is warned to avoid Jim. His mother runs the choir and keeps Lindy from joining. Lindy's best friend is the old skinflint deacon's wife. The new minister comes to town and puts up at Lindy's house. Lindy's dream is produced in a highly artistic manner, and, thank goodness, it does not run through the remaining four reels.

Lindy gets Noah, an old negro, another fine character type, the job of sexton. The deacon comes to Lindy's grandmother for the interest. She is five dollars shy. The next day Lindy pays. The minister and the deacon discover that the collection money has been stolen. Noah and Lindy each think the other is guilty, so both confess. But neither is guilty. The solution concludes an entertaining story.

"The Defeat of the City"

The First Four-Part O. Henry Story on the General Film Program, a Simple Tale Glorifying Country Life—J. Frank Glendon and Agnes Eyre in the Leading Parts.

Reviewed by Arthur W. Courtney.

THE first four-reel O. Henry story, "The Defeat of the City", is not different from the two-reel stories we have had. It is simply an O. Henry story done in four reels instead of two. The adaptation was done by Will Courtney. Thomas R. Mills was the director.

J. Frank Glendon has the leading part. He is a country boy who comes to the city, makes good as a lawyer, becomes a "prominent clubman", and marries one of the four hundred. Agnes Eyre is the bride. She plays golf well in the first reel.

The story is not dramatic. It is a simple narrative with two mild O. Henry surprises. The first comes in the third reel. The wife finds a letter addressed to her husband in a book in the library. She goes at once to his office. It looks as if there would be a scene. But the letter is from his mother. He has never told his wife that his mother lives on a farm. The satire is not especially well done. What the husband says and what the wife says when they decide to visit the farm are stiff subtitles.

The second surprise is at the end. After the husband has spent the day cutting capers on the old farm he is sure his wife is displeased. He nerves himself for her opinion. She says: "I thought I married a gentleman, but—I find I married a man." Those who like a simple tale glorifying country life to the discomfiture of all dwellers in cities will be pleased with this subjet. This is a Broadway Star Feature on the General Film program.

"The Silent Witness"

Authors Film Seven-Part Production Is Strong in the Final Two Thousand Feet.

Reviewed by George Blaisdell.

THERE is a dramatic closing in "The Silent Witness", adapted from the play by Otto Hauerbach, the seven-part picture produced by Harry Lambart for the Authors' Film Company, and being released by M. H. Hoffman, Inc. The part of the picture that stands out is in the final two thousand feet. Two reels at least might be eliminated with profit from the remainder. The whole subject does not impress on the side of direction.

Gertrude McCoy plays Helen Hastings, one of the leading roles—in her case an emotional one—that of a mother who, through a supposed death in a fire, is debarred from being a wife. Miss McCoy is one of the older favorites of picturegoers and her reappearance on the screen will be welcomed by them.

Frank L. A. O'Connor is Richard Morgan, in early life the fiance of Helen, and who loses track of her when she leaves home immediately on reading the misreport of his death, later to appear as the district attorney of the county where, on trial for murder, is the son of the two. Morgan has no knowledge there is a son until the mother appears before him. It is in the clearing up of the tangles as we see them unspun in the latter part of the story that we come to the real drama, and here it surely is worth while. Mr. O'Connor and Miss McCoy constitute a strong team. Good support comes to them too from Edwin Fosberg, who has the role of the ambitious assistant district attorney.

Others in the cast are Junius Mathews, who was none too happily cast as the eighteen-year-old son of Morgan and Helen—Mathews' stature was not a part of that of his parents—Aphie James, Helen May, Roulef E. Cotton and Jack Sherrill.

There is one tragedy in the course of the story, but it will hurt the feelings of no one. It is one of those cases where it was "coming to him". The ending is of the happiest.

Falcon Features

The First Three of a Series of Four-Part Photoplays—Released on General Film Program.

Reviewed by Arthur W. Courtney.

THE first three Falcon features are: "The Mainspring," "The Stolen Story," and "The Martinache Marriage." These are four-reel photoplays made by H. M. and E. D. Horkheimer and released on the General Film program. The first one was released on August 17.

"The Mainspring" is a mining story of adventure written by Louis Joseph Vance. "The Stolen Story" is a dream story based on hypnotism with the addition of a Trilby episode. "The Martinache Marriage" is a love story told against a background of robbery, murder and suicide.

These are strong melodramatic stories that open with incident and follow it up with a wealth of incident expertly arranged to maintain a mild suspense to the very end. They keep one guessing all the time. Large casts are skilfully handled. The stories are magazine stories, machine-made but mechanically perfect. They plunge into a welter of incident and relationship based on sound narrative structure. They are photoplays of action in the true sense.

Especially noteworthy is the treatment of crime. Invariably all the preliminaries of the act are omitted. This not only eliminates the repulsive features but increases the suspense. Every crime is a mystery. This is more pleasant than knowing perfectly well just how it was done.

These are absorbing photoplays with a clearly marked individuality.

Busy Days at Metro

Fall Season Commences With New Productions for Thirteen Celebrated Stars.

METRO'S studios start the fall season of picture-producing with work going at full blast. Every one of Metro's thirteen stars is busy creating a new character to add to the portrait gallery for the delight of his particular following, and each is surrounded by a small army consisting of supporting cast and studio workers, with a master-director for every group.

The talents of both novelists and trained scenario-producers have been enlisted to provide all these stars with adequate material and the public with good stories. Prominent among them are Louis Joseph Vance, Mabel Wagnalls, Octavus Roy Cohen and J. U. Giesey, well known collaborators; Jackson Gregory and George Gibbs, novelists of world-wide reputation, and among the scenario writers represented are William Christy Cabanne, author and director; June Mathis, who has written innumerable successes; Lionel Barrymore, John H Collins and George D. Baker, all author-directors of note.

Nazimova, the celebrated Russian dramatic star, has begun preparations for her initial Metro offering, "The Rose Bush of a Thousand Years", which George D. Baker will direct.

Ethel Barrymore is engaged in the production of "Life's Whirlpool", an intensely dramatic story written and directed by the star's brother, Lionel Barrymore, formerly himself a Metro star. This five-part feature production will be presented by B. A. Rolfe. In the supporting company are such well known players as Paul Everton, Alan Hale, Walter Hiers and Ricca Allen.

Francis X. Bushman and Beverly Bayne have gone "on location" to make the exteriors of their new production written by Max Brand. Charles Brabin is directing this super-feature, which Albert Shelby Le Vino has adapted for the screen.

"Draft 258," by William Christy Cabanne and June Mathis, is the name of the new patriotic production. Mabel Taliaferro will have the leading role. Walter Miller, Millicent Fisher, Camilla Dahlberg and Eugene Borden are prominent in Miss Taliaferro's support.

Emily Stevens is engaged in a production adapted by Mary Murillo from the story by Charles A. Logue. George D. Baker is directing. Earle Fox, Frank Currier, Paul Everton and Ricca Allen are among the prominent members of the cast.

Edith Storey is hard at work on a picture version of "The House in the Mist", a gripping adventure story by Octavus Roy Cohen and J. U. Giesey, adapted by June Mathis. Tod Browning is directing. The cast includes Harry S. Northrup, Bradley Barker, Kempton Greene and Frank Fisher Bennett.

Emmy Wehlen has just begun work in a picturization of Louis Joseph Vance's story, "Nobody", with William C. Dowlan as director, and Benjamin S. Kutler as his assistant. Miss Wehlen's cast includes Florence Short, Ilean Hume, Herbert Hayes, Boyce Combe and Virginia Palmer. Charles A. Taylor has made the screen adaptation of the Vance novel.

Viola Dana has chosen Joseph Arthur's old-time stage success, "Blue Jeans". John H. Collins is directing this production, the screen version of which has been made by June Mathis. Robert Walker, Sally Crute, Augustus Phillips and Clifford Bruce are included in the unusually strong cast.

Harold Lockwood has begun work in "Paradise Garden", another "book" story from the pen of George Gibbs. Fred J. Balshofer is directing it. "Paradise Garden" has a "different" sort of hero, and a "different" sort of story, which the popular star will be able to invest with his own engaging personality Pretty Vera Sission has been engaged as leading woman.

Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Drew, creators and co-stars of Metro-Drew comedies, are just completing a playlet devoted to the subject of food conservation It is called "The Patriot", and is fully up to the Drew standard. Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Drew will continue to complete one comedy a week.

Mme. Petrova is the star in "The Silent Sellers", a powerful five-part feature production directed by Burton L. King. In this production Mme. Petrova has an opportunity to display emotional ability, and also wears some of the most beautiful gowns in which screen patrons have ever seen her appear. Favorites in the cast are Mahlon Hamilton, Violet Reed and Henry Leone.

Italian War Films Draw Crowds

"The Italian Battlefront" Fills Forty-fourth Street Theater—Fort Pitt Corporation Sponsoring American Tour.

WITH film men generally sceptical as to the drawing power of war films, the official war pictures of the Italian government, "The Italian Battlefront," in less than a month's time, have completely shattered all previous experiences and opinions in the trade, according to the announcements of the Fort Pitt Theater Corporation. Not only have the pictures played to capacity business wherever they have been presented, but at the Forty-fourth Street Theater, New York, the gross has exceeded that of practically every legitimate attraction on Broadway. This business has been maintained so consistently at every performance that William Moore Patch, president and managing director of the Fort Pitt Theater Corporation, under the direction of whom the American tour of the films has been placed, was last week negotiating for another theater in New York in which to extend the run.

The pictures have been received with equally substantial support in Pittsburgh and Buffalo. They are now playing at the Tremont theater, Boston, to sitting and standing capacity, and at the Auditorium, Chicago, seating 4,000. Not the least remarkable phase of the success of the films is the fact that the astute members of the trade concede the pulling power of these particular war pictures, notwithstanding their previous misgivings as to pictures of this character. These runs have been in no way forced. The advertising has not been extensive, nor have there been any unusual methods employed in the way of exploitation. The results have been due strictly to the intrinsic entertainment of the pictures, and the demand which word-of-mouth advertising has been created. As a matter of fact, the runs in each of the cities have been absolutely free of paper, save the usual courtesies to the press. With prices ranging to $2.00 top, standing room has been at a premium at every performance for the past three weeks at the Forty-fourth Street theater, New York—this notwithstanding the warm weather.

The explanation for this reversal of all precedent regarding war pictures, seems to be due to the fact that "The Italian Battlefront" differs essentially from any other pictures of like nature which have thus far been presented in this country. They depend upon heroism, rather than horrorism for their appeal. The magnificent natural scenery of the Alps, in which most of the footage was filmed, provides them with an additional interest, not common to their contemporaries. With these two attributes, Mr. Patch, in assembling the picture, has so blended suspense with thrills, and drama, with the romance and lighter side of the war, that there is gained an affect which, in swiftness of action and absorption of incident, is as dramatic and intense as that of any scenario ever filmed.

To Film Chinese Comedies.

Six one-reel comedies, translated from the Chinese by Robert B. Carson, will be the initial offering of the Screen Craft Photoplay Company, launched last week by George W. Shepard, the head of a big lumbering concern. Mr. Carson will also direct the making of the pictures.

The star will be Charlie Fang, who appeared in the serial.

After the six films are completed, a series of twelve five-reelers will be made. The offices of the new company are located at 303 Fifth Ave., New York.

General Film Company.

A BUSHRANGER'S STRATEGY (Kalem).—A two-reel episode of "The Further Adventures of Stinagree" series. The release is a fair one. The story tells of a lone violin player who gets to Stingaree's camp. Stingaree rightly figures him for a police spy. Howie and Stingaree outwit the troopers and obtain for a lost show girl the funds that the violinist-spy stole. They send the spy, barefoot, across the desert. True Boardman and Paul C. Hurst have the leading roles. Reviewed at length elsewhere in this issue.

STAR DUST (Black Cat Essanay).—A 29-minute story of a poor girl at a girl's college. She has no soldier sweetheart. All the other girls have. Each girl is shown in a separate scene kissing a letter from a soldier. Then follows a garden scene where each girl is with her soldier. More separate scenes of kissing. The second reel is a story written by the heroine expressing her lonesomeness. The picture ends with the realization of what she had hoped for, but thought was only star dust, romance, that she should have a soldier. Virginia Valli simply walks through the picture. She is not the lonesome girl. A newspaper clipping shown on the screen is set in the midst of a press sheet. This is a lugubrious story.

PIONEER DAYS (Selig).—This is an historical two-reel picture of the Indian massacre at Fort Dearborn (the site of Chicago) on August 15, 1815. This is an instructive picture. It is entertaining. And it is done on a big scale. In the course of the massacre several persons are tapped on the crown with tomahawks. Kathlyn Williams has a prominent place in the latter part of the picture. This subject is very well done.

HER SALVATION (Selig).—This is a one-reel drama of the old days. Most of the scenes take place in a tough dance hall. A good girl, Nance O'Shaughnessy, goes to her first dance and meets the human spider. One night he goes home with her. Her father finds her struggling with him in her room. A wicked woman, Mame Ryan, neglects her husband and little boy to go to the dance hall. It is customary for her little boy to call for her, take her home drunk, and put her to bed. Sandy comes from the country and warns Nance of "dance hall evils." But she will not listen. Nance and Sandy come upon Mame one day on a pier just as she is about to commit suicide. They take her to her home. Her husband wants to put her out. But Sandy remonstrates with him and he relents. The picture ends with the marriage of Sandy and Nance. The incidents of the story are weakly strung together. This is not a picture that will entertain an intelligent audience.

SELIG WORLD LIBRARY NO. 15.—This reel treats three subjects. A scenic of Monterey, California, shows among other points of interest the home of Robert Louis Stevenson. Tuna fishing in the Pacific, also brief scenes of mussel hunting, and salmon and rock cod fishing, ending with taking the eggs from the female salmon for spawning purposes is in the middle of the reel. The end is an account of the different processes in the silk industry from the laying of the eggs by the moth to the finished cloth. A fuller account of these subjects will be found in the Motion Picture Educator.

THE STOLEN STORY (Falcon).—If you like dream stories, this four-reeler will please beyond anything you have ever seen. The amanuensis of a blind playwright dreams that a play broker has such hypnotic power over her that he compels her to dictate a play that the playwright has discussed with her. This story is told with such power that it rivets the attention and holds it from beginning to end. Observe that when the dream ends, a dissolve is not used. The director has succeeded in increasing the suspense in ways unfamiliar to photoplay patrons.

THE MARTINACHE MARRIAGE (Falcon).—This four-reeler is a love story told against a very exciting background of melodrama. It begins with a robbery in a low restaurant in Paris. Mystery envelops the thief's daughter all through the picture. Toward the end she is unjustly accused of murder. Her father, who is the guilty one, when he finds that she is accused, writes a confession and commits suicide. There is nothing vulgar about the crime in this picture. It is done in high tragic style. Margaret Landis, who plays the leading part, wears a "trying" straight black velvet gown that will interest the women.

THE DEFEAT OF THE CITY (Broadway Star).—The first four-part O. Henry story with J. Frank Glendon and Agnes Eyre in the leading parts. It is a simple tale of how much better it is to live on a farm than in the city. It does not hold the interest well. It is reviewed in this issue.

Bluebird Photoplays, Inc.

THE CHARMER, August 29.—Ella Hall is the featured player in this five-reel offering. The picture is ordinary, but probably will hold more than ordinary interest for juveniles. It tells how an orphaned girl meets her Prince Charming and later reunites his parents, who are at the point of divorce. A longer review is printed in the review columns of this issue.

Butterfly Pictures.

THE LAIR OF THE WOLF (Butterfly), August 20.—A five-reel offering, written by E. Magnus Ingleton and produced by Charles Swickard, and featuring Gretchen Lederer, Joseph Girard, Donna Drew, Val Paul and others. This tells a complicated and at times melodramatic story. The events center about a man named Cathcart, admirably portrayed by Mr. Girard. Cathcart possesses a brutal nature and marries a widow, only to neglect her. In the course of the story he is murdered, but has so many enemies that numerous people are suspected of the crime. The manner in which the truth is brought to light carries the interest very well.

STRAIGHT SHOOTING (Butterfly), August 27.—A splendid five-reel Western subject, featuring Harry Carey, Molly Malone, George Berrel and others. This tells a stirring story of the old West when cattleman and settlers were at war with one another. Reviewed at length elsewhere.

Greater Vitagraph.

THE DIVORCEE (Blue Ribbon), August 27.—As is pointed out in a review on another page this five-part subject is a story of the divorce colony at Reno, Nevada. The subject has been handled in a semi-humorous vein by Rufus Steele, the author, yet in the latter half he has injected much real drama.

JUST WHAT BOBBY WANTED.—A one-reel comedy with Bobby Connelly. This was written by Charles M. Seay. Bobby wants a little sister. He finds Aida Horton, the daughter of a drunkard. He takes her to his father's barn and improvises a bedroom for her there. This is only a fair number. Bobby has adopted Aida before in this series, and that was a more interesting picture.

Kleine-Edison-Selig-Essanay.

A DOG IN THE MANGER (Selig), August 6.—William Fables and James Harris have the leading parts in this Hoyt comedy. They portray respectively A. Jackson Bright and Colin Early. J. A. Richmond directs these two worthies in their efforts to accumulate money in ways not recognized as legitimate. Their machine for making sausages from the live dog works perfectly when one of the partners is on the inside to feed out the finished butcher's product, as the other is on the outside to push in the live material and turn the crank. There is a lively chase and getaway as the police interrupt a sale nearly completed. There follow much slapstick when the two volunteer as hotel employes to take the place of striking help. The picture is fast and contains amusing moments.

A TRIP TO CHINATOWN (Selig), August 20.—This is a two-reel version of a Hoyt farce. William Fables plays the leading part. He makes a trip from a Chinese laundry by way of an opium pipe to an Oriental realm where Amy Dennis is queen. The talent of the realm performs for his entertainment. There is an Oriental dance, a snake charming act and a tank episode. This starts with a dive by two girls in white one-piece suits. The queen's swordsman turns out to be a sissy. James Harris is a slave. He is put in a den where he makes friends with a human lion from whose paw he extracts a thorn. This is a fair slapstick comedy.

PANTS (Essanay), September 10.—The story of this mirthful, five-reel production was specially written for Little Mary McAlister, and in it she endears herself still more strongly to her numerous friends—both grownups and little ones. Little Mary is supported by a strong cast. A detailed review appears on another page in this issue.

Metro Pictures Corporation.

THE JURY OF FATE, August 6.—A five-reel Rolfe picture. The story is laid in the Canadian forests, and affords Mabel Taliaferro opportunities for excellent characterization of a dual role, that of a selfish French Canadian boy and his unselfish, whole-hearted sister. An interesting story, with beautiful outdoor scenes. Reviewed elsewhere in this issue.

Mutual Film Corporation.

BEACH NUTS (Cub), August 16.—In this rather entertaining farce-comedy Jerry follows his sweetheart, her father and her father's choice of a husband for her to the beach. There he gets mixed up with a policeman who has an eye on the girls, and eventually manages to elope with the lady of his choice in an automobile.

JERRY ON THE FARM (Cub), August 23.—This number of the Jerry comedies shows Jerry in the employ of a moving picture company which is on the lookout for a "thank-you" location. This is found on a farm which there is also a pretty daughter. Jerry, as usual, fascinates the girl and is given rough handling by the girl's sweetheart. A very ordinary comedy.

REEL LIFE NO. 70 (Gaumont), August 30.—In this issue of Reel Life will be found some interesting subjects, namely, "Using the Abalone," "A Boy and a Rope," showing the dexterous manner in which a boy of nine years uses a lassoo, "Beach Sports of California," and "Handling the Mail." A couple of short animated cartoon studies finish the reel.

OUTCAST (Empire), September 10.—A six-part adaptation of the Frohman success of the same name which was written by Hubert Davies. Ann Murdock is the star and does splendid work in the role of the woman of the streets who recognizes the predicament of another outcast, a man, and lifts him along with herself to a better level. The morale of the play is not to be recommended for Better Film programs, but the production, which is reviewed in full elsewhere, is unusually entertaining and well made.

Paramount Pictures Corporation.

EGGED ON (Klever), August 20.—This is a one-reel comedy with Victor Moore in the leading part. He is entrusted with a new explosive packed in egg shells to deliver to the government. On the journey an heiress he meets gets his valise and puts the eggs in an incubator when she gets home. Vic arrives too late to prevent the explosion. The story is bolstered up with other incidents. Vic tries to earn five dollars to send a cable for money when he loses his valise. He wears a dress suit with a tailor's advertisement on the back. The heiress pretends to return his eggs to him, but really substitutes real eggs, which are hatched when he opens his valise in the government office. This is a fair comedy. No eggs are thrown.

LITTLE MISS OPTIMIST (Pallas), August 26.—Vivian Martin has the lead in a good wholesome story. It is interesting all the way, with a dramatic denouement. It is reviewed in another column.

HIS WEDDING NIGHT (Arbuckle), August 20.—A two-reel comedy of the knockabout variety located in a country drug store where Fatty is the soda clerk. Watermelons and ice cream are thrown, and chloroform and iodine are used in large quantities. Two sissies appear. One dresses in a bridal gown and is kidnapped instead of the bride. Try as one might, he could not help laughing at this picture.

Pathe Exchanges, Inc.

THE SULTAN'S NECKLACE (Astra), September 2.—First chapter of the new "The Seven Pearls" serial. The number promises a good serial. It tells of an American girl brought up in Turkey who must recover a seven-pearled necklace or become a member of the Sultan's harem. Mollie King, Creighton Hale and Leon Bary are the featured players. Reviewed at length in this issue.

THE BOW STRING (Astra), September 9.—Second episode of "The Seven Pearls" serial. The story moves along faster in this episode and promises much adventure and a fascinating story. In the issue the girl is confronted with the bow string, the contrivance used in strangling women of the harem who flirt. In the number the girl gets two of the pearls but to have them snatched from her at the close.

OVER THE FENCE (Rolin), September 9.—A one-reel comedy featuring Harold Lloyd. The number is a good one and shows the comedian as a baseball player. The comedy bits Mr. Lloyd injects into this reel are immense. We see him as the star player of a fast baseball team. Bebe Danles is also seen on the screen, as are also the other important members of the Lonesome Luke company.

MAKING A WAR POSTER (International), September 9.—A split-reel embracing an industrial-educational and Katzenjammer cartoon. The first half shows the making of a war poster from the time it is conceived by the artist until it comes off the lithographer's press and is posted. The cartoon shows the Katzenjammer kids up to some new and, if possible, funnier pranks.

Triangle Film Corporation.

GRAFTERS (Triangle), August 26.—A five-reel crook story, treated in a farcical way, featuring Jack Devereaux, Anna Lehr and others. This keeps the humorous side up and follows the prevalent order of "thief comedies." Reviewed at length elsewhere.

A NOBLE CROOK, (Triangle-Keystone).—A typical two-reel comedy, featuring Harry Gribbon as a kind-hearted crook who keeps the avaricious banker from foreclosing the mortgage and marrying the widow's daughter. A number of amusing comedy situations are strung along through this, and there is a lively chase at the close, participated in by an auto, a train and an aeroplane.

World Pictures.

THE GUARDIAN (World Film-Peerless), August 27.—A five-reel subject, written by W. B. M. Ferguson and produced by Arthur Ashley. This tells a story of well-rounded interest, simple in plot but brought up to rather strong interest by the excellent work of the three leading performers, Montagu Love, June Elvidge and Arthur Ashley. It concerns a girl whose guardian has a black past, but is now a truly good man. She becomes acquainted with a crook who learns of the guardian's past and tries to supplant him in the girl's affections. In the end the girl falls in love with her guardian and marries him.

TIDES OF FATE (World Film), September 17.—A five-reel story of real life, with numorus interesting melodramatic situations strung through it. It tells the story of a girl beloved by two men and contains plenty of plot interest. Reviewed at length elsewhere.

Universal Film Manufacturing Company.

THE LURE OF THE CIRCUS (Bison), Week of September 3.—A two-reel subject, by W. B. Pearson, featuring Fred Church and Eileen Sedgwick as a young blacksmith and his sweetheart who have aspirations to join a circus. She attempts bareback riding and he tries lion taming. Some good comedy situations result. The action is a little strung out, but holds the interest well.

OFFICER, CALL A COP (Joker), Week of September 3.—A one-reel comedy, by A. F. Stables, featuring William Franey, Jaret Eastman and Percy Pembroke. The scenes occur in a Chinatown section, where the girl is made captive. Yawning trap doors also catch a cop and the hero in search of the girl. Diverting and quite amusing in a knockabout burlesque sort of way.

A DREAM OF EGYPT (Star Featurette), Week of September 3.—A two-reel number of certain unusual qualities, by Myrtle Stedman. Lena Baskette plays the part of a little girl who dreams she is in Egypt, where she saves her mother from the wicked Shiek. This is strong on Oriental atmosphere and the settings and costuming are attractive. The dancing scene toward the close is well staged. Claire MacDowell is also in the cast. A pleasing number.

A GALE OF VERSE (Joker), Week of September 3.—A comedy number, by Tom Gibson, featuring Gale Henry and Milt Sims. Gale plays the part of a country poetess who insists upon reading her poetry aloud to everyone. She goes to the city and gets on a newspaper, where she assists in rounding up some counterfeiters. A typical offering, with a funny idea back of it.

THE CURSE OF A FLIRTING HEART (Victor), Week of September 3.—A "flirtation" comedy, by C. B. Hoadley, featuring Max Asher, Lillian Peacock and others. Max and his wife are each caught flirting on the beach by an amateur camera man and see themselves on the screen next day. Some of the beach costumes are a little breezy, but the action is inoffensive and contains funny moments.

BACKWARD SONS AND FORWARD DAUGHTERS (L-KO), Week of September 3.—A knockabout comic, in two reels, featuring Billy Bevan and Lucille Hutton. The former plays a country youth in the city, who falls in love with a restaurant cashier. Some of the action in this is funny, but there is not enough plot to hold the attention well. Some of the restaurant scenes are also disgustingly dirty and unattractive. The number is below this company's average.

ANIMATED WEEKLY, NO. 85 (Universal), August 22.—Contains an entertaining assortment of news topics in pictorial form, including Madam Montessori's child methods, Canadian flood scenes, and many war views.

CURRENT EVENTS, NO. 16 (Universal), August 24.—War sidelights in France, Italy, England and this country are included in this. Also return of the Root mission from Russia and other live features.

Three Artcraft Stars for October

Douglas Fairbanks, Geraldine Farrar and William S. Hart in One Month's Productions.

UNDOUBTEDLY the greatest array of motion picture attractions ever offered in one month by a distributing organization is announced as the October releases of Artcraft. Douglas Fairbanks, Geraldine Farrar and William S. Hart, three box-office names in productions extraordinary, are scheduled for release during this month.

The first offering will be Douglas Fairbanks in a photoplay entirely different from anything in which he has appeared on the screen to date. The original title of this picture, "Fancy Jim Sherwood", has been changed to "The Man From Painted Post". A comedy-drama of exceptional action and true Western atmosphere, this photoplay offers the energetic player new opportunities to disclose not only situations of typical Fairbanks construction, but incidents of stirring dramatic qualities.

Artcraft's second offering marks the return to the screen of Geraldine Farrar, favorite of screen and operatic stage. As her initial Artcraft vehicle a spectacle in which it is expected she will score even a greater triumph than in "Joan the Woman" has been given her. "The Woman God Forgot" is the new production, from the pen of Jeanie Macpherson, and staged under the direction of Cecil B. De Mille.

As its third release is the Hart-Ince offering, "The Narrow Trail", a typical William S. Hart subject, written by himself The great popularity of this Western "Bad Man" is the result of unusual ability and individuality. In "The Narrow Trail" Hart not only gives himself a vehicle particularly adapted to his capabilities, but also affords his famous horse, Fritz, a big opportunity to display its merits. In the part of an outlaw Hart gives a thrilling characterization carrying throughout a certain human appeal which makes him t most beloved "villain" on the screen.

FILMING O. HENRY'S "GENTLE GRAFTER".

After careful preparations to interpret an atmosphere of O. Henry not previously done for the screen, work has now progressed well along into the filming of the famous American author's "Gentle Grafter" stories, which concern the adventures of Jeff Peters, itinerant fakir. The first picture is "The Atavism of John Tom Little Bear", which General Film announces for release on September 8. It is a two-reeler. Another very strong story soon to follow this one in two-reel form is "The Last of the Troubadours", one of the most startling of O. Henry's Western stories.

Grinding the Crank

With Thornton Fisher

"HOW'D it go today?" I asked a fellow who doubles for the big ones. "Pretty soft today," says he. "All I did was to jump from a seventy-foot chimney, fall off a horse, drop off a train, fall under a buzz car and swim two miles. Pretty soft today, but I may have to work tomorrow."

Song for Quartet. Heart Interest Stuff.

A mother sits in sadness thinking of her only child
Who's working in the movies far away (far away)
While on the window sill stands a moving picture "still"
And through her tears this dear old soul did say.

CHORUS.

They've went and took my darling child
From this, our dear old house and
Are starving her to death each month
On a measly forty thousand.

S'funny, but the film fan doesn't care what color socks the camera man wears, or what the property man's favorite breakfast food is.

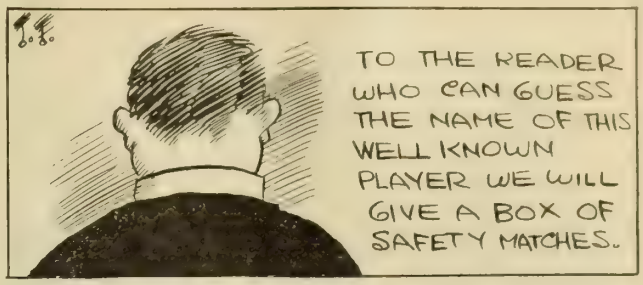
An unfortunate thing almost occurred last week at an eastern studio. An extra man was struck by a falling beam from a burning building and rendered unconscious while the cameraman was grinding. It looked for a second as though the beam would miss his head and spoil the picture.



It might discourage some publicity gentleman to know that there exists in this country a few individuals in an obscure little mountain village who never saw a moving picture and don't know whether Charlie Chaplin is the name of a book or Mary Pickford the title of a song. Nevertheless we've been through some territory lately where the sinking of the Maine was the latest news they've had recently.

G. Iva Payne, the famous producer, had a sudden attack of the heart one day last week. It seems that Mr. Payne was engaged at the time signing up O. Hava Sole, the international star. Mr. Sole had just remarked that he would walk to and from the studio, and did not wish the company to furnish him a car or a valet. At this point Mr. Payne collapsed.

Observations

BY OUR MAN ABOUT TOWN

IT IS very unfortunate that at this period, when plans should be discussed and in the making for the fall and winter season, the motion picture exhibitors of the country are again divided and the time that should be spent in the formation of a campaign for the mutual benefit of all concerned in the business is being wasted by criminations and recriminations in one of the most important branches of the great industry. The situation confirms the conclusions of some of the most conservative and profound thinkers in the business, which may be summed up in the brief statement that it is more difficult to keep the exhibitors within the boundary of bona fide cooperation and mutual effort than it is to control or influence any other branch of the business. One fortunate phase of the situation is that the rupture in the ranks of the exhibitors comes at a time when the common enemy of the motion picture industry finds himself too busy lobbying for and against legislation that does not bear upon the motion pictures. When the common enemy is stripped for battle on the censorship and other questions, the exhibitor is an important factor in the army of defense, his cooperation in the attacks upon forts ignorance, incompetence and graft in the past being second in value to no other branch of the industry. But this service could never have been rendered by the exhibitors individually. They demonstrated their power only when invited, when they went into battle after joint conference on the issues at stake and the best methods to adopt in the campaign against unreasonable legislation and oppression.

It would seem that in view of the important events that arise in the motion picture business from time to time, and the necessity that exists for complete amalgamation of the various branches of the industry to meet such events, it should not be a difficult matter for the exhibitors to get together and adjust their differences. It would seem so, but it isn't. In spite of declarations made by some very intelligent and able men in the field, the motion picture business is entirely distinct from any other lines of business, both as to methods and results; and the most peculiar branch of it is that embracing the exhibitors. It has always been the most difficult to handle and efforts to maintain a genuine spirit of good fellowship and trade cooperation has been almost disastrous to the nerves of many a good man.

With all due respect for the men in the exhibitors' field who are actuated by sincere and bona fide motives, records show that exhibitors are a composite of jealousy, partiality and avarice. Good fellows as a whole? Yes, but too many of them lacking that spirit which will permit them to temporarily make a personal sacrifice in order that benefit may accrue to their organization, or the industry as a whole. Some are too frequently intoxicated by acquirement of popularity or power. Others sour because lack of personality or misconception of policy places distinction beyond their grasp. There seems to be a woeful lack of that sublime gift or acquirement known as liberality of the mind, which results in misfortune for the organization which could be made a power for the benefit of the members, individually and collectively

Too many of the exhibitors fail to get out of their minds that the motion picture business does not belong to the sphere of the manufacturers' union, the trades union, the retail merchants' association, or any other similar organization. Those who have been very active and conscientious in bringing the exhibitors into one organization, have always maintained that if the principle were properly absorbed the members would find that they partook more of the fraternal spirit than any other organization arising from the amalgamation of those engaged in business circles. But, say some of the organizers, it seems almost impossible to inject the spirit of fraternity into many of the members. At least they fail to manifest its absorption, unless they be in attendance at some social affair. When it comes to a convention or some important meeting many of them take pride in displaying scalping knives and promising to hang to their belts the scalp of anyone who "gets too gay and tries to constitute himself the whole cheese."

The spirit that occurred at the convention in Chicago between the Exhibitors' League of America and the bolting faction, now known as the American Exhibitors' Association, was a serious one. Efforts to bring the factions together by conservative advisors failed and the seceding faction is found applying for admission to the National Association. The situation is a delicate one for the latter to be in, but as its members represent the brainiest men in the moving picture industry the result will no doubt be in full accord with the principles of reason and justice. It is sincerely hoped that no error of judgment will be made in the decision, so that should either of the factions lose in the controversy there will be no excuse for evading submission to it. There is an element in the ranks of the exhibitors that is hoping for a speedy settlement of the questions before the National Association, and there is reason to believe that it will have been settled before this goes to press. But speedy action is not to be so much wished for as established unanimity Many more difficult questions involving far more vital issues have been adjusted in the past and as a united organization is essential to the exhibiting business, it is not improbable that the Chicago break may be effectually knitted and healed.

In putting a provisional restriction on the exportation of moving picture films from this country, the Government has taken a very sensible step. It is not difficult to determine what makers of films are making genuine exportations—that exporting films only for exhibition purposes, and none of the companies are so devoid of patriotism as to sell junk films to be used in the manufacture of munitions for the German armies, especially since their attention has been called to the matter by the Government. It is regretted, however, that the junk films must be held by the companies. There is a suffering public wishing that the Government could make an appropriation for the cleaning off the shelves of all such junk. Reference was made in these columns last week to the rank imposition that is forced upon an unsuspecting public by cheap and unprincipled people who are not deserving of the title "exhibitor," and since that time makers and exhibitors of bona fide war films have been obliged to protest through the press against false billing, advertising and exhibition of faked war films. If the Bureau of Licenses cannot see its way clear to deal with these fake show people the police and government officials may be able to devise means by which the offenders may be effectually dealt with, either by compelling them to exhibit only genuine films, or closing the places. The newspapers are not permitted to knowingly publish fake war pictures and cheap show men should not be allowed to display fake war pictures either inside or outside the house. It is a fraud and creates false impressions that are likely to cause trouble.

During the recent very hot spell of weather many local theater managers complained of a big falling off in business, which complaint was not as justified as one the patrons have against the houses. It is not improbable that the local authorities will be after some of the houses. Some managers make a marked display of signs announcing that the interior of the houses are far cooler than the atmosphere outside. Some signs give the difference as twenty degrees, some thirty and not a few have put the difference as high as forty. A very indignant genteman seated in a picture and vaudeville house on one of the very hot afternoons was so warm over and under the collar that he gave the management notice he would file complaint with the authorities. "I know I was not obliged to come into your place," said the patron, "but I was induced to enter by your misleading sign outside regarding the temperature. Perhaps I will not be able to hold you on that," continued the irate patron, "but I'll tell you where I have got you. You have plenty fans, but to save current you operate them only occasionally. I'll be fair with you," added the man as he shook an index finger at the manager, "but you keep those fans working when its hot or I'll spring a thermometer on you some time and get the Board of Health to look into your ventilating apparatus."

ENID BENNETT FINDS A STORY.

It is announced a final selection for the first Paramount picture starring Enid Bennett, the charming Australian actress, has been made at the Ince studios. It is furthermore reported the story is one embodying all of those qualities which are most eminently suited to the capabilities of the star.

Popular Picture Personalities

Compiled by the Statistical Department.

LITTLE, Anna. Born in Sisson, California. American parentage. Is five feet, six inches tall and weighs 125 pounds. Dark complexion, brown eyes, dark hair. Miss Little is silent about her stage career other than to tell that she made her stage debut in 1909 and was for four years on the speaking stage. In 1913 she turned to pictures and in the past four years she has played with the Ince, American, Selznick and York-Metro companies, the latter being her present connection. It is as an Ince player that she is perhaps best known, for she was one of the original Ince group. Some of her best parts were in The Battle of Gettysburg, The Black Box serial, Immediate Lee, Land o'Lizards and The Silent Master. And what do you suppose she specially likes to do? All out door sports? Wrong! Her fad is reading K. C. B. in the Hearst papers (advertisement) but she likes press notices, too, we think; most players do.

Anna Little

LYON, Benjamin B., Jr. Born in Atlanta, Ga. American parentage. Is 5 feet 10½ inches tall and weighs 143 pounds. Dark complexion, dark brown hair and blue eyes. Though born in Atlanta, Mr. Lyon's parents removed to Baltimore, Md., when he was four years old and it was here that he first attracted public attention by his work as an amateur. In the summer of 1914 he played with the Poli stock in that city; his professional debut. His picture debut was made October 9, 1916, in a Famous Players production, the title of which he does not recall. Later he went to the Edison company, playing in the Conquest pictures and is now; with less than a year's experience in pictures, a juvenile lead for the Metro. Off duty he divides his time between his high-powered car and the swimming pool, for he is an expert driver and you can leave off the second letter and still be correct. He both dives and drives.

Benj. B Lyon

MINTER, Mary Miles. Born in Shreveport, La. American parentage. Is but two and a half inches over five feet and weighs 110 pounds. Blonde complexion, golden hair and blue eyes. Miss Minter made her stage debut in November, 1907, at the age of five, and has played about every child role in the stock repertoire. She also originated child parts in Cameo Kirby, Hanele, A Fool There Was, with Robert Hilliard; A Woman of Today, with Mme. Kalich, and in The Littlest Rebel, with the Farnums. Has also played Shakespearian roles with her sister in private entertainments. She made her picture debut December 15, 1915, in The Fairy and the Waif, a World production. She has also played with Metro and is now one of the bright particular stars at the American studios at Santa Barbara. Miss Minter has won an unusual success for a child of her age, due largely to her naturalness.

Mary Miles Minter

KING, James Wallace. Born in Florence, South Carolina. His father was English-Scotch and his mother English-German. Is five feet eleven inches tall and weighs 150 pounds. Dark complexion, black hair and gray eyes. Mr. King made his stage debut in September, 1913. He was for two years in musical comedy and for a year with a minstrel troupe. He made his debut in pictures in May, 1917, in The Village Villain, produced by the Master Pictures, of Houston, Texas, and with startling frankness he writes that he has played no notable parts and does not even add "as yet." Of course three months in pictures does not make for a very elaborate record of past performances, but even at that—! Mr. King sets down as his fads riding, swimming, singing and athletics and adds that he dances. That is an improvement upon all out-door sports, though some singing should be classed as an outdoor sport. We do not know as to Mr. King.

James W. King

BILLINGTON, Francelia. Born in Dallas, Texas. Her father was an Englishman and her mother an American. She is five feet six and one-half inches tall and weighs 135 pounds. Light complexion, light brown hair and gray eyes. Miss Billington is an old-time picture player, for she has been in pictures all of four years, starting in 1913 in Strathmore, a Majestic, if we remember. At any rate she has played with Majestic and Universal and is now with the American. Some of her best liked parts have been in Naked Hearts, My Fighting Gentleman, The Masked Heart and Pride and the Man. In spite of this predominance of "heart" plays, Miss Billington has no heart, for she ignores a whole lot of nice blank lines in her questionnaire and does not even tell whether she has any fads. Perhaps her fad is not filling out the blanks in questionnaires. Who can tell? It certainly looks that way.

NOTICE.

Players are invited to send in material for this department. There is no charge of any sort made for insertion, cuts, etc. This is a department run for the information of the exhibitors, and is absolutely free to all players with standing in any recognized company. No photograph can be used unless it is accompanied by full biographical data and an autograph in black ink on white paper. If you have not received any, ask for a questionaire and autograph card. Send all three.

Music for the Picture

Conducted by CLARENCE E. SINN

The Music Copyright Question.

THE drastic tax on music being imposed by the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers has stirred up a feeling of bitter resentment among the exhibitors of moving pictures. And this feeling is not without reason. The music publishers declare emphatically that the movement was fostered and engineered by the authors and composers primarily and that they—the publishers—were compelled to come in as a matter of self-preservation. That part of the question doesn't matter now. The fact remains that the publishers are affiliated with the prime movers (the authors and composers) and that all three must sink or swim together—with the odds in favor of swimming for a time at least. The publishers also assert that the bulk of the revenue from the music tax goes to the authors and composers and a relatively small part to the publishers. That does not interest us so much at present. We don't care so much who gets it, as who gives it.

For the past twenty-five years the music publishers have been frantically creating an artificial condition in the trade which was bound to result sooner or later in chaos. They entered a business which was comparatively small, safe and conservative. By over-stimulation they created a business which became inflated, top-heavy, and bound to fall of its own weight. Each firm employed an expensive staff (under salary) to promote their songs and create a public demand for the same. Professional singers were furnished with free songs. Not only that, a staff of piano players were maintained in each house to teach these songs, a staff of arrangers to make free orchestrations (if the free published arrangements did not happen to lay in the singer's range) and in many cases a bonus or premium was paid to singers for singing these songs. The tons of free music which has been distributed to band and orchestra leaders (usually in specially made arrangements) must amount to an enormous figure. The music publishers taught everybody connected with the show business to regard free music as a right and not a privilege. They have taught us that we were doing them a favor in playing and singing their music—and quite often we were. For a while the profits were big. The writers of successful songs were engaged and placed on the staff of one firm or another—to keep a competitor from getting his future output. Royalties were fair; in some cases generous. But the ever-growing competition and fierce rivalry brought an ever-growing expense. Of the stream of money flowing in, another large stream flowed out. And this last stream has been steadily increasing, while the first—if it has not been diminishing—has certainly not been growing. Authors and composers are now getting as low as one-half of one per cent. in royalties—when they get anything. And now the present decade is expected to repay the sinners for their own mistakes made in the past.

So far as the authors and composers are concerned, they are not the wolves we are apt to picture in our first burst of indignation. They are trying to get what they consider a proper remuneration for their work and talent. So far as the publishers are concerned, they are perhaps the victims of circumstances; said circumstances being created by themselves collectively, and later, suffered for individually.

And now we are to hold the bag.

Nobody will dispute that the writer or producer should have a fair recompense for his efforts; the more worthy his efforts the greater his recompense. Nobody will begrudge the publisher a fair profit for his investment, nor a fair remuneration for his services. All of these people are at the very foundation of the show business. They furnish the biggest part of our working tools and they have a right to pay for the same. But we resent being coddled along all these years, receiving goods for nothing which in the very nature of things should have been paid for, and then suddenly held up and told to "stand and deliver." To deliver not only the price of the goods, but a big premium besides in the shape of royalties (or as they prefer to call it, a "music tax"). Now I don't believe anybody would object if the so-called "free list" were stopped entirely. It should never have existed in the first place. Musicians and others should be willing enough to pay the price for their music. It constitutes a part of their working tools. But we do object to paying not only for the music, but for the privilege of using it. The argument that in playing the music in public we are "selling it" to the audience may be sound in law, but under present conditions is most unfair in principle.

Why in the name of common sense did they not, if the business did not pay, why, I say, did they not cut out the free music and charge a price for their goods which would make it pay; make it pay everything including royalties which are a legitimate part of the expense?

Exhibitors all over the country are trying to get together (I won't say "organizing") for the purpose of fighting this condition. It is respectfully suggested that exhibitors will do well to move carefully. Don't let your indignation run away with your judgment. It is not wise to send your money to any fund for fighting this condition unless that fund is for the sole purpose of getting this law repealed. It has been suggested that exhibitors seek injunctions on the A. S. of C., A. & P. charging restraint of trade. It has been suggested that they be fought as a "trust." The publishers assert that inasmuch as there is no price fixing among them, there is no trust and no restraint of trade. I am informed by a Chicago attorney that the Society's position is sound in law.

This law is a Federal law and as such we are bound to obey it. We have only two courses open to us in opposition to it. We can refuse to use their music or we can work to have the law repealed. Don't spend your money on anybody who tells you you can do anything else, for you will only waste it if you do.

Moving picture theaters are not so dependent on popular music as they think they are. It is true, we like to keep up to date and give our patrons the newest and the best, but in music for the picture the newest is not always the best. Generally the "popular" number has nothing whatever to recommend but its newness. Lots of the old music is available and does not come under this copyright protection. Mr. G. Schirmer has stated in an open letter that his copyrighted musical publications (with cited exceptions) may be publicly performed without restriction. Please do not take this too literally. Mr. G. Schirmer has a splendid catalog, but many of the numbers are the product of members of the Am. Society of C., A. and P., and as such are best let alone unless you have a license to use them. It may be that a further interpretation of the publishers' rights to a piece of music may be asked for in the courts, but I doubt it. It appears to be definitely settled now. Mr. G. Schirmer and other large dealers can furnish you with a catalog of music which is not controlled by the aforesaid society. In that way he can help you best if he wants to help you. But you cannot use a number on his catalog written by Victor Herbert, Rudolph Friml or any other member of the society unless you are duly licensed by the society. No dealer is going to pay your court expenses or fines, and no judge will take for an excuse that you "didn't know," or that so-and-so told you it "would be all right." If the exhibitors really organize and present a really solid front, they can by refusing to play the late music so reduce the sales and profits as to compel the society to try some other tactics. Probably they will take off the tax and increase slightly the cost price of the music. If one exhibitor in a neighborhood pays the tax and uses the popular stuff, and the other exhibitors become frightened at a possible chance of losing some trade thereby—well, they will all run for a license. It is this very thing upon which the society is building its hopes. Will the exhibitors stick together for a common cause? The society thinks not. Will each exhibitors try to get the better of his rival in business, if only for a week or a day? The society thinks he will. We can only wait and see.

Motion Picture Educator

The Educator Review

No Results—A Future.

By Rev. W. H. Jackson.

IT has always been the custom of the Moving Picture Educator to look for and expect some special results from the annual convention of the moving picture interests—results which could be turned to good account in behalf of the advance of educational moving picture work. In past years there has always been some general, if not detail, developments upon which the Educator could mould specific advantage; at times there have been emphatic and important events or efforts, which were capable of being used to bring about things more or less progressive in the educational world of moving pictures. Last, but not least, yet of vital importance, was the fact that conventions are usually mapped out with the object of bringing marked progressive and educational progress in the whole realm of moving picture endeavor. Judging by these former standards the convention at Chicago was a conspicuous and lamentable FAILURE.

As empty as Mother Hubbard's cupboard there is absolutely nothing to be found that can in any way be turned to advantage in any branch of the moving picture advance, indeed, retrogressive work of those responsible for the management of the precious days spent in selfish destructiveness rather than dignified unselfish constructiveness.

An Opportunity Lost.

It would seem that never before in the history of moving pictures was a convention held under such favorable auspices and weighted with golden opportunities. The days of evil and dire criticism which marked the early growth of the picture industry have been supplanted by a universal appreciation of their value and a world-wide desire for their development. The President of the United States had publicly asked for the benefit of their far-reaching, constructive and enlightening influence. It seemed, however, that the personal desires of a little President within the narrow conception of his own personal ambitions and immediate financial gains were to take precedence of the wishes of the great President of the world's greatest nation.

The policy of rule or ruin has always resulted in ruin, it rules for a brief moment and is then buried under the ruins with which it seals its own eternal destiny. It may be well, however, to feel that the loss of the opportunity for this convention to seize the immediate opportunity presented to it, may yet prove of greater good. Who can tell what little and unprofitable results would have resulted from national use of the moving pictures under the leadership of that spirit which dominated the Chicago Convention, truly the time would surely have followed when shame would have covered the fact of the moving picture world.

A New Opportunity.

Judged from every standpoint upon which a convention assembles, debates, decides and sends forth its beneficial results to the members dependent upon its activities, we have found the Chicago convention a great waste of time, of labor, of talent, of money and of opportunity!—notwithstanding this the whole realm of moving-picturedom is far richer as a result of this notorious meeting—it is richer in experience, who can say but that it is not an experience much needed. The resultant crisis brings with it a new opportunity. New men—and stronger—have come to the front, new issues are found pregnant with new possibilities; new disclosures of smaller and selfish issues which in time might have become cancerous, leading to new ideas of a larger and surer vision.

It is a most remarkable thing that just at the precise moment when the moving picture is being called to the assistance of the whole world and it is found coincidentally that:

The World Needs the Moving Picture.

A shaking of those forces in control may prove as necessary as shown in many national capitals; we have seen how men in present command have had to make way for "men of the hour."

In more ways than one this is the hour of the moving picture, and no one man, or even a limited set of men, can claim to meet the situation; the great democracy of thought inherent with the world's greatest educator is summoned to action, and, freed from the thralldom of every semblance of autocracy, individual or collective; the forces that control the moving pictures can now be mobilized in fairness and safety to meet the great requirements made upon them. It is a wonderful truth that had those forces which sought to control the Chicago convention been successful, the power of the moving picture today would have been so crippled that they could not have answered the three calls from the President, the Nation and the World.

Interesting Educationals

Three Industrial Subjects, Two Travel, One Topical and One Zoological.

Reviewed by Margaret I. MacDonald.

"Using the Abalone" (Mutual-Gaumont).

THE abalone industry is now one of considerable importance on the Pacific coast, making an interesting screen subject. In Reel Life No. 70 a fine illustration of how the abalone is gathered and the various uses the shell is put to will be found. We learn that the abalone clings tenaciously to the rocks, and that the modern effective method of detaching it is by the application of an electric battery, the shock causing it to relax its grip. An exhibition is also given of the buffing and polishing of the shells and of various beautiful articles made from them, among these is a jewel box inlaid with abalone shell, a salad fork, and jewelry set with pearl blisters sometimes found in the abalone.

"Harvesting Scallops." (Universal).

In Screen Magazine No. 32 will be found some interesting views photographed along the shore of Long Island, showing a scallop fleet off for a day's work. The fishermen are shown hauling in the nets, selecting the best and throwing the small ones back to the beds to grow, and unloading the day's harvest. Then there are scenes in the sorting shacks, with an expert opener at work. An interesting feature of the picture is the collecting of starfish which prey upon the scallop. For this purpose a kind of mop is dragged from the side of the boat, to which they attach themselves.

"Fine Feathers" (Pathe-International).

A nicely illustrated description of how the plumes of the ostrich are utilized for fans and boas has been presented by Pathe. Here we learn how the beautiful tail and wing feathers of the ostrich are clipped at certain periods of the year, and of how they are treated, and finally converted into said articles combined with other essentials in the shape of ivory, or silk by way of foundation. An interesting half reel.

"In Tropical Nassau" (Paramount-Holmes).

Burton Holmes in his travels in the Bahama Islands managed to snap some intensely interesting material in the vicinity of Nassau, the principal city of the Bahamas. In the city, as we arrive on Sunday, we find the colored police force marching to church. We discover that no color line is drawn here and that the whites and blacks attend divine service out of doors side by side. A garden party at the Colonial hotel gives us a chance to look over the socially elect. One of the most interesting things in the picture is the opening of a Royal palm bud, aided by the gardener. The natives climb cocoanut trees for our benefit, and we are later introduced to the wonderful silk cotton tree from which a fibre called Kapok is obtained. The baths are also interesting, as well as other sights which Mr. Holmes has filmed for us.

"Madrid to Madeira" (Paramount-Holmes).

The scenes gathered by Burton Holmes during his visit to Madrid and Madeira take us first to the heart of Madrid to wh e the city's easternmost gate once stood, known as "Th Gate of the Sun," as the present Spanish name of the street implies. Here we watch the various types of Spanish population as they pass in the crowded streets, including different kinds of conveyances. The arena comes in for a share of attention, and also the Royal Palace with its beautiful grounds. Barcelona is next visited, giving a glimpse of the daily life of the citizens, and also Lisbon and other seaport towns, until at last we arrive at the Madeira Islands, where we learn of the lovely vineyards, and of the famous Madeira wines. A trip on a funicular railway to a position 2,000 feet elevation is delightful.

"Handling the Mail" (Mutual-Gaumont).

Reel Life No. 70 contains a comprehensive illustration of how the mail is handled in a large city. We see the postmen starting out on their respective routes from the 8th avenue branch of the New York postoffice, we learn that in some places mail can be posted on street cars, and we are shown all the details in connection with the collecting, sorting, stacking, postmarking and transportation between branch postoffices and the main postoffice. A pneumatic tube used for the purpose of shooting mail to the main postoffice from an uptown branch is also shown.

"Biography of a Stag" (Educational-Ditmars).

An unusually interesting number of the Ditmars series throws light on the life and habits of a stag. We learn from the picture that the male of the species is ordinarily ferocious, and by hanging a dummy to a tree an illustration is given of what he would do to a human being in one of his fierce charges if given an opportunity. What is left of the dummy when the stag's ire is abated is not worth mentioning. The shedding of the stag's antlers is attractively illustrated, and also the growth of the new ones, which are soft and velvety for some months. During this period the stag is docile, being temporarily deprived of his weapons, for the growing antlers are tender and easily injured. This picture is especially pleasing.

Selig World Library

First Five Numbers Contain Subjects of Interest Illustrated Briefly but Comprehensively.

THE majority of our readers are now familiar with the fact that the interesting Selig release known as the World Library has taken the place of the Selig-Tribune, a former weekly news reel. And it may be of further interest to know the class of subjects included in this new release which made its initial appearance some time back. For this purpose we here give a brief resume of the contents of the first five numbers.

In Number 1 of the Selig World Library we have a glimpse into the Granite Dells of Arizona, after which we are greeted familiarly from the screen by Champ Clark, William Hale Thompson, Jeanette Rankin, and General Pershing, and are introduced to the home of Franklin MacVeagh of Washington which was thrown open to one of the recent European missions, and also to the homes of other prominent individuals. In the number are also included scenes on an Indian tea plantation, and the birth of a butterfly. This latter subject is especially well illustrated.

Number 2 acquaints us with the Ainos of Japan, a people little known, who are particularly hairy and who have been driven into the northern part of Japan by the superior strength and numbers of the yellow race. They live by fishing and hunting. Locations of famous paintings introduce scenes which feed the eye and the imagination. These locations are at Amalfi, Italy, and in the vicinity of the Matterhorn. American ruins present several interesting views of the Alamo, and of various old missions, including the mission of San Juan, and that of the Espado.

Number 3 opens with a peep into jungleland where a huge and aged snake is forced to consume by way of a meal 55 pounds of meat. This is followed by views of the homes of the cliff dwellers. A brief sketch of the whaling industry, shows the capture of a whale by th modern harpoon gun method. We see also the cutting up of carcass, and are informed in subtitle of the chief products of the whaling industry, which are sperm oil and baleen or whalebone.

Number 4 opens with glimpses of famous architecture, including the Piazzo del Duomo at Pisa, Italy, and also the Campanile or leaning tower, the topmost story overhangs its base by 13 feet. Sheep herding in New Mexico shows the rounding up, counting, shearing and final dipping of the sheep for the extermination of ticks. The sacking of the wool and the transporting of it to the depot form the closing scenes. A short sketch on elephants, including a few scenes illustrating their usefulness as beasts of burden, and some views of Independence Hall, Philadelphia, and the Betsy Ross house are also included in this number.

Some novel scenes showing human figures in a game of chess on a huge chess board placed for the purpose in a Chicago square open No. 5, which also includes a look into Uncle Sam's money shop, a short study of seals and glimpses of public buildings and places closely associated with the life of George Washington.

New Brand of Educationals

W. L. Brind Enters the Market With the First of a Series of Educational Pictures, Entitled "All About Bees."

W. L. BRIND, F. Z. S., has entered the market on his own account and intends producing one educational picture a month to be released through J. Frank Brockliss, Inc. Mr. Brind, who is a serious student of zoology, has chosen as his first subject the honey bee, and has entitled the 914 feet of film pertaining to the busiest insect, "All About Bees." The picture, which makes its appearance under the brand name of the Brind Educational Films, is the first of a series and lives up to its title; for when we have finished viewing the picture most of us know more about bees than we ever did before. The subtitles have been worded pleasingly and carefully carrying the information necessary to make clear the animated illustrations.

The opening scene of the picture shows the worker bees beginning the day's work, ready to gather honey and pollen from the flowers. This is followed by a street in "Bee City" showing long rows of box hives, and a glimpse into a foraging round of the bees, a bed of golden glow in an old orchard. An interesting closeup showing several bees extracting honey from the red clover is followed by a microscopic view of the tongue of a bee, with which it gathers honey. The picture also shows a large bee farm which produces thousands of pounds of honey yearly, on which men are kept busy all the time tending the bees. It explains the difference between the drone, the worker bee, and the queen bee which is not generally understood; and in fact there is little, if any, information concerning the bee that has been overlooked in this picture. Magnified closeups of the antenna or "feeler" of the bee and of its sting are interesting. Scenes showing the remarkably bold manner in which a West Indian "Bee Man" handles bees, washing his face with them, and even sprinkling them over his naked body reminds us that even a bee knows who its friends are. The smoking of the bees previous to the removal of the honey, and close views of the removal of the frames are among the last ones in the picture.

Mr. Brind is to be congratulated on the comprehensiveness and entertaining quality of his screen exploitation of the honey bee; and we do not hesitate to say that it is the best picture on the subject that has been offered.

Red Cross Benefits in Church

Rev. W. H. Jackson of the Moving Picture World Editorial Staff Converts Church Into Moving Picture Show for Benefit of Red Cross Fund.

THE example which the Rev. W. H. Jackson of the editorial staff of the Moving Picture World has set, and which was given due publicity in a recent issue of the New York Tribune, is a good one for others of the clergy to follow. According to the Tribune, Mr. Jackson, who is the pastor of the Oyster Bay Reformed Church at Brookville, L. I., has kept his parish "at the concert pitch of patriotism ever since the outbreak of the European war." Every Monday evening he turns his church into a motion picture playhouse, taking charge of the performance himself. This performance, according to the Tribune, is a "crack-up, lively, instructive performance, given at the rate of fifty cents per adult, and twenty-five cents per child."

These performances are given for the benefit of the Red Cross fund, and have added materially to its bulk. "We do it to stimulate the neighborhood," Mr. Jackson is quoted as saying, "to entertain and instruct, and to secure funds to make up any deficits. I see to it that only such pictures are shown as will stimulate patriotism, and those of the highest class. The whole neighborhood responds. In this manner we have solved the problem of using pictures as a continuance of the Red Cross work, so that the patriotic and active spirit may be maintained throughout the entire period of the war, with financial profit to the Red Cross."

ITEMS OF INTEREST.

The S. S. Film Company, of 220 West 42nd street, New York City, have produced a feature picture for the New York State Woman's Suffrage Party. While the picture is essentially a propaganda production, it is said to have a strong story running through it, and it is hoped that as well as working out its individual purpose, it will prove a satisfactory attraction for the exhibitor. It will receive its first public showing at the convention in Saratoga on Aug. 29, when it will be exhibited before Governor Whitman, Mayor Mitchel and numerous officials of the State, after which it is the intention of the Suffrage Party to give it the widest possible distribution throughout New York State, and probably throughout the country. This picture, we understand, is being made free of charge for the Suffrage Party by the S. S. Film Company.

In noting the advance of the Industrial Film we find that the E. I. S. Motion Picture Corporation has closed a contract with the Hendee Manufacturing Company for the filming of their plant. The picture will exploit the manufacture of the Indian Motorcycle, which is a product of the Hendee Manufacturing Company's factories. It is interesting also to note that "The Story of a Loaf of Bread," made by the E. I. S. for the Ward Baking Company, has been run in the regular program of 700 theaters in New York City.

CHARLES MILLER DIRECTS NORMA TALMADGE.

Charles Miller, who for two years directed many of Triangle's greatest productions, has been engaged by Joseph M. Schenck to direct the Norma Talmadge photoplays. The first effort of Mr. Miller's new affiliation will be Grace Miller White's "The Secret of the Storm Country," on which Miss Talmadge will begin work next week in Ithaca, N. Y., where the original scenes of the story were laid.

Mr. Schenck's attention was called to Mr. Miller through the splendid work he did under the Triangle banner, for Bessie Love in "The Sawdust Ring," for Dorothy Dalton in "The Flame of the Yukon," and for Bessie Barriscale.

Before he became identified with the world of films Mr. Miller was a well-known leading man and appeared in Henry B. Harris, Klaw and Erlanger and Frohman productions. For several years he was manager of the Castle Square Opera House in Boston. He has been a familiar figure on both sides of the curtain through his activities as actor, manager and author.

NEW MANAGER FOR ATLANTA K-E-S-E BRANCH.

Harry R. Bannister has been appointed manager of George Kleine's K-E-S-E Branch at Atlanta, succeeding J. T. Ezell. Mr. Bannister possesses every qualification, making a successful manager, and it is expected that K-E-S-E service at Atlanta will thrive under his direction.

Bar Harborites Watch Miss Kellermann

Summer Idlers at Maine Resort Take Much Interest in Making of "Queen of the Sea."

WITH all the society of Bar Harbor watching the making of "Queen of the Sea," the new William Fox subsea fantasy with Annette Kellermann, little thought is given to the enormous amount of preparation necessary to begin the picture. Society sees only the spectacular parts of the making of the film—the actual taking of scenes. It does not realize that for months Director John G. Adolfi and his assistant, John W. Kellette, worked out the dramatic features, but spent an almost equal amount of time in preparing.

How thoroughly the preparedness went was shown during the taking of some water scenes in which hundreds of young women and men took the part of mermaids and mermen. They are compelled to remain for long periods of time in the icy cold waters of the ocean and even with the greatest of care accidents will happen. One of the mermaids became exhausted and before the lifeguards could reach her had gone down twice. The lifeguards dived and brought her to the surface unconscious. Instantly one of the pulmotors which had been provided was working on the girl and in a few minutes she had been restored to consciousness.

In addition to two local physicians who are always within call, a diminutive Red Cross unit is constantly on location. In addition there is a late model stretcher for the transportation of those too badly injured to walk. Those picturesque rocks which abound in Bar Harbor are extremely treacherous and in addition to being slippery as glass at the water's edge are covered with barnacles which are sharper than the proverbial serpent's tooth.

During the work here six seven passenger automobiles and four immense motor trucks have been in use to transport the company to and from their hotels and the location.

To secure settings for "Queen of the Sea" days were spent in the Congressional Library at Washington and in many private libraries in an effort to make historically correct every detail of the picture. Even Grecian mythology was invaded and every article used is not only historically but fabrically correct Even the rocks had to have barnacles put where no barnacle had ever appeared before.

Stalactite and stalagmite formations were studied in order that even the cave scenes might be absolutely right. After this was found it devolved upon the technical department might reproduce it. In Bar Harbor the company had a crew of stage carpenters, scenic artists and everything essential to the making of the production.

In making a picture like "Queen of the Sea," the weather conditions are not alone to be considered. Another element enters into it and this is the tides. There is a rise and fall of fifteen feet.

With work done for the day, the activities of the director, his assistant and his camera men do not cease. They spend half the night planning out the work for the following day.

That society is interested in the making of "Queen of the Sea" is shown by the immense crowds which have daily witnessed the work from the vantage points afforded by the rocks. Everybody who is anybody in Bar Harbor society has driven out to the location and spent not one day but many.

TEXAS GUINAN IN TRIANGLE PLAYS.

Texas Guinan, whose name and personality are known wherever musical comedy thrives, has deserted the stage for the studio and will shortly be featured in Triangle pictures. As "The Merry Widow," "The Bell of Avenue C," "The Hoyden" and "The Kissing Girl," Texas Guinan has drawn a following of theater patrons from coast to coast who will be eager to see the favorite on the screen. It is believed that the star possesses a personality that will be effectively projected from pictures. She is noted for a spontaneous charm, the ability to establish an intimacy with her audiences, and a smile that has flashed from the pictorial section of virtually every magazine.

Miss Guinan first came into prominence in the role of Alan-a-Dale in De Koven's opera, "Robin Hood." Her immediate success caused the Shuberts to give her a contract providing a four-years' starring engagement. This was renewed six years later, and upon its expiration, two months ago, Miss Guinan affixed her name to a contract with the Triangle Film Corporation.

Advertising for Exhibitors

Conducted by EPES WINTHROP SARGENT

For the Dog Days.

MANAGER Charles Decker, of the Majestic, Grand Junction, Colorado, has evolved a neat hot weather advertisement. It is set in eighteen point display, single column, with a thirty-six point head in three lines. It runs:

DON'T STAY HOME ON ACCOUNT OF THE HEAT!
DO JUST THE OPPOSITE—GO TO THE MAJESTIC TO KEEP COOL.
SAFEGUARD YOUR HEALTH!
BREATHE PURE AIR!
DO YOU KNOW THAT THE MAJESTIC HAS A LARGE VENTILATING PLANT IN THE BASMENET WHICH FORCES 13,000 CUBIC FEET OF COOL WATER WASHED AIR INTO THE THEATER EVERY MINUTE?
ASK US TO SHOW YOU THIS PLANT. YOU DON'T REALIZE THE SIZE OF IT AND DO YOU REALIZE THAT PURE AIR IS JUST AS ESSENTIAL AS PURE FOOD, TO KEEP YOU IN GOOD HEALTH?
YOU DON'T SWEAT AND SWELTER IN THE MAJESTIC. YOU DO ENJOY THE PROGRAM IN COMFORT.
IF YOU WOULD KEEP COOL AND HEALTHY—PLAY THE MAJESTIC.
VISIT THE VENTILATING PLANT—WE WILL GLADLY SHOW YOU ANY TIME.

This is good stuff to run, but only if you can take the doubter down cellar and show him the plant you advertise. That is what counts, and an advertisement unbacked by the ventilator is apt to boomerang. There is always a chance to talk about your ventilation, summer and winter, but in the hot months it is better to tell why your house is cool than merely to state that it is. A couple of years ago there used to be a lot printed about ventilation, probably because the well ventilated house was then almost a novelty, but the very fact that it is no longer new is the precise reason why you should remind your patrons now and then of the care you take.

All but the Dates.

The Princess, DeLand, Florida, gets out a four page program that is not pretentious, but rather well done save that the days are not dated and you have to turn back to the front page to figure the showing of any feature that attracts your attention. It would help, too, to get the middle pages framed. It looks rather unfinished, but the type outfit makes the titles fairly yell at you the moment the page is turned; big, black italic letters that have nothing on the page to fight them. There is no ornate display, but it is a program that talks to you for all of that. The back page carries a few house points tersely and strikingly told. Probably DeLand offers no elaborate press service, but the management has done the best it could with what it could get, and the printer has helped all he was able. It makes a good start. One change that might be made is pulling in the waste space at the head of the inside pages, each of which is now decorated by a large Old English "Program." It is scarcely necessary to waste this space telling the intelligent reader that it is a program, and instead there might run a line or two of comment on the stories.

Hanging Up a Record.

Lee L. Goldberg, of the Big Feature Rights Corporation, Louisville, Ky., writes:

> In Beaver Dam, Ky., which is listed on the Rand McNally map as having 800 population, we played, on June 11, to 520 people. Also bear in mind the fact that it was a warm and cloudy day. The chances are that had the weather been favorable, every one of the 800 people in Beaver Dam would have been on hand at the Opera House to see "THE CRISIS."
> I think our business there speaks volumes in praise of both "THE CRISIS" and the progressive management of the theater, under Mr. John H. Barnes, who, by the way, is a prominent banker.

It's not the size of the town that counts but hustling management. Nothing is too big for a big small town man, and we would rather run a good feature in a small town than a large one, for the small town will more readily respond to intensive advertising.

From an Old Chum.

Melvin G. Winstock writes from Seattle that he finds that he can sell film to exhibitors as well as he could to the general public, and so he is selling film. The best film salesman is always the man who can show the exhibitor how to clean up with a feature, and Winstock surely possesses that information. He has had a pretty long siege of illness, but now he is able to make faces at doctors and is in the state rights business for himself. Here's all good wishes.

Slides and Things.

No optician is going to pay the Dixwell, New Haven, Conn., a commission on sales due to poor slides. L. H. Rossiter, the advertising manager, sends in some sample slides that are pretty things to see. We have suggested before that we think Mr. Rossiter does his own printing. Certainly he never said us nay, though he does not write letters. These slides seem to have been printed up at the house. They are not unlike those sent out by the companies some years ago, printed on oiled paper and intended to be sealed between to cover glasses, but these are house matters, and they give a clean and elegant appearance on the screen.

Whenever you think of motion pictures think of this design.

Whenever you see the design think of the best motion pictures.

The design stands for the DIXWELL THEATRE.

The DIXWELL THEATRE stands for the best in Motion Pictures.

This slide is evidently adapted from Picture Theatre Advertising. The others mainly refer to house matters, though a couple are better slides for coming attractions than can be had from any of the slide companies. A five dollar press, a few fonts of six, eight, ten and twelve point type, some carefully chosen ornaments to be used in moderation and intelligence, and you have a slide outfit that will give dignity to your house, and at the same time you can do a surprising lot of house printing even on a five dollar press. We show three samples of Mr. Rossiter's work. The one on the right has the too-common fault of keeping the play title down. The Burton Holmes cut is a good attractor, since it belongs, but "The House of Lies" is more important than the travelogue and should have been given at least a ten point display, similar, perhaps, to those titles in the middle example. That on the right is done in red and black, the Paramount frame and the house title being in black and the rest in red. Here, too, the titles are overshadowed by the illustrated song, and the illustrated song is too old to be featured these days. Mr. Rossiter has adopted Mr. Blanchard's "Orpheum Bill," which reminds us that Mr. Blanchard has been quiet for some time. Boy, page J. M. Blanchard.

Printed in Bulk.

We are indebted to Tarleton Winchester, of the Pathe Exchange, for a new wrinkle, originated by F. H. Blair, of the Lyric, Mena, Ark., and the Dallas Pathe Exchange. It is a season ticket for a serial; not any particular serial but any one the house happens to be running.

The value of the idea lies in the fact that instead of having to print up tickets in excess of the probable demand to meet the possible demand for each serial, the tickets can be printed in five thousand lots at a small cost and used for the current serial as needed. We think it would be better to name the house, and to use some box office validating stamp. Where a serial runs fewer chapters than the number printed in the margin, the excess should be punched out before a sale to avoid dispute as to whether or not each number is good for an admission. The name might more neatly be filled in with a rubber stamp, and where more than one serial is running at a time, or even where there is but one, it would be handy to rubber stamp a huge number in colored ink on the face of the ticket, using one for the first serial so handled, two for the next and so on. The name of the subject should be stated, as shown here, the number merely facilitating the handling of the tickets at the door. It would probably help sales for exchanges to offer exhibitors these tickets free. The cost of a couple of hundred would not be much and it would be a good talking point for film salesmen.

Again the Pharisees.

The Princess theater, Argenta, Arkansas, favors us with a copy of the Arkansas Democrat of recent issue. It seems that the public spirited citizens arranged a free Sunday showing of pictures for the soldiers, and the Ministers' Alliance, of Little Rock, and Argenta frothed at the mouth and remarked "for money and worse they would rob and blight our soldier boys and send them penniless and diseased into the trenches." This might have sounded natural a few years ago, but most ministers have more sense these days. Today things are different. The Y. M. C. A., the finest example of practical Christianity that could be imagined, not only uses the pictures, but several branches actually conduct picture shows regularly as a source of income, and ministers the world over use the picture in the pulpit to drive home their texts. But it is too late to start to defend the pictures; they have acquitted themselves, but the latter portions of Elmer E. Clarke's brilliant editorial are worth reproducing as a resume of what part the pictures are playing in the life of the soldier. After explaining that the performance was a free one, so that the soldiers would not be robbed, even of their ten cent pieces, he goes on:

> The Ministerial Alliance is making a serious charge against men as public spirited as they are, and men whose integrity is just as high. Now that they have assumed to attack the motives of men of high standing, it is fair to call upon them for their proof.
> The Arkansas Democrat asks the Ministerial Alliance to give the names of persons who are contending that Little Rock and Argenta must have beer and red light districts for the soldiers. The statement of the Ministerial Alliance would make it appear that those who have favored Sunday moving pictures for the soldiers were also the ones who were contending that there should be beer and red light districts for the soldiers.
> The Arkansas Democrat has been a leader for Sunday recreation for the soldiers and has advocated the Sunday moving pictures. Does the Ministerial Alliance mean to charge that the Arkansas Democrat is contending that beer and the red light districts should be brought here for the soldiers? With all due respect to the ministers for the good they do in their pulpits, such a charge is false.
> Myron A. Kesner, field secretary of the War Department Commission on Training Camp Activities, has advocated Sunday moving pictures for the soldiers. Does the Ministerial Alliance mean to charge that Mr. Kesner has favored and is favoring the introduction of beer and the red light districts for the soldiers?
> Major General Leonard Wood, in command of the Southeastern Military Department, in which Little Rock and Argenta is located, while in this city asked the co-operation of the people of Little Rock and Argenta in furnishing wholesome recreation for the soldiers, especially on Sunday. He said he favored church for them, but declared that if 35,000 or 40,000 soldiers are turning loose in a town on Sunday without something provided for them to do trouble will follow.
>
> The war department officials at Washington have seen the programs for recreation and amusement provided by the Little Rock and Argenta Federation on Training Camp Activities and have praised them. These programs have been sent to other contonment cities with suggestions that they be followed there. No objection has been heard from the War department to Sunday moving pictures.
> The War Department HAS objected to providing beer and red light districts for the soldiers just as have others in favor of Sunday movies for the men in training.
> But let it be understood once for all that the men who are advocating Sunday movies for the soldiers have motives just as high as have the members of the Ministerial Alliance.
> There is no reason for grumbling with the ministers because they disagree with others in their opinion on certain subjects. But the ministers in their statements should be just as careful as others not to impute wrong motives to persons who are just as clean in their motives and just as public spirited as are the ministers.

Evidently the pictures have become linked with beer and the red lights in the minds of the reverend gentlemen, but the general public no longer accepts the pictures as the third member of this trio.

A Puzzling Puzzle.

Lee L. Goldberg, of the Strand and Mary Anderson, Louisville, Ky., sends in two papers showing the advertising for these houses, which are now being managed by Lee and Joseph Goldberg for the B. F. Keith interests. One sample is an advertisement for "The Fatal Ring" that is more of a puzzle than most of these contests. You are required to read several hundred words on the new Pathe offering and then form a seventeen word sentence from the bunch. There is no particular clue as to which words to use, and we think that the puzzle will therefore defeat its own aims. You have your choice of several hundred words, of which seventeen can be formed into a specific sentence, and you get two free tickets for a correct solution. Personally we should prefer to pay our way in. The puzzle is entirely too blind, and the solver is required to work completely in the dark. Few people will work long over so involved a matter. Most of them will read the stuff over once, but if they lay the paper down sore at the task required of them it will not do much good. The contest should be more simple and give more of a chance of winning. In such a case the scheme would be a good one, for most persons like a puzzle though few care to spend more than a couple of months winning two theater tickets. The Mary Anderson News; mentioned long ago in these pages, still continues, with the Strand running a similar news on the opposite side of the page, each house getting two columns, and the paper runs the regular photoplay department in between. The Mary Anderson has stuck to this form of newspaper advertising longer than any other house we recall. Most exhibitors find the cost too great, but it is better advertising than a similar space in display, particularly if the stuff runs on the page with the paper's own department—always providing that the house stuff is equally readable. Here the advertising ends seem to have a shade the best of it, for both sections are played up well for notes and comment.

The Mary Anderson overlaps its serials, the first chapter of "The Fatal Ring" coming with the last instalment of "The Double Cross." Evidently the Pathe serials pay here. The Herald runs the story version of each serial and gives the house considerable free advertising in return for equally free advertising for the newspaper.

No Poetry.

Gordon H. Place is now settled down in the Editorial chair of Real Reels in place of George E. Carpenter, and he even tries to versify like Carpenter—and he does—like Carpenter. Perhaps he is even more so. This is a sample:

WHO IS HE?

Frolicksome Fatty, funny film favorite,
Always a-laughing, agile, athletic;
Tempestuous tumbler, talented troglodite,
Temperamentally tender, truculent, timely;
Yearningly youthful, yielding young yokel;

Absolutely alluring, ambitious, adventuresome;
Rough-housing realist, red-hot reel regent;
Butcher boy, bravo, benevolent barbarian;
Undaunted, uproarious, uxorious, unequalled;
Classic comedian, cheerfully comical;
Kaleidescope, keen, knightly kisser;
Lively laugh-launcher, languishing lover;
Eccentric, expensive, entertainer elite.

Outside of that he is doing well.

We are still waiting to hear from George Manager Carpenter, however. We should like to see some samples.

Only Half the Idea.

The Third Street theater, Easton, Pa., uses this paragraph on its Kraus program covers:

> The photographs on the front page of this program are good enough for framing? You can't get a better one for less than twenty-five cents. These programs are free—are you on the mailing list? If not, leave your name and address at the box-office.

That's half the idea. The other half of the idea is not to smear the house name on the front in too large a type. A neat imprint in copperplate gothic in about the second smallest of the six point sizes would be a lot better and would be more likely to be kept on the print if it is framed. The house type used is entirely too large for the space it fills, and the big idea of those Kraus programs is that they are so well done that they serve as well as photographs for collections. They are of real photographic value and much to be preferred to colored covers, but they should be left free of imprint or else printed in keeping with the quality of the picture.

Starting Well.

W. M. Johnson, of the Franklin theater, Oakland, California, in sending in his first program writes:

> I am enclosing the first number of what is to be a weekly program for our theater. I should like your criticism on the layout the makeup. My idea is to have something that the patrons will take home and treasure rather than glance over it and throw it into the gutter. For this reason I have reserved the last page of my program for chit-chat and anything pertaining to pictures and players appearing at our house that might be interesting to the play-going public.

We wish we could show you the inside pages of this program, but the color scheme will not reproduce. It is the always good combination of brown ink on deep cream paper, but the layout is unusual. A double bill is advertised. On page two there is a two-line head and a short column of talk of one feature. This is set thirteen ems with a half inch space at the sides, and almost two inches top and bottom. Set in a ten point type the matter would fill the panel and crowd it, but in an eight it looks so small and compact that you do no realize that it says a lot. On the other side there are two boxes made of triple rule. These lie above and below a scene cut. The top merely gives the title and the Bluebird cut. The bottom starts with "An Odd Inheritance," which is a better catchline for the Clock than the familiar "The Story." You are over on the back page before you know it, and you carry with you a memory of the two subjects because you have not been made to read more than you are willing to read. The house changes twice weekly, and evidently the program is to be devoted to a single bill and not the bill for the week. This is costly, but it is not costly if it pays, and we think it will pay if succeeding issues are equally well done. We hope that Mr. Johnson will send in a proof on white paper some time. The brown ink will serve if the paper is white, and the printer will not mind running a couple of white sheets through the press if asked.

Warning Note.

So many newspaper editors are writing and telling William Lord Wright that his Selig Pastepot and Shears is good that there is danger that presently he'll have to use hair oil on his head to enable him to slide into his office. But Bill has worn the city editor's collar and knows that editors like press agents who do not always write of their own attractions and are willing to pay for favors with fillers. That's one thing too few press agents understand. It goes for the exhibitor press agents, too. Give the editor something besides the press story you want him to run and he'll be more apt to run the press story. "Pay" him for the free stuff with items he can use and cannot otherwise get, and you'll find that he will be less free with his blue pencil.

Heaven Forbid.

In a recent program the Royal theater, Enid, Okla., asks, without punction:

> Special 5 part Metro "Would you Sacrifice a Mother" with good Vaudeville.

Most assuredly not. Even a fairly poor mother is too good to sacrifice to "Good vaudeville" of the sort a picture theater can afford to show for five and ten cents. We would not sacrifice any mother even though it were, as announced in the same program:

> This is the highest class entertainment ever pulled off at the Royal.

The h. c. e. consists of Mary Pickford "with the Roe sisters in vaudeville, music and singing." You have to turn back to the first page to find that Miss Pickford is to be seen in "The Little American." The program box gives it all to the vaudeville act. The Roe sisters seem to be local favorites, but in a program the title of Pickford should be announced, and the printer should be asked to help with the breaking up of the lines.

Side Heads.

A program editor writes that he wants to run paragraphs in his paper, "and I don't want to use headlines, and I don't want them without," he concludes. Evidently he does not want to use paragraphs large enough to need special heads and yet does not want to run them without. In this case the answer is simple. Set the first few words of each paragraph in full face or all capitals, and separate the paragraphs with four points of lead. The full face looks better, but generally it costs to cut the full face in and adds to the expense, when caps may be used instead. This is a very common device, and gives a sightly page when run under a general head or with no heading at all. It is particularly good for program fillers of short length.

No Wonder.

No wonder some exhibitors say that business is bad. A Newark exhibitor recently ran Mary Pickford in "The Little American" first run, the films of General Pershing in France and "Paid in Full" all for ten cents. That is plain criminal. You cannot keep on liking pictures in such wholesale quantities.

We Like This.

For once the Third Street theater, Easton, Pa., seems to have coaxed the printer to act human and do a good job; possibly because they did not ask fancy work, but we like the arrangement better than most of the stuff the Third Street has offered, and in the past couple of years we think that the Third Street has led the line for innovations. The new program runs for two weeks on a four pager, a page to a week, with an illustrated front and "Do Children Count?" on the back. The layout is not a new idea, but we like the way they have worked it. Reading the left hand column you get the features at a glance while the right hand boxes give the brief details. It will be some time before the Third Street can beat this program form, which works well with any average size.

Request Cards.

The Elmwood, Buffalo, N. Y., encloses a request card with a recent program. It is a 2¼ by 3½ card printed:

ELMWOOD
THEATER
ORCHESTRA AND ORGAN REQUEST CARD.

Please play the following selections:

.....

.....

.....

Name .....

Address .....

Sending the card out with the program may possibly attract new business and appeal to the old as well. The only trouble is that too many requests may come in, and it is not a good plan to load down the musical program with request numbers.

Reacts.

Look out for fake press work for the films you use. We have just put down a house organ containing a story. It's a good story if you never see the film, but if you ever do it is such an outrageous lie that it will react against the house and not against the film. No manager can afford to permit his patrons to believe that he is a stupid come-on, eager to swallow anything, nor yet to shake their faith in the value of his word on films. Lay off the too lurid stuff. It will pay. We are coming to more careful press work, but there is still a lot of stupid stuff written apparently in the belief that exhibitors are all stupid. And when you do get stung on an item, write your exchange and the head of the releasing company as well and make a kick. If all exhibitors did that it would soon be possible to get really good dope.

INQUIRIES.

Questions concerning photoplay writing adressed to this department will be replied to by mail if a fully addressed and stamped envelope accompanies the letter, which should be addressed to this department. Questions should be stated clearly and should be typewritten or written with pen and ink. Under no circumstances will manuscripts or synopses by critized, whether or not a fee is sent therefor.

A list of companies will be sent if the request is made to the paper direct and not to this department, and a return stamped envelope is inclosed.

The Scope of Photoplay.

BRANDER MATHEWS is one of the few commentators on the drama who writes of photoplay with an open mind. He does not always write from full information but from what he knows he neither seeks to decry the new art form nor to find in it something with which to replace all other forms. He is judicial and generally keen. His comment on the various forms of play is worthy of note. In the North American Review for March he writes:

> Perhaps it is going a little too far to assert that the disappearance of the ultra-sensational melodrama is due solely to the competition of the moving picture which can present the same kind of story with a far greater wealth of detail. Yet it is beyond question that the movie can satisfy the ruder likings of the mob for coarse-grained happenings far more successfully than the most inventive and ingenious stage manager can ever hope to do. But while melodrama has had a long and interesting history, it is not one of the higher and more important forms of the drama. Indeed, it is frankly an inferior form because it contents itself with story-telling for its own sake, never hesitating to sacrifice character to situation. Its appeal is to the emotions but mainly to the senses, and more especially to the nerves, whereas true drama, the drama comic or serious, which is really worth while, appeals both to the emotions and to the intellect; it uses situation mainly to reveal character.
> In a melodrama or in a farce we are interested very much in what happens and very little in the persons to whom these misadventures happen. In a comedy or in a tragedy we are interested mainly in the persons themselves, in what they are rather than in what they do. However powerful the situations may be in which they are immeshed, we are always watching them to see how their characters are going to react and to reveal themselves under the stress of unforeseen circumstance. In melodrama and in farce we are quite satisfied to find characters painted in the primary colors, but a few bold strokes, presented in profile as it were, whereas in comedy and tragedy we expect the rotundity of real life, the complexity, the delicate colors and the finer shadings of a subtler art. We demand from the dramatist who essays the higher forms that he shall be able to "convince the taste and console the spirit." And Mr. Howells was right when he declared that this was precisely what the moving picture could not do. So long therefore as it labors under this total disability the moving picture can never be a real rival of the drama.
> Certain kinds of melodrama the movies can do better than the regular theater; certain kinds of farce also. But comedy and tragedy are wholly beyond its reach; and equally unattainable by it are the social drama and the problem-play. It is true, of course, that the moving picture director can take comedy and tragedy; social drama and problem-play and that he can translate them on the screen; but what has he succeeded in presenting? The mere story, the empty sequence of events, void of nearly all the humanity that gives it meaning. He can take "Hamlet" and put it into pictures but he has to leave out all that lifted "Hamlet" above the violent melodrama out of which Shakespeare made it. He can take "Macbeth," which has a good story picturesqeuly set forth, and he can show the succession of incidents with the utmost splendor. But he cannot show what gives all its value to this external shell of episode. He can make visible the marching of Macduff's army, and the coming of Birnman Wood, but he cannot disclose the conflict in the soul of Macbeth himself; he cannot make us shudder at the slow and steady disintegration of a noble character under the stress of recurring temptation. All that the moving picture can do to a masterpiece of Shakespeare is to rob it of its vitality and its significance and to reduce it to the purely spectacular level of "The Birth of a Nation" and of the "gross and palpable" triumphs of the "black art," as Mr Howells has termed it.

Mr. Matthews is a student of the photoplay theater rather than of the real art of photoplay writing. He writes of what he sees and does not go beyond. As he earlier pointed out, the photoplay has largely replaced melodrama because it can picture, and show as actual happening that of which the stage play can only tell. Here he makes his point well. The photoplay of Othello gains vividness because it can visualize the tales of daring by means of which Othello won Desdemona. Here photoplay gains for the dramatist's creation. It does lose, unless an excess of leader is employed, the literary quality of the dramatist, and photoplay can never replace the spoken drama for this reason, but it can, and does, offer a greater flexibility of thought expression than Mr. Matthews dreams of. We do not say that this has been done; we do say that it is possible. If it has not been done it is because no one has as yet risen to a full appreciation of photoplay. David W. Griffith has not done this because he is a trickster of the stage, employing the tricks of the stage merely adapted to the new environment. Some of his one-reel productions show him in a far more favorable light than "The Birth of a Nation" or "Intolerance" where he seeks to cover lack of thought with splendor of the Loke Belasco, his is the triumph of trickery; of stage effect. He does not realize photoplay possibilities to the full. Rather it is Hugo Munsterberg who points the way in his book, "The Photoplay." He finds in the cut back and the vision and the close-up the true factors whereby we may arrive at individuality of thought in photoplay, and through these means, intelligently done, it is possible to show the steady disintegration of Macbeth's character as surely and as clearly as we can depict the coming of Birnham Wood, but to do this we must have a man who is free from the traditions of stage and studio alike, who comes to his work with reverence and love, who is not a third rate stage director nor yet a photoplay actor lately risen from the ranks. He must be, at heart, a photoplay producer, working a new art by its own methods and not the discarded mechanism of the stage. He must be able to use and yet not abuse the vision and close-up. He must have a vital reason for each cut-back and not merely cut two scenes, one into the other, to get a large number of scenes. And everything he does must be intended for showing on the screen. We are sick—ghastly sick—of these stories of six miles of film made for a six thousand foot production. That does not argue intelligent direction. It is the work of a man who does not know what he wants trying to find out, and the result can only be imperfect and incomplete. There will be no perfect plays until there comes into existence a class of men who can write perfect continuities and others who can realize these scripts in action from the continuity, with nothing added nor subtracted. Then, and not until then, shall we have good photoplays, and in those days there can be no complaint that photoplay is merely an imperfect visualization of stage plays or current fiction, nor will it be written that the producer but imperfectly translated the borrowed theme. Fewer themes will be borrowed, for the artist-producer will know that not all plays are suited to the screen any more than all these are suited to the stage or will make interesting fiction. He will select only such themes as lend themselves to the medium in which he works, but he will give those themes so adequate a production that there will be felt no lack of the finer qualities that give to the spoken play and the printed story their charm and appeal. Photoplay will never supplant the spoken drama. It can and will rise to an equal level, but not unitl there comes into being a class of artist-producers to replace the present day men with their little bags of cheap tricks. Mr. Matthews writes dispassionately of what he sees, but apparently he does not see beneath the surface.

The Time to Work.

Just now ice is selling at higher prices per ton than it did last winter, but last winter the ice man was stocking his house against the time he could sell ice at a profit. In the same way now is the time to be writing good plays against the day they come in demand again. Get your storehouse full against the time of need, but don't try to peddle ice when coal in more in demand.

Your Troubles.

Don't spoil what little chance you have of selling by telling your troubles to the editors. We know one man who was ruined by a lawsuit and another who is hurting his standing by sending in scripts with long letters telling all his troubles to the editors. It will not influence the editor to buy scripts and it may, and often does, cause him to return the stuff unread because he has spotted the author.

Manufacturers' Notice.

IT IS an established rule of this department that no apparatus or other goods will be endorsed or recommended editorially until the excellence of such articles has been demonstrated to its editor.

Important Notice.

Owing to the mass of matter awaiting publication, it is impossible to reply through the department in less than two to three weeks. In order to give prompt service, those sending four cents, stamps (less than actual cost), will receive carbon copy of the department reply, by mail, without delay. Special replies by mail on matters which cannot be replied to in the department, one dollar.

Both the first and second sets of questions are now ready and printed in neat booklet form, the second half being seventy-six in number. Either booklet may be had by remitting 25 cents, money or stamps, to the editor, or both for 40 cents. Cannot use Canadian stamps. Every live, progressive operator should get a copy of these questions. You may be surprised at the number you cannot answer without a lot of study.

Get Into the Papers.

Brother W. W. Brumberg, Local Union 298, Tucson, Arizona, sends in clipping from the Arizona Daily Star, Sunday, July 22 issue, with the following note:

> What do you think of it, Brother Richardson? At last we are recognized in a literary way!

What do I think of it? Why I think it is a corking good stunt. The article in question is headed: "If You Like the Show It's the Fault of the Operator." The writer then proceeds in the first really intelligently written article I have ever seen in a daily paper, dealing with the operator and the operating room, to call attention to the importance of the operator and his work in the scheme of affairs as applied to the public. The writer says, in part:

> The moving picture operator is one of the most important factors in the great moving picture business. Next time you go to a show and are pleased with the program, and feel that you should stop and tell the manager as you go out that you are pleased, don't forget to say a word about the projection, for ten to one there was a good operator in the booth. If there hadn't been you would not have liked the show no matter how laughable the comedy or stirring the drama. Consider the movie operator; he is worthy of your consideration.
> As in the case of a piano-player, if the record is merely pumped through not much in the way of real music is obtained. But the one who operates a mechanical piano with feeling can get results that approximate the effects of a musician. The same applies to the hand-turning of a motion picture projecting machine when judgment is used in regulating the manner of screening a film.
> Photoplays are recorded on a narrow strip of celluloid. The individual pictures are one inch wide by three-quarters of an inch deep. That makes sixteen pictures or exposure to the foot of film. A reel means a thousand feet of exposed film or 16,000 pictures less that amount of footage given to subtitles, which may be anywhere from a hundred to two hundred feet in the average photoplay. Usually twenty minutes is allowed for projecting a reel, though sometimes it is done in less time. Unless it be comedy, the result is not satisfactory to the spectator.
> Improvements are being made right along on the many different types of projecting machines in use. The aim is to get a flickerless succession of pictures on the screen to reproduce perfectly the animation of real life. Owing to the intense heat of the electric light used the film is not permitted to stop a fraction of a second or it would burn.
> To guard against fire all cities have strict regulations covering the construction of projection booths. They are built of sheet-iron and asbestos. Lanterns are equipped with safety slides to cut off the light should anything stop the unwinding.
> At the other end of the theater stands the screen. This may be of any material that will give a white surface. Screens vary in size, the average being fourteen by eighteen feet. The little film scene thrown on it would be enlarged 48,384 times. Sometimes the enlargement exceeds even this, depending on the size of the screen.
> As a result of the popularity of the motion picture projection is a new line of work and gives employment to many men at good wages. The projector must be an electrician and a skilled mechanic. In most places the craft is organized and many municipalities license motion picture machine operators.
> Besides "grinding," the projector has plenty to keep him busy. He must watch his lights continually, keep his picture "framed"—centered on the screen—and use discernment every minute of the time if the people are to be pleased. They are not slow to manifest impatience when the projection is not up to standard
> It is the positive film which is projected. In the unreeling it often tears, when repairs must be made. The projector has to watch his lens for the proper focus. All in all the work is hard on the eyes because of the brilliancy of the lights and sometimes the booths are hot to work in.
> Notwithstanding, the work has its rewards and is interesting. Yet not many people stop to think how much of their pleasure in a picture and impression of a film favorite depends on the projection.

I have printed considerable of the article to the end that those who wish may use it as a basis for a similar article for their home paper. The limelight, my brother, may be sneered at by those who do not enjoy its glare, but it has a tremendous value just the same. The man of today who plays the modest roll and hides his light under a bushel may be admired by a small circle of friends with whom he comes into direct personal contact, but he is not apt to burn up much gasoline. Once educate the public as to the importance of projection and there will be a demand for high class work, because friend patron will be able to locate the trouble when twelve-year-old Willie shoots a bunch of jumping shadows at the screen; also he will demand the elimination of the aforesaid shadows, which mean the elimination of dear little Willie and the substitution, in his stead, of an operator. And the change will, to the amazement of the manager, prove a splendid investment, because while Willie and his shadows are low in first cost, they bring in little at the box office. I don't know who posted the Arizona reporter, or who got him started on the job, but he certainly did it up brown. Other articles should follow in the same paper. Also operators in other cities and towns should try and get similar articles into their home papers. If desired I will publish a series of such short articles in this department, which may be lifted bodily and given to the local scribe.

Most Excellent Device.

While in Lincoln, Nebraska, Brother R. A. Lindsay presented to me two devices which have, it seems to me, very distinct merit. The one consists of an ordinary near-ivory toothbrush handle, which has been cut off just behind the brush and filed sharp at both ends. It is then used to scrape emulsion from the tension springs. Strikes me it is a most excellent and efficient tool for the purpose. Certainly the steel of the springs, or shoes, could not be in the least degree roughened, and that is an extremely important point, since any roughing of the polished steel will only serve to aggravate the trouble.

The other implement consists of a safety razor blade set in a spool as per sketch. Cut off about one and one-half inches from the large end of a broom handle and saw a slot in it at an angle as shown. Bore a hole, in proper position, and insert a handle. Then wedge a safety razor blade in the slot. The advantage of this tool is that you may remove the emulsion, when making a splice, at one swipe, and at the same time have a perfectly straight edge, since you lay the blade edge on the film crosswise of the length of the film. The secret of success with this implement is, keep the blade edge perfectly sharp; and for this purpose it is necessary to have a small but good oil stone on the rewinder bench, so you may touch up the edge occasionally. It is a dandy little tool and just the thing for the purpose. Brother Lindsay says: "Use Enders or Keen Kutter blades."

In moving picture operating, as in everything else, there is plenty of room at the top. The ladder of human endeavor is always crowded at its lower rungs, because while sliding down hill, or even walking along the level is easy, it takes labor to mount a hill. There are many kinds of men. There is the constitutional shirker. The lazybones whose ambition rises not one inch above three meals a day and a place to sleep. He envies the man who is far up on the ladder, but makes no effort to raise himself because that would require work. There are many men who will work and slave under orders from another man.

Place them under a foreman and they will almost work their fingers off to please. But that is their sole ambition. Without a boss they would scarce raise a finger. To them the idea of earning advancement through hard work and initiative is as a strange language. They know it not. Others will work hard just so long as the boss is looking, but once his back is turned their ambition ceases instantly, replaced by the how-little-can-I-do-and-get-by idea. They, of course, never get anywhere. They "hold their job" until the boss gets wise, and then move on, cursing their "hard luck."

But here I am, meandering around like a lost sheep. What I really want to say is that the man who takes up operating for his profession should understand very thoroughly that his success or failure lies in his own hands. He should also understand that success does NOT consist in delivering a screen result which will just barely hold his job and get him the union scale. The union scale is a very excellent and very necessary thing, but it is only a minimum which must be paid the poorest men. The real man will strive to create for himself a market at advanced figures. He will not be satisfied with the dead level. He will have self confidence and initiative. He will seek to prove to friend manager that he is WORTH more than the man down the street. To do this he must work and study. He must experiment. He must apply brains to his work. The process will be long, and will at times be discouraging, but persistence will win. But it may not be quite so slow in future as in the past, because theaters are increasing in size and in excellence. That means better jobs. It means a higher type of theater manager. It means more machinery and better machinery. And in the end it will mean a demand for higher intelligence and skill in the operating room, and then is when the student, the hard working grubber, will win out and raise himself above the average. But the drone will never win anything but the chance to exist. He will never forge ahead in operating or in anything else.

And (whisper) maybe one reason for low wages is to be found in the fact, for fact it is, that, taken as a class, operators cannot claim any very extended scientific knowledge of their business. Is this not so?

Mind you I do not mean that friend manager is going to rush up, fall on the skilled man's neck and weep. He is not that variety of hairpin. By and large he is a business man, and is in the market to purchase service as cheaply as may be. But no man will dispute the fact that high grade service sells better than low grade, and Mister Manager is slowly awakening to the fact that, when it comes to operating, there is service and service; also that the high grade man may be cheaper than the low grade one even at an advanced figure. Witness the fact that we have operators in well organized cities all over the country receiving more than, and some almost double, the union scale, because while the manager can get plenty of men at the scale, he cannot get the class of service he wants at that figure. And where that condition exists why are not YOU the one to get the job? Ask yourself that pointed question, and hold close communion with yourself until you get the answer. Get out of the rut. Be a winner. Rise above the dead level of the average.

From Little Rock.

L. B. Herring, Little Rock, Arkansas, shies his hat into the ring as follows:

> In June 9 issue C. E. Linstruth, Carthage, N. Y., tells us a test lamp will not burn to c. p. across the arc lamp terminals, when taking current through a rheostat, and the arc not burning. With regard to this, a rheostat designed to deliver 25 amperes when working in conjunction with a D. C. projection arc, has approximately 2.5 ohms resistance. Using an ordinary 16 c. p. incandescent carbon filament globe, which pulls about .5 of an ampere, you would get (Ohms law) a drop of (C X R = E) ½ x 2½ = 1¼ volts drop through the rheostat, and this would not be sufficient to seriously affect the c. p. of the lamp.
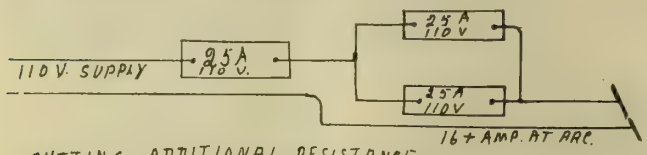
> In the same issue, under the caption "Can You Dope It Out," you present a problem, as follows: on a 110 volt line, with three 25 ampere rheostats connected thus:



CUTTING ADDITIONAL RESISTANCE IN MULTIPLE (PARALLEL) WITH RESISTANCE ALREADY IN USE, HAS SAME EFFECT AS INCREASING DIAMETER OF RESISTANCE WIRE WOULD HAVE.

And right there friend Herring gets his dates twisted, or at least seems to, for he first says we would get nothing at the arc, and then says we would get fifty amperes. His figures are, however, correct. The single rheostat would have about 2.5 ohms resistance and the two in multiple exactly half as much as the single resistance alone, hence there would be a total rheostatic resistance of 2.5 plus 1.25 ohms, equals 3.75 ohms opposed to the line voltage of 110. In addition to this there would be the arc resistance, which would be somewhere in the neighborhood of fifty volts drop, or that number of volts divided by amperes flowing as expressed in ohms. And right there is the sticker, for how can we determine the arc resistance without first knowing amperage, and how can we determine amperage without first having accurate knowledge of arc resistance. The mere fact that they are twenty-five amperes rheostats proves nothing, because they are now hitched in series with each other, and we must therefore take the entire combination as a base. Perhaps the following will be as nearly accurate as we could figure it. The rheostat combination presents a total resistance of 3.75 ohms in itself. If two and one-half ohms in series with an arc supplies 25 amperes then 3.75 :2.g :25 :X, which simple problem gives up 16 amperes plus. Am I right or wrong in figuring the matter in that way? Erother Wallis, Hamilton, Ontario, figures it out at 16.5333 plus amperes. His knowledge of the connection is beyond criticism, but, after remarking that the arc amperage and resistance are unknown quantities, divides 62 (110 — 48) by 3.75, the total resistance of the combination. This may be correct, but I must confess I don't quite follow his line of reasoning at this point.

John Solar, Watertown, N. Y., also sent in an approximately correct reply in another form, but he assumes an arc voltage, which has, I think, led him into error. His answer is 17.6 amperes. Chas. B. Stears, Vancouver, B. C., had the right idea, btu got twisted in his figures.

New York City Operators Attention.

In an endeavor to complete the organization of Greater New York City operators, Local Union 306 I. A. T. S. E. & M. P. M. O. has lowered the initiation fee, for a limited period only, to twenty-five dollars. Also to show its good faith in making it entirely possible for every competent New York operator to join, the fee will be accepted as follows: $6.25 with the application, $6.25 when he is examined, and the balance, $12.50 when he is initiated.

On January first the initiation fee will be raised to $75.00, the intention being merely to give the operators who have objected to joining on the score that the initiation fee is too high to get in on the "ground floor." Twenty-five dollars is, by comparison, very reasonable indeed. Many unions in far smaller cities than New York are charging $100.00.

The editor is not in favor of a too-small initiation fee. Experience has shown that the man who "gets in for a song," drops out at the slightest pretext. He figures he can drop out for a year, save his dues, join again and actually save money. But with a seventy-five or one hundred dollar fee it is very different. When a man has that sum invested he is mighty careful what he does. A hundred dollars is a lot of money to the operator. It represents a whole month of hard work. It is harder to get him in at that figure than for a small fee, but once in he is there to stay. It is quite true that many managers who are not over anxious to have their operator join the union (though they themselves may be enthusiastic members of the Exhibitors Union), claim that a fifty or one hundred dollar initiation fee is "robbery." They point with righteous indignation to the fact that their own initiation fee in their union (League) was a mere, piffling five dollars, or maybe only one. And they are exhibitors too! Yep, Mr. Exhibitor, that may all be true, but by the time your union (League) has done for exhibitors what the I. A. T. S. E. & M. P. M. O. has done for operators, it will be justified in charging a respectable initiation fee. Meanwhile the last objection which can possibly be raised by the New York City outsider to joining is temporarily removed, and it is up to him to get inside the fold. Don't stand outside and whine like a kid with a sore toe, saying "The union isn't run right!" Get in, where you belong, and help run it right. It may not be perfect; in fact most human institutions are not, but it is the best thing you have, and the sooner you are inside the better it will be for both you and the union. Get busy!

They Don't Work Out.

It is amazing what a number of inventions reach the office of the editor, and how very few have any real merit, notwithstanding the fact that the average inventor is thoroughly imbued with the idea that he has a world beater. Recently a correspondent in Italy wrote concerning an incandescent lamp, which he firmly believed would revolutionize projection. It, so he said, gave a marvelous amount of illumination from an extremely small filament. I advised him to forward one or more of the lamps to a well known Cleveland corporation, and now have their report on same. Briefly it is to the effect that the lamps closely resemble those used in the Pathescope Home Moving Picture Machine, which same cannot be recommended for anything greater than a six foot picture.

I mention this incident becase it is fresh in memory, the report on the lamps only having come in today. I could mention dozens of others, quite similar, which have occurred recently, and the record of eight years would run into the hundreds; I almost said thousands. I am right now investigating the merits of an invention which, if it works out, ought to revolutionize the projection of pictures. But there is the rub—if it works out! I am hoping that it will, but am industriously engaged in believing it will not. In the vernacular, I am from Missouri.

And there are some rather sad incidents in this connection. Some time ago an operator insisted that I examine a projection machine he had evolved, which was, according to his enthusiastic imaginings, going to be a world beater of the nth power. Having grave suspicions as to what was coming I did my best to sidestep. I tried to shoo him off on some one else, but it was no go. I was the elected one, and no other would do.

So, I finally consented, and set a time. The stupendous wonder was in his home, but when I arrived it seems some unforseen thing had occurred which prevented his presence. His wife, almost with tears in her eyes, hoped I would find it good, for, said she, "he has spent every cent he could rake and scrape for three years in perfecting it, and in the process had reduced his family almost to actual hunger."

A cursory examination told the story and told it unmistakably. The machine was a conglomeration of ideas, some already patented, some already in use, and none new. Bluntly, the machine was not worth a single copper, except what it would bring for old iron. Now here was a sad duty. If I told the truth it would probably make of the man a mortal enemy, but would prevent his spending more money—throwing good money after bed; also the wife would hate me as the man who had pricked their bubble of wealth. On the other hand I could be non-committal, and thus escape a disagreeable duty—and one which falls to the lot of this editor oftener than you might imagine. And what would YOU have done in such circumstances? The fault of course lay with the man himself in not having ascertained what had already been done along the lines he proposed to follow. What I did was to intimate to the woman that under no circumstances ought any more money be expended on the machine, and then I told the man the plain, unvarnished, baldheaded truth. It hurt like using caustic, but there was nothing else to do, so I did it. I gave him such data as would enable him to prove many of the things I told him, and let it go at that.

But to get back to my subject, it is a fact that a comparatively insignificant number of the many ideas sent in are of value. Still there is an occasional one, and that one is the wheat among the chaff. It is to be devoutly hoped that the one I spoke of as under investigation will prove to be of the latter, but———? So far as projection machines which utilize present principles, it is extremely doubtful if a projector of such extraordinary value as to force it into an already well-covered field could be evolved by an individual. He would be working alone, probably hampered for capital and proper machinery, and in competition with several large, splendidly equipped corporations. That the individual, working alone, might easily evolve a valuable, or an even extremely valuable improvement as applied to present projectors, is quite possible, but I would strongly advise against attempting to "invent" a whole projector, unless it be one in which entirely new principles are involved—such as, for instance, a non-intermittent machine, the practicability of which, by the way, I shall believe when I see it in actual commercial form.

One possible avenue for inventors might be a rewinder which will be reasonable in price, geared to rewind in not less than ten minutes (but with a specal arrangement whereby film may be rewound rapidly upon occasion), with an automatic cutoff to stop friend motor when the rewinding is finished. Such a machine, if reasonable in price and well made, would have the undivided and enthusiastic support of this department, since rapid rewinding works many thousands of dollars of damage to films every month.

Aisle Lighting.

The Brookins Company, Cleveland, Ohio, noticed an article in the Department, and was moved to write thusly:

> We notice the lighting diagram on page 931, August 11 issue. Permit us to say that, after giving eleven years to the study of interior illumination we conceived the idea of lighting theatre aisles from a little above the floor level, thereby making it possible to eliminate all exposed lights during the performance. Enclosed circular will give you an idea of what our proposition is, and any further information will be gladly supplied.

The fact that eleven years was consumed in a study of interior lighting does not necessarily prove that the student is qualified to pose as an authority on moving picture theatre lighting. To give competent advice as regards moving picture theatre lighting one must not only understand the correct principles of interior lighting, but must also understand, and very thoroughly understand that subject AS APPLIED TO THE PROJECTION OF MOTION PICTURES. Lighting which would be ideal for a dramatic theatre, fails utterly to meet the requirements of projection.

After having studied this subject prettly closely for some considerable time, and having viewed many hundreds of moving picture theatres, lighted in almost every imaginable way, ranging from very nearly perfect to simply awful, I am convinced the two things to receive first consideration are (A) conceal all lights from the screen, (B) conceal all lights from the eyes of the patron.

In addition to this there must be no bright spots, either on ceiling, wall or floor, which same will be within view of any patron as he or she look at the picture on the screen. The light must be evenly distributed, and should be projected either straight downward or ahead. Given these conditions, with the direct rays prevented from reaching the screen, it is amazing what an amount of light there may be without any apparent injury to the picture.

The Brookins plan fails in two important particulars. First, while it lights the aisles, it does not supply any light to the auditorium itself, leaving the patron at the end of the row of seats without a ray of light by which to find his or her seat. Second, it spots the aisle with bright patches of light, and this is trying to the eyes of the patron seated in a dark auditorium and looking over these bright spots at a picture in the distance. The Brookins plan has value, I should imagine, in some ways, but I cannot agree with its employment as a sole means for moving picture theatre lighting, or with its use at all in that connection, unless the light be so diffused that it will cover the whole aisle floor with a subdued glow of light, without bright spots.

Non Intermittent Projector.

And now comes Christian Andersen, Portland, Oregon, who, being duly unsworn, declares and says that he is the inventor of a projection machine which uses a continuously-running film, and delivers a first-class result on the screen. He asks us to have some friend in Portland examine it and report his findings. The thing is done, according to Andersen, by means of a moving prism, which synchronizes with the film movement. I cannot, of course, pass any intelligent judgment until I have actually seen the method by which the synchronism of movement is accomplished, but it must, perforce, be a movement which will not be affected by wear to any appreciable extent. However, I will have the machine examined, and if it seems to warrant investigation, will try and have same sent to New York City for further, personal investigation. Until then I have nothing to say concerning the feasibility to Friend Andersen's projector, except to hope that which seems too good to be true, really is true.

Good Stunt.

Brother J. O. Thomas, Vancouver, B. C., has evolved what look to yours truly like a corking good stunt, and one which might well be adopted by all machine manufacturers. It consists of an arm attached to the lamphouse door, as per illustration. To the end of this arm by means of a hook, is attached a flexible wire cord, or a very small metal chain. This cord, or chain, passes into the lamphouse through a small hole located near its top. It then passes over a small metal pulley, and down, attaching to the upper end of an asbestos shutter, which is thus made to raise or lower as the lamphouse door is opened or closed. The shutter may or may not slide in loose grooves, but grooves are to be preferred. The hook where the cord, or chain, attaches to the bar, is in order that the same may be detached after the last show at night, and lowered over the condenser. It is a good stunt, and one which may easily be installed by any operator.

Booklets Free.

This department has been informed that some party, to us unknown, is selling the little booklet put out by the Nicholas Power Company under the title "Hints to Operators." According to our information the fee asked is small, but there should be none at all as these books are issued by the Power Company gratis. Moreover the books contain copyrighted matter the use of which is given with the understanding the books would not be sold. The party selling is therefore not only coming pretty close to operating a fraud, but is laying himself liable under the copyright law. The booklet "Hints to Operators" may be had without money and without price by addressing the Nicholes Power Company, whose address may be had by referring to their advertisement on the back cover page of each week's issue of the Moving Picture World.

Fixing Baths.

Hypo is one of the cheapest chemicals used in photography, and yet one of the most important. It is also the most common, and yet the most misused salt in the photographic laboratory.

Photography with gelatine emulsions would be almost impossible were it not for this cheap solvent of the silver haloid salts. Before its introduction the highly poisonous cyanide of potassium was the agent used. Potassium cyanide attacks not only the haloid salts, but, at a slower rate, the reduced metallic silver which forms the image and gelatine as well.

Hypo, or sodium thiosulphate, to give it the correct chemical name by which it is seldom called, has practically no effect upon either the reduced silver image or upon the gelatine unless allowed to act for an undue length of time or at a too high temperature.

Chemically the difference between sodium sulphite and sodium thiosulphate is that hypo contains one more atom of sulphur in a molecule than sodium sulphite.

One of the methods of manufacturing hypo is the solution of pure sulphur in sodium sulphite liquor, from which liquor the hypo is then crystallized out.

The chemical bond which holds this sulphur is easily broken, and under certain conditions the hypo solution breaks down and deposits this sulphur in a finely divided state in the hypo bath. This condition is manifest by the milky appearance of the bath and may be the result of a number of things. Acids and acid salts are the commonest causes of sulphur precipitation. Formaldehyde used as hardener will also bring about this condition.

A bath which is precipitating sulphur liberates it in nascent form, at which time it is capable of attacking the finely divided particles of metallic silver which form the photographic image and converting it into silver sulphide. This is a process intentionally used in the sepia toning of photographic prints, but a highly undesirable thing for negatives, as the opacity of the image to actinic light is thereby greatly increased.

It is common practice in most laboratories to use a plain hypo bath with an acid short stop between the developer and the hypo. Even though hypo is cheap, still there is no sense in wasting it, especially as the more economically it is used the more valuable it becomes. Used hypo is worth money on account of the silver which it contains and the more silver it takes up the more valuable it becomes and the easier it is to recover the dissolved silver.

It is a common practice in most places to empty a portion of the hypo tanks each day and then "freshen" the bath with more hypo and water. This is decidedly wrong. Each developing tank should have two hypo tanks, one containing an old and the other an entirely fresh bath. The developed film should go into the old bath for five minutes then be finished in the fresh bath. When the old bath becomes so saturated that it does not remove most of the milkiness in five minutes it should be run into the precipitating tank and an entirely fresh bath mixed; whereupon the former fresh tank becomes the old bath and the new solution the fresh bath.

Hypo forms with silver haloids two distinct compounds. Both of these compounds are transparent, but one is soluble with difficulty and the other is very soluble. In the first compound, one molecule of hypo unites with one molecule of silver haloid, while the next, and easily soluble compound, is the same as the former with an additional molecule of hypo. An old or used bath tends to form this insoluble compound in the emulsion and consequently makes it exceedingly difficult to wash, but as soon as it strikes the fresh bath it takes up an additional molecule of hypo and becomes, as the term is, thoroughly fixed.

These are proven chemical facts ascertained years ago by two distinguished French photo chemists, A. Lumiere and M. Seyewitz, and it seems very strange that so little attention has been paid to their investigations, the results of which have been widely published in photographic literature.

They demonstrated that a film, fixed in fresh hypo and soaked in water for five minutes, contained only a small fraction as much hypo as a film fixed in an old bath and washed for an hour in running water. By this method of two baths every ounce of use is extracted from the hypo and the smaller volume of concentrated silver-hypo solution renders the silver recovery much easier.

For the precipitation of the silver from the hypo two capacious tanks of concrete should be constructed a good distance away from the building; for the chemical used as a precipitant, when acted upon by an acid, produces a gas, the smallest quantity of which being present in the atmosphere of the dark room, fogs sensitive emulsion just as surely as sunlight would.

The two tanks should each be of sufficient capacity to hold at least a week's run of spent hypo; the top level of the lower one being below the bottom of the upper one. Each tank should be provided with a series of cocks or outlets or an adjustable syphon, whereby the liquid can be drawn off at any desired level and a weatherproof, but easily removable, cover and, if the size of the tanks warrants, a small flight of steps for the laborer who shovels the silver sludge into barrels.

On account of the disintegrating action of the hypo solution the concrete should be protected by a heavy coat of asphalt.

The upper tank has an inlet pipe from the dark room through which it receives its charge of solution and all its outlets drain into the lower tank. The lower tank in turn drains into the sewer.

The precipitating solution is liver of sulphur of the cheapest commercial grade. It comes in large chunks of the fused chemical, varying in color from light brown to dark brown, according to the purity. Chemically it is a mixture of indefinite polysulphides of sodium and potassium, and the precipitate which it forms with the silver is silver sulphide, a dirty brownish black appearing substance. Liver of sulphur is very soluble in water but, on account of the large impervious pieces in which it comes, it takes a long time to dissolve unless broken up, and breaking it up is no pleasant job, as it has the quintuple fragrance of ancient eggs. It is a good plan, therefore, to have a stout barrel or hogshead with a snug-fitting cover in which are placed water and chemical enough to have a saturated solution constantly on hand.

Where it is not possible to have tanks on different levels, a small bronze centrifugal or rotary pump and electric motor will take care of the solution nicely. When the upper tank is two-thirds full of hypo solution and sulphuret solution, stir with a wooden paddle and pausing once in a while to let the precipitate settle a little, and take a glass full of the supernatant liquid and add a little of the sulphuret solution to see if there is any further precipitation. If it produces a dark brown cloudy precipitate it is necessary to add more precipitate, but if the precipitate is only slightly cloudy or absent the precipitation is complete and the tank should be allowed to settle until the next day, when the clear supernatant liquid may be carefully decanted into the lower tank. However careful you may be, you will find that it is impossible to remove all of the supernatant liquid with a portion of the precipitate escaping into the next tank. It is to receive and save this escaping precipitate that the lower tank was constructed. The lower tank is now allowed to settle and the clear liquid allowed to run into the sewer. This precipitation may be repeated until the accumulation of sludge in the bottom of the tank is sufficient to warrant putting it into tight barrels for shipment to the refiner.

If any acid is used in the hypo do not fail to run enough spent developer solution into the tank to make sure that all the acid is neutralized and that the solution is decidedly alkaline. If this is not done the acid will react on the liver of sulphur and foul the whole neighborhood with the abominable odor of sulphuretted hydrogen or hydrogen disulphide, which has rotten eggs backed off the boards for fragrance.

Reducing solutions and silver intensifying baths may also be run into those tanks for recovery of their silver content.

Plain hypo should be used only after a weak acid short stop made as follows:

Water	10 gallons
Acetic acid (No. 8)	32 ounces

The acid neutralizes the alkaline salts which the gelatine of the emulsion has absorbed from the developer and stops action of the developing agent almost instantly. If the film is transferred directly to a plain hypo bath the developer with which the emulsion is saturated will continue to act after the film has been immersed in the hypo, as it takes considerable time for the hypo to penetrate the deeper layers of the gelatine coating and prevent further developing action by combining with the unreduced haloids.

The use of an acid fixing bath has a number of advantages. The acid neutralizes the alkaline salts of the developer, the alum hardens the gelatine of the film and renders it more resistant to reticulation and frilling from high drying room temperatures and the sulphite present retards the precipitation of sulphur from the acid hypo bath.

Hobart to Write for Paramount

Noted Humorist, Playwright and Author Engaged to Prepare Original Screen Plays.

ADDED to the growing list of noted authors who are writing original photoplays for Paramount and Artcraft stars is George V. Hobart, one of the most successful of American playwrights, who has just been engaged by Jesse L. Lasky, vice-president of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, to prepare exclusive screen material for that organization.

Mr. Hobart will devote the greater portion of his time to this work, and he has already completed one original script. He is now engaged in writing a highly dramatic photoplay for Sessue Hayakawa, which, it is said, possesses an intensity and interest that marks it as a genuine novelty. Hobart has been giving much study to the peculiar quality of Hayakawa's work.

That Mr. Hobart will bring to the screen the same degree of originality and cleverness that has won for him a high place in the ranks of American authors and dramatists goes without saying. He takes a keen interest in motion pictures and looks forward with no little pleasure to seeing his first photoplay on the screen. It is probable he will contribute a number of vehicles within the next few months, as he is an unusually prolific writer.

The career of Mr. Hobart makes entertaining reading. His beginnings were humble and came by the newspaper route. Twenty-two years ago he was a telegraph operator in the offices of the New York Evening Sun. Prior to that he had worked as a railroad telegrapher. Attention was first attracted to his literary ability by a number of clever verses which he contributed to the columns of the Sun.

The now famous "Dinkelspiel" stories appeared first in the Baltimore News and were afterward translated to the vaudeville stage. He wrote numerous other sketches and in many of his earlier efforts May Irwin appeared on the "big time."

Among the plays to his credit may be named "Sally in our Alley." "The Candy Shop," "Moonlight Mary" and "Our Mrs. McChesney," in collaboration with Edna Ferber. This year's "Follies" owes its clever libretto to Hobart.

SUPPORTING CAST FOR LOCKWOOD PICTURE.

The supporting players who are to appear with Harold Lockwood in the picturization of the George Gibbs novel, "Paradise Garden," have been chosen by Fred J. Balshofer as follows: Virginia Rappae, as Marcia VanWyck; Catherine Henry, Miss Gore; Olive Bruce, Mrs. Wetherby; Harry de Roy, as Christopher; B. A. Sprotte as Henry Ballard; George Hupp, as Jerry Benham (Harold Lockwood) at the age of ten; Violet Eddy as Miss Redwood, Jerry's governess. Vera Sisson, who played the feminine lead in The Hidden Spring, also has a leading part in the new story, that of Una Habberton, a settlement worker. Lester Cuneo plays the heavy man of the story, Jack Ballard; and William Clifford is to be seen as Roger Canby, tutor to Jerry Benham, the hero of the play. The part of Marcia Van Wyck, which is to be played by Virginia Rappae, was the most difficult to fill, the producer having spent three weeks in a search for the exact type of "juvenile vampire" which is called for in the novel.

FINIS FOX JOINS BROTHER IN PICTURE FIELD.

Finis Fox, a promoter of large business interests, secretary and assistant general manager of the White Crown Fruit Jar Co., of Louisville, Ky., has given up active participation in these interests to master the details of the motion picture industry. He will first be associated with his brother, Edwin Carewe, one of Metro's directing staff, in the producing of multiple reel pictures at Metro's Super-Feature studio.

For some time Mr. Fox has evinced an interest in motion pictures. He is the author of "The Jury of Fate," recently produced by Metro with Mabel Taliaferro as star, and of several other photo-dramas not yet ready to be released.

GRIFFIN RETURNS TO THE NICHOLAS POWER COMPANY.

Herbert Griffin, who left the Nicholas Power Company last June to accept a position in Detroit, has again joined the staff of the Power Company selling batteries. Prior to leaving the Power Company, Mr. Griffin traveled throughout the country boosting the Cameragraph for five years, and his return as traveling representative will be welcome news to exhibitors and supply men throughout the industry.

At the Leading Picture Theaters

Double Bill at the Strand, Cohan at the Rialto—Other Feature Productions Week of August 26.

Strand Theater.

THE Strand Theater presents again a double feature bill. The second and final installment of the official British war pictures of "The Retreat of the Germans at the Battle of Arras," the first part of which attracted crowds that taxed the capacity of the spacious playhouse last week, will be shown. In the second installment the performances of the tanks, the sustained activities of the British artillery and soldiers advancing through the barrage of German fire, during which shells burst close to the camera, are seen. The film concludes with a thrilling photograph of a spinning descent in an aeroplane from a height of 13,000 feet.

The photodramatic feature is a Triangle picture entitled "The Ten of Diamonds" in which Dorothy Dalton enacts the stellar role. The cast includes Jack Livingston, J. B. Sherry and Dorcas Matthews. The story is by Albert Cowles. The Strand Topical Review contains some interesting news pictures taken in this country and abroad.

There is an excellent musical program. Among the soloists are Henri De Caux, the celebrated tenor, who will sing the Barcarolle from "The Masked Ball"; Helen Scholder, the 'cello virtuoso, will play Popper's "Tarentella"; Arthur De-Pew and Ralph H. Brigham will be heard in solos on the grand pipe organ. The concert orchestra, under the direction of Carl Edouarde, will render excerpts from "La Boheme" and also play appropriate incidental music to the subjects projected on the screen.

Rialto Theater.

George M. Cohan is seen for the first time on the Rialto screen this week in his successful mystery farce, "Seven Keys to Baldpate". This was one of Mr. Cohan's most notable stage successes and those who saw it will recall with delight its fun and thrills, and its rapid sequence of surprises. Anna Q. Nilsson plays opposite the star, and in the supporting cast are Purnell Pratt, Frank Losee, Eric Hudson and Carlton Macy.

Goldmark's brilliant "Sakuntala" overture will be played by the Rialto orchestra, with Hugo Reisenfeld conducting. In honor of the star of the feature picture, selections from his popular musical comedy "George Washington, Jr.", will be played as an added number. Paul Doret, French tenor, will sing "At Dawning", by Cadman, and Alberto Bachman, violinist, will render "Fantasia Apassionata" by Vieuxtemps. Profesor Firmen Swinnen will contribute a solo on the grand organ.

Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Drew will be seen in "The Patriot", a comedy concerned with the conservation of food and bearing the indorsement of Mr. Hoover, the food administrator. A beautiful combitone picture showing scenes in Central Colorado will supply the scenic portion of the programme, and the Rialto Animated Magazine will furnish the news of the day from all sources.

Eighty-first Street Theater.

At the Eighty-first Street Theater there will be shown on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday Jack Devereaux and Anna Lehr in a stirring play of love and action, "The Grafters", Hugh Fay, in a merry mix-up, "Her Donkey Love", is an added attraction. Thursday, Friday, Saturday and Sunday Bessie Love will be seen in "Wee Lady Betty", a sparkling, modern play of the Emerald Isle. Polly Moran, with Keystone funmakers, will be seen in a sidesplitting comedy, "His Uncle Dudley", produced by Mack Sennett. The vaudeville on the same bill will be of prominence and quality.

Other Special Productions Showing.

At the Globe Theater "The Spy", the sensational Fox story of German intrigue, succeeds "Jack and the Beanstalk".

At the Forty-fourth Street Theater "The Italian Battlefront", official war subject, is still drawing large houses.

At the Criterion "The Manxman" is still holding forth.

At the Broadway "Sirens of the Sea", a Jewel production, succeeds Pay Me".

DOROTHY DALTON IS READY FOR WORK.

Dorothy Dalton is ready to begin her first Paramount production under the direction of Thomas H. Ince. She has been spending a vacation of three weeks at Arrowhead Springs, Cal.

Miss Dalton is an enthusiastic and skilled golfer, and at Arrowhead Springs found an eighteen-hole course of which she made full use.

Walthall to Have His Own Company

Pictures Will Be Made at Paralta Studios in Hollywood and Released by Triangle Distributing Corporation.

HENRY B. WALTHALL has become a star-manager at the head of his own independent producing company. He will personally select the subjects for production. This situation was brought about on August 20, through negotiations conducted between N. William Aronson, Mr. Walthall's personal manager, and Carl Anderson, president of Paralta Plays, Inc.

Henry B. Walthall and Carl Anderson Signing Contract. N. W. Aronson Standing.

Mr. Walthall will head a corporation to be called the Henry B. Walthall Pictures Corporation, now being formed. The production of Mr. Walthall's pictures will be made at the Paralta studios in Hollywood, and will be released by the Triangle Distributing Company on the star series plan.

Mr. Walthall has left for Los Angeles. His first vehicle has been selected and will be put in production the moment he reaches Hollywood. Mary Charleson, who has been his leading woman in several productions in which he had recently appeared, will play leads in the new company.

Mr. Walthall is regarded by competent critics as one of the most finished actors on the screen. He is 36 years of age, and became a moving picture actor in 1910. He had played on the legitimate stage before that, making his debut in the Murray Hill Theater stock company under the management of the late Henry V. Donnelly.

Mr. Walthall worked for Biograph in the summer of 1910 and went to England with Henry Miller in September to play in "The Great Divide." It was not a hit and the company returned in November. He then went to Mr. Griffith, who engaged him permanently. From that day to this he has never played a part in spoken drama. He remained with Mr. Griffith during the time that director was producer for Biograph and went with him in 1913 to the Majestic. During the past two years Mr. Walthall was leading player for Essanay, appearing in this company's feature plays.

GAUMONT MEN WED.

Despite the fact that just at present the Gaumont Company is not producing photoplays, romance is not dead at the Flushing studio. It is very much alive, as witnesseth the announcements simultaneously of the engagements of two of the Gaumont cameramen, Walter Pritchard and Otto Piltz. What increases interest in these announcements is that the young men are to marry cousins.

Mr. Pritchard is to marry Miss Ethel May Blair, of Corona, L. I., and Mr. Piltz is to marry her cousin, Miss Celia Mae Spalding of Prattsville, N. Y. No date has been set for the weddings. Mr. Pritchard has just returned from a vacation with Miss Blair at the present home of her parents at Cleveland, O., and Mr. Piltz soon leaves for an outing in the Catskills, Miss Spaulding's home being in the heart of these mountains.

Both Pritchard and Piltz live in Bayonne, N. J., and make the trip daily to and from the Gaumont plant. They are now looking for twin houses so that the inseparable cousins will have only a back fence to separate them. The men are wedded, one might say, to Bayonne, but the brides-to-be are urging them to find homes in Flushing so that they will not have to leave so early in the morning and so that they will return earlier at night.

E. K. Lincoln Entertains Press

Former Vitagraph Player Gives Outing to Eighteen Representatives of Motion Picture Press at His Estate in Berkshires.

E. K. LINCOLN, former Vitagraph player, and whose latest screen experience was as the star of the "Jimmie Dale, Alias the Grey Seal" series, gave eighteen representatives of the motion picture press an outing on his 4,500-acre estate in the Berkshires over the week-end, beginning Saturday, August 18. The party left New York for Springfield, Mass., in a special car on Saturday morning. Nine reluctantly returned Monday afternoon, some on Tuesday, and a few are yet to be heard from.

E. K. Lincoln.

To say that Mr. Lincoln is a superlative host is putting it mildly. When the bunch arrived at Springfield they were met by Mr. Lincoln and three automobiles. An hour's trip over the mountain roads through gorgeous scenery brought the party to Mr. Lincoln's country house. From then on until it was time to go home the group of writers owned the place. Tennis was the most popular pastime with some, while others spent much of the time in the lake that nestles on the Lincoln estate—that is, the bunch did those things when they were not eating, which was most of the time.

Mr. Lincoln showed the boys his place by means of motor trips and hikes. Chief interest centered in his kennels. At the mountain house Mr. Lincoln has only about fifty valuable dogs. He also has another place on which he houses more than 500 ribbon-winning canines.

Those who were the guests of Mr. Lincoln were: Gerald Duffy, Picture Play Magazine; William Barry, Motion Picture News; Walter McRaig, Motion Picture Classic; Charles Condon, Motography; Ben. H. Grimm, Moving Picture World; Peter Milne, Motion Picture News; C. A. Kracht, Morning Telegraph; Rudolph Cormier, Exhibitors' Trade Review; William Beecroft, Exhibitors' Herald; Mr. Thompson, Dramatic Mirror; Edwin M. LaRoche, Motion Picture Magazine; N. Boneil, New York Clipper; Colgate Baker, New York Review; Jack Edwards, Billboard; Lumiere, the photograhpher, and T. E. Letendre, business manager for the trip.

JACK MEADOR WITH LONGACRE.

In line with their policy to inaugurate a nation-wide advertising and news-publicity campaign for their new Alice Howell Century comedies, the Longacre Distributing Company has made Jack Meador their general press representative. Mr. Meador, a publicity promoter, newspaper and magazine writer of wide experience, has an extensive acquaintance among newspaper men throughout the country, which will be a valuable aid to him in his new work.

He was formerly a reporter on the Record-Herald and Tribune of Chicago. Ten years ago he came to New York to join the staff of the New York Herald. He went to Europe in 1912 in the interests of The Authors' Inter-Ocean Magazine and Newspaper Syndicate. Later he was made the president of the syndicate, with headquarters in Paris. When the war broke out and the company suspended business on account of the conditions in the manuscript market, Mr. Meador returned to newspaper work, representing the London Times and New York Times as a special correspondent in France. Two years ago he returned to America to direct a publicity campaign for the Colt machine gun. His success in this work in getting articles in English, French, South American magazines of national reputation, as well as American periodicals, attracted considerable attention. Since our entrance in the war, he has been doing special Sunday newspaper stories and scenario writing.

The Motion Picture Exhibitor

WRITE US EARLY AND OFTEN

THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD carries the most complete record of Exhibitors' News. This department aims at being the fullest and fairest chronicle of all the important doings in the ranks of organized exhibitors. To keep the department as complete and as useful as it is now we request the secretaries of all organizations to favor us with reports of all the news. Coming events in the ranks of the organized exhibitors are best advertised in this department of the Moving Picture World.

American's State Directors to Meet

Will Convene at Ocean View, Following the Virginia Session Closing on September 1.

GENERAL MANAGER Charles C. Pettijohn, of the American Exhibitors' Association, has notified President Percy W. Wells, of the North Carolina organization, that a meeting of the state directors of the A. E. A. will be held at Ocean View, Va., on Saturday, September 1, in conjunction with the convention of exhibitors from Southern states, which comes to a close on that date at Ocean View.

Among the state presidents and leaders in the A. E. A. who are expected to attend the directors' meeting are: Harry M. Crandall, District of Columbia; Frank J. Rembusch, Indiana; Guy Wonders, Maryland; Sam Trigger, New York City; I. M. Mosher, New York State; Fred J. Herrington, Pennsylvania; George C. Warner, South Carolina; Percy W. Wells and H. B. Varner, North Carolina, and Harry Bernstein, Virginia.

Jake Wells, president of the Virginia League, who has planned the Ocean View convention, states that the convention is to be in no way confused with the meeting of the A. E. A. directors, which is an entirely separate affair. The purpose of the convention proper, as outlined by Mr. Wells, is to promulgate and perfect an organization of the adjacent states to be represented, for the purpose of handling matters of purely local significance. The meeting of the A. E. A. directors was an event planned afterward by Manager Pettijohn, who saw in this large gathering of exhibitors an opportunity for furthering the interests of the new association.

It was reported to Mr. Pettijohn that Lee A. Ochs would attend the Ocean View convention, and the general manager of the American Exhibitors' Association expressed great satisfaction, stating that "my organization desires nothing better than a face to face comparison of its personnel with that of the old League". It is quite likely the convention will assume lively proportions from the presence of leaders of both organizations, each endeavoring to enroll new members and strength for their respective bodies.

MICHIGAN A. E. A. CONVENTION.

The Michigan branch of the American Exhibitors' Association will hold a convention at Detroit, Mich., on Septemper 5 and 6. There will be many entertainment features provided for visiting delegates and all exhibitors are urged to attend and to bring their wives.

Henry B. Varner in New York

Southern Exhibitor Talks with Messrs. Williams and Pettijohn Over Washington Situation.

HENRY B. VARNER, motion picture exhibitor and editor of several Southern newspapers, was in New York August 21, 22 and 23. Mr. Varner is the man who labored for his brother exhibitors in Washington on the tax question.

On August 21 he sat in a conference with John D. Williams, general manager of the First National Exhibitors' Circuit, and Charles C. Pettijohn, general manager of the American Exhibitors' Association. It is known that the tax situation in Washington is not as yet "out of the fire", Mr. Varner refused to confer with anybody upon this subject excepting those who represented exhibitors only. No details of the conference were given out.

Mr. Varner has been appointed chairman of the legislative committee of the American Exhibitors' Association. The association is to be congratulated upon securing Mr. Varner in this capacity. Mr. Varner is personally acquainted with many of the officials at Washington, and is peculiarly fitted for these duties.

Mr. Varner left New York on the 23d for Washington, where he will represent exhibitors until the tax question is finally settled.

New Exhibitors' Body Planned

Herbert Lubin Chief Mover in Plan to Form Co-operative Exhibitors' Circuit.

HERBERT LUBIN, former holder of the Metro franchise in Canada, is the prime mover in a proposed organization of exhibitors and state rights men. Meetings are scheduled in the Hotel Astor for several days the current week. It has been learned that the proposed organization will have as have some of the characteristics of the First National Exhibitors' Circuit and some of the characteristics of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League and the newly-formed American Exhibitors' Association. The tentative title of the organization is Exhibitors' Co-operative Circuit.

No announcements are forthcoming from any of the men already lined up with the scheme. It is known that telegrams were sent to some of the most powerful exhibitors and state rights men in the country, and that many are coming to New York to be present at the meetings. It is understood that the promoters of the organization already have planned the purchase of the world rights to a big picture. Mr. Lubin, who was an important mover in the negotiations that resulted in Mme. Petrova's signing with Superpictures, Inc., declares that the organization will be well on its way toward completion in all details within a week.

Franchise holders in the proposed organization, it is understood, will share the profits of any picture purchased and exploited by the organization. Pictures will be rented to members at low rates, it is said, and the exhibitor may, in the event that a picture is very successful, get back almost his whole rental price. Every one concerned with the proposed organization says that when definite announcements do come they will carry news of vast importance to the industry.

Brooklyn Exhibitors Hold Meeting

National Executive Committee Attends in a Body—Twenty Local Managers Are Sued by Music Publishers.

AT a largely attended meeting of the Brooklyn local of the Exhibitors' League held at the Duffield theater on Saturday evening, August 25, it was decided to fight the tax imposed by the music publishers' society. What stirred the forty exhibitors present was the announcement that action has been taken by the society against twenty exhibitors in Brooklyn alone. The members of the National Executive Committee came over from Manhattan on the invitation of the local officers and on the assurance they would be afforded an opportunity to follow the proceedings of a "regular" branch. They thus were enabled to receive in person a vote of thanks unanimously extended to their committee for its action in voting to defend the suits instituted against the Brooklyn exhibitors. Some of the exhibitors offered to place on sale in their lobbies the sheet music of the independent music publishers.

For the first time there was publicly revealed word of the negotiations that have been in progress between the city administration and the organizations of the Bronx, Manhattan and Brooklyn looking to a centralization in the license department of authority over motion picture theaters. Under the new arrangement an exhibitor formally accused of a violation of the city ordinances will be haled before the license commissioner and his case will be heard and determined before that one tribunal. The League officials given credit for accomplishing this result were John J. Wittman of the Bronx, Lee A. Ochs and Louis Blumenthal, of Manhattan, and Louis Levine and William Brandt, of Brooklyn. Under the new plan all children's cases will now go before the license commissioner. By exhibitors this is considered to be one of the important angles of the agreement.

League Executive Committee Meets

Large Attendance at Gathering in New York, but Proceedings Are Not Revealed.

THE executive committee of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America held meetings in New York on August 25 and 26. Up to Monday afternoon no word of the two days' proceedings had been permitted to escape to the trade press. It was said there would be another session Tuesday, August 28.

In attendance at the sessions were Frank D. Eager, Nebraska; Alfred S. Black, Maine; Eugene M. Clarke, Mississippi; Daniel Chamberlain, North Dakota; Alfred Hamburger, Illinois; Peter J. Schaefer, Illinois; Robert Levy, Illinois; Hector M. E. Pasmezoglu, St. Louis; N. C. Rice, Iowa; C. E. Glamann, Kansas; Louis L. Levine, Brooklyn; Thomas Furniss, Minnesota; Louis L. Blumenthal, New Jersey; Thomas Howard, New York; J. H. O'Donnell, Pennsylvania; Sam Grant, Massachusetts, 1918 convention manager; Milton N. Goldsmith, general counsel, New York, and these officers: President Lee Ochs, First Vice-President Joseph Hopp, Illinois; Second Vive-President William Isenberg, Mississippi; Financial Secretary William Sweeney, Illinois; Executive Secretary William Brandt, New York; Treasurer Ernest Horstmann, Boston Organizer D. G. Rodgers, Minnesota.

SHEA DECLARES HIMSELF WITH A. E. A.

A telegram received at the headquarters of the American Exhibitors' Association from I. M. Mosher says:

"Mike Shea is with us and has promised to assist us in every possible way. You have authority to use his name for the good of the association."

Mr. Shea is the owner of the big Hippodrome in Buffalo.

N. A. M. P. I. Re-elects Brady

Meeting of the Board of Directors Picks Officials for Ensuing Year—Recognition Refused American Exhibitors' Association.

A MEETING of the board of directors of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry was held at the offices of the Association, Times Building, New York City, on Monday, August 27, nearly all the directors being present. The annual election of officers was held, with the following result:

President, William A. Brady; vice-presidents, Adolph Zukor, R. A. Rowland, J. A. Berst, William L. Sherrill, J. H. Hallberg, Thomas Furniss, Arthur James; secretary, F. A. Elliott; treasurer, J. E. Broulatour.

The matter of the application of the American Exhibitors' Association for recognition as an organization was rejected by a vote of 24 against and 5 in favor.

These firms were elected to membership: Bray Studios, Pathe Exchange, Inc., Norma Talmadge Films, Selig Polyscope, Inter-Ocean Film Corporation, Standard Engraving Company, Ivan Pictures Corporation, Harry Rapf, Mayfair Film Corporation, Ogden Pictures Corporation.

KENT BACK FROM TOUR.

Sidney R. Kent, General Sales Manager of General Film Company, has returned to New York City after spending six weeks among branch offices of the company. Los Angeles, San Francisco, Seattle, Denver and many other cities were visited by him.

One of the objects of Mr. Kent's trip was to install advanced merchandising methods in the exchanges. A large part of his time was also devoted to effecting special coordination of branch activities in distributing product in line with important new projects which are being directed from headquarters.

PAUL BRYAN TO HANDLE GAUMONT PUBLICITY.

Extended leave of absence having been granted Harry King Tootle, publicity manager of the Gaumont Company, Flushing, N. Y., his work will be taken over by Paul M. Bryan. Mr. Bryan is editor of "Reel Life," Gaumont's Mutual magazine in film which is issued weekly. Mr. Tootle's leave is for the duration of the war. He has left for Plattsburg Barracks, N. Y., where he is a member of the Sixth Company of the Eighteenth Provisional Regiment of the training camps for officers.

VIOLA DANA TO STAR IN "BLUE JEANS."

Metro Pictures Corporation has acquired the motion picture rights to "Blue Jeans," Joseph Arthur's famous old stage success, for the use of Viola Dana. Miss Dana will play the exacting part of June, originally played by Jennie Yeamans at the old Fourteenth Street theater. John H. Collins will direct the production which B. A. Rolfe will present, and the screen adaption has been made by June Mathis. John Arnold is cameraman.

FILM SALVAGE PLANT BURNS.

The plant of the Levine Company at Passaic, N. J., where old motion picture film was treated for the extraction of the silver in the emulsion, was burned on August 24. The loss was estimated at $50,000.

EASTERN FILM COMPANY PLANT BURNED.

The plant of the Eastern Film Company at Providence, R. I., was destroyed by fire on August 24. The loss was total and is estimated at $100,000.

Producers Plan Central Exchange

Propose to Have One Exchange Where All State Rights Films Will Be Bought and Sold—Organization Not Yet Completed.

MORE than twenty producers of state rights pictures or their representatives met in the Hotel Astor on Wednesday night, August 22, for the purpose of perfecting an organization whose chief aim will be the centralization under one roof of the sales power of all members. The plan is one of the most advanced and sensible that has yet been suggested in state rights marketing, and resembles in broad, general lines the plan of operation of the Real Estate Exchange of New York. Under the proposed plan every picture available for any territory can be viewed at the one place and, if desired, any deal or deals may be consummated on the floor of the exchange. In the one exchange there will be a print of every picture that is for sale for any territory, and a sample of every piece of advertising matter connected with the film. Thus a buyer coming to New York can go into the exchange and there see the entire stock of available pictures, doing away with the present necessity of his having to spend several days in getting around to the various offices.

The meeting Wednesday was held behind closed doors. Those who attended were sworn to secrecy, as they were at the producers' meeting of a week before. The organization has not been completed, but matters have advanced to the point where papers are in the hands of attorneys, and indications are that definite and certain details soon will be forthcoming. According to all of the men questioned it is but a matter of a few weeks, at the most, before the exchange becomes a material factor.

Under the proposition submitted before the producers a maanger of the exchange shall be appointed at a minimum salary of $7,500 a year. It shall be the duty of the manager, the proposal states, to compile and keep alive lists of state rights buyers, independent exchanges, exhibitors, etc. The manager also shall render any possible service to members and others and facilitate the sale of pictures to the end that the producer shall consummate any transaction. The manager, may, on occasion, act for the producer and complete any deal. The manufacturer may have as many sales representatives on the floor of the exchange as he desires.

The expenses of the exchange shall be met by a treasury fund raised through commissions to the exchange on pictures sold. Five per cent. of the net amount paid for a picture shall be turned into the treasury. The term "net amount," according to the proposal, shall mean the gross sum received from a buyer, less the cost of prints delivered.

Another proposal is that the organization regulate the medium of advertising, the members to agree not to patronize any publication devoted to motion pictures other than those specified by the organization. It is also a proposed object to patronize only those lithographers, printers, engravers, slide houses, etc., that are listed with the organization—concerns who make special prices to members because of the volume of business given the concern by the organization. Members of the organization, it is understood, will decide on a certain given laboratory or laboratories to do the work of all members.

Members may report any grievances against any director, actor, actress, exchange man, exhibitor, and the like. An executive committee of five members, it is proposed, will pass on all grievances. Members will refuse to do business with anyone found guilty of unfair practices toward the organization or any member of the organization. It is proposed in the plan considered Wednesday that every member contribute, in advance, his share of a fund large enough to pay the expenses of the exchange for three months, by which time, it is believed, the exchange will not only be paying its own expenses, but paying dividends to its members.

The proposals submitted have not yet been voted on. Wednesday's session was given up almost wholly to discussions of the various clauses in the prospectus, but no clause was adopted. It was generally agreed, however, that the organization must be formed with as little delay over details as possible.

Among the concerns represented at the meeting were: William L. Sherrill, Frohman Amusement Corporation; Duplex Films, Harry Rapf, A. H. Jacobs Photoplays, Inc., Arrow Film Corporation, Harry Rapf, Wharton, Inc., Mayfair Film Corporation, Crystal Film Corporation, Ogden Pictures Corporation. Edward Warren Productions. Paul Cromelin. Cosmophotofilm: Jesse Goldburg, Williamson Brothers, Advance Film Corporation (Ralph and John Ince), John W. Noble, Authors Film Corporation, and others.

Lesser Organization Formed

State Rights Distributors, Inc., Has Fifteen Members—Two Territories Being Contested For—Will Buy Negatives.

UNDER the title State Rights Distributors, Inc., the organization of state rights buyers promoted and sponsored by Sol L. Lesser, matured on Wednesday, August 22. Fifteen men, representing all of the territories in the United States with the exception of two, and the whole of Canada, are represented in the organization, whose aim it is to purchase negative rights on pictures. The Lesser organization follows closely in its working scheme that of the First National Exhibitors' Circuit. Each franchise holder will be taxed his pro-rata share on any films bought by the organization.

Mr. Lesser was elected president. Louis B. Mayer, of Boston, was made treasurer. Louis Haas, of New York, is vice-president, and Leon D. Netter, temporary manager and secretary.

The members of the organization as given out by Mr. Netter are: Nathan Hirsh, Civilization-Pioneer Film Co., Greater New York and New York State; Louis B. Mayer, American Feature Film Co., Boston, New England States; Daniel M. Vandawalker and Henry L. Dollman, Indianapolis and Chicago, Illinois and Indiana; Sydney B. Lust, Washington, D. C., Delaware, Maryland, Virginia and District of Columbia; Master Photoplays Co., Newark, New Jersey; W. S. Butterfield, Battle Creek, Michigan; S. A. Lynch Enterprises, Inc., entire South (11 states); A. D. Flintom, Yale Photoplay Co., Kansas City, Mo., Missouri, Kansas, Iowa and Nebraska; M. Rosenberg, De Luxe Feature Film Co., Seattle, Washington, Oregon, Idaho and Montana; All Star Feature Distributors, Inc., San Francisco, California, Nevada and Arizona; Monarch Feature Film Co., Toronto, Canada and Alaska; Harry Schwalbe, Peerless Feature Film Co., Philadelphia, Eastern Pennsylvania, and Harry Grelle, Supreme Photoplay Productions, Pittsburgh, Western Pennsylvania and West Virginia.

The directors of the organization are Mr. Lesser, Louis Haas, Henry L. Dollman, S. A. Lynch, J. J. Allen, C. D. Struble and Louis B. Mayer.

The purchasing committee consists of seven members. Five out of the following seven members will pass on pictures: Nathan Hirsh, Mr. Mayer, Daniel M. Vandawalker, Mr. Lynch, Mr. Netter, Mr. Lust and Mr. Allen.

"All features purchased will be distributed throughout the United States and Canada through forty offices now in active operation", reads the statement issued by Mr. Netter. "The entire United States and Canada are covered except the Minnesota and Colorado territories, both of which are being actively contested for.

"The need of an organization of this kind has already been made evident by the fact that already we have under consideration negatives of five big productions. Business transacted through this organization will be done on a strictly cash basis.

Mr. Lesser still is confined to his bed in Dr. Stern's sanitarium. He is suffering from typhoid fever and is expected to be fully recovered in about ten days.

LEE ORGANIZATION PROGRESSING.

Rapid progress in his plan to form an organization of state rights buyers is reported by Joseph F. Lee. During the week Mr. Lee received wires from all over the country indorsing his plan. In many cases the senders of the telegrams indicated that they would be in New York within a week. Mr. Lee says that the proposition now looks as if the first definite steps would be taken within a few days, at which time there will be several big out-of-town buyers in New York, several of whom are coming solely for the purpose of meeting with other believers in Mr. Lee's plan.

"Shame" Noble's First Special

Zena Keefe and Niles Welsh Featured in Timely Subject—Showing Soon.

JOHN W. NOBLE'S first production for the state rights market, titled "Shame", has been cut and edited and will be introduced by a regular trade showing at an early date. Zene Keefe, who is featured, with Niles Welch as her leading man, plays the part of a girl who is the innocent victim of circumstances brought about by war conditions. The story opens with a prologue which takes place during the drafting of the countries' young manhood, and has a most striking and unusual climax which plunges the audience into the middle of an exceptionally original drama.

John W. Noble.

The title is a particularly fitting one, as it applies to the drama in a double sense and suggests the bigness and the importance of the subject which deals with the attitude of the world in general and society in particular, toward the innocent victims of war conditions and the children who share the fate of their unfortunate mothers. "Shame" is said to be a powerful plea for tolerance on the part of the world for the victims of war who, although far removed from the battle front, deserve the same consideration as the wounded heroes of the trenches. By means of an intensely dramatic story Mr. Noble, whose services as an officer in the United States Army has given him a deep understanding of his subject, brings home to his audience the criminal folly of those uncharitable members of society who fail to appreciate the effects of the strain of war upon those in close touch with it, and who do not realize the extent of the hero worship inspired by the soldiers in the hearts of those for whom they fight.

Jules Burnstein is acting as business representative for Mr. Noble in the marketing of the picture.

BERNSTEIN IN NEW YORK TO SELL TWO FILMS.

Isadore Bernstein, of the Bernstein Film Productions, has arrived in New York for the purpose of disposing of the two big features, "Humility" and "Loyalty", which he recently completed. His agents, Shepard & Van Loan, are negotiating with several people for the sale of these features. While both are up to the Bernstein standard of photography and direction, "Loyalty" seems to be the favorite at the present moment, for it deals with the drug evil and has one of the finest characterizations of a "dope" fiend ever seen on the screen. It should be a big box-office attraction for this reason, aside from the fact that it is supported by an excellent cast, has beautiful photography and good direction.

The cast includes Betty Brice, Murdock McQuarrie, Jean Hathaway, and Jay Morley, who gives the excellent impersonation of "Hugh Gordon", a man who is addicted to the drug habit.

ECKERT MANAGING CLEVELAND EXCHANGE.

T. M. Eckert, for the past six months a member of Pathe's Fittsburgh branch, has been made manager of the new Cleveland office of the Harris P. Wolfberg Attractions. Mr. Wolfberg is exercising great care in choosing the men for his organization. This is essential because, as Mr. Wolfberg explains, "each of my men must be a specialist, not only in selling big productions to the exhibitor, but in helping the exhibitor sell to the public. We are classed as state rights buyers, but I am proud to say that we call ourselves state rights distributors and are striving to live up to that name".

"A MORMON MAID" SOLD FOR TWO STATES.

Jones, Linick & Schaefer, and Ascher Bros., of Chicago, have purchased through Hiller & Wilk the Illinois and Indiana rights to the Friedman film, "A Mormon Maid". The feature will be given a long run at a leading downtown theater, and an endeavor will be made to have Mae Murray, the star, present at the picture's Chicago premiere. It is announced that an extensive advertising campaign will herald the feature in Illinois and Indiana.

Earlier Co-operation Wolfberg's Idea

Pittsburgh Operator Believes Producer and Prospective Buyers Should Plan Advertising Together.

HARRIS P. WOLFBERG, the state rights operator of Pittsburgh, has a few ideas that probably account for his rapid rise in the film industry. One, in particular, is his belief that the proper time for co-operation between the producer and the independent buyer to begin is before the producer plans his advertising campaign or disposes of a single state. Some film men may regard this as a revolutionary statement, but Mr. Wolfberg cites many instances where a much greater success could have been made possible if this policy had been pursued.

"It is the state rights buyer", says Mr. Wolfberg, "who is in constant touch with the exhibitor. He sees at first hand how every picture goes over, in the town of one thousand as well as in the largest cities. If there is a failure he knows when the picture is at fault and when it is the advertising that is to be blamed.

"Take the matter of advertising: Every producer tells the state rights man that 'a complete advertising camgaign already has been prepared'. Whether this includes anything else or not, it always includes the posters. And when the paper arrives the distributor is greeted by several styles of posters depicting gruesome sick-room or death-bed scenes—paper that the wise exhibitor often refuses to buy. Doubtless these scenes are taken from highly dramatic parts of the film and are full of interest when one views the entire picture. But they are placed on the posters because the manufacturer is in love with his work—not by reason of any inherent advertising value they may possess.

"The whole point is this", continued Mr. Wolfberg; "too often a man will estimate the public taste by his own likes and dislikes. Each of us, in a way, is a sort of a Funkhouser, of Chicago, in this respect. There is no reason why we should allow this human weakness to injure us longer. The state rights field has grown rapidly. There are now prominent and responsible men in nearly every territory. The manufacturer or producer who looks ahead knows which of these buyers he wants to handle his pictures. If he is a producer of massive, high priced productions, he wants a distributor who is specializing in handling high priced attractions—one who has an established clientele for big stuff. While your picture and advertising are still in the making, why not call in the men who are the logical ones to handle it, and get their ideas on how best to take off the rough edges, what to use as the slogan and what scenes to use on the posters?

"Since the strength of the independent field lies in each distributor's prerogative of buying or rejecting any picture presented for his approval, wouldn't there be fewer pictures rejected if the distributor were given a voice in these matters before it was too late to make any changes? The distributor then will have none but himself to blame in case of failure and, on the contrary, will take a personal pride in making a huge success of any picture which is being exploited according to his own ideas and methods.

"We are on the right track now. We are gradually getting together, but let's do it earlier in the game. It's too late when the stage is set and the curtain is up".

HARRY BERG ON TRANS-CONTINENTAL TOUR.

Harry Berg, of the Overland Film Company, left New York Saturday on a transcontinental trip to visit the leading state rights buyers of the country. Mr. Berg, who is a comparatively newcomer in the state rights field, has already established himself as one of the live wires of the industry. Before entering the motion picture business he had a long and comprehensive training in the theatrical game, having been connected with many of the leading producers and for more than a decade held a responsible position with a leading vaudeville manager.

Mr. Berg brings to the picture business a thorough knowledge and understanding of the requirements of the exhibitor, and in his presentation of the feature photoplays on a territorial basis considers only their value from the box office point of view.

On the trip he will carry two prints of "Man's Law", a multiple-reel feature starring Irving Cummings, soon to be released on the state rights plan, which will be shown to the big buyers in the principal cities he visits. He plans to stop at Chicago, Minneapolis, St. Louis, Denver, San Francisco, and will spend considerable time in Los Angeles. While in Los Angeles he will complete negotiations already under way for the signing of long term contracts with several stars who will appear in productions to be made by the Overland for the state rights market.

"13TH LABOR OF HERCULES" SOLD FOR CANADA.

The Cinema Distributing Corporation, 220 West Forty-second street, New York, of which Henry J. Brock is president, announces that the series of the Panama-Pacific Exposition known as "The 13th Labor of Hercules," has been sold for the Domonion of Canada to Charles Stevens, general manager for Superfeatures, Ltd., 59 Victoria street, Toronto, Ont.

Washington Exchange Widens Field

Exhibitors' Film Exchange Expands Field to Include Entire South—Territory Has Been Neglected, Is Belief.

FOR the purpose of better handling a territory that it believes has been more or less neglected, the Exhibitors' Film Exchange, of Washington, D. C., has expanded its field of operation to include the entire South. Formerly the exchange operated only in the territory comprised by Delaware, Maryland, District of Columbia and Virginia. Under the new arrangement the field covered will include, besides the states mentioned, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Alabama, Mississippi, Florida and Tennessee.

The decision to expand was reached after a conference taken part in by Harry M. Crandall, F. Ferrandini, H. Bernstein and A. Dresner, directors of the Exhibitors' Film Exchange. They believe that the South has been overlooked in the past, and further believe that with proper working it can be made one of the most lucrative territories in the country. They state that under the new arrangement they will be able to quote to a producer a blanket price for the entire block of Southern states, including also the Washington territory, or can quote prices for what is now known as the Southern territory and what is now known as the Washington territory.

Offices will be opened in the principal cities and exchange centers of the South. An effort already is on foot to line up the exhibitors under a co-operative plan, and missionary work in the South already is well under way.

SPITZER ANSWERS "WHAT'S WRONG WITH MARKET?"

"What is wrong with the States rights market?" Nat M. Spitzer, sales manager for the King-Bee Corporation, was asked. "In the first place", Mr. Spitzer said, "it lacks a proper foundation. Up to the present time business has been done by the average state rights distributor on a very loose basis. The general procedure seems to be to make a picture, and spend a little or a great deal of money upon it. This depends on whether it is the desire of the company to 'gyp' their stockholders, or, if it is their own money that they are spending, to cut expenses to the last detail.

"The next step is to splurge out in a lot of inconsistent advertising, and to spend more or less money unnecessarily, as the case may be. And the final move is to place an exorbitant price upon the rights for the various territories, and if the picture isn't 'there,' it gets cold, waiting for buyers. It's a bloomer. The company goes 'bust.' However, another springs up in its place, for they're just like mushrooms; they come up over night.

"These are the methods that are doing the harm to the industry. We must seek a firmer business basis. We must reach a higher standard. There are too many wildcat schemes, and too few built upon really sound business principles. It is just a phase of the tremendous criminal waste of our industry.

"That's what is the matter with the present state rights market—unsound principles, and a waste of materials.

"My policy is to try to overcome this tendency, and we certainly have done so as far as the King-Bee is concerned. In the first place, we don't produce pictures that are not up to a certain standard, for Mr. Bernstein and Mr. Gildstrom personally pass on every script before it is finally accepted. We run our whole organization on a principle of efficiency, and every dollar paid out in expense brings in a certain amount of profit on the other side of the ledger. Therein lies the secret of our success."

BIG EXPLOITATION FOR "GREAT WHITE TRAIL."

Extensive plans are in the making for the exploitation of "The Great White Trail", the new Wharton super-feature, in Canada. John C. Green, controlling the rights for the Dominion and for Alaska, has left Ithaca for his offices in Galt, taking with him three prints of the picture and more than a ton of advertising material, which he intends to distribute through Canada on the Golden Rule principle.

"And that ton of advertising stuff is only to be the beginning", says Mr. Green. "I'll just be getting a good start by the time that is used up, and calling for three or four times as much".

Mr. Green intends to open the picture in one of the big houses of Canada for a run. It then will be distributed through Regal Films, Limited, of Toronto.

"MAN'S LAW" SOLD FOR SEVERAL STATES.

The Overland Film Co., 729 Seventh avenue, New York, sponsors for the latest Irving Cummings picture, entitled "Man's Law", announce that the rights to New York and Northern New Jersey have been sold to the Mammoth Film Corporation. Harry G. Segal, general manager of the Globe Feature Film Co., of Boston, has purchased the picture for the New England States. Mr. Mattson, representing John Olsen & Co., has purchased the rights for Norway, Sweden and Denmark. U. Ono contracted for the rights for Japan for his organization in Tokio.

MOTOY STUDIO FOR NEW YORK.

H. C. Allen, the President of the Peter Pan Film Corporation, has returned to New York from Chicago, where he completed the arrangements for the moving of the Motoy studio from that city to New York. While there he met R. M. Vandivert, the vice president of the organization, who had been on the ground for several days. Mr. Vandivert has been making an extensive trip for the study of exchange conditions throughout the country, and has reported so great an increase in business as to justify the change. Mr. Allen had already made partial arrangements and has only awaited the assurance of Mr. Vandivert on the question.

"I have felt the necessity for some time", Mr. Allen said, "of having our main studio here in the city, where I can keep in closest touch with the production. While we were getting started and doing business on a comparatively small scale, this was not so necessary, but with the tremendous growth of our bookings and our increase of production, it seems best to centralize as far as is possible.

"At present we are releasing through the Educational Film Corporation of America, which controls the territory of Greater New York, New York and Northern New Jersey; the Standard Film Service Company for Southern Ohio and Kentucky; the Standard Film Service Company for Cleveland and Northern Ohio; the Lea Bel Company for Illinois, Indiana and Southern Wisconsin; M. R. Dick for Minnesota, North and South Dakota, and Northern Wisconsin; Standard Film Service for Michigan; Metropolitan Film Company for New England; Metro Film Service Company for Virginia, Maryland, District of Columbia, North Carolina and Delaware; Mayer & Rosenthal for California, Arizona and Nevada; William T. Binford for Wyoming, Utah, Colorado, and New Mexico. We have the country pretty well covered and are now completing arrangements for taking up South America, beginning probably at Buenos Aires. Mr. Woolwidge left this week for London to attend to the details of our new English office, and will remain over there some time studying the conditions of the foreign market.

"Our present plans are to release 1,000 feet each week, composed of two 500-foot novelties, the novelties to be released on alternate weeks. After September 1 a one-reel subject will be released in addition to this program, and after December 1 this plan will be augmented by a further release of one reel a week.

"The Peter Pan Company is sending a wedding party on a trip around the world to make a series of travel pictures, and will begin to release these at an early date. The party is already at work in Honolulu. These will be released in addition to our other program."

TERRY COMPLETES FOURTH HUMAN INTEREST REEL.

Terry has just completed his fourth of the Terry Human Interest Reel series. The name of the fourth episode of this series of animated human interest sketches is called "Character as Revealed By The Ear", and continues as part of the studies of that eminent delineator of character, Jessie Allen Fowler. The first of the Terry Human Interest Reel series is called "Character As Revealed By The Nose", and was released a short time ago. The second of the series is entitled "Character As Revealed By The Eyes". The third of the series deals with the mouth and lips and is known as "Character As Revealed By The Mouth".

WELCH MADE BUD FISHER MANAGER.

Bud Fisher has selected J. Edward Welch as general office manager of the Bud Fisher Films Corporation. Bud goes to war this month, and as H. A. Brock, the former manager, has been called to the Quartermasters' Department of the Army, it was necessary to find a man of ability to look after the affairs of the organization.

When Mr. Welch came to New York from Baltimore, where he had been an exhibitor, he met Mr. Fisher, who immediately saw his possibilities, and offered him a place in his company. Since that time, under Bud's careful training, he has become an excellent exchange man, and has a remarkable knowledge of the conditions of the American market.

HILLER & WILK HANDLING "ALMA".

Conspicuous among several big feature pictures that Hiller & Wilk, film brokers, have arranged to handle for the early autumn is "Alma, Where Do You Live", the six-reel version of the famous play of the same title.

Supporting Ruth MacTammany in the screen interpretation are George Larkin, Jack Newton, John Webb Dillon, Frank McNish, Mattie Keene, Marian Kenmaire, Walter Mack, George Gaston, Joseph Phillips and other well-known screen favorites.

PIEDMONT BUYS "WHIP" FOR FOREIGN CLIENT.

The Piedmont Film Corporation has purchased for a foreign client through Hiller & Wilk "The Whip". The sale covered the rights for India, Ceylon and Burma.

"The Whip" Offered World-Wide

Paragon Films, Inc., Announce Big Melodrama Ready for Sale in Open Territories.

PARAGON FILMS, INC., announce that "The Whip" is now being sold not only for states but for world rights, and thereby hangs a story. "The Whip," made from the famous melodrama into a spectacular picture of eight reels, was first released early last spring. It ran for a considerable time at the Park theater in New York, attracting a great deal of attention and afterward it ran in San Francisco and one or two other big centers with equal success. It was all ready for state rights release, but just about that time the United States entered the great war, and conditions were so uncertain that Paragon Films, Inc., practically withdrew "The Whip" from the market. It has been held until the present time and now it is being released for the world market with a new big hoorah and with every indication of tremendous success.

"The Whip" is now released by Paragon Films, Inc., of 912 Longacre Building, New York, for the states that were not sold at the beginning and for various parts of the world. It has great possibilities for both markets because of the fame it attained during its sensation runs in the two world capitals, London and New York.

These territories still are open: Pennsylvania, Illinois, Ohio, Missouri, Kansas, Nebraska, Iowa, Colorado, Utah, North Dakota, South Dakota, Nevada, Wyoming, Wisconsin, Minnesota, New Mexico, West Virginia, Maryland, District of Columbia, Delaware, Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Florida, Georgia, Tennessee, Alabama, Louisiana, Mississippi, Texas, Arkansas and Oklahoma. Also the rights to these continents: Europe, except Great Britain and Scandinavia; all of South America, with Mexico and Cuba; all of Asia, except Japan, and all of Africa, except British South Africa.

The following sales have been made, and in each case the buyer has reported great success within his territory: New York State, bought by Marcus Loew; New Jersey, bought by the Civilization Film Corporation of New Jersey; Oregon, Washington, Idaho and Montana have been bought by the De Luxe Feature Film Co., of Seattle; California and Arizona have been bought by All-Star Feature Distributors, Inc., of San Francisco; Kentucky and Indiana by Robert Lieber; New England by American Feature Film Co.; Canada by Superfeatures, Ltd., of Toronto; Great Britain and Ireland by Theater Royal, Drury Lane, Ltd., of London; Australia, New Zealand, the balance of Australasia, Hawaiian Islands and South Africa by Samuel Krellberg, and Scandinavia by the Interocean Film Co. In some cases the men and corporations who bought these rights have elected to book "The Whip" as a regular theatrical attraction at the very best theaters in their territory. Robert Lieber has done this in Kentucky and Indiana with the best kind of results. The American Feature Film Co. booked "The Whip" over the Poli circuit of theaters through New England, and it drew such large crowds everywhere that now they are booking it back over the same circuit. In cities where there are no Poli theaters they release it regularly. Under both arrangements "The Whip" has proved to be a great money-maker.

SMALLWOOD STATE-RIGHTING COMEDIES.

Arthur N. Smallwood, of the Smallwood Film Company, announces that the Aubrey Series of two-reel super-comedies featuring James Aubrey, will be released on the state rights plan.

Beginning in October a two-reel subject will be released monthly, for ten months. They will be sold as a series to state rights buyers, with the provision that they be sold to the exhibitor in the same way.

"Arrangements are in the course of completion whereby the Aubrey Series will be advertised in a big way through one hundred newspapers in the largest cities", said Mr. Smallwood. "The publicity attached to the series will measure up favorably with that given the best exploited serials. We have secured Aubrey's services on a three-year contract. We will give the state rights buyer and the exhibitor every chance in the world to cash in big on James Aubrey. Of course, we expect to cash in ourselves, but we are willing to wait until the second year for our profits. We will invest our money in newspaper space, believing that in this way we can best serve our customers and, at the same time, insure our own profits".

MILTON J. SCHWARTZ JOINS SHORT FEATURES.

Milton J. Schwartz has joined the selling staff of the Short Features Exchange. Mr. Schwartz comes to Short Features after several years of experience as an exhibitor, in which branch of the motion picture business he made good. His experience as an exhibitor naturally gives him a big advantage over the average film salesman, inasmuch as he knows the exhibitor's wants. Although a young man, he has matured himself with a general knowledge of the industry. He honestly believes in the short picture, and emphatically declares that it is just as important on the exhibitor's program as the feature itself. He allied himself with the Short Features Exchange because, as an exhibitor, he had discovered their drawing power. Now his business is to convince other exhibitors of their drawing power, and no doubt he will make good in this field of the game as he did as an exhibitor.

Beynon Engaged for "Lust of Ages" Score

Ogden Corporation Also Announces Advertising Matter Ready on Lillian Walker Subject.

THE Ogden Pictures Corporation has engaged George W. Beynon to prepare a complete and original musical score for the production "The Lust of the Ages", in which Lillian Walker is starred. Mr. Beynon, after viewing the picture, stated that of the hundreds of musical scores prepared by him he does not recall a single photoplay production which lends or adapts itself to so much originality as "The Lust of the Ages". The score is for an orchestra ranging from four to forty pieces.

The distribution of the musical score is one of the many novel advertising appurtenances issued in connection with "The Lust of the Ages". A film card containing a reproduction of a chest of gold, around which are cubes or frames of positive film, being scenes from the production, which are beautifully tinted and toned, is an added novelty. These film cards, when hung in the lobby where daylight is profuse, or in front of an electric bulb, will give an unusual effect to those viewing it and is also employed by film salesmen handling the production in order to present to theatergoers in concrete form an idea of the beauty of the photography, tinting and toning and the massiveness of interior settings and the scenery employed in the production.

A heavy circular cardboard, ten inches in diameter, containing on one side a reproduction of a twenty dollar gold piece and on the other side a picture of Lillian Walker, is an unusual window card issued in connection with the production. These replicas of the twenty dollar gold piece can be devoted to various uses as, for instance, tacking them on to the four corners of the lithographs and billboards, hanging them in lobbies, putting them in windows of stores and nailing them to telegraph poles and other places. A further novelty consists of an advance trailer which, contrary to usual trailers, does not contain altogether scenes from the release, but various poses of Miss Walker in various characters showing the wide range of her versatility in make-up.

KLOTZ & STREIMER PLANNING FALL CAMPAIGN.

Klotz & Streimer, who are selling "Whither Thou Goest" on state rights, are arranging to release one subject a month on a state rights basis. Mr. Klotz, president, is negotiating with two well known directors to produce for his concern. Klotz states that he was encouraged to market state rights from the demand he has for "Whither Thou Goest", which is proof that there is a market for clean, wholesome productions, if produced by a capable director and a cast to fit the story. Mr. Streimer is about to close for stories of well-known plays which were produced successfully on the speaking stage and which are adapted for the screen. Streimer has engaged one of the best script writers to work in conjunction with the director on the scenario. The second picture will be ready to be shown about September 15.

"SIRENS OF THE SEA" AT BROADWAY.

"Sirens of the Sea," a super-feature of Jewel Productions, Inc., began an engagement at the Broadway theater, New York, on August 26, with Louise Lovely and Jack Mulhall in the leading roles. The scenario follows the story of Grace Helen Bailey, and Allen Holubar is the director.

The feature, in five reels, is said to be most elaborate, many of the scenes being laid off a strange island in the Pacific. The story has to do with the discovery of a small child in a fishing net, by Wellington Stanhope and his wife, who dwell in a villa built by the ancient Greek sculptor, Ceres. The dramatic incidents develop when, grown to womanhood, the wife is wooed by a millionaire cruising in search of adventure and by his friend.

Manufacturers' Advance Notes

Mutual Initiates Two a Week

Begins a Run of Sixteen Subjects with Edna Goodrich's "Reputation" and Mary Minter's "Charity Castle."

MUTUAL opens its schedule of two star productions a week September 3, when it will release "Reputation," the first of a series of feature productions starring Edna Goodrich, stage beauty, and "Charity Castle," the first of a new series of Mutual-American pictures, starring Mary Miles Minter.

The studios producing features for Mutual release have spent a strenuous summer in preparation for the elaborate plans of John R. Freuler, president of the Mutual Film Corporation, to put into the market two five reel features a week. Mr. Freuler and the executives of the various producing companies have been in close touch all through the hot season, selecting stories, supervising direction and overseeing the most minute detail of production that there would be no hitch in the "two a week" plan and that the standard of the releases would conform to the high standard which the chief of Mutual had laid down.

That the preparations have been made carefully is evidenced by the fact that before the middle of August Mutual was in a position to announce a release schedule of two five-reel features a week for eight weeks. Every one of the sixteen productions is either completed or in the last stages of completion.

"Reputation" is from the story by John Clymer. Miss Goodrich carries the role of a small town girl who goes to the city to "make good" and returns, unblemished, but with a reputation. The play is admirably suited to Miss Goodrich's talents. It provides her plenty of opportunity for display of the vivacity, the deep emotion and her beauty.

"Charity Castle" is a five-act dramatic fantasy in which Mary Miles Minter plays the role of fairy princess. It is another modern fairy story, different to a marked degree from the others in which Miss Minter has starred and which have been such tremendous successes. In "Charity Castle" she is a child of the slums, who takes her little brother and her smile to the home of a confirmed crab. The old grouch turns his gloomy domicile into "Charity Castle" with Miss Minter as the princess royal.

Mutual's schedule for the week of September 3 carries one comedy, a one-reel Cub starring George Ovey. "Jerry Tries Again" shows Jerry's further efforts to secure a bride via the want ad route. Reel Life No. 71, Mutual's film magazine, released September 6, shows a watering system for a small farm, shows how the United States Government handles its mail, takes visitors on a visit to a skunk farm conducted by a fifteen-year-old girl, and shows how the five senses are more acutely developed by various businesses and by various pleasures. The reel carries an animated drawing from Life, entitled, "Fresh Advances in the Champagne District."

"Mutual Weekly," the weekly news reel, will carry, in addition to pictures of the history events which are taking place in America, glimpses of the American soldiers in their camp in France.

HEARST-PATHE NEWS TO DEPICT LIFE IN CANTONMENTS.

Relatives and friends of soldiers boys who have enlisted, or been drafted, into the great national army, will have an opportunity to see them at work in the training camps in vivid motion pictures.

Kendall Banning, director of the Division of Pictures of the Committee of Public Information, has granted permission to the Hearst-Pathe News cameramen to visit all of the cantonments throughout the United States, where the soldiers are training. Several comeramen will be assigned at various times to each of the training camps where they will spend several days picturing the defenders of the nation in the preliminary work that they must undergo prior to their departure for the battlefields of Europe. The work of these cameramen will form one of the most important connecting links of American history. Men who are rookies today, and who may later occupy high positions in the world events, will be shown undergoing the grinding detail of camp life. Such pictures of the Civil War, had they been taken, would be of inestimable value today.

As rapidly as the pictures are taken they will be forwarded to Washington to be passed by the official censors, after which they will be shown each week in the releases of the Hearst-Pathe News.

"THE RAILROADER" (Selig).

"The Railroader" is a Selig version of Albert Payson Terhune's world-famous novel, "Caleb Conover," which has been read and enjoyed by hundreds of thousands of readers in all parts of the country. George Fawcett, the famous star, enacts the title role and is supported by a clever cast of players, among whom can be named Bessie Eyton, Frank Clark, William Robert Daly, Thomas Santschi and others.

The story of "The Railroader" is a tense drama of human interest. Caleb Conover is a railroad section boss who, with indomitable will, follows the iron rule of "what I want I take." He rises by his own efforts. He takes his mate by main force, he seizes an opportunity to make a million dollars on a real estate investment and later becomes political boss of an entire state and his wealth is reputed to amount to sixty millions of dollars.

But too late Caleb Conover realizes that wealth and power are not everything; that the trampling down of the rights of the people; the violations of friendship; and the usurpation of the rights of others cannot in the end but react upon the perpetrator. The end comes dramatically but logically. Deserted by his quondam friends, his son a saphead and his daughter disgraced, a prison term staring him in the face, Caleb Conover realizes that there is a divinity that shapes our ends.

Attention is called by the Selig Company to the wonderful sets presented in this drama and an all-star cast, including Thomas Santschi, Bessie Eyton, Fritzi Brunette and others, cleverly support Mr. Fawcett in a gripping drama of human interest.

William N. Selig expects to announce plans for the exploitation of "The Railroader" in the near future.

REAL AMERICAN SPIRIT IN RAY'S PICTURE.

The sort of stuff that makes Americans respected in every clime and which is asserting itself today in the preparations for the great conflict is featured in Charles Ray's first Paramount picture, which is being produced under the supervision of Thomas H. Ince. The title of the picture is "The Son of His Father," and it depicts the efforts and final success of a rich man's son, Gordon Carbhoy, when he is given five thousand dollars and told to "go to it," by his dad, who has become disgusted with the lad's spendthrift traits.

The story of "The Son of His Father" is by Ridgewell Cullum and it is directed by Victor Schertzinger. Vola Vale, who has played with Sessue Hayakawa in "Each to His Kind" and with George Beban in "The Bond Between," supports Ray in his first production.

SIMPLEX FOR AUSTRALIA.

From far away Australia L. H. Cornell, operator Grand Theater, Perth, West Australia, writes that his Simplex Projectors are giving satisfaction in every respect and of course, the Precision Machine Co. will be pleased to learn they have added another member to the Simplex Boosters' Club.

Rodeo Champions in New Fairbanks Picture

Many Leaders of Western Sport to Be Seen in "The Man From Painted Post," a Cattle Rustling Story.

IN "The Man From Painted Post", Douglas Fairbanks' newest Artcraft picture, there will be seen a great collection of Western champions. Following the recent Rodeo in Cheyenne, Mr. Fairbanks immediately engaged the winners of the first prizes for his next release, including Sam Brownall, champion bucking broncho rider of the world; Tommy Grimes, the fearless steer roper; Johnny Judd, fancy rope artist; Jay Miller, Tom Yarberry, Bill Baker, Charley Self and Bill Brown. In addition to this group of experts he engaged H. A. Strickland, champion bareback bucking broncho rider; Jack Padgan, Bill Crawford, Ed Burns, Charles Stevens, Fred Burns, who held the trick roping championship for five years until 1912; Edgar Metchan and Charles McPherson. Every cowboy in the new Fairbanks production has distinguished himself in one of the various accomplishments of the plainsman, and is well known among the followers of Western sports.

This entire party, together with the cast and the technical staff recently journeyed from Los Angeles to Laramie, Wyoming, and then to James House's Riverside Ranch, which has been leased by the Fairbanks organization for the film. The ranch is conceded to present the most beautiful scenic displays of Wyoming and includes 160,000 acres of land and 25,000 head of cattle.

The story is a comedy drama of the cattle rustling days handled in a novel manner. The vehicle discloses the energetic Douglas in a role unlike anything in which he has ever appeared on the screen and gives him an opportunity to present various dramatic situations in addition to many original incidents of typical Fairbanks creation.

Among the supportng players is Frank Campeau, the well known Western character actor. Joseph Henaberry is directing the picture, assisted by Millard Webb.

THREE ADE COMEDIES RELEASED.

The first three George Ade "Fables in Slang" have been listed for release by General Film as follows: September 1, "The Twelve Cylinder Speed of the Leisure Class"; September 8, "The Wandering Boy and the Wayward Parents"; September 15, "What Transpires After the Wind-Up." There are to be fully twelve George Ade "Fables in Slang" picturized for this series at the rate of one each week.

"THE ADVENTURER" SHOWS CHAPLIN A CONVICT.

Charlie Chaplin will next be seen as a bestriped convict in "The Adventurer." The last few scenes of his forthcoming picture are being "shot" at Los Angeles. Many scenes from "The Adventurer" were taken along the Sierra Madre coast range, where Chaplin, in the role of an escaped convict, flees over the rocky coast pursued by armed guards, of whom big Eric Campbell is the chief.

The forthcoming Mutual-Chaplin special is declared to be quite the funniest thing the international comedian has yet done. The idea around which it is built provides so many humorous situations and so many opportunities for Chaplin to work in those subtle bits of humor which makes his pictures so uproariously comical that it cannot help being a masterpiece of comedy.

The idea on which "The Adventurer" was built was the one in which he made his first start on the picture which eventually turned out to be "The Immigrant." Chaplinlike, he got started on the one, the other popped into his head and he began work, full steam ahead, on the new idea. In the meantime he evolved the idea of "The Adventurer," put a lot of new touches into it, so that really it could not be identified by the parent germ from which it is descended.

Essanay Using Animated Titles

Innovation in "The Golden Idiot" May Become Fixture in Coming Releases.

AN innovation which has caused favorable comment has been introduced by Essanay into recent photoplays. It is called the animated sub-title. One of the chief causes for criticism of sub-titles, particularly where any quantity are used in a feature, is the fact that many persons read them at a glance, and are then forced to continue to watch several yards of the same title being run off for the benefit of those who read more slowly.

This has resulted in every possible sub-title being eliminated in the past, in spite of the opinion of many that this portion of a subject can be made one of its greatest assets. For this reason Essanay considered it important to provide a form of leader that would add to the pleasing qualities of the film without in any way detracting from the entertainment of those who had found cause for complaint.

The animated sub-title is the result, and it has been hailed as a novelty. It was first introduced to the public in "The Golden Idiot," a recent success featuring Bryant Washburn. Those who have seen it will remember the interest aroused by the conversation which took place between the characters that were shown in a blocked off corner of the screen without interfering with the action. The success of this innovation means that it will undoubtedly play an important part in future releases of the Essanay Company.

LE SAINT MAKING "THE MAN OF GOD."

Director E. J. Le Saint, who produced a number of exceptional feature pictures a year ago for the Universal, has rejoined that company and has started work on the filming of "The Man of God," a western story by J. Grubb Alexander and Fred Myton of the Universal writing staff.

Stella Razetto, well known screen actress, who in private life is Mrs. Le Saint, will be behind the camera as co-director.

The cast for Le Saint's current production easily might be called all-star. William Stowell, who played the leading male role in "Pay Me!" will have a prominent part in the picture, as will Helen Gibson, the daredevil leading lady of the recent railroad dramas filmed at Universal City. Hector Dion, whose screen popularity dates from the time he played leads with Florence Turner in Vitagraph pictures and extends through engagements with Reliance, Biograph and Thanhouser, has been engaged for Le Saint's company.

Another new personage in Universal films is Miss Mildred Davis, formerly leading lady of one of the Mutual companies, who will play the principal ingenue role in "The Man of God." Betty Schade, Millard Wilson and Alfred Allen, each of whom has played leads in Universal pictures, will also have prominent parts in Le Saint's new production.

ART DRAMAS FOR SOUTHERN DISTRIBUTION.

One of the biggest deals ever consummated by Art Dramas, Incorporated, since its inception was closed this week by Arthur F. Beck, general manager of the concern. The deal involved the disposing of franchise rights on Art Dramas for practically the entire South. The States covered by the contract are North Carolina, South Carolina, Florida, Georgia, Alabama, Mississippi and Tennessee.

The company which purchased the franchise was organized by Atlanta capital solely to exploit Art Dramas. It is known as the E. & H. Film Distributing Company, and has central offices in Atlanta. Other offices in all parts of the large territory are being formed as fast as possible.

E. H. Harden is the president of the E. & H., and P. A. Engler will be general manager. Both men are known throughout the Southern territory as veteran film men who are experienced in catering to the exhibitor's wants, and who have been extremely successful in the exploitation of big features.

APOLLO STARTS WORK ON MYSTERY TALE.

According to announcement from Harry Raver, president of Apollo Pictures, Inc., releasing on Art Dramas Program, his company will shortly begin work on a mystery story of unusual nature and novel plot, which will deal with the adventures of a crook known as "T." The title of the production has not yet been decided.

Mr. Raver is of the opinion that this story is one of the most amazing and surprising dramas ever conceived, and he is confident it will cause a sensation. It is completely out of the beaten track of mystery stories, according to announcement.

"THE FALL OF THE ROMANOFFS" COMPLETED.

Herbert Brenon took the last scene of his forthcoming production of the events which led up to and immediately preceded the Russian revolution, which he has entitled "The Fall of the Romanoffs" at his studio on Hudson Heights, Wednesday, August 20. Already the assembling, cutting and titling has so far progressed that the picture will be completed in its entirety by September 6, when a private showing at the Ritz Carlton will be held. Five of the eight reels have been corrected and titled, and are ready for release.

Current Triangle Bill

First Fall Releases, Scheduled for September 2, Include Saturday Evening Post Story.

"TEN OF DIAMONDS," by Albert Cowles, and "The Man Hater," a Saturday Evening Post story by Mary Brecht Pulver, are listed as the first fall releases from the Triangle Film Corporation, appearing on the program for the week of September 2. "Ten of Diamonds," which is being featured at the Strand Theatre, New York City, this week, concerns a girl of a cheap tenderloin cafe who is metamorphosed into "a lady" at the caprice of an idle young rich bachelor, who aims to play a trick on society by presenting her as a wealthy tourist spending the winter in New York. He also intends to use her as a weapon of vengeance against a society man who has humiliated him. The woman from the streets upsets these plans, however, by becoming mistress of her own destiny.

"The Man Hater" was published as a story by Mary Brecht Pulver in the Saturday Evening Post of June 9. It is issued as a picture by Triangle on September 2. Winifred Allen has the role of the fascinating man-hater. She is supported by Jack Meredith, Harry Neville, Jessie Shirley, Marguerite Gale, Robert Vivian and little Anna Lehr. The production was directed by Albert Parker, assisted by Thomas F. Tracey, under the supervision of Allan Dwan.

The Triangle comedies for this program are "His Fallen Star," with Harry McCoy, Frederick Bertrand, Gladys Tennyson and Eddie Sutherland, and "His Foothill Folly" with Ray Griffith, Eleanor Field and Frank Bond.

"His Fallen Star" is the story of astronomers looking for a new star, and of a young genius, Harry McCoy, who invents, with the aid of a box of fireworks, one for them. The inventive youth thereby wins the near-sighted astronomer's daughter as a bride. The other comedy, "His Foothill Folly" is a burlesque of the Western bad-man pictures. This Keystone gunfighter has his own private graveyard, his own particular brand of stimulant and his evangelical girl. It is described as a melodrama of laughter.

"A Shanghaied Jonah," featuring Maude Wayne, Billy Armstrong, Guy Woodward, and the mermaid contingent of the Keystone camp is the Keystone two-reeler that will enlighten picturegoers during the first week of the fall. It is the fable of the ill-fated Jonah brought up to date.

PATHE POSTPONES RELEASE OF "THE SEVEN PEARLS."

"The Seven Pearls," Pathe's new serial, featuring Mollie King, Creighton Hale and Leon Bary, announced for release September 2, has been postponed until September 16. The delay in release was made at the request of many exhibitors throughout the United States who wished to find place on their program for this serial, but were unable to do so if it was released as originally scheduled.

VICTOR MOORE IN "THE CINDERELLA HUSBAND."

Victor Moore will release August 27 his newest comedy, entitled "The Cinderella Husband." It is based on the idea of the fairy tale, but written in an up-to-date manner by Thomas J. Gray.

Vic is discovered in the opening scene at the wash tub in the kitchen working his head off. Like Cinderella in the fairy tale, the best he gets is the worst of it. He is a slave in the house with a capital "S" and his wicked brother-in-law, who is more "law" than "brother" helps add to his misery.

It happens that there is a carnival in the town, and the Queen of the carnival is to pick her own King in a very unique way. Every man present is to put one of his shoes in the basket, and the Queen, blindfolded, will pick out a shoe. Whoever the shoe fits will be the King of the Carnival.

This is a unique picture which Moore has made, and is full of real genuine laughter. The picture is presented with a very large supporting cast.

"THE LOST EXPRESS" (Signal).

The Mutual Film Corporation will release "The Lost Express," a fifteen chapter, thirty-reel photodrama starring Helen Holmes on September 17. "The Lost Express" was produced by the Signal Film Corporation under direction of J. P. McGowan. The production will be released a chapter a week for fifteen weeks. Helen Holmes has won international repute by the thrilling escapades in which she has figured before the camera in a series of highly successful chapter dramas.

Scene from "The Lost Express" (Mutual.

Her successes have all been staged by McGowan, past master of the art of creating thrills. In staging "The Lost Express," he had the active assistance and co-operation of the author, Frederick R. Bennett.

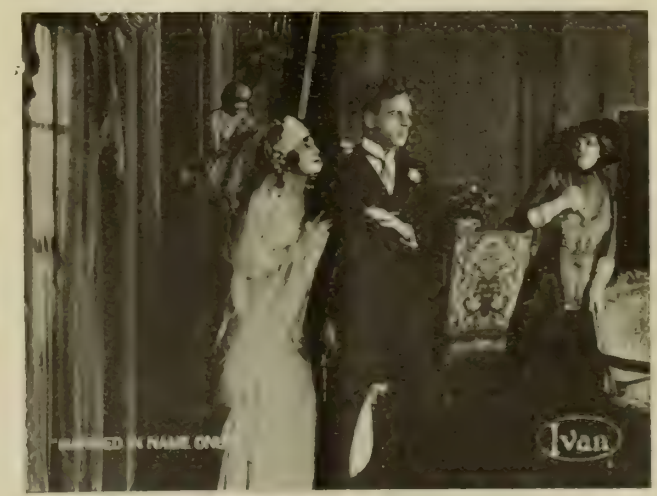
"The Lost Express" is built around a baffling scientific mystery. An express train, carrying a carload of highly valuable documents, leaves its terminal under armed guard. It never reaches the next station. Members of the crew are found, bound and gagged, in the bottom of a lumber wagon.

For the first time in her career of exciting escapades, Miss Holmes goes to the bottom of the sea in a diver's suit.

"MARRIED IN NAME ONLY" (Ivan).

"Married in Name Only," dramatized by Ivan Abramson and Edmund Lawrence is, as far as an official of the Ivan Film Company states, the last of the sex problem picture that Mr. Abramson has prepared for the camera.

The picture has been now concluded, and Mr. Lawrence, who directed the production, has finished cutting and titling same, and is so pleased with the picture that he enthusiastically announces that it is the best thing he ever done.



Scene from "Married in Name Only" (Ivan).

When one considers Mr. Lawrence's position, having been for many years with Kalem, bringing out the best they have ever made, and just lately severed his connection as director of Mme. Petrova, "Married in Name Only" judging from above ought to be a remarkable picture.

Gretchen Hartman, who is now playing the lead in the big nine reel production, "Les Miserables," is the female star, featured in conjunction with Milton Sills, who has the leading male part.

Five Fox Releases for September

R. A. Walsh's "Betrayed" Heads the List, to Be Issued the Day Before Labor Day.

MIRIAM COOPER, Virginia Pearson, George Walsh, and Dustin Farnum, are announced as the players starred in William Fox's first four feature releases during September. The productions are: September 2, R. A. Walsh's drama, "Betrayed," with Miriam Cooper; September 9, Virginia Pearson in "When False Tongues Speak"; September 16, George Walsh in "The Yankee Way"; September 23, Dustin Farnum in "North of Fifty-three." It is probable "A Rich Man's Plaything," in which Valeska Suratt has the chief role, will be issued on the last day of the month.

"Betrayed" centers about Carmelita Carrito, whose worldly condition is that of a peon, whose soul is that of an aristocrat, whose heart is that of a coquette.

In "When False Tongues Speak," by George Scarborough, Hardee Kirkland is seen opposite Miss Pearson, and the company includes Claire Whitney, Carl Eckstrom and William E. Meehan.

"The Yankee Way" is described as a "star-spangled comedy." It presents the genial George Walsh, supported by Enid Markey, Joe Dowling, Charles Edler, James O'Shea, Ed Sedgwick, Edward Cecil and Tom Wilson. Richard Stanton is the director.

"North of Fifty-three" was taken from the story of that name by Bertrand W. Sinclair. The picture, with the inimitable "Dusty" Farnum, as "Roaring Bill" Wagstaff, will undoubtedly have the same wide vogue as that enjoyed by the novel. Winifred Kingston gives her always brilliant interpretation in the role opposite Mr. Farnum.

"BROADWAY, ARIZONA" (Triangle).

Production work has been finished at the Culver City plant of the Triangle Film Corporation on the drama of New York life and Western adventure, in which Olive Thomas will be starred under the direction of Lynn Reynolds.

The name of Miss Thomas' new piece is "Broadway, Arizona," and the action of the story is all that the name implies. Elaborate settings, which vary from luxurious scenes of metropolitan life to the rugged beauty and grandeur of the Southern California mountains, make the screen offering one of picturesque quality. Miss Thomas plays the part of an actress who achieves sensational popularity on the Gay White Way, and is later compelled to create a Broadway for herself when failing health banishes her to a Western desert town.

The exterior scenes of the production were filmed in the Big Bear lake country in Southern California, which is famed for its beautiful scenery. Director Reynolds is said to have secured some unusual photographic effects that will make the whole piece one of rare beauty.

"FLIRTING WITH DEATH" (Bluebird).

Herbert Rawlinson and Brownie Vernon appear as joint stars on the Bluebird program for the first time, week starting September 24, in a sensational comedy drama entitled "Flirting With Death." Waldemar Young and Frank Dazey furnished the story under the original title of "Sky High," and Mr. Young made the scenario from which Elmer Clifton directed the feature.

Mr. Rawlinson has appeared in earlier Bluebirds, having co-starred with Ella Hall in "Little Eve Edgarton," and he was the hero of "The Eagle's Wings," the industrial preparedness feature Bluebird released on State rights. Miss Vernon has become extremely popular as co-star with Franklyn Farnum in a series of releases that terminated when Mr. Farnum cut loose as a lone star on the program.

Scene from "Flirting With Death" (Bluebird).

"Flirting With Death" is the first of several features in which Mr. Rawlinson and Miss Vernon will star under Elmer Clifton's direction. The hero is a soldier of fortune who has ventured into the circus business to establish a bankroll and in his pursuit of the nimble dollar he finally is forced to negotiate a sensational airship flight and parachute drop to "put across" a deal that assures his fortune and the hand of his beloved.

Director Clifton has represented the sensational "punch" of the picture with skill and effectiveness, and Rawlinson accepts the hazard with thrilling realism. Two reels of circus scenes, taken while a touring show was halted in transit, reflect the life and daily adventure of showmen in actual scenes. "Flirting With Death," it is declared, reflects real circus life and depicts the real character of showmen besides offering a fetching love theme and sprinkling excitement through many fleeting thirlls and sensational episodes.

"The Woman God Forgot" a Spectacle

Geraldine Farrar's Initial Artcraft Subject Expected to Create Greater Sensation Than "Joan"—Gigantic Sets Used.

IN addition to its spectacular scenes Garaldine Farrar's initial Artcraft production, "The Woman God Forgot," now being staged by Cecil B. De Mille, promises to prove a super-photoplay of unusual beauty. One of the elaborate scenes discloses the largest aviary in the world especially built for this film. A number of views present the huge private swimming pool and garden of Montezuma's daughter. The garden and pool were inclosed in a wire netting fifty feet high and 400 feet long to prevent the escape of thousands of rare birds which filled the foliage.

Last week Director De Mille took a company of 200 people by special train into Yosemite.

In building the gigantic pyramid, the highest set ever used in a motion picture, a force of carpenters and stonemasons were busy nearly two weeks working night and day. This one set covers an area of over two square miles and is the site of an immense battle in which a thousand persons take part. The interior views of an Aztec temple also offer novel scenes, the huge sacrificial room with its flaming altar being reproduced in the exact size of the chamber in which the high priest sacrificed his human victims to the Aztec gods.

A stirring romance between the Aztec princess and the Spanish captain for the Cortez army, disclosing many exceptional dramatic situations, fastens the spectator's interest upon the leading characters of the play in the development of the story. The production demands much of the histrionic talents of the famous Farrar and that it will prove her greatest cinema characterization, not excepting "Joan," is readily anticipated. The photoplay will be ready for release within a month.

"MADAM WHO" (Paralta).

Bessie Barriscale's company is busy at the Paralta studios at Hollywood producing her second Paralta production, "Madam Who", which will be released by the Triangle Distributing Corporation in October.

It is founded on Harold McGrath's mystery romance of the same title. This story was first published about a year ago in a popular magazine and created something of a sensation among readers of light fiction.

In subject it is very timely. The heroine, Jeanne Dupree, loses her father and two brothers in war. She becomes a military spy and discovers a band of spies of the enemy within the lines of her army. In attempting to capture them she, herself, is captured by the enemy, who are masked and apparently unknown to each other except by number.

They are loathe to kill her and one suggests that she be forced to marry one of them. In the face of death Jeanne consents and is married by one of the masked men, who is really a clergyman.

Jeanne is left bound and gagged, but escapes and swears to run down and capture the masked spies. This is the motive of the dramatic action of the story, and in the accomplishment of her purpose the young girl has many thrilling adventures which will be as thrillingly depicted on the screen.

Miss Barriscale is supported by Ed Coxen as John Armitage; Howard Hickman as Henry Morgan; Joseph J. Dowling as Parson John Kennedy, and David M. Hartford as Allen Crandall of the secret service. Other parts are played by Fannie Midgeley, Nick Cogley and Bert Hadley.

HOLMES PICTURE SLATED FOR FIRST RUNS.

Owing to the favorable time selected for the release of "Efficiency Edgar's Courtship," the first Taylor Holmes picture by Essanay, this subject is slated for a number of first runs. So phenomenal was his success in his recent stage production, "His Majesty Bunker Bean," that a deal is now pending whereby his first feature will be shown throughout an entire circuit heretofore devoted exclusively to stage attractions.

This photoplay was originally prepared for release earlier in the fall, but these houses were closed for the summer, and it was not considered advisable to open them for the run of the one picture. Now that they are about to open for the regular season, it will be possible to make a place for this attraction before the stage productions start.

It is expected this will popularize this comedian more quickly than would be possible if his first subject were to be shown for its first run in the usual manner.

William Fox Making "Les Miserables"

William Farnum Being Starred in a Standard Picture, Directed by Frank Lloyd.

ONE of the most important announcements William Fox has made this year is that a complete and superb cinema version of "Les Miserables" is under way.

Work on this great photodrama has gone forward for some time at the big Fox studios at Fort Lee. William Farnum is appearing as Jean Valjean in Victor Hugo's immortal classic. Mr. Farnum is infusing into his portrayal of the famous Valjean a fineness of characterization, a depth of artistry seldom achieved, and worthy of this master figure of literature.

The photoplay is being screened under the direction of Frank Lloyd, who directed "A Tale of Two Cities." Mr. Lloyd is well equipped for the successful and satisfying transference of "Les Miserables." The players supporting Mr. Farnum have been selected with great care, and special attention also is being given the photography. In the filming of Hugo's classic are required scores of night scenes. Mr. Fox is desirous of producing in "Les Miserables" a drama which shall be the perfection of workmanship.

The threescore years which have passed since the publication of "Les Miserables" have brought it more and more praise from critics and laymen. "Les Miserables" is, without question the most splendid epic and dramatic piece of fiction ever created. That is the manner in which Swinburne, the famous poet, described it. It is the epic of a soul transfigured and redeemed, purified through heroism and glorified through suffering; the tragedy and the comedy of life at its darkest and its brightest, of humanity at its best and its worst.

"Les Miserables" will be a William Fox Standard Picture, and the second of the number in which William Farnum will appear.

FIVE DIRECTORS MAKING L-KO'S.

The studios of L-Ko Comedies, at Hollywood, Cal., are scenes of great activity. Under the general supervision of J. G. Blystone, five directors are working overtime to stack up releases against the rainy season. Phil Dunham and Archie Mayo have lately been added to Mr. Blystone's staff to increase production.

Mr. Dunham formerly was a featured comedian in L-Ko but lately turned to directing, with Frank Clark as his assistant. At present Mr. Dunham is working on a comedy in which he will be featured but there will, meanwhile, be shown "High Class Nonsense," Sept. 28, in which Mr. Dunham directed Lucille Hutton and Billy Bevan, as well as "Backward Sons and Forward Daughters," Sept. 5, with the same players featured.

Vin Moore, directing Myrtle Sterling and Al Forbes; Noel Smith, with Gladys Varden as his star; and Dick Smith, directing Eva Novak, are all busy with forthcoming L-Ko's. Gladys Varden will appear Sept. 12, supported by Walter Stevens, Katheryn Young, Bert Roach and Harry Griffith in "From Cactus to Kale." Myrtle Sterling will be star of the Sept. 19 release, "A Prairie Chicken," with Al Forbes heading the support.

Hughey Mack, who lately joined General Director Blystone's forces to be a featured comedian, is working under the direction of Noel Smith on his first picture. Archie Mayo, the latest addition to the directing staff, has not, as yet, been assigned to his company, but he will be at work next week upon his first release.

President Julius Stern, of the L-Ko Corporation, is making plans for an original advertising campaign to boost the L-Ko product through Universal exchanges. His idea involves an altogether novel scheme that has not, previously, been associated with comedy releases. L-Ko is preparing for a lively season.

"BAB'S DIARY" IS FIRST OF "SUB-DEB" SERIES.

In order that the Paramount screen adaptations of the "Sub-Deb" stories starring Marguerite Clark may follow in chronological sequence the order in which they were originally published, the first of the series will be "Bab's Diary" instead of "Bab's Burglar," as previously announced.

Miss Marguerite Clark in the role of the capricious and wholly delightful Bab is fitted with a part that is seemingly made expressly for her. She romps through a series of adventures that provide the most delectable comedy situations.

"Bab's Diary" is a September Paramount release under the new Star selective booking plan. The series is the work of Mary Roberts Rhinehart, and the adaptations have been made with particular care so that none of the originality and flavor of the stories have been lost. J. Searle Dawley is directing the productions.

SELIGS ON K-E-S-E.

William N. Selig announces advance releases of two reel comedies in K-E-S-E service as follows: "A Midnight Bell," written by Charles Hoyt, released Monday, September 3; "A Contented Woman," written by Charles Hoyt, released Monday, September 17; "A Bear Fact," released Monday, October 1. Each of these comedies is said to carry not only a plot of merit but a succession of funny incidents. The Charles Hoyt farce comedies, released every two weeks in K-E-S-E service have proven exceedingly popular with the people. Each comedy is enacted by a capable cast.

MOZUKIN IN "THE PAINTED DOLL."

As the first personality of the cinema to be presented to American playgoers the Russian Art Film Corporation has selected Ivan Mozukin, regarded as the foremost player in the famous Moscow Art Theater, which means in Russia. Mozukin will be seen in "The Painted Doll," a representative film drama selected from the more than fifty negatives which N. S. Kaplan brought from Moscow several weeks ago. In his support will be seen two other prominent personalities, Natalia Lesienko and Tanya Fetner.

For his premiere here Mozukin will have a role which requires a makeup that conceals the features so much admired by the matinee girls of Russia. This he does not hesitate to do whenever the role requires it. In fact, one of Mozukin's most popular roles finds him creating a character of eighteen years and then developing it through the various stages of manhood to eighty. He is a product of the most rigid artistic system in the world, but a system that makes for the greatest flexibility once the aspirant has qualified. Mozukin, under this system, was selected at an early age by his government and trained for years at government expense. Now approaching the zenith of his development, he is said to be a composite of the abilities of half a dozen prominent American players. He portrays a hero with as much ease as does Francis X. Bushman and he can be as much of a villain as Stuart Holmes. It is predicted that American audiences will like him.

"MAGDA" (C. K. Y.)

In her determination to do bigger things in a bigger way Clara Kimball Young seems to have struck in "Magda" a particularly happy vehicle for her talents. The picture has been completed. "Magda," by Herman Sudermann, is the story of a girl whose father believes that the father's will is the will of the whole household.

In the accompanying illustration Valkyrien is seen in the role of the sister standing by Miss Kimball and at the other side is Edward Kimball, the father of the player.

"Magda" is Miss Young's initial production with her own organization under the management of Harry I. Garson.

Paramount to Release Serial in October

Unnamed as Yet, It Is from Pen of Anna Katherine Green and Will Star Kathleen Clifford.

PARAMOUNT is going in for serials. This great motion picture organization announces it will release in October a fifteen-episode mystery drama that will reach in every detail the Paramount quality. Starred will be Kathleen Clifford, vaudeville and musical comedy star, who is making her motion picture debut. The story is the work of America's greatest builder of mysteries, Anna Katharine Green, who possesses the faculty for jamming her stories full to the brim with gasps and throbs.

This serial is the first story Mrs. Green ever has written for motion picture production. It is not a dramatization of any of her previous works, but a brand new tale with the famous Green tangles and apparently unsolvable secrets. It will not be published in book form until after the release of the final episode. Exhibitors are thus protected so that the public may learn the details of the final twist in the plot only by seeing every episode through to the end.

Paramount is using every effort to make its first serial the finest production of its kind. The fifteen episodes are nearly completed, and none will be released until it has passed every test and has met every requirement demanded by every Paramount picture.

The title has not been selected. It will be announced shortly. Mrs. Green has not yet written the final chapter of the story, and only she knows the final twist that will solve the many complications into which she has thrown her interesting characters.

Special service, more thorough than that offered by producers of any other serial, will be given by Paramount exchanges to all exhibitors booking this serial. The advertising campaign will be of unusual extent. The publication of a new Anna Katharine Green tale is in itself a literary event, and the fiction story will be widely exploited by the hundreds of newspapers throughout the country that will print it as a news feature of unusual value, not merely as "just another serial story."

Kathleen Clifford is one of the tiniest actresses in motion pictures—and one of the bravest. She was chosen for the first Paramount serial because she was one of the few actresses with genuine dramatic talent who actually possessed athletic ability and a daredevil spirit.

"THE DEFEAT OF THE CITY" HEARTFUL.

In choosing "The Defeat of the City" as the first of the famous O. Henry stories to be picturized in four-reel form, thought was taken of the intensity of the heart interest and the wealth of human appeal assembled by the gifted author in the plot. None has ever rivaled O. Henry for the dramatic depth that he can put into an apparently superficial situation. Always he succeeds in gripping the reader and the beholder of his stories done for the screen. And in "The Defeat of the City," seizing upon one human attribute, Pride, and so dissecting it that he reveals the true and the false to be millions of miles apart, he subtly reveals it to his audience in one offhand, yet tremendous climax.

"The Defeat of the City" by O. Henry is a plain story of American life gaily told. It is such a story as one beholds unseeing every day until a master touch discloses its vibrant beauty.

For his masterful presentation of several preceding heroes in the O. Henry productions for General Film, J. Frank Glendon is cast as Robert Walmsley. Another of the favorite Broadway Star Features players, Agnes Eyre, plays Alicia. Frank Chapman as the old father of Robert and Mrs. Fisher as his mother, and Frank Heath, Alice Rodier and Virginia Spraggins as brother and sisters, are also cast. Thomas R. Mills directed the picture.

Scene from "The Defeat of the City" (General Film).

Every four-reel O. Henry release will be followed by a two-reel release.

FOREST CONSERVATION IN GAUMONT REEL.

Outstanding features of the week of September 10 among the single-reel pictures which Gaumont will release through Mutual are the war pictures which will form a part of Mutual Weekly No. 141 and "Tree Planting in the National Forests," a section of "Reel Life" No. 72. The Mutual Weekly is released September 12. In view of the fact that it is not made up until the date of release, in order to incorporate the latest news pictures, no forecast of the contents can be made at this time. It is a certainty, however, that it will contain battle pictures from the western front taken by the cameramen of the Societe des Etablissements Gaumont and rushed to this country by the first available steamer.

"Reel Life" No. 72 is released September 13. Its leading section is "Tree Planting in the National Forests." Most of the pictures were taken at the Wind River Nursery in the state of Washington. Millions of pine trees are here grown from seeds and when three years old are set out upon the mountain slopes which have been denuded of vegetation by forest fires. This is a remarkable picture as it shows just what is being done to protect the country from floods and soil loss.

Other pictures upon the same reel are "An Unusual Colt," a small Shetland pony, "Hunting Turtle Eggs," an exposition of the habits of turtles when they come to the beach to deposit their eggs, "Testing an Auto Tube," a remarkable exhibition of the tensile strength of an inner tube, and a picture from Alaska of "The Midnight Sun."

HAROLD LLOYD IN TWO FUNNY COMEDIES.

Admirers of the Rolin comedies on the Pathe program, and they are many, have some good things to look forward to the weeks of September 9 and 16. On September 9 comes the first of the new one-reel Harold Lloyd comedies. "Over the Fence" is the title, and it is a laughable burlesque on the national game. Lloyd proves a scream as a baseball pitcher, and by many impossible plays is winning his own game when he sees his best Sunday girl sitting in the bleachers with his dearly hated rival. Then all bets are off. Snub Pollard and Bebe Daniels also figure prominently in the cast with all the other Rolin favorites.

The week of September 16, "Lonesome Luke Loses Patients" will be released. In this comedy we find "Luke" running a sanitarium which is a regular bonanza because of the big staff of hand-picked beauties whom he has secured as nurses. The sanitarium is very popular with men whose wives do not stack up in the pulchritude class. In this fact lies the undoing of the sanitarium. Wives visiting husbands who have suddenly complained of being ill after seeing Luke's nurses find that their hubbies need chaperones. Harold Lloyd as the doctor is in one of his funniest parts. Ably assisting him are Snub Pollard and Bebe Daniels.

FIRST WHOLESOME SUBJECT READY.

"The Penny Philanthropist" by Miss Clara E. McLaughlin, the first release of the Wholesome Films Corporation, now is practically completed.

Director Guy McConnell, with an able cast headed by Ralph Morgan of the "Turn to the Right" company, has been putting in long hours at the Wholesome Studios on the north side, Chicago.

M. J. Weisfeldt, General Manager of the Wholesome Films Corporation, announces that the film will be ready for release within the month.

Eddie Foy, Jr., son of the inimitable Eddie, the world's greatest father, has been an interested spectator at the Wholesome Studios during the production of "The Penny Philanthropist." Young Foy is a close friend of Director Guy McConnell. He has been in Chicago with his father's vaudeville troupe and seized the opportunity to visit his old friend McConnell.

Drama and Comedy on Universal's Program

Lon Chaney, Lyons & Moran, Lena Baskette, Max Asher, Gale Henry and Eileen Sedgwick Some of the Favorites to Be Seen First Week of September.

THE Empty Gun", a Gold Seal drama, produced by Joseph De Grasse, who directed "Pay Me!", one of the biggest Western dramas of the year, heads the Universal schedule, beginning Tuesday, September 4th. The Butterfly picture released the day previous under separate booking arrangments will be the Francis Ford mystery play, "Who Was the Other Man?" The De Grasse production was written by J. Grubb Alexander and Fred Myton, and features Lon Chaney, Claire McDowell and Sam De Grasse. It tells a poignant story of the life in a mining town. A woman has been tricked into marrying the wrong man.

"Looking 'Em Over", a Nestor comedy, featuring Eddie Lyons, Lee Moran and Edith Roberts, will be released the same day with "The Empty Gun". This hilarious trio have a story excellently suited to their various styles of funmaking in the script written by Fred Palmer and produced by Roy Clements.

Wednesday, September 5th, is L-Ko Comedy Day, with "Backward Sons and Forward Daughters" as the two-reel feature, headlining Billie Bevan and Lucille Hutton. The latest celluloid chuckle-starter, done under the personal supervision of J. G. Blystone, maintains the full speed limit in action and implication throughout its hundred odd scenes.

The 88th issue of the Universal Animated Weekly, released at the same time, is also notable for the amount of movement crowded into one reel, although unlike the L-KO brand, it all relates to actual news events of the day.

Lena Baskette, widely known as "Pavlowa, Jr.", is the star of the feature for Tuesday, September 6th. "A Dream of Egypt", written by Myrtle Stedman and Nan Blair and produced by Marshall Stedman, is the name of Lena's starring vehicle. The play tells a picturesque dream story of ancient Egypt, in which the little girl saves her mother's life by dancing before the king who has captured them. Lena is adequately supported by Betty Schade, Fred Montague and Walter Belasco.

William Franey will be seen on the same day in a Joker Comedy entitled, "Officer, Call a Cop!", written by Arthur F. Statter and directed by W. W. Beaudine. Throughout the tangled course of events pictured, many amusing scenes are laid in Chinatown. Janet Eastman and Milburn Moranti also have prominent parts in the story.

"The Curse of a Flirting Heart" is the title of the Victor comedy in which Max Asher again appears under Universal auspices on Friday, September 7th. C. B. Hoadley wrote the script, which has been produced by Craig Hutchinson. Lillian Peacock has the featured part in support of Asher. Several striking bathing scenes are shown, as much of the action transpires at the beach.

The 35th issue of the Universal Screen Magazine, bearing the same date, will contain many novel illustrated articles on subjects of wide appeal.

Eileen Sedgwick and Fred Church will be featured in a two-reel Bison comedy-drama on Saturday, September 8th, entitled "The Lure of the Circus." W. B. Pearson wrote and produced this novelty, which pictures the adventures of a country lad and his sweetheart who obtain employment in a circus as animal trainer and bareback rider, respectively, to escape the drudgery and monotony of small town life.

Gale Henry and Milton Sims are also scheduled for appearance on the same bill in a Joker comedy entitled "A Gale of Verse", written by Tom Gibson and directed by Allen Curtis.

Breezy and timely in theme and presentation, the 17th issue of the Universal Current Events will bring the week to a close.

CONSERVATION AND PREPAREDNESS.

Universal shows several subjects in the Screen Magazine, released September 21, sure to arouse interest in the great work of conservation now being carried on by the government. A graphically illustrated lecture on the best method of canning and preserving corn is shown through co-operation with the Department of Agriculture. The New York City Food Aid Committee has become so interested in this department that it has requested the editor of the Screen Magazine to make a complete reel of similar subjects to use in the propaganda work now being carried on.

The campaign to prevent the high death rate among babies is also given much valuable material in the series of pictures contained in this release, showing many of the most interesting methods now being employed to keep the coming generation in good health and spirits.

There are also a number of spirited scenes illustrating the way in which women are being trained to take the places of men in such unique fields as wireless telegraphy and the various mechanical trades.

GENERAL CHANGES LOBBY CARDS.

For its new four-reel subjects, including the Falcon Features and the O. Henry de luxe subjects, General Film has adopted the 11x14 size of pictures for the lobby display frames as favoring the artistic treatment. There will be a title card and six photographic reproductions of scenes in each set of this display material.

Century Comedies

Plans for Distribution Completed by Longacre Distributing Company—Many Advertising Helps.

WITH the plans for the distribution of the new Alice Howell Century comedies completed, three names in the film world have been bound together. They are Alice Howell, Century comedies, and the Longacre Distributing Company. Miss Howell is going to make the Century comedies and Longacre is going to see that her big public has an opportunity to enjoy them. Among their plans are many novel aids to exhibitors seeking these super-comedies.

Longacre proposes to issue twelve of these comedies a year. At least ten are guaranteed. J. G. Blystone, whose range in the comedy field is unlimited, will be in charge of the direction of Miss Howell's pictures. Being the only young woman to have attained world-wide distinction in the "slapstick" end of the business, Miss Howell occupies an unusual position among stars of the film world.

"Her Bareback Career", one of the first and most thrilling of her new comedies, has entered upon its second week at the Broadway theater in New York. Others that will follow scon are "Automaniacs", "Neptune's Daughter", and "Balloonatics".

The Longacre plan calls for the division of the territory into districts. The "district rights" will be sold in each of these divisions. The Century comedies will be furnished to exhibitors regardless of any other service which they may be receiving, for Longacre has no affiliation with any other film service. For the benefit of those purchasing district rights, Longacre designates a district as a town, or in the case of a large city, a section of the city, in which there is either one theater which draws from the entire populace, or two or more theaters, which run in competition to each other, and to which only one of the so-called "first-run" of a picture can be sold. This constitutes the selling plan of Longacre, and the prices are already scheduled in every district.

Longacre exchanges have already been established in all of the principal cities, Boston, St. Louis, Philadelphia, Salt Lake City, Kansas City, Minneapolis, Indianapolis, Atlanta, New Orleans, San Francisco, Los Angeles, Spokane, Butte, Omaha, Oklahoma City, Chicago, Des Moines, Dallas, Wichita, Portland, Cleveland, Washington, D. C., Toledo, Denver, Pittsburgh, Buffalo and Milwaukee among others. Screenings are held in all of the districts in these cities, and tremendous enthusiasm for the Alice Howell productions has already been shown.

As part of its service, Longacre issues a clever campaign book called "The Boost-er Book", which is filled from cover to cover with publicity stunts, press stories, talks on comedies as program features, descriptions of the novel and original advertising matter, and every help known to the trade. There is also a folder, gotten up in a striking style, announcing the new series of Century comedies, which has been mailed to every exhibitor in the country. A remarkable line of advertising material of all kinds has been prepared, including life-sized cut-outs of the famous comedienne, novel heralds—the first a balloon to advertise one of her first releases, "Balloonatics".

"BACKWARD SONS AND FORWARD DAUGHTERS" (L-Ko).

Comedian Phil Dunham having turned from acting in L-Ko's to producing those merrymakers will show his first release on the program September 5. Lucille Hutton and Billy Bevan will be the featured ones with a large company of L-Ko beauties to enliven the various incidents. "Backward Sons and Forward Daughters" is the title, and the laughs will be provoked under many unusual circumstances. Antics on land and under water will involve the players in hilarious scenes, and L.-Ko is sponsor for the promise that Phil Dunham is just as good as a director as he was in the role of featured comedian on J. G. Blystone's staff of players.

Bluebird Fills Out Year's Program

Five Scattering Weeks Only Remain in Which Dates Have Not Been Set.

WITH the exception of five scattering weeks Bluebird has made tentative adjustment of its program until the first of the year. These open weeks will be filled by productions designed especially to supply the right sort of feature to give the series diversity and strength in its entirety. September, October and the early week of November are booked solid, although in several instances the release titles have not been definitely selected—but all the subjects are either completed or in process of production.

"Triumph", on Labor Day, starts the regular theatrical season (when exhibitors will have organized opposition) with a heavy dramatic subject introducing Dorothy Phillips as the star of a Joseph De Grasse production. In this Mr. De Grasse will appear for the first time as an actor, joining William Stowell and Lon Chaney as Miss Phillips' chief support.

"A Stormy Knight" will be the September 10 release, presenting Franklyn Farnum and Brownie Vernon as joint stars for the last time among Bluebirds. Hereafter Mr. Farnum will be an individual star and Miss Vernon will appear with Herbert Rawlinson. Exhibitors will have this special advertising point to emphasize in announcing "A Stormy Knight."

"The Mysterious Mr. Tiller", September 17, will have Rupert Julian and Ruth Clifford as co-stars in a sensational combination of mystery and psychology. Mr. Julian directed the work from Elliott J. Clawson's scenario and has introduced some new twists in photoplaying and camera trickery that promise surprising results, reduced to the screen.

"Flirting with Death", September 24, will have the new Bluebird combination—Herbert Rawlinson and Brownie Vernon—in the star parts. Here is another sensational issue, largely comedy drama, but thrilling in execution. Elmer Clifton, who formerly directed Franklyn Farnum and Miss Vernon, presents "Flirting With Death" as the first of a number of Rawlinson-Vernon Bluebirds.

"Bitter Sweet", October 1, will have Ella Hall as star in a story of Belgium's distress, translated to America for the happy ending. On October 8, with Joseph De Grasse as his director, Franklyn Farnum will be introduced as a lone star in "The Maverick", a Western drama, in which Lon Caney will be featured in Mr. Farnum's support. Dorothy Phillips will appear in "Bondage" October 15 and "The Desire of the Moth" will have Rupert Julian and Roth Clifford as stars October 22.

Violet Mersereau is just finishing at Fort Lee her presentation of "The Girl By the Roadside", directed by Theodore Marston, to be ready for release October 25. Then will come an event of importance to Bluebird exhibitors in the introduction of Mae Murray to the program, directed by Robert Leonard, with "The Princess Virtue" her initial offering. Another star, new to Bluebirds, will be introduced a week late in the person of Carmel Myers, who will be seen in "The Dynast", a feature especially written for the occasion.

RUTH ROLAND IN MYSTIC ROLE.

"The Stolen Play", third of the series of four-reel dramas, the Falcon Features has Ruth Roland as the star, with Wm. Conklin and Edw. J. Brady also among the principals. A most unusual offering is discovered in this General Film release. It carries a thoroughly sustained atmosphere of mystery and intrigue. An intense conflict of motives follows the theft of a play early in the action and leads to climax after climax.

Miss Roland is cast as the secretary of Charles Edmay, a blind playwright of distinguished success. With the aid of an agent, Alice Mason, he undertakes desperately to secure it. At the same time the playwright and his secretary have become under great nervous stress while bringing the play to completion. With the circumstances the audience is quickly put into the mood for startling developments.

"The Stolen Play" was written by D. F. Whitcomb and directed by Harry Harvey, supervised by H. M. and E. D. Horkheimer. Lucy Blacke, Harry Southard, Ruth Lackaye and Makato Inokuchi are members of the cast.

The next Falcon Feature will be "His Unpolished Self", from a story by Horace Annesley Vachell, featuring Henry Ainley.

NELL SHIPMAN INDEPENDENT.

Nell Shipman wishes it generally known that she is not under exclusive contract to any one for either her services or her scenarios. Miss Shipman has long realized the great difficulty of procuring suitable material for original and picturesque feature plays, and her six months' trip to the West Indies was undertaken upon her own initiative with a view to procuring "somewhat different" material for leading producers.

In this she was eminently successful, and although some of her stories of "The Spanish Main" and "Bucaneering Days" have been disposed of, her "piece de resistance" is being retained until arrangements can be made with one of the foremost directors for its sensational production.

Nell Shipman is at present in California concluding a contract for delivery of a number of photo dramas, but will soon return East to supervise the production of one of her more recent stories, which is to be released on the open market.

PATHE PROGRAM FOR WEEK OF SEPTEMBER 9.

Florence LaBadie in "War and the Woman", easily the best picture she has ever done, Pearl White in a strong serial episode, and a Harold Lloyd one-reel comedy are features of Pathe's program for the week of September 9.

Pearl White stars in the tenth episode of "The Fatal Ring" serial, entitled "The Perilous Plunge". This is probably the best episode yet of a serial that is breaking all records. It is said that a large number of Pathe offices have already beaten their average on "The Iron Claw".

Harold Lloyd is the star in "Over the Fence," the one-reel comedy produced by Rolin under the direction of Hal Roach. This is not a Lonesome Luke comedy. It shows Harold Lloyd, creator of the Lonesome Luke character, in an entirely new characterization, one absolutely distinct from Luke and yet, if possible, even funnier.

"Over the Fence" is a baseball burlesque in which Harold Lloyd is a studious young man. He comes to bat in the nick of time and saves the game. The first part shows him as the enterprising proprietor of a tailoring establishment of the "We-press-'em-while-you-wait" variety. He tires of pushing the needle, goes to the ball game and then things happen thick and fast.

The "Know America" Combitone Scenic release is entitled "Colorado's Scenic Wonders", and an International cartoon and scenic split reel, Heart-Pathe News No. 74 and No. 75 complete the program.

SELIG SUBJECTS FOR GENERAL FILM.

The Selig Polyscope Company announces an unusually excellent program for release in General Film Company for the week of September 3. On Monday, September 3, "The House of Mystery," a two reel melodrama of mystery and adventure will be released. The plot is from the versatile pen of Mary Roberts Rinehart and features an exceptional cast of players among whom can be named Thomas Carrigan and Adrienne Kroell. There is said to be plot, counter plot and tense action.

On Saturday, September 8, "The Convert of the North," a gripping one reel drama, will be released. It is an exciting romance of the Canadian Northwoods and was written by Gilbert Parker. Bessie Eyton, Wheeler Oakman and other well known players participate in a drama said to be filled with atmosphere and clever action.

The Selig World Library, a Reel Magazine, continues to appear every Wednesday in General Film service. It presents the strange and startling from all parts of the world.

MISS PICKFORD GETS POLICE GUARD.

If there is anyone who does not believe that Mary Pickford is a person of importance and worthy of attention and consideration, all they have to do is to ask Mayor James Rolph and the police department of San Francisco. Miss Pickford and her company visited the Bay City to film some scenes last week. When Miss Pickford approached her automobile the first morning to go on location she found it surrounded by a cavalcade of fifteen mounted policemen. The police gave a salute, and the lieutenant informed her that Mayor Rolph had heard of her arrival in the city to do some work and had provided the police for her protection during her stay in the city.

Wherever Miss Pickford goes to film scenes she is immediately recognized and surrounded by crowds which frequently interfere with the work of the players. Mayor Rolph, remembering the sensation Miss Pickford had caused when she appeared in San Francisco to assist in the sale of liberty bonds, placed the police department at her disposal.

FAREWELL TO "FIGHTING 69TH."

A remarkable number of human interest scenes of the famous 69th regiment on its way to Berlin, via Mineola, L. I., pictured in Universal Animated Weekly No. 86, just released, shows what New York City thinks of the "Fighting Irish." The Universal cinematographer was the only cameraman to accompany Col. Hine and his boys throughout the long line of march and the results obtained are well calculated to arouse any American audience to the highest pitch of patriotic enthusiasm.

Another topic of timely interest is the arrival of the Imperial Japanese War Mission at San Francisco. Viscount Ishii and his distinguished Oriental colleagues are officially welcomed with full military honors and are quite evidently delighted with the reception. The student officers at Fort McPherson, Ga., are shown on their final hike and there are several other timely items depicting America at war.

ANOTHER O. HENRY STOCK SLIDE.

While continuing the special advance slides for each O. Henry release, General Film is also providing another stock slide. The novelty about this slide is in utilizing a greatly admired crayon bust of O. Henry (William Sidney Porter), drawn by E. A. Bushnell from the best portrait in existence of O Henry. It is used by courtesy of Doubleday, Page & Co.

Essanay Announces Fall Program

Holmes and Washburn to Make Regular Appearance—Ade to Provide More Fables.

TAYLOR HOLMES heads Essanay's fall program in "Efficiency Edgar's Courtship," to be released September 30. Mr. Holmes is one of the best known interpreters of subtle humor on the speaking stage, having been responsible for such tremendous successes as "His Majesty, Bunker Bean," "The Third Party," and other audible comedies. In presenting him to patrons of the screen, Essanay has given him the same type of characterization, as well as the broader field for its portrayal which motion picture productions afford.

Mr. Holmes will appear again in October in "A Fool For Luck." This comedy-drama is an adaptation from the story by Kennett Harris called "Talisman." The following month, November, he will be presented in "Two Bit Seats," an adaptation from a magazine story.

Bryant Washburn's three Skinner pictures already are on the screen, and, according to reports from K-E-S-E headquarters, are demonstrating by their success the public's desire for pictures of a lighter vein. Mr. Washburn will be released in another comedy-drama in October, the title of which will be "The Fibbers." His November release will be announced shortly.

In addition to pictures featuring these two stars Essanay is releasing September 10 "Pants," a comedy-drama in five parts, with Little Mary McAlister as the lead. This child recently has been seen all over the country in "Do Children Count?" a series of child dramas. She also was a member of the all-star cast in Essanay's Super-feature, "On Trial," She is scheduled for another picture of the comedy-drama type in October.

George Ade, the famous Hoosier humorist, is providing his inimitable "Fables In Slang" for filming by Essanay. These pictures will be two reels in length and released one each week through the General Film Service. The first is entitled "The Fable of the Twelve-Cylinder Speed of the Leisure Class."

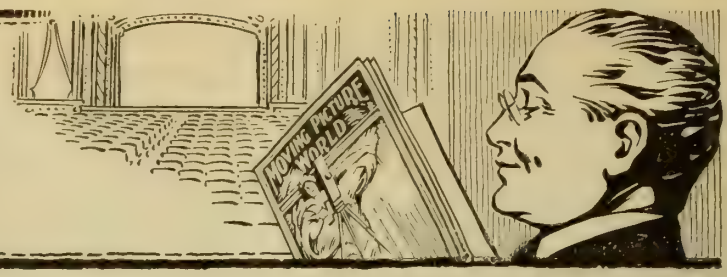
Trade News of the Week



GATHERED BY OUR OWN CORRESPONDENTS

Boston Filmdom Doings Last Week

R. W. Cobe Made Manager of the Globe Feature Film Exchange—Famous Boston Theater to Be Entirely Rebuilt—Notes of Interest.

By Richard Davis Howe, 80 Summer St., Boston, Mass.

BOSTON, MASS.—Robert W. Cobe, who has been associated with the Globe Feature Film Corporation since last September, the time the film organization commenced doing business, has been appointed exchange manager. The appointment was made by General Manager Harry G. Segal as a result of the good work and the great increase of sales accomplished by Mr. Cobe recently. Mr. Cobe was formerly assistant to President Segal.

Globe Feature Film Adds to Sales Forces

Boston, Mass.—The Globe Feature Film Corporation of this city has increased their sales force, having taken on three new salesmen. The men are Frank J. Larkin, who is covering western Massachusetts, New Hampshire, and Vermont; W. H. Leahy, representing in the state of Maine, and T. E. Leahy, who is traveling with Al Lewis, manager of the "Enlighten Thy Daughter" road show, which is playing this picture on a percentage basis in Maine, New Hampshire, and Vermont.

General Manager Segal has just returned from New York, where he purchased the New England rights for several big productions.

New Goldwyn Exchange's Good Points.

Boston, Mass.—The new Goldwyn exchange on Piedmont street, this city, is practically completed. It is located in an ideal section, and receives a great quantity of sunlight. It runs back half way to the next street, giving space in which to store various film supplies.

The private office of Manager Campbell has been established on the first floor, and next to this is the office of his booker and private stenographer. In the center of the main floor a number of typewriter desks have been placed. Publicity Manager Joseph Di Pesa will also have a desk on the first floor. The shipping room is on the first floor on the left hand side of the building, with easy access to the street.

On the second floor is the projection room, large and roomy, with a fine screen and a new Power's machine. The re-wind room on this floor is large and light, enabling the girls to work in a pleasant room. Manager Campbell has had eight large racks built on this floor, where photographs, cuts, paper, etc., are stored. There are four vaults capable of storing hundreds of films, and an elevator to send films from the second floor to the shipping room. Everything has been built for convenience, and is up-to-date in every respect. There are four lavatories on the second floor.

Will Rebuild Famous Boston Theater.

Boston, Mass.—The famous old Boston theater, one of the oldest and largest theatrical houses in New England, is about to be torn down and rebuilt. The Boston theater is one of the old landmarks of this city, and for many years has been the home of legitimate plays.

Plans for the remodeling have been drawn up by A. Paul Keith and Edward F. Albee, to cost about $1,000,000.

According to present plans the new theater in the busy downtown section of the city will be the largest theatrical house in Boston. The main entrance and box office will be located on Washington street as at present. It is planned to tear down the Arcade at No. 162 Tremont street and rebuild it as a Tremont street entrance.

It will have 4,000 seats. It will be fitted with boxes. No definite date has been set to commence work. It is believed though that it will start shortly.

Charles Phillips Comes Back to Travel for Goldwyn.

Boston, Mass.—Charles Phillips, well known in New England film circles and more especially in this city, where for more than a year he was assistant manager of the Fox Film Corporation under Harry Campbell, has joined his former employer, who is now at the head of the Goldwyn interests in New England, with offices at No. 40 Piedmont street, Boston. Mr. Phillips will leave shortly on a road trip.

Mr. Phillips was associated with Harry Campbell for over a year in the Boston office of the Fox organization. Several months ago he was promoted and transferred to the Indianapolis exchange where he took charge of affairs. But just so soon as Mr. Campbell joined the Goldwyn forces he set about to get Mr. Phillips to go with him.

With the acquisition of Mr. Phillips, the Boston office of the Goldwyn organization, the local office is rapidly getting into shape and before long things will be in full swing. Mr. Campbell only recently appointed Frank Vine, former Boston manager of the International Film Service, a salesman in this territory. Mr. Vine on his several road trips has turned in good results, and Manager Campbell is highly pleased at the success attained by his men.

Two New Fox Pictures Shown.

Boston, Mass.—A large gathering of exhibitors and exchange men attended the private trade showing of two of the new Standard productions, "The Honor System" and "Jack and the Beanstalk," both of which were held at the Fenway theater, through the courtesy of Manager Stanley Sumner of the Fenway. Exhibitors expressed their approval of the pictures to Manager William S. Shapiro of the local Fox office. Mr. Shapiro is planning to conduct a sweeping advertising campaign for the Standard pictures and intends to run advertisements in every leading publication in New England.

Strand at Fall River Nearly Ready.

Fall River, Mass.—Construction of the new Strand theater in this city by Jannings Brothers is nearing completion and will probably be ready so that the management may put on a show Columbus Day at the latest. The Jannings Brothers, Nathan and A. I., are owners of the Plaza and Palace theaters in this city also. They plan to make the new Strand one of the finest theaters in New England.

Joseph M. Darling drew the plans for the new house and Charles F. Grinnell & Company are building the theater. It will have a seating capacity of 1,800, with 1,000 seats on the ground floor and the remainder in the balcony. The cost is estimated at $60,000. An up-to-date cooling system will be installed for use during the summer months, and many other modern accommodations will be made in the new house. It is planned to have the picture booth located between the floor and the balcony.

Jannings Brothers will have a large orchestra and brand new organ for their new enterprise. The program will consist of moving pictures and vaudeville.

Charles Mailley Takes Brighton Theater.

Boston, Mass.—Charles Mailley, former manager of Gordon's Scollay Square theater, Boston, has taken over the Brighton theater in Brighton and reports that he is doing a good business.

Soldiers and Sailors See "Italian Battle Front" Free.

Boston, Mass.—The management of "The Italian Battlefront," the interesting war pictures showing at the Tremont theater in this city, has extended a very welcome courtesy to soldiers and sailors of New England. Any man in uniform may attend the performance free by applying to the box office for tickets between 2 p. m. and 8 p. m. On behalf of the Italian Government, William Moore Patch, directing the American tour of the Italian pictures, will be the host, and any soldier, sailor or marine in uniform will be the guest.

There are two exhibitions daily, matinees at 2:15 and evenings at 8:15. There is an orchestra of forty pieces.

Italy's purpose in throwing open exhibitions to the uniformed men is to let those men who are soon to fight for liberty profit by the experiences of the fighters on the Italian front.

Goldwyns for Six-Day Runs in Worcester.

Boston, Mass.—Manager Harry F. Campbell, of the local Goldwyn exchange, is pleased. Together with his two sales representatives, Charles Phillips and Frank Vine, he has closed large contracts recently, and reports of sales come to the Boston office every day.

The three theaters are B. F. Keith's in Portland, Maine; B. F. Keith's in Lowell, Mass., and Nathan Gordon's Park theater, Worcester, Mass. This year is the first time that a theater in Worcester has been a six-day run house. Besides the Park theater is one other with a six-day run program, the Strand, which subscribes for the Artcraft service. The new policy seems to meet with the approval of moving picture fans in that city. Mr. Campbell, himself, closed the contract for the two Keith theaters, with R. D. Larsen in charge of the Keith interests in this city, and Harvey Watkins associated with B. F. Keith. Several other contracts for shorter runs have been signed up by Manager Campbell and his two salesmen.

Adolphi Enjoying Tides and Fogs.

BAR HARBOR, ME.—The William Fox Company, which is filming an elaborate photoplay at Bar Harbor, is to spend many dollars on this production. Director Adolphi is highly pleased with the scenery about Bar Harbor, but the recent fogs and rains have dampened his enthusiasm. Tidal conditions have hampered the players and the water is very cold indeed, but in spite of difficulties the work is progressing. High tides three times swept away a set costing $4,500, known as the "Cavern of Despair." Billy Noel and Ed Carroll, garbed in seal suits, made admirable seals. Miss Kellermann, who in private life is Mrs. James R. Sullivan, works every sunny day at the Sun Rocks. The sunburned and barnacle injured players have been taken care of by local physicians and are now convalescent. Curious spectators should not bring cameras, as the Fox Company wishes to reap the pictorial benefits of its million-dollar outlay.

Film Shows Maine Boys in Camp.

Bangor, Me.—More than 9,000 Augusta people saw the film of the Maine National guardsmen at the Colonial theater last week. The film, which was taken by Daniel M. Maher, of Bangor, shows the daily life of the Second Maine Infantry and First Maine Heavy Artillery in camp at Augusta and Brunswick. The title of the picture is Maine Sammies Preparing for the Front. It will be shown in Bangor and other Maine cities.

Trenton Theater Incorporated.

Trenton, N. J.—The Trenton Grand Theater Company of New Jersey was incorporated August 6 with an authorized capital of $5,000. J. Irving Davidson, of 139 East State street, is named as registered agent. The concern will operate theaters. The incorporators are John R. D. Bower, J. Irving Davidson and S. A. Peoples.

Newark Universal Has Important Changes

Office Is Moved to New Quarters—M. H. Goldstein Succeeds S. E. Fried as Manager—Additions to the Staff of the Exchange.

By Jacob J. Kalter, Newark, N. J.

NEWARK, N. J.—The Newark office of the Universal Film has undergone some radical changes. In the first place the local exchange has moved from its former quarters at 286 Market street to more convenient offices at 25 Branford place. In these new quarters the Universal will be in a better position to inaugurate and maintain a more efficient system of booking and of handling films and posters. They are directly opposite the Keeney theater, and is in the heart of the downtown business section.

Another important change is the leaving of Manager S. E. Fried, who is succeeded by M. H. Goldstein. Mr. Goldstein comes here from New England, where he acted as supervisor and manager of both the New Haven and Springfield exchanges of the Mutual film. He is a man possessed with some excellent ideas concerning the film industry. Talking to the correspondent of the Moving Picture World, Mr. Goldstein said: "You may tell the Jersey exhibitors for me that they are assured of a square deal when they do business here. Candidly, I admit but three years' experience in the film industry, but I've had a world of business experience, which stands me in good stead now."

As assistant to Mr. Goldstein, Henry Cole, of the Mecca branch of the Universal, has now joined the Newark office. He will act as general representative. Mr. Cole also has some decided innovations for the Jersey exhibitors. He has had printed a novel folder, and has been the recipient of many congratulations on it.

Louis Kutinsky will remain as representative with the local exchange. Mr. Kutinsky will cover West Hudson territory.

Miss Gertrude Barnett has joined the staff as office assistant and stenographer. Miss Barnett is well known to all Jersey exhibitors, having been connected with the Fox Company. Miss Barnett also was with the New Jersey Exhibitors' League, and with the Pathe exchange.

Jerry Kraker will assume charge of the film and poster department, and will have as his assistants Moe Grubel and Moe Coleman.

Unpatriotic Protests Against Four-Minute Men.

Newark, N. J.—That a movement to boycott moving picture theaters where the Four-Minute Men are delivering their talks on the war is in evidence in this city, was the statement made at a meeting last Friday of the organization of speakers. If this discrimination is shown, the Four-Minute Men will take steps to combat it. At the meeting, however, no sufficient proof was given, and the campaign managers were skeptical as to the veracity of the statement.

The Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of New Jersey at a meeting last week approved the Four-Minute idea, and appointed a committee to co-operate with the speakers.

The Strand theater, 118 Market street, has agreed to allow a patriotic song, written by a local man, to be sung this week as part of its program.

The theater managers are doing all in their power to aid the movement, but nevertheless people sympathizing with Germany perhaps will get up and go out when the speaker is announced. The Newark Evening News, in a recent article, declared that this was due probably "to the fact that moving picture patrons visit the theaters to see and not to hear."

Frank Keeney on Vacation.

Spring Lake, N. J.—Frank A. Keeney, proprietor of the Keeney theater, Newark, one of a chain of Keeney theaters, was enjoying a brief vacation at this place last week.

Showing of "I Believe."

Newark, N. J.—A private showing of the religious film, "I Believe," was given Friday morning at the Fox Terminal theater, Park place, exclusively for members of the clergy. The firm of Frank Gersten, Times building, New York, control the northern New Jersey rights to the film. Herbert H. Yudkin represents the concern in this territory.

Fire at Warren Square.

Newark, N. J.—Small boys and matches was the cause of a small fire at the Warren Square theater, 465 Warren street, last Friday. W. F. Conway is the tenant. The entire moving picture stage and part of the building was damaged by the flames and water.

"The Slacker" at Goodwin.

Newark, N. J.—For the entire week of August 13, the Metro patriotic production, "The Slacker," featuring Emily Stevens, was the attraction at the Goodwin, 863 Broad street. Mrs. L. H. Webbe, who runs the Goodwin, advertised the film extensively, and the box office results were exceedingly good.

Union Hill Amusement Corporation Starts.

Union Hill, N. J.—The P. & K. Amusement Company, with registered offices at 8 Bergenline avenue, filed articles of incorporation August 2. Edward Hollander is named as agent of the concern, which is capitalized at $25,000. The corporation is empowered to operate moving picture theaters. Besides Mr. Hollander, the incorporators are Hyman Kaplan and Herman Kerkelmer.

Baltimore Sees Good Business This Fall

Many Theaters Are Reopening—Serials and Short Subjects Are Popular—Stars and Features Also Getting Hearty Reception.

J. M. Shellman, 1902 Mt. Royal Terrace, Baltimore, Md.

BALTIMORE, MD.—While the summer has evidently worked great hardships on many of the exhibitors in Baltimore, still it can be seen by the way these theaters are again opening their doors that the coming season will probably be a good one. P. Oletzky, manager of the Baltimore Film exchange, states that he expects a big coming season, for many places are now reopening, and from his observations the business is gradually picking up every day. The serials and short subjects are going very good, and the demand for this class of pictures seems to be greater now than it has been for a long time. Arthur B. Price, Triangle representative in Baltimore and manager of the Rialto theater, says the Hart and Fairbanks reissues are meeting hearty receptions in this city.

Harry Woods Aids British Recruiting.

Baltimore, Md.—Through the courtesy of Harry Woods, manager of the Garden theater, Lexington street at Park avenue, the British Recruiting Mission in Baltimore was given great assistance on Friday afternoon and night, August 24. Around noon on this day the 16 members of "The Boys in Blue" act, then running at this theater, headed by a band and eight members of the mission, paraded through the business section, and ended up at Hopkins Place, where a drill was given and appeals for recruits made. During the evening performance at the theater, after this act was completed other speeches and appeals were made, it was call "British Night" at the theater. Recruiting cards are being posted in the lobbies of the downtown theaters by the mission.

Enthusiasm at Trade Screening of "The Spy."

Baltimore, Md.—Due credit should be given L. A. DeHoff, manager of the New theater, 210 West Lexington street, for the interest he is taking in donating his beautiful playhouse so frequently for trade screenings of big features. These premiere views are usually held on Sunday nights, and a noticable fact is that they have been extremely well attended. The latest showing of this kind occurred Aug. 19, and on this occasion the William Fox production, "The Spy," was shown to an audience numbering about 450, composed of the members of the Charcoal Club, an artist's organization of Baltimore, and many exhibitors and their friends. Special music for the occasion was rendered in a beautiful manner by Prof. E. V. Cupero and his symphony orchestra. This wonderful exploit of the horrible German spy system was received with great enthusiasm by the assembled people.

Bridge Theater Criticism Contest.

Baltimore, Md.—During the week of August 20, on the days that Louis Schlichter ran Mary Pickford in "The Little American" four prizes were offered for the best opinions turned in on this picture. The motion picture editors of the Baltimore papers acted as the judges.

S. Lust Joins National State Rights Buyers

Gives Up Washington Selznick Office and Will Cover Territory in Connection with National Organization of State Rights Buyers.

By Clarence L. Lenz, 622 Riggs Building, Washington, D. C.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Sidney B. Lust has just announced that he has disposed of his interest in the business in this territory covering the Selznick Attractions to Mr. Selznick following the entrance into the home company of Adolph Zukor. As previously noted in the Moving Picture World, Selznick and Brenon pictures are hereafter to be handled by a separate exchange in this city under the management of Vivian Whitaker. The latter is temporarily located with Mr. Lust pending the putting into shape of the quarters which he has just selected.

Mr. Lust is joining with a number of other state rights buyers in what is to be known as the Natonal Organization of State Rights Buyers. It is understood that the United States is to be divided up into twenty-six territories, and allotments made to that number of men. The plan originated, so it is said, with Sol Lesser. It is intended to buy negatives and make distribution of films in accordance with the requirements of the respective territories. A meeting to go over details was held in New York during the week.

The territory consisting of Maryland, Delaware, Virginia, North Carolina and the District of Columbia, now handled by Mr. Lust, would be covered by him as a member of this organization. In addition, he is arranging for a large number of feature films to market in addition to those he is already handling, including "20,000 Leagues Under the Sea," booked for an indefinite run at the Leader theater here; "Civilization," "Witching Hour," Ella Wheeler Wilcox series, Billy West two-reelers, the Mutt & Jeff comedies and others.

Mr. Lust also announces that E. W Balderson, heretofore in charge of the office, has been appointed traveling representative of the exchange, and will cover the District of Columbia, Virginia and North Carolina. He is succeeded as office manager by R. W. Fuller, of Dallas, Texas, a recent arrival in Washington.

Permit Granted to Build New Theater.

Washington, D. C.—The securing of a permit to build last week set at rest all rumors that have from time to time arisen to the effect that Harry Crandall for some reason or another would be unable to go ahead with the building of his new Metropolitan theater, which is to be located at Tenth and F streets, Northwest. The building inspector's office has issued a permit to Crandall's Theater Company to erect such a theater at a cost of $200,000. R. W. Geare is the architect, and the contract has been awarded to F. L. Wagner, who is going ahead with the construction work.

With a view to incorporating in this theater building all of the very latest in equipment and construction, Mr. Crandall and the architect have been making trips to other cities, studying all of the recently erected theaters. Both of these gentlemen and Mr. Crandall's associates in the company are well pleased with the outlook, for they fully expect to have a building that is as modern as it is possible to secure.

Propose Theater Ship for Men of Navy.

Washington, D. C.—There is a deal of discussion around Washington concerning matters of entertainment for the soldiers and sailors who are going to participate in the war. The latest proposal is a theater ship for the entertainment of the naval personnel afloat. Such a feature has been adopted profitably, it is said, for the British grand fleet. In additon to the regular forms of recreation that prevail on board individual ships there has been provided a theater ship, a large floating place of amusement. This is brought alongside any war vessel that makes application therefor, and a performance given. It is said that this might be done in our own navy, utilizing the talent on board the ships for vaudeville and securing pictures for motion picture exhibitions, attaching the theater ship to the fleet.

James H. Butner Leaves for Atlanta.

Washington, D. C.—It was with regret that the film men of Washington last week parted company with James H. Butner, former manager of the local Triangle exchange, who has gone to Atlanta, Ga., to join the forces of Jake Wells, presumably to handle the state rights pictures that the Wells organization will secure in the future.

When seen for a brief moment by the Moving Picture World correspondent, Mr. Butner stated that he could not outline the work connected with his new position other than to say that he would probably assume charge of the exchange feature of the Wells interests.

Mr. Butner came here about a year ago, after an absence of some years, to open the Washington Triangle office. He had a host of friends in the city, for he had previously been engaged here in newspaper work with the Associated Press. He foresaw the great opportunities of the film business, and accordingly entered it, obtaining a position as salesman, then as manager of an exchange in Philadelphia. He joined Triangle and made periodic trips to Washington from the Philadelphia office until he opened the new branch.

He had hardly become established in Washington before his fellow exchange managers sought him out as president of their little, though thriving organization, and he served in that position until a couple of weeks ago, when, on severing his connection with the Triangle Distributing Corporation, he presented his resignation. In consideration of the excellent service he had rendered the Washington Exchange Managers' Association, he was elected an honorary member with all of the privileges of a regular member despite the fact that he will be located out of the city.

A. Van Roley Reopens Casino Theater.

Washington, D. C.—The Casino theater, at Seventh and F streets, Northwest, has been reopened by A. Van Roley, of New York. "Feature pictures of an unusual type," are advertised for this house, and the first offering was "Twilight Sleep." The afternoon exhibitions were restricted to women, and the evening performances to the men.

Mr. Van Roley states that later on he may employ vaudeville specialties of equal novelty with the pictures of unusual type.

Theaters Near Camps Expect Sunday Shows

Military Authorities, It Is Understood, Will See That Exhibitors Are Permitted to Keep Open for the Soldiers on Sundays.

By D. M. Bain, Wilmington, N. C.

CHARLOTTE, N. C.—From Chillicothe, Ohio, where fifty thousand troops are now assembling in training camps, comes the word that the military authorities have notified city officials that theater proprietors are to be allowed to open their theaters on Sundays just the same as on the other six days of the week, this is in order to provide adequate amusement facilities for the soldiers.

This announcement has created much interest here, as well as elsewhere throughout the South where eight large training camps will soon be in full operation with a total of something like 360,000 troops, all told, assembling for training. Speculation is being indulged in as to whether like action will be taken here, or whether this will only be done in districts close to places where Sunday shows are already allowed, and where, therefore, there would not be so much opposition to the Sunday showing of pictures.

Certain it is that should the War Department give the shows here and throughout the South where training camps are located the privilege of remaining open on Sundays such an avalanche of protests would descend upon the heads at Washington from the Ministerial Associations as would cause to pale into insignificance the many other "obstructionist" movements since the war began. In Charlotte, particularly, where it is unlawful to sell a soft drink or a cigar on Sunday, opposition would be strong and insistent, and it is doubted if even the exigencies of war used as an argument would dissuade certain elements of the city's leading citizens from opposing the open Sunday. Theater managers locally, upon the first hint of such a possibility, have started hurried investigations, and a statement will probably be forthcoming within the near future. While the local magnates would, of course, welcome the seventh day of revenue, the sentiment generally is that they would not welcome any such movement did it not coincide with the views of their regular patronage.

A Freak Bill Against Serving Special Drinks in Pictures.

Wilmington, N. C.—A freak bill introduced at the last session of the North Carolina Legislature, but which, through some prank of fate never came up for final passage, has just been unearthed. The bill introduced by Representative Withrow, reads as follows:

"A bill to prohibit showing drinking scenes in moving picture shows."

"The General Assembly of North Carolina do Enact:

"Section 1. That any person, firm or corporation engaged in the business of exhibiting moving pictures who shall within the State of Carolina exhibit a picture in which there is a scene showing any person or persons indulging in the drinking of spirituous, vinous or malt liquors, or intoxicating bitters, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and for each offense shall be punished by a fine of not more than $5 or imprisonment not more than thirty days.

"Section 2. That this act shall take effect and be in force from and after the first day of August, 1917."

The effect such a bill would have had in the state, had it passed and become a law, can easily be seen, and it would have caused the censoring and re-editing of everything in the picture line from Chaplin's latest comedy to Pathe's "The Life of Our Saviour."

Fred Young Visits Wilmington.

Wilmington, N. C.—Fred W. Young, representing the Serial Department of Atlanta Mutual exchange, was a visitor in the city last week. W. M. Sipe, now covering this territory for Atlanta Triangle office, is in the city this week.

Dixie Theater Much Improved.

Philadelphia, Pa.—James E. Seerey and Cornelius Keeney have completed extensive alterations in their Dixie theater at Manayunk where they also have rebuilt a new and up-to-date projection room under the able direction of Lewis M. Swaab, who also furnished two motor driven Simplex machines and other equipment.

Big First Runs at the Benn.

Philadelphia, Pa.—Marcus A. Benn, one of the pioneer exhibitors in this territory, has booked the first run in his neighborhood of Triangle, Fox, Metro, and Selznick pictures. He announces that he will shortly spend at least $1,500 beautifying his Benn theater and will also add to it the very latest equipment. Mr. Benn is a great believer in the early showing of big productions when obtained through the Stanley corporation .

K-E-S-E Pittsburgh Film Exchange Grows

Quarters at 123 Fourth Avenue Are to Be Enlarged and Made Very Attractive—S. Wheeler Joins the Selling Staff of the Exchange.

From Pittsburgh News Service, 6104 Jenkins Arcade, Pittsburgh, Pa.

PITTSBURGH, PA.—The quarters of the K-E-S-E Service, 123 Fourth avenue, Pittsburgh are to be considerably enlarged, and Manager C. K. Campbell is planning to make the exchange one of the most attractive and up-to-date in the city. The adjoining space, formerly occupied by the Unicorn exchange, will be added, about doubling the size of the office and giving more room for expansion.

Samuel Wheeler, formerly booker at the Fox and Triangle exchanges in this city, has joined the selling staff of the K-E-S-E, working out of the Pittsburgh office.

Pittsburgh, Pa.—The East Liberty Cameraphone theater, Pittsburgh, last week broke all previous house records with Pathe's "Battle of the Comme." The same subject has been placed in the Cambria theater, Altoona, Pa., for showing September 6, 7 and 8. "The British Tanks" will play at the Cambria September 13 and 14. The Altmeyer theater, McKeesport, will run the Pathe war pictures for five days, beginning August 27. This house has also contracted for the Gold Rooster Features.

L. A. Snitzer to Manage Goldwyn Road Staff.

Pittsburgh, Pa.—The local Goldwyn branch, sixth floor of the Seltzer Film building, Pittsburgh, has installed a handsome and commodious projection room, and same has been nicely equipped under the direction of Manager C. C. McKibbin

James B. Clark, head of the Rowland & Clark theaters, Pittsburgh, has contracted for the Goldwyn pictures, to be shown at the Regent theater, East Liberty, the finest of the R. & C. chain. Each release will be run three days.

L. A. Snitzer, for the past year and a half with the Pittsburgh Triangle exchange, has resigned to become manager of the road staff of the local Goldwyn office.

Horace Conway Comes to Wolfberg Exchange.

Pittsburgh, Pa.—Horace Conway, formerly manager of the Milwaukee branch of the General Film Company, is now a member of the Harris P. Wolfberg forces. Mr. Conway will probably be stationed at the Pittsburgh office, Lyceum Theater building, operating in Western Pennsylvania and West Virginia.

M. Teplitz Buys Out Amalgamated Film

Pittsburgh, Pa.—M. Teplitz, of the Specialty Film Company, Film Exchange building, Pittsburgh, has purchased the entire stock of films, paper and equipment of the Amalgamated Film Service, formerly the Unicorn, at 125 Fourth avenue. Same was sold at a constable's sale. The stock included over two hundred and fifty reels of film.

Notes from Pittsburgh Fox Exchange.

Pittsburgh, Pa.—J. C. Ragland, manager of the Standard Picture department of the Pittsburgh Fox exchange, reports excellent bookings on "The Honor System," the first release on this new program. Among the contracts already approved are the following: Majestic theater, Erie, one week; Grand theater, Homestead, one week; Robinson Grand, Clarksburg, W. Va., three days; Majestic, Rochester, two days; Bentley, Monongahela, two days; Majestic, Charleroi, two days.

Another trade showing of Fox Standard pictures drew a large attendance of exhibitors on Sunday, August 19, when "The Conqueror" and "The Spy" were presented at the Olympic theater, Fifth avenue, Pittsburgh. They met with much appreciation and were declared exceptionally strong subjects. The next trade showing will be "Camille," featuring Theda Bara.

Park to Run "Her Condoned Sin."

Erie, Pa.—The Park opera house, Erie, Pa., will shortly begin an engagement of "Her Condoned Sin," with a large augmented orchestra and advanced admission prices for September. Extensive advertising plans have been made by the Park theater management.

A. M. Weir's New Theater to Open.

Trade Notes in Pittsburgh.

The Famous Players exchange gave a largely attended trade showing of the great film spectacle, "Joan the Woman," featuring Geraldine Farrar, at the Regent theater, East Liberty, on Sunday afternoon, August 26.

The Anton theater, Monongahela, Pa., has been improved by the installation of a handsome Seeburg orchestral organ at a cost of $4,000.

A report is current in local moving picture circles that the Empire theater property, East Liberty, Pittsburgh, has been purchased by the Harris & Davis amusement interests.

More Baltimore Notes

Camp Meade to Have Theater.

Baltimore, Md.—Word is now going along the line that negotiations are being made with the Government to permit a large theater at Camp Meade, where 40,000 men will shortly be assembled for military training. A number of prominent Baltimoreans are associated with the matter behind which, it is stated, is a large New York theatrical corporation. Vaudeville and motion pictures will probably be the attractions, while standard productions may also be given. As the camp will be a permanent establishment, a large sum of money may be used for erecting the playhouse.

Business Notes from Baltimore.

Baltimore, Md.—The Patterson theater, 1202 Laurens street, which has been closed for some time, was reopened to the public on August 25. Robert L. Mead is now managing this house.

Baltimore, Md.—L. Hasslinger, the proprietor of the Daisey theater, Collington avenue and Gay street, states that he will reopen his theater to the public on September 1.

Baltimore, Md.—During the week of August 20, Douglas Fairbanks in "Down to Earth," packed them in at the Parkway theater, 3-9 West North avenue. The extensive improvements which are being made in this beautiful playhouse are in no way interfering with the schedule of performances.

Baltimore, Md.—Manager F. C. Schanberger opened the Maryland theater with Keith vaudeville and motion pictures on Monday, August 20, for the season.

Film News in Buffalo Last Week

"Four-Minute Men" Are Using Picture Theaters to Instruct Buffalo—Soldiers and Sailors Get Free Shows—Local Notes of the Film Trade.

By Joseph A. McGuire, 152 North Elmwood St., Buffalo, N. Y.

BUFFALO, N. Y.—The "Four-Minute Men and Women" are delivering peppery, punchful speeches in several of Buffalo's moving picture theaters this week They are telling the audiences that while our troops are going to the front housewives have a grave responsibility, and that Buffalo must help Uncle Sam feed the boys in France. The following are some of the points covered by the lecturers:

The fear of famine has caused many wars and also has won many victories; it is therefore the duty of the housewife to sign the Hoover pledge at once and promise to carry out the advice of the food administrator in the conduct of the household wherever possible.

This city (Buffalo) has a food conservation comittee, a home economic expert, and a community kitchen where "canning"—quite different from the kind so familiar to film men—may be followed on a pretentious scale.

Lectures have been given in the following theaters: Variety and Colonial; Allendale, Eastern Star, Abbott, Pastime and Grant; Tri-It, Colonial, Savoy, Victoria, Rialto and Orpheum; Columbia, Rialto, Victoria and Grant; New Arcadia, Como, Orpheum and Variety; Eastern Star, Abbott and Pastime. The audiences received the speakers enthusiastically.

Soldiers Enter Free at the Academy and Regent.

Managing Director Michaels of the Academy and Regent theatres, Buffalo, under the auspices of the Evening News, is entertaining hundreds of local soldier boys, who, when in uniform, are being admitted free to performances in both houses. The Buffalo Evening News arranged for the "wide-open-door" policy for these stouthearted devotees of the screen. So well did the soldiers take advantage of the favor that at nearly every performance of the Academy and Regent, these houses looked as if they were located a stone's throw from some military barracks.

Vocational School's Methods Shown in Film.

Buffalo, N. Y.—Moving pictures showing the work at Buffalo's vocational schools are being shown at Shea's Hippodrome. The schools are busy training youths to be able to work at the local plants, which are working night and day on war orders.

Buffalo Film Men Who May Soon Be Soldiers.

Buffalo, N. Y.—Among the Buffalo film men who were included in the draft were H. E. Hughes, who handles features at his own office; Manager Keating, of the Jubilee theater, and Leo Davidson, of the Mutual.

J. M. Gerchof Will Run Park Pavilion in Corning.

Buffalo, N. Y.—J. M. Gerchof, formerly road representative of the Mutual, Buffalo, was a caller. Mr. Gerchof has the honor of having made the first suggestion that the Buffalo Screen Club be formed early last year. He didn't stop with the suggestion, but got busy at that time and helped with the organization. Mr. Gerchof has just secured a contract to manage as an evening amusement place the Denison Park pavilion in Corning, N. Y. The park is owned by that city.

According to the contract he is to provide free moving pictures and other entertainment from 7:30 to 9 o'clock each evening for the benefit of the citizens of Corning. From 9 o'clock to midnight the pavilion will be conducted by him as a high class dance hall. Mr. Gerchof visited the local exchanges for his first quota of pictures and equipment.

"Believe me, I need the Moving Picture World every week," said the Corning man.

Ira B. Mosher, manager of the Palace theater, Buffalo, has returned from a two weeks' motor trip.

T. W. Dooley, representing the Super Film Attractions Co., Syracuse, was a Buffalo caller.

Atlanta News Letter.

By Alfred M. Beatty, 43 Copenhill Ave., Atlanta, Ga.

The Forsyth Will Reopen Labor Day.

Atlanta, Ga.—The Forsyth theater, Atlanta's big playhouse, which has been closed for the summer, is undergoing a systematic overhauling, and will re-open Labor Day with Keith vaudeville and motion pictures, as formerly.

The house has been repainted and redecorated, the seats all put in good condition, and it will be as cozy and comfortable as ever. George H. Hickman will again be in charge.

It is understood the Lyric will continue all winter as the home of popular-priced family vaudeville and motion pictures, although no definite announcement has been made.

E. A. Schiller Travels Much These Days.

Atlanta, Ga.—E. A. Schiller, southern representative of the Loew interests, left Atlanta Monday night for New Orleans, where he will remain ten days in the interest of widening the Loew circuit in the South.

Mr. Schiller has just returned from New York, where he advised with the home office of the Loew circuit in regard to extending the time in this territory and also discusses plans for building of a new Loew house in Atlanta. It is expected that on his return from New Orleans definite announcement will be made of all the plans decided on.

Geo. L. Schmidt Back at Alamo No. 2.

Atlanta, Ga.—George L. Schmidt, who has been in Rome, Ga., for recent weeks managing a motion picture theater, is again back in Atlanta and managing the Alamo No. 2, where he was so successful for many years. Mr. Schmidt has hundreds of friends in Atlanta and all over the South. He has seen service as a motion picture theater manager in many Southern cities, in all of which he has been uniformly successful.

Hank Cassidy Back on the Job.

Atlanta, Ga.—Hank Cassidy, who has been in a hospital in Chattanooga several weeks, has recovered, and returned to Atlanta Sunday.

Mr. Cassidy will return to his duties as advertising manager of the Wells' motion picture houses in Atlanta.

McMahan & Jackson Sue Adams Express

Ask Damages of $633 for Delay of Picture on Which Expensive Advertising Had Been Put Out—Hope to Teach a Lesson in Promptness.

By Kenneth C. Crain, 307 First National Bank, Cincinnati.

CINCINNATI, O.—Exchange men and exhibitors alike have for many moons had their grievances against the express companies, the exchange men being the recipients of many kicks from exhibitors on account of the failure of films to arrive on the date booked, due solely to carelessness on the part of employes of the express companies. Of late there has been a decided tendency to do something more than merely complain of these delays, several suits being recorded in various Ohio courts where advertised features were delayed in shipment and were therefore not shown.

One of the latest of these cases was filed a short time ago in Cincinnati by McMahan & Jackson against the Adams Express Co., Charles Rettig, lessee of the moving picture exhibiting rights of the Sorg opera house, at Middletown, O., being joined also as a plaintiff.

According to the petition filed, in which damages of $633.77 are asked, "How Molly Made Good" was advertised for exhibition at Middletown on January 20 last, and the express company failed to deliver the film, although it was shipped in ample time. The expense of the advertising and a reasonable estimate of the profits of the exhibition are sought to be recovered. A few more suits of this sort, moving picture men declare, will make the express companies a little more careful to see that films are delivered promptly.

Fox Office a Busy Place These Days.

Cincinnati, O.—Activities at the Fox offices here are progressing without any let-up, the work of getting the new system thoroughly established, and the routine made necessary by the several big releases recently sent out, giving Messrs. Conant and Knoepfle plenty to do. Mr. Knoepfle returned shortly from a three-day trip over the territory around Cincinnati, visiting exhibitors, while Mr. Conant, besides staging a great special showing of "Jack and the Beanstalk" for exhibitors, at the Hotel Gibson, in Cincinnati, has also arranged for private screenings of two other Fox Standard releases, "The Honor System" and "The Spy." P. C. Mooney, district manager, was in Cincinnati not long ago to look things over in this territory on one of his swings around the circle of five offices now under his supervision.

"Barrier" Has Splendid Week's Run.

Cincinnati, O.—The Selznick production of "The Barrier," a film version of one of Rex Beach's most successful books, had a splendid week's run at the Grand opera house at the advanced prices which have prevailed there during the entire summer season, the size and comfort of the big theater, with its splendid location, being factors which have kept up attendance even when other considerations were not favorable. "The Barrier" had much of the same sort of thrill as "The Spoilers," the first great Rex Beach moving picture success, and drew almost as well.

Manager Hite Feels Optimistic.

Cincinnati, O.—Manager C. C. Hite, who is rapidly getting things in splendid shape in this territory for Goldwyn pictures, returned from a recent trip to Indianapolis enthusiastic over a trade showing there of "Baby Mine" and other Goldwyn releases. Similar private exhibitions in Cincinnati have resulted in excellent bookings of the new pictures, and Mr. Hite feels highly optimistic over the success of the productions in this vicinity.

Movie Baseball Team Plays at Outing.

Cincinnati, O.—A "movie baseball team" organized by I. W. McMahan from some of the leading members of the exhibiting and exchange ranks in Cincinnati, helped to furnish a leading feature at the annual outing of the Chamber of Commerce at Coney Island recently, playing a highly exciting if not entirely errorless game with another team of business men. The line-up as announced in advance by Capt. McMahan, who himself assumed the onerous duty of pitching, was as follows: John Huebner, Jr., shortstop; Ned Hastings, catcher; Haines, first base; H. Serkowich, right field; Gue Mueller, center field; H. Levine, left field; C. C. Hite, second base; Charles Weigel, third base.

Demand for Sunday Shows in Chillicothe

Chillicothe, O.—Local moving picture exhibitors, who for some time have not been opening on Sunday on account of the success with which the authorities invoked the old Ohio "blue laws," are contemplating securing asquiescence in Sunday performances in the future, on account of the demand for wholesale recreation for the thousands of soldiers who will be in training at the cantonment, as well as for visitors and officers' families. The ice was broken recently, by way of experiment, by a band concert at one of the theaters on Sunday, at which admission was charged, and in view of the desire of the local authorities to make all conditions satisfactory for the soldiers, it is felt that there will be no trouble later on about Sunday opening.

Soldiers Guests of May's Opera House.

Piqua, O.—A military audience, consisting of all of the soldiers in Piqua at the time, saw "The Man Who Was Afraid" at May's opera house, on the special invitation of Manager Kress. The picture was felt by Mr. Kress to be one which would be especially pleasing to the soldiers, as it deals with the National Guard, and the enthusiasm of the boys proved that he was right.

Editing Motion Picture Films.

After a motion picture film has been developed and printed it is sent to the general manager or to the director to be "edited". Like an author's manuscript in the hands of an editor, it is shortened here and there, the captions altered, some parts entirely "cut" or deleted and the whole film dressed up to suit the ideas of the men closest in touch with the theater-going public.

The editing takes place in the projection room, says the Popular Science Monthly, but the altering—cutting the film and changing it—is done in the cutting and assembling room by men who do nothing else. Sometimes the men in the cutting room ("cutters", in the trade lingo) are so ovewhelmed and confused with orders issued by the studio officials that they are compelled to ask for additional explanations. Needless to say this wastes much time.

By means of the phonograph, however, one motion picture company is eliminating this waste and saving money. As the director watches a picture in the projection room he utters his editing orders into the transmitter of a dictating machine. The film is then sent back to the cutting room with the phonograph record.

Youngstown, O.—The management of the Park theater recently entertained members of a local G. A. R. Post at a special performance of "The Birth of a Nation".

New Ontario Inspector Pleases Film Men

New Inspector of Moving Picture Theaters Is Popular with Exhibitors—Was Assistant Inspector Under Mr. Newman—John Leonard Will Assist Him.

By W. M. Gladish, 1263 Gerrard Street, East, Toronto.

TORONTO, ONTARIO.—Moving picture men in Ontario are in high glee as a result of the appointment of Otter Elliott as inspector of moving picture theaters in Ontario. Mr. Elliott's regime starts under most auspicious circumstances because there is scarcely a film man in the province who does not admire him. Mr. Elliott served as the assistant inspector under the late Mr. Newman, and he was naturally in line for the post.

John Leonard, of 105 Concord avenue, Toronto, has been selected to succeed Mr. Elliott as assistant inspector. This, too, is a happy selection. Mr. Leonard is a returned soldier, having served with the First Signaling Station until he was wounded at Ypres on June 28, 1916. Mr. Leonard is also a practical theater man, having served considerable time as a projection machine operator and otherwise.

Changes in Canadian General Film.

Toronto, Ont.—Some important changes have been made in the Canadian organization of the General Film, which directly affect the Toronto branch of the company. J. F. Clancy, the Toronto district manager for the past three months, has been procoted to the position of business manager for the whole company and will make his headquarters in Montreal. F. H. Wells, who has been general sales manager, has become the manager of distribution.

Mr. Leslie MacIntosh, formerly a Toronto salesman for the General, has been appointed manager of the Toronto office.

The General Film is now releasing twenty-five reels each week through its various branch exchanges.

Phil Kaufman Becomes Vice-President of Globe Film.

Toronto, Ont.—The important news has been released that Phil Kaufman has become vice-president of the Globe Film Company, 221 Yonge street, Toronto. Mr. Kaufman was Toronto district manager of the Famous Players for a number of years and is one of the best known exchange men in Canada.

Announcement was also made a short time ago that Maurice Kaufman, formerly Montreal manager for the Famous Players, had become associated with the Globe Company. The two are brothers. Phil Kaufman has just made an important business trip to New York for the Globe Company, which has been distributing Ivan productions and many special releases throughout Canada. The Globe is one of the youngest film exchange companies in Canada. Closely associated with it are the Globe and Rialto theaters in Toronto, two of the most important downtown houses.

The Globe Film Company recently acquired the Canadian rights to Evelyn Nesbit's "Redemption," the first release of which was booked by Loew's theater, Toronto. Second run went to the Photodrome, Toronto, for the two weeks of the Canadian National Exhibition, August 27 to September 8.

The company recently moved into handsome new headquarters over the Rialto theater, Yonge street.

Two Toronto Newspaper Men Enter Local Picture Field.

Toronto, Ont.—Two Toronto newspapermen have taken up duties in the local moving picture field. Harold Hutchinson, formerly of the Toronto World, has become assistant treasurer of the Strand Theater Company, while George Mitford, also of the World, has also become publicity manager for the Regent theater, Toronto.

M. M. Davis Gets Executive Job at Fox Montreal Office.

Montreal, Que.—Maurice M Davis has been appointed assistant manager of the Montreal branch of the Fox Film. He was formerly associated with the Famous Players in Montreal.

A. H. Fischer Now General Sales Manager of Independent.

Toronto, Ont.—Abe H. Fischer, formerly president and general manager of the United Photoplays, Limited, has become general sales manager of the Independent Film & Theater Supply Company with branches in Toronto, Montreal, Winnipeg and elsewhere. This company has just acquired a number of state right features, the first of which is "God's Man."

Theaters in Canada Expect Prosperous Season.

Toronto, Ont.—More and still more theaters are being renovated in anticipation of great business next fall and winter.

Montreal, Que.—Extensive improvements are being made in the National Biograph, Notre Dame street, West Montreal.

Toronto, Ont.—The lobby of the Colonial theater, City Hall square, Toronto, has been remodeled and the house has been otherwise refitted.

Windsor, Ont.—The Favorite theater, Windsor, under the management of Clyde Curry, is undergoing extensive renovations. Mr. Curry promises that his house will be one of the nicest in western Ontario when alterations are completed.

Kitchner, Ont.—The Roma theater, Kitchner, which was almost totally destroyed by fire, is being rebuilt under the direction of Leo Longo.

Ottawa, Ont.—The Flower theater, Ottawa, which was closed in June, will be reopened before September 1. A number of changes have been made in the structure during its darkness.

Toronto, Ont.—Plans have been drawn by B. Woolson, 186 Queen street, East, Toronto, for the alteration of the premises at 1184 Queen street, West, into a moving picture theater, the expenditure to be $1,100.

Studio Being Altered.

Newark, N. J.—The Chelsea Securities Investment Company, owner of the building situated at 261 Washington street, has secured a permit for alterations to the moving picture studio there occupied by the Washington Studios of the Newark Film Corporation. The estimated cost of the work is $2,000.

Goodwin to Show Goldwyn.

Newark, N. J.—The Goodwin theater, under the management of Mrs. L. H. Webbe, will be the first in Newark to show the new Goldwyn pictures. Announcement of this fact has already been made. The first feature will probably be shown the week of September 9.

Mr. Exhibitor:—You will get more helpful information by carefully reading one trade paper weekly than by skimming over three or four. The MOVING PICTURE WORLD is the one paper you need.

Plenty of Business in Louisville Already Soldiers Won't Be Coming Till September, but Even the Workmen on the Camp Site Have Helped Local Business Markedly.

By Ohio Valley News Service, 1404 Starks Bldg., Louisville, Ky.

LOUISVILLE, KY.—Louisville moving picture exhibitors, together with practically everybody else in Louisville, are busy getting ready for the soldiers, the first group of which are due to arrive at Camp Zachary Taylor, just outside of the city, early in September. There are to be about 40,000 troops stationed at this camp and they will enjoy a five-cent car fare to the downtown theater district.

Of course, there will be moving pictures for the men at the Y. M. C. A. halls in the camp, at the big Army Auditorium, and probably at the entrance to the camp, but the downtown exhibitors do not appear to be the least disconsolate over the prospects of getting their full share of the business that undoubtedly will be developed. The men can stay in the camp and go to picture shows among the soldiers all they want to. The only way they can get a girl and go to a show will be to come to town. Even if the soldiers themselves were not to be counted on for patronage, they are going to bring unusual prosperity to the city. An evidence of this has been shown during the construction of the camp. Here were about 10,000 laborers and the payroll has been around $250,000 a week. There was a lot of this money that went out of the city to the dependents of the workmen in other places, but enough of it was distributed in Louisville to give the retail merchants some of the best business they have had in months.

The soldiers, although they will not draw as much money, will not have to send it home because few will have dependents, and there will be many times more soldiers than there have been workmen. In looking ahead, planning for the kind of pictures that the boys will want, the exhibitors are reported to be proposing to provide pictures away to a considerable extent from the military. Pictures of the war in Europe and scenes as close to actual action as possible will be considered very desirable, but ordinary military stuff, it is figured, will hardly pull because most of the boys will have been fed up on military things by their hard training at the camp.

Light Cretonnes Make Theater Seem Cool.

Louisville, Ky.—Several of the Louisville theaters have been more comfortable, speaking psychologically, this summer than has been the case before. This statement applies especially to The Strand and the Mary Anderson, as well as to Keith's. At all of these houses the heavy velvet, plush or other rich hangings have been supplanted by cretonnes of light color and texture. Of course, curtains do not increase the actual warmth when they are used merely for ornaments inside a theater, but they "look hot," as the womenfolk say, and the result is much the same. They also have become encrusted with dust during the long winter and, even if they are good enough to go back up next winter, they will be all the better for a rest and a trip to the cleaners. The light cretonnes look cool and fresh and add a great deal to the mental comfort of the patrons of the houses. Besides that they are comparatively inexpensive.

Majestic Theater Advertises Coming Features.

Louisville, Ky.—Louis J. Dittmar returned from New York to announce that he had closed a contract for presentation at the Majestic theater of the All-Star Paramount program. Mr. Dittmar made the announcement with pardonable pride and by use of extended advertising space and readers gave the announcement in detail to the Louisville public. Stress is laid in this publicity on the stars who will be seen during the coming months on the Majestic screen.

Power Company's Bad Coal Dims Theaters.

Louisville, Ky.—Some of the Louisville houses, principally those on the outskirts, were inconvenienced by partial failure of the Central Station electric service some nights ago. This followed complete suspension of the street lights, which were shut off when the attendants at the central station power house found their steam going down. The service to residences and business houses grew indifferent, especially away from the central part of the city, until the steam was raised in another power unit at the power house. The difficulty, it was explained, was due to the fact that, having had to buy everywhere to get suffcient coal to continue operations with, the lighting company got some that would not do the work required of it. Before the situation was discovered and corrected service was very considerably reduced.

Savoy at Nicholasville Continues Sunday Shows.

Nicholasville, Ky.—W. C. Jackson, manager of the Savoy theater, continues to give Sunday programs, under the authority of the Board of Council. Petitions are being circulated addressed to the council, urging withdrawal of its consent and noting the fact that the manager of the local bathing beach has agreed to close the beach on Sunday. Mr. Jackson's position is simply this—he has been given the privilege by constituted authorities to run his theater on Sundays and proposed to do so.

Good Pictures Pay in Falmouth.

Falmouth, Ky.—The Duncan theater, Elmer Woodhead, proprietor, is another example of a theater in a small city which proves that good pictures can be made to pay. Since taking charge of the theater Mr. Woodhead has made numerous improvements in the house and in the film service. The house shows much the same pictures as are seen on the screens of the larger cities. Mr. Woodhead has recently completed showing of the serial "Patria," and Paramount stars are frequently seen, as well as Mary Pickford and Charlie Chaplin. On Saturday night, August 18, Mr. Woodward added a vaudeville bill to the program.

Screeners to Roast Corn Cobs.

CLEVELAND, OHIO.—The Cleveland Screen Club is making arrangements for a big corn roast and picnic to be held the middle of September.

This event will probably be at Willoughbeach, which has a fine dance hall and beach, and will be the second outing of the club this summer.

The club in the future will have its weekly luncheons and meetings in a private dining room at the Colonial theater. Arrangements for the picnic will be completed at the meeting August 22.

At the regular monthly business meeting of the screeners the following new members were elected: Miles F. Gibbons and J. H. Norwood of the K-E-S-E exchange; G. G. Rich of the Famous Players; S. A. Gerson, Buckeye Poster Company; Ike Morris, Home theater; W. J. Brant, Stillman theater; J. E. Beck, Vitagraph exchange.

Babyland Film Making New Picture.

Cleveland, O.—The Babyland Film Company of Cleveland, maker of children's pictures with amateur actors, is now making a new picture called "The Adventures of Jack and Jill." Last spring this concern made a three-reel picture of the famous fairy tale, "Puss in Boots."

Making Use of Local Events.

Cleveland, O.—Charley Hutsenpiller, manager of the Virginia theater, is surely of the live Cleveland exhibitors. Recently the merchants of his vicinity had a big picnic and he took moving pictures of it. A few days later he exhibited these pictures and enormous crowds attended the theater. These occasional local interest pictures give a big lift to a theater in the eyes of many patrons. The habit of going to any theater is easily acquired when the show is worthy. There is hardly anything better than to get local faces on the screen now and then. It may bring some in who have never visited it before, and even if the possible patron misses the picture he hears about it and it helps him remember the house. He may drop in just to see if something else is doing.

Two New Exchanges to Locate Here.

Cleveland, O.—Cleveland shortly will have at least two more film exchanges.

The Four Square Pictures people are now in the city looking for suitable space and expect to open up shortly. The offices will be in charge of D. Leo Dennison, who was formerly with the Paramount. George W. Weeks, of Detroit, will have supervision over the Ohio territory and an office also will be opened soon in Cincinnati.

The Jewel Productions, Inc., will open up offices in Cleveland within a month. This is a big state rights marketing company, recently formed in New York.

Sam Schultz's Exchange Prospers.

Toledo, O.—The Consolidated Film service of Toledo is doing a nice business under Sam Schultz, one of the owners. Besides a large number of one and two-reel subjects, he has many five-reel features. Sam is a hustler and says he will have a large number of new pictures for the coming fall and winter.

Barnett Film Moves Office.

Cleveland, O.—The Barnett Film Attractions, handling "Joan the Woman" and "Twenty Thousand Leagues Under the Sea," has moved from the Sincere building, to larger quarters at 722 Columbia building, from which offices they have started their fall and winter booking.

IN DETROIT.

Foursquare Picture at the Washington.

Detroit, Mich.—"The Bar Sinister," the first of the Hoffman Foursquare Pictures to be released in Michigan, has been booked for a solid week at the Washington theater, Detroit. It will then play a week at the Liberty theater. Division Manager George W. Weeks says the outlook is very bright both in Michigan and Ohio, and that he is sure of numerous fall bookings.

Notes of the Trade in Detroit.

The new Charlie Chaplin comedies, to be released through the First National Exhibitors' Circuit, will play one week each at the Madison theater, Detroit.

Dave Mundstock, of the Strand Features, Detroit, is back from a ten days' trip in New York, where he bought some new Chaplin comedies, and a series of two-reel W. S. Hart reissues. Mr. Mundstock will have a big assortment of film attractions for the coming fall season.

The Regent theater, Detroit, closes August 26 and will reopen Sept. 3 with vaudeville and pictures, policy to be continuous from noon to 11 p. m. Tom Ealand, at present manager of the Orpheum, will be in charge of the house.

F. J. Stafford, formerly operating the Central theater in Pontiac, has leased the Fuller theater, in Kalamazoo. George Spaeth continues as manager.

A. I. Shapiro, Detroit manager of the Goldwyn Co., has been taken in the draft, but has asked for exemption. Mr. Shapiro has landed many fine contracts so far and they are from the very best theaters in the state. The Madison, Detroit, has the first run in town.

H. I. Garson Gets Court Order.

Detroit, Mich.—Although Harry I. Garson won the injunction suit started by Lewis J. Selznick to restrain him from doing business in Michigan, the court has decreed that the Garson exchange must send to Selznick 42½ per cent. of the receipts as per the original contract.

Robert Cotton Sticks Fast to Program.

Detroit, Mich.—There is only one policy that dominates Robert Cotton, World Film manager at Detroit, and that is—World Pictures-Brady Made—one a week. Regardless of all the independent releases and the talk of open booking, Mr. Cotton is convinced absolutely that the program is the only system, and he proves it by saying that he has not had a single cancellation in many weeks, regardless of all the open-booking agitation. "World-Brady-Made customers don't want to give up our program—they want to keep it," he said. "They know that we are giving consistent pictures week in and week out—their patrons like them—and we don't ask a fabulous price for them. We want our clients to offer their patrons good pictures, consistent, dependable—and not poor stories, fair productions and high-salaried stars."

Mr. Cotton has been in charge of the World exchange at Detroit for several years, coming here originally as special representative. He was formerly in other lines of commercial business, and when it comes to genuine salesmanship—the kind Charles Schwab talks about—hats off to Brother Cotton, who certainly is "there."

Big Detroit Contract by Artcraft-Paramount

Close to $135,000 Worth of Bookings Secured from Three Leading Theaters in Automobile City—How the Program Is Divided.

By Jacob Smith, 718 Free Press Building, Detroit, Mich.

DETROIT, MICH. — Artcraft-Paramount can certainly feel elated over the deal which they put over in Detroit, Friday, August 17, and which involves close to $135,000 worth of bookings in three leading theaters—the Majestic, Washington and Broadway-Strand. In short, the deal is this: the three houses mentioned are splitting up the Artcraft-Paramount list of pictures, each taking about one-third of the entire program. For instance, the John H. Kunsky theaters get Douglas Fairbanks, the D. W. Griffith productions and others. The Broadway-Strand gets Mary Pickford, W. S. Hart, Pauline Frederick and the De Mille productions. The Majestic theater gets Marguerite Clark and the Stuart Blackton series, as well as others. Each house will play all features not less than one week. The Arbuckle and Sennett comedies will go to the Broadway-Strand.

Represented in the deal were Al Lichtman, general manager for Artcraft-Paramount, and John H. Kunsky, representing the Kunsky interests; Harry I. Garson, representing the Broadway-Strand, and Frank Westbrook, representing the Majestic theater.

It is positively the biggest booking deal ever made in the city of Detroit—it represents about $135,000 worth of bookings between the three first-run houses, and means that the three leading theaters will book out of the same office.

As they would say in the land of slang, "it was some deal."

Bookings with the three houses mentioned will be in operation by the early part of Sepember, although the Broadway-Strand started its new booking arrangement Sunday, August 26, with "The Amazons," owing to it having previously been contracted. Future Marguerite Clark pictures go to the Majestic.

Several New Theaters Building in Detroit.

Detroit, Mich.—Theaters under construction at the present time in Detroit are the De Luxe, at Kercheval and Parkview; the Farnum theater in Hamtramck section; a theater in Springwells section, and one on West Fort street, between Military and Cavalry, which will seat 2,000 people. Louis Smilansky, with offices in the Chamber of Commerce, is building the West Fort street theater. All will be in operation by January 1 or thereabouts.

Robert Cotton, World Film, Detroit.

Percentage Basis Good for Small Houses

Flint, Mich.—Opinions vary as to whether percentage or straight rental is the best proposition for the exhibitor booking big feature attractions. The larger exhibitors would prefer to play pictures on straight rental, while the smaller ones prefer percentage basis. For instance, Charles Garfield, of the Orpheum theater in Flint, would much prefer to play straight rental, and take the gamble himself of cleaning up rather than playing on percentage and giving the big end to the man with the picture. But the smaller exhibitor, expressing the views of B. Sargent of West Branch, is that he cannot afford to take the chance of paying big rental, hence must rely on percentage.

World Man Finds Colonial Theater Top-Notcher.

Detroit, Mich.—The World correspondent made a trip through the new Colonial theater, Woodward at Sibley streets, Detroit, one day last week, and he must say that the Colonial is one of the finest houses in the middle west from the standpoint of being fireproof and modern. It is being built both for vaudeville and pictures. The house will seat 1,700, of which 800 seats are on the main floor. The picture booth is built on the roof of the building—that is, the roof at that place drops down sufficiently to make the booth in proper line with the stage, and yet it is outside. The policy of the Colonial will be vaudeville and pictures, showing continuously from 1 to 11 p. m. daily. The Colonial will open around Sept. 20. William Newkirk is to be the house manager, and he is already on the job. C. A. Hoffmann and Graham Hoffmann are building the Colonial. They now operate the Palace theater on Monroe avenue. Prices at the new house will be from 10 to 25 cents for the regular seats and 50 cents for the boxes.

Two New Men With Detroit Vitagraph.

Detroit, Mich.—J. M. Duncan, manager of the Vitagraph exchange in Detroit, announces two important appointments: L. G. Parkhurst as his assistant and L. E. Davis as city salesman. Mr. Parkhurst was formerly manager at Detroit for Pathe and for the past six months has been in Kansas City for Pathe. Mr. Davis has been with Pathe for several pears in Detroit, and enjoys the unique distinction of being the highest paid film salesman in Detroit. Both men will prove of great value to the booking department of Vitagraph in Michigan, and Manager Duncan says he is very much pleased over their acquisition.

Let Exchanges Get Film Back Quickly.

Detroit, Mich.—Michigan film exchange managers have asked the World to call attention to the laxity of exhibitors in sending back their film on time. Of late quite a number of theaters have had to remain dark because film booked to them was delayed in transit or because some exhibitor had delayed in shipping the film as per instructions. If exhibitors all over the country would bear in mind that their inattention to the prompt shipment of film means loss to the exchange and some other theater they would probably be more careful in this matter. SHIP YOUR FILM PROMPTLY AND GET THE ADDRESSES CORRECT ON THE SHIPPING BOX. The carelessness of one exhibitor may mean the rerouting and changing of bookings for twelve or fifteen houses.

Indianapolis Alhambra Much Beautified

Barton and Olson Have Spared no Expense in Making the New Picture Theater Acceptable—Notes About the Firm.

From Indiana Trade News Service, 861 State Life Bldg., Indianapolis, Ind.

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.—Another important milestone in the amusement affairs of the Hoosier capitol was passed Saturday evening, August 18, in the opening of the new Alhambra theater, which is devoted entirely to photoplays and motion pictures of high quality.

The Alhambra is one of the Barton & Olson chain of theaters and this firm, one of the pioneers of the motion picture field, has spared no expense in rebuilding the house. Located in the very heart of the business and shopping district of the city, it is the second largest motion picture theater in Indianapolis and one of the best in the entire state.

Seats for 1,200.

The Alhambra now has a seating capacity of more than 1,200. There are 700 seats on the lower floor, 500 in the balcony and sixty comfortable loge seats. The new chairs, solid leather upholstered, are of the latest design for the theater patron's comfort. The loge chairs are of the very best of wicker.

The cost of rebuilding the Alhambra, which now has an additional width of fifteen feet, exceeds $40,000. There are many innovations, among them being a mezzanine floor, elegantly furnished with every convenience, including free telephones and writing desks. A ladies' rest room and a gentleman's smoking room are in the basement, which also houses a music room for orchestra rehearsals, a private projection department for the inspection of picture subjects, a recreation room for employes and the manager's office.

Operator's Booth and Projection.

Messrs. Barton and Olson have given careful attention to the subject of picture projection. The operating booth is equipped with two new Simplex machines, spot and flood lights. The booth is fireproof in every detail and, as an extra precaution, is protected with fire ventilating shafts and automatic shutters.

The picture, size 12 by 16 feet, is thrown upon a specially prepared screen, built in Philadelphia, and the only one of its kind to be installed in the middle west. In abolishing eyestrain, it is said to be far superior to even a mirror screen. The screen forms the background of a stage upon which singers and concert artists who may be employed will appear.

The Ventilating System.

One of the most complete ventilating systems ever installed in a theater is one of the important new features. The air is washed and cooled before being forced into the house. Individual ventilators are located under each seat. Large exhaust fans, perfectly noiseless in operation, draw the air out of the house, thus keeping fresh, cool air in constant circulation. Sixteen silent fans also are stationed in the house and no matter how warm it may be outside, a temperature near 70 can easily be maintained in the theater.

Music, Programs and Policy.

The policy of presenting clean, high-grade pictures of artistic quality, always adhered to by Messrs. Barton and Olson, will be in effect at the Alhambra at all times. The program is to be sufficiently diversified, according to the management, to please even the most exacting of patrons. In addition to the featured photoplay, educational films, travelogues, high-class comedies and other picture novelties will be interspersed.

Music is furnished by a ten-piece concert orchestra under the direction of Charles Worthy, whose long experience in arranging instrumental programs for photoplay purposes, admirably fits him for the post. Jesse G. Crane presides at the pipe organ.

The Alhambra now offers a continuous performance, starting at 10 o'clock each morning and terminating at 11 o'clock at night. The program is changed twice weekly, on Sundays and Thursdays. One price—10 cents—prevails for all seats in the afternoons. In the evenings the lower floor and loge seats are 15 cents and the balcony 10 cents.

The Firm of Barton & Olson.

Messrs. Barton and Olson, the owners, have during the last seven years become the biggest theatrical firm in Indianapolis. Doing business under the name of the Central Amusement Company, they own and operate the Lyric theater, devoted to popular vaudeville and pictures; the Alhambra and the Isis, both picture houses, and are summer lessees of the English opera house, where they present vaudeville during the summer months. They are also interested in various other enterprises directly or indirectly affiliated with amusements.

Mr. Barton started in the motion picture business at a time when there was only one picture show in operation in Indianapolis, and that a small place called the Vaudette on South Illinois street. He is president of the Central Amusement Company, also president of the Indianapolis Motion Picture Exhibitors' League, and a director of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of Indiana.

Mr. Olson, vice-president and treasurer of the company, was internationally famous as an athlete, and champion light heavyweight wrestler of the world before he engaged in the theatrical business. He founded the Central Film Service Company in Indianapolis, bought control of and reorganized the Buckeye Film exchange of Cincinnati. He is also heavily interested in the Peoples Amusement Company, which owns a string of theaters throughout the state. Edwin Booth, who has managed the theater for the last year, will continue in that position.

May Prohibit Smoking in Theaters

Indianapolis, Ind.—An ordinance that will probihit the smoking of tobacco or the lighting of a match in all theaters, including motion picture houses, was to be introduced before the Indianapolis city council Monday night, August 20. The ordinance was prepared by Jacob H. Hilkene, commissioner of public buildings, who says the passage of such a measure is necessary for the public safety.

A fine of not to exceed $25 was to be provided for each violation of the ordinance, and theater managers will be made liable to arrest if they permit smoking in their theaters.

"It has been called to my attention recently," said Mr. Hilkene, "that men have been smoking in some of the downtown theaters. This practice has got to stop, because it is not safe and because it is not sanitary."

Exhibitors and Union Temporarily at Odds

Indianapolis Operators Ask for a Double Shift and Better Working Conditions—Rabbi Has Been Chosen to Act as Arbiter in the Dispute.

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.—Trouble has broken out in this city between the Indianapolis Motion Picture Exhibitors' Association and the Motion Picture Operators' Union, as a result of a disagreement over working conditions, and so far has not been adjusted.

A threatened walkout of about seventy union operators, which was scheduled to take place Thursday night, August 16, at midnight, was averted by a temporary restraining order granted by Judge T. J. Moll, of Superior Court. The hearing on the motion, which was scheduled to take place the next day, was postponed for one week after the representatives of the exhibitors' association had informed the court that if a postponement was granted a compromise probably can be reached.

The strike order, according to the members of the union, followed when the exhibitors' organization refused to grant the union demands for a double shift of operators and what they term better working conditions. The representatives of the exhibitors' association say they have been willing at all times to arbitrate any differences, but they insist that the present demands of the operators are unreasonable.

Rabbi Feuerlicht Chosen Arbiter.

Rabbi Morris M. Feuerlicht was chosen as arbiter, following the expiration of a three years' contract on August 1, and, the exhibitors maintain, the operators agreed to continue working until the difficulty should be adjusted. Instead, they said, they learned that the strike order had been issued and they immediately petitioned the court for a temporary injunction.

Officers of the operators' union refuse to discuss their plans since the notice of the restraining order has been served on them. It is thought, however, that some sort of a compromise will be affected in a few days and everything will turn out satisfactory. A meeting of representatives of the two organizations will be held this week to try to thrash the matter out.

MORE KENTUCKY NOTES.

Insurance Board Lets Up on Small Theaters.

Frankfort, Ky.—The Kentucky Insurance Board, which has charge of enforcement of the new fire insurance code adopted last year, is looking after the interests of the exhibitors in the small towns where there is no organized fire protection. It was provided in the new law that in such communities the insurance agents might increase the rates by ten per cent. In practice, however, it has been found that this plan has resulted in unduly high rates and the board has called a halt on the practice.

Woman Patrons in Paducah Get Hoover Cards.

Paducah, Ky.—Managers of the local moving picture theaters are co-operating with the movement of the big organization looking toward conservation of the food supply of the country. Here the managers have all been supplied with the Hoover pledge cards and are distributing them to the women folk who come to see the pictures. This action was taken with a view of getting the widest possible distribution of the cards by which it is hoped that it will be possible to hold down the consumption of foodstuffs and eliminate waste altogether.

N. A. Wilkerson's New Liberty Makes a Hit.

Mt. Sterling, Ky.—The new Liberty theater, under the management of N. A. Wilkerson, has made good. This was formerly the Paramount theater and, since Mr. Wilkerson has taken charge, has been remodeled and redecorated and is reputed to be one of the coolest and most comfortable houses in the eastern part of the state.

Gurnee Theater Company Formed.

Lexington, Ky.—The Gurnee Theater Company, with capital stock of $25,000, has been incorporated by Nelson van Houten Gurnee, president of the company in charge of the Ada Meade theater and other amusement places, T. C. Fuller and V. H. Fuller. The headquarters of the company will be in Lexington and it will operate a circuit of theaters.

Clyde Gaines Again a Picture Man.

Winchester, Ky.—Clyde Gaines, former prominent exhibitor, who for a time dropped out of moving picture circles to take care of his large eastern Kentucky oil interests, out of which he has made considerable money, is again in the ring, having reopened a theater at Irvine, Ky., which replaces the building burned a few months ago in the big fire. The new Gaines theater is a larger and better house in every way than the one burned and one of the best in the section. However, he has not stopped with the one house, but has purchased the Lyric of Pineville, Ky., paying $16,000 to Col. C. W. Metcalfe, who purchased the property two years ago at a commissioner's sale. He takes possession of the new theater on September 1.

The new house at Irvine, Ky., cost $21,000 to erect and equip. Mr. Gaines now has the money to back his theatrical ventures in the way they should be backed, and is figuring on securing a chain of good small houses in the eastern section of Kentucky in the large oil, lumber and coal districts, where the population is growing rapidly and where high wages are paid, and there are few amusement enterprises to claim the elusive jitney. Irvin within a two-year period has jumped from a town of 300 people to one with 6,000 inhabitants, due to the big oil boom, and Pineville has advanced as rapidly due to lumber and coal.

New Theater Association in the Northwest

Associated Theaters, Inc., of North Dakota, with Offices in Minneapolis, Will Do General Theatrical Business for Its Stockholders.

By John L. Johnston, 704 Film Exchange Bldg., Minneapolis, Minn.

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.—Tom Hamlin's dream has at last been realized, for Tuesday, August 14, the Associated Theaters, Inc., was organized under the laws of the State of South Dakota for $100,000. H. L. Hartman, Mandan, N. D., president of the North Dakota Exhibitors' League, is president of the Associated Theaters, Inc.; Forest Secor, Forest City, Iowa, is vice-president; Charles W. Gates, Aberdeen, S. D., is chairman of the board of directors; Henry P. Greene, Minneapolis, is treasurer; William S. Smith, Menomonie, Wis., is secretary, and Thomas J. Hamlin, Minneapolis, is general manager of the corporation.

Offices have been opened at 810 Lumber Exchange, Minneapolis, and the new body will, if present plans carry, do all that any exhibitor could wish—buy, sell and equip complete theaters, rent film, make slides and film, book vaudeville and road attractions, and handle paper. The corporation will operate without the use of C. O. D.'s and advance deposits, and according to plans, hopes to eliminate much express expense.

The organization hopes to have 1,000 theaters listed before December. Exhibitors are required to buy only enough stock to cover the price of ten days' film rental, and bills will be rendered them for service only at the end of each week. It is said that almost 200 theaters, with but one exception all out of town houses, have signed up with the new body. The new organization is not formed, according to its officers, to "beat out" any other body, but is formed only to serve the exhibitor in the best possible way.

The Year's Big Joy Feast Coming.

Minneapolis, Minn.—There is one time every year that all Minneapolis' filmdom gets together and business jealousy is forgotten. And—only one. That time will arrive Thursday afternoon, August 23, when exhibitors and exchange men will meet at the sixth annual picnic. The merry festival will be held at Spring Park, Lake Minnetonka, this year instead of at Parker's Lake, and several committees have worked diligently to assure the picnickers a good time.

Film Flashes Around the Twin Cities.

Minneapolis, Minn.—Frank Woskie, former roadman for the Supreme and Favorite exchange here, has returned from Baltimore, where, with Ted Karatz, he was interested in the exploitation of "The Spoilers." He expects to be out on the Northwest trail for some local exchange again shortly.

Manager Eddie Westcott, of the Fox exchange, showed "Jack and the Beanstalk" to local exhibitors at the Lyric Monday morning, Aug. 20. Mr. Westcott has had Fox offices in the Jewelers' exchange enlarged and rearranged.

Moran and Wilson, theatrical lobbyists de luxe, have moved their studios from the Jeweler's exchange to the Loeb arcade.

Charles Branham, new manager of the Strand, is developing Dick Long's orchestra by leaps and bounds, and now on every hand one sees placards reading: "That Strand orchestra just won't let your feet keep still. Hop to it." Incidentally the Strand box office is checking up a few more fifteen centses.

Hugh C. Andress, Lyric theater manager, has increased the size of his orchestra to ten pieces.

Fred Meyer, General exchange manager, has announced the coming reissue from his exchange of George Ade's "Fables in Slang" short films that made a tremendous hit here some time ago.

Newt. Davis, Bluebird manager, has booked "Mother o'Mine" in the Lyric, Minneapolis, and New Majestic, St. Paul.

St. Paul gets the first showing of Brenon's "The Lone Wolf," Manager Harry Rathner, of the Selznick exchange, having booked the film in the New Garrick for three days beginning Aug. 23.

C. P. Sheehan and C. W. Eckhardt, representing the Fox headquarters in New York, spent two days with Manager Westcott, of the local Fox offices, last week on their transcontinental tour.

Manager J. Earle Kemp, of the Westcott Film Corp., has returned from Milwaukee, where "Intolerance" began a two weeks' run at the Davidson theater to a good business. Tom Burke, of the Westcott forces, will display the new Rex Beach travel pictures to Twin City exhibitors at some downtown theater next week.

Mr. and Mrs. Dale McFarland, of the Independent exchange, have returned from a ten-day vacation trip to Yellowstone National Park.

Mr. and Mrs. S. A. Louis, of the Rialto Theater Supply Co., are spending their vacation in the Northern Minnesota country.

S. N. Robinson, of the Film Library and Exchange, distributing Christie comedies, has opened a branch office at Room 2, Babcock building, Billings, Mont. B. F. Shearer is in charge of the branch.

Earl C. Sly, of the Lochren Film Service, has returned from North Dakota, where he took several thousand feet of commercial film for a local farm machinery factory.

Bert Barnett, Sr., Comes Back with State Right Film.

Minneapolis, Minn.—Bert Barnett, Sr., one of the oldest and most popular exchange managers the Northwest has ever had, returned to Minneapolis true to our predicting. Mr. Barnett controls the rights to display "Joan the Woman," featuring Geraldine Farar, in the Dakotas, Minnesota, Wisconsin, Ohio, and Michigan. He has opened up offices at 404 Film Exchange building here to cover the four Northwest states, and Bert Barnett, Jr., is in charge of offices at Detroit and Cleveland. Leo Eckstein, former Paramount roadman out of Wilwaukee, will direct the feature in Wisconsin, while Mr. Barnett, Sr., will look after Minnesota and the Dakotas personally. Miss Mayme Lucia, former Paramount exchange booker, has been secured by Mr. Barnett for his "right hand man." The Barnetts owned the Famous Players All Star Feature exchange here until January 1 last, when the business was sold to the Paramount.

Honor William Howard, Soldier of the Republic.

Minneapolis, Minn.—William K. Howard, who resigned as manager of the Metro exchange here recently to join the Signal Corps of the United States Army, was the guest of Mill City exhibitors and exchangemen at a banquet in his honor at Schiek's, Aug. 12. The banquet was of the North Dakota variety, H Two O being the exclusive beverage. About fifty men were present, and Mr. Howard was presented with a handsome marine wrist watch. Following the feast, Mr. Howard, with C. L. Booth, motored to St. Mary's, Ohio, where Mr. Howard bid good bye to his parents. He then went to Jefferson Barracks, Mo.

"As good as gold." "As white as snow." "As fine as silk." Why do other papers in this field invariably try to compare with the standard of the MOVING PICTURE WORLD? There's a reason.

Many Texas Theaters Find Business Slack

Continued Drought Takes Life Out of the Small Town Trade—War Draft Also a Factor—Better Business Prospects Seen.

By Douglas Hawley, Times-Herald, Dallas, Texas.

DALLAS, TEXAS:—As a result of continued drouth in some fifty West Texas counties, 35 per cent. of the motion picture houses in that section of the state have been compelled to close their doors.

Childress, Quanah and several other towns in Western Texas of more than ordinary importance in the matter of population and business have been seriously affected by the continued dry spell. It may be remarked, however, that at this writing showers have been reported from various points close to that section and the fervent hope is that the worst is over.

It may have been the effect of the drouth; it may have been the effect of the draft or war conditions in general, but the dull business has even been felt in the larger towns. Theaters in Dallas, Fort Worth, Waco, Houston and San Antonio all have suffered. Places with established reputations for showing the best that there is have done pretty well—everybody else has been traveling a rocky road for the last several weeks. However, there is promise for the future. If the picture business in Texas is to be affected for better or for worse by crop conditions, then this is the lean season of but short duration, for rarely has Texas as a whole ever made a total failure cropwise. Its "come-back" is proverbially the strongest that there is.

Manager Reed Shows Exhibitors Fox Films.

Dallas, Texas.—With Charles Wurz and E. H. Wachter, from the home office, on hand, exhibitors' showings of the Fox features, "The Conqueror," "Jack and the Beanstalk" and "The Honor System" were made at the Jefferson theater (now not operating) at Dallas last week. More than a hundred Texas picture men were in attendance and expressions of full satisfaction were heard. The local showing was made under arrangement of Dallas Manager G. C. Reed of the Fox Corporation.

Perhaps They May Be Soldiers.

Dallas, Texas.—The war draft is making rifts—or threatening to—in the ranks of the motion picture men in Texas. Laurence Stuart, manager of the "Old Mill" Hulsey theater, at Dallas, has had his number drawn, and is not offering exemption claims. Herschel Stuart, assistant to Mr. Hulsey, has also been drawn, but Hulsey, it is understood, is urging an industrial exemption claim before the district board on the part of his able lieutenant.

W. C. Dugger, manager Triangle Company's Dallas branch, it is declared, is carrying brain pictures of khaki coats, soldiers' shoes and shoulder straps, and may be a member of the second officers' training camp at Leon Springs, which opens the latter part of the month.

Some Hits in Dallas Theaters.

Dallas, Texas.—"Sudden Jim," with Charles Ray, was a popular picture shown at Dallas during the last week—one of the few, along with Margurite Clarke, in "The Amazons," which brought out excellent attendance. The former was shown at the Old Mill and the latter at the Queen, both Hulsey theaters.

A Texas woman—Corinne Griffith, with Earle Williams—in "The Stolen Treaty," has been a good drawing card at the Washington theater during the last week. Miss Griffith is good looking and shows her ability as an actress. Controversy as to her residence has sprung up between four Texas towns. The truth is she is a native of New Orleans, but was, just prior to entering the pictures, a resident of Mineral Wells—Texas health resort—for several years. Her mother still resides there.

Dallas Censors Forbid Two Films.

Dallas, Texas.—"The Mother Instinct," with Petrova, and "The Little Lost Sister," have been two films frowned upon by the Dallas censor during the last week. The former had been billed, but was not shown. The latter was forbidden after a private showing. The two were first pictures condemned by action of the new board of censors, appointed by the city administration, which came into office on May 1.

Eight Censors Use Passes Liberally.

Dallas, Texas.—Eight members of a board of censorship, all expecting—and receiving—free passes to the picture shows, is going pretty strong in the opinion of not a few people—not only those in the business but others as well. Nevertheless that's the condition in Dallas. All eight members of the board have their passes and they do not hesitate to use them. There has been no complaint on the part of picture theater managers, but it is understood that the manager of a local vaudeville house has made a strenuous sotto voce objection. At this writing it is not known whether this latter has issued the eight passes asked for.

H. G. Morrow Leaves the Dallas Paramount.

Dallas, Texas.—Hoyt G. Morrow has resigned from the sales managership of the Artcraft-Paramount, Dallas, Texas, branch. After a vacation trip with Mrs. Morrow through Colorado he will return to Dallas to take a position with another distributing organization. He has devoted the past twelve years to the motion picture business and has an extensive acquaintance in the South and Southwest.

Iowa Film News Letter.

By Dorthy Day, Register-Tribune, Des Moines, Ia.

Butterflies Going Over Big in Iowa.

DES MOINES, IA.—D. B. Lederman, veteran manager of the Laemmle Film Service in Des Moines, is enthusiastic. He says that when the Butterflies were released in May the bookings came in so strong by June 1 he had to order his roadman to quit selling them, as all dates were filled until the 20th of August. About the 10th of August he started selling again and now every available date is filled until November.

Charles B. Wells, formerly manager of the K-E-S-E office in Minneapolis, and who is now managing the Isis theater in Cedar Rapids, is also enthusiastic over the Butterflies, while the Strand, in Fort Dodge, is equally satisfied.

Garden Books Bessie Barriscale Paralta Output.

Des Moines, Ia.—The Garden theater, of this city, seemingly intent on securing all of the better pictures on the market, have booked the Bessie Barriscale pictures from the Paralta.

Douglas Fairbanks Takes Des Moines by Storm.

Des Moines, Ia.—Des Moines people have certainly taken the Douglas Fairbanks smile and the Fairbanks stunts to heart by the way in which they await the coming of his pictures. John Shipley, publicity man for the Garden, realizes the great popularity of the star and in his ads always refers to him as "Doug." The Garden showed "Down to Earth" the week of the 19th.

Fred Theile Chief Booker at Triangle Office.

Des Moines, Ia.—Fred Theile, formerly of the General Film Exchange in Des Moines and Omaha, is now chief booker at the Triangle office in Kansas City. Mr. Theile is well known in this territory.

Harry Weinberg Covering Missouri for Mid West.

Heard at the Exchanges.

Des Moines, Ia.—Paul Le Bar, pianist at the Garden theater in Des Moines, is leaving the Garden orchestra to play at the Orpheum, Des Moines' finest vaudeville house, on its opening date, the 26th of August.

J. A. Pickler, new owner of the University theater in Des Moines, has arranged to show the Selznick and other Mid West pictures at his suburban house. Mr. Pickler purchased the University from W. H. McDowell some five weeks or so ago.

The Pathe exchange are receiving many inquiries over the booking dates on "To-Day" and "The Mad Love," the Robert Warwick features to be released through Pathe. Exhibitors seem to be anxious to run the Warwick pictures.

The Mid West Photoplay office have received just exactly 380 requests from the Iowa exhibitors for advance news and release dates on the Chaplin pictures for the Exhibitors' Circuit.

Odds and Ends from Over Iowa.

Ellsworth, Ia.—The opera house in Ellsworth, Ia., formerly operated by the Ellsworth Amusement Company, has been closed down for extensive repairs.

Stratford, Ia.—V. Landers, owner of the Simplex theater, in Stratford, has gone on a three weeks' vacation, leaving the theater in the care of his nephew.

Grand Junction, Ia.—Fred Hughart, of the Eagle theater, in Grand Junction, has installed an up-to-the-minute model of the Motiograph. This is the second that Mr. Hughart owns, and he is now able to run his pictures straight through with no interruption.

Jewel, Ia.—Hood & Snyder have purchased the Lyric theater, in Jewel, from George Patterson. Mr. Patterson is giving his entire time now to the operation of the Grand theater in Story City, having heretofore been managing both houses.

Creston, Ia.—William Weldon has purchased the Willard theater, in Creston, from C. H. Hoffman, who had owned it five or six months.

Iowa City, Ia.—The Garden theater, in Iowa City, has been closed for some time, but it is to be reopened soon by J. H. Lape, who is redecorating the theater from top to bottom. He has been to the Mid West office in Des Moines and arranged for the big Selznick pictures and is also planning to show Goldwyn pictures.

Marshalltown, Ia.—Leo Meulhaupt, of the Casino theater, in Marshalltown, opened Sunday the 19th with "On Trial." The Casino has been redecorated and Mr. Meulhaupt will show feature pictures the first half of the week and vaudeville the rest of the time.

Hubbard, Ia.—Knowes & Boeke have closed the Electric theater, in Holland, during the hot weather, and are planning to reopen the 1st of October.

Radcliffe, Ia.—Dan Ertel, of the opera house, in Radcliffe, took a trip to Green Mountain last week to visit his son, who is a successful farmer near there.

Boone, Ia.—M. J. Lockard is planning to open the Palace theater, formerly called the Gem, and closed by the former manager, Mr. Allinson, this spring, about the 15th of September, with the Pathe picture "The Vicar of Wakefield." Mr. Lockard has remodeled the new Palace, put in an entirely new front and is erecting a splendid looking balcony. The former Gem will be one of Boone's finest photoplay houses.

Rippey, Ia.—The Electric theater, in Rippey, has been closed by its owners, Parr & McCain, and the building is being torn down.

Wheatland, Ia.—J. C. Robertson has sold the opera house, in Wheatland, to Mr. Otto Lahann.

Des Moines Visitors and News of Film People.

Des Moines, Ia.—T. J. Acklin, of the opera house, in Swan, Ia.; C. L. Allen, of the Elite theater, in Pella, Ia.; J. A. Shales, of the Past Time theater, in Brandon, were visitors at the Pathe exchange last week.

A. C. Schunemann, of the Isis theater, in Webster City, was a caller at the Mid West office and the Mutual exchange.

San Francisco Theaters Revise Prices

Will Keep Step with Times in Asking More for Admissions—New Policies Announced by Theaters and Better Service.

From T. A. Church, 1507 North St., Berkeley, Cal.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.—The movement toward higher admission prices at local moving picture theaters has taken a definite shape and within a short time a revised schedule of rates will be placed in effect at a number of the leading downtown houses. The five-cent theater has long been practically out of existence here and the indications are that the ten-cent house will follow in its wake. The increased cost of film service, theater supplies and labor is cutting seriously into the profits of all houses and theater managers declare that they must take in more money, and at once.

In a public statement on this question Howard J. Sheehan, manager of the Rialto theater, recently said: "The conditions surrounding the exhibiting of motion pictures have changed to such an extent during the last few months that the Rialto, in order to meet the new state of affairs, which is due largely to changes in the producing end of the business, has been practically forced, if it would continue to exist, to reconstruct its entire plan of doing business. We have now arrived at a point where, if we are to continue to give our patrons the same high class entertainment that they have learned to expect from us, it is necessary that we make radical changes in our policy. And the very first change is an increase in the price of admission, which will be 15 and 25 cents, with 35 cents for the loge chairs, instead of 10, 20 and 30 cents, as heretofore." Mr. Sheehan notes, however, that with the increase in price the standard of the pictures to be shown and the method of showing them will also be raised. The Rialto will show the new Standard pictures of the Fox Film Corporation, and instead of making a weekly change of program, as has been the case in the past, will keep these on the screen as long as there is a demand for them.

The Imperial theater has also announced an increase in admission prices to 15, 25 and 35 cents, and is likewise planning to improve its program and its service. With the film offerings at its command Manager J. L. Partington expressed the belief that the public will willingly pay the small increase.

The Turner & Dahnken circuit, which conducts a chain of ten theaters, is also planning to advance admission prices at most of these, and other theater owners in this part of California are preparing to put new prices in effect.

Sheehan and Lurie Get Strand Theater.

San Francisco, Cal.—The Strand theater, conducted as a moving picture house for the past six months by Sid Grauman, and operated by him for several years previous to this time as a vaudeville house, is to be taken over at an early date by Sheehan & Lurie, owners of the Rialto theater, all arrangements for the transfer having been completed. Sid Grauman has been a leading figure in the local amusement field for many years, and his father, D. J. Grauman, who is associated with him, was one of the first to show moving pictures here. A fine theater is being erected at Los Angeles for Sid Grauman and associates and he will go there to assume its management as soon as his business affairs are settled here.

E. O. Child Becomes Pathe Manager.

San Francisco, Cal.—E. O. Child, who handled the series of McClure pictures in this territory, and who has been enjoying ranch life for the past eight weeks, has returned to this city to accept the management of the local branch of the Pathe Exchange, Inc., succeeding H. E. Lotz, who recently resigned and left for the East. Mr. Child is one of the most popular exchange men in this territory and his return to the business is hailed with delight by his many friends. Special Representative Charles Meade, who has been here for the past five weeks with his wife, will shortly resume his tour of Pathe offices, but leaves with a tinge of regret, as he has become enamoured with the cool summer climate of this city.

Goldwyn Making Flying Start.

San Francisco, Cal.—The local officers of the Goldwyn Distributing Corporation are now in about a completed form, the latest addition being a glass enclosed private office for Manager C. Mel Simmonds. District Manager Harry Leonhardt is here and an active campaign for business has been launched, following a trade showing of the first two releases. J. L. Frazier recently made a tour of the San Joaquin valley and lined up a number of fine houses, including the Kinema, Fresno; the Monache, Porterville; the Elite, Merced; the Ashby, Hanford, and the Star, Modesto. He will start out again shortly and will visit the towns along the south coast. William Benard is covering the territory north of San Francisco and is also sending in good reports. A first run has been secured in San Francisco at the T. & D. Tivoli opera house.

Big Simplex Installations.

San Francisco, Cal.—The Breck Photoplay Supply Company recently received a shipment of fifteen Simplex machines finished to special order, twelve of these to be installed in local houses and three to be sent out of town to a theater now in course of construction. The machines are finished in white enamel, giving them a very striking appearance, the idea being that of Louis R. Greenfield, of the Kahn & Greenfield circuit. The operating rooms of this concern are models of their kind and it is the delight of members of the firm to show them to patrons of the houses conducted by it. The initial installation of three machines will be made in the Progress theater on Fillmore street, and three each will be installed in the New Mission and the New Fillmore theaters. The latter house is now closed, owing to rebuilding operations, but will be opened again in September. The balance of the big order for machines is divided between the Imperial theater, of this city, and the new Liberty theater being erected at Fresno, Cal., by James Beatty and associates.

Nat A. Magner to Go to the Orient.

San Francisco, Cal.—Nat A. Magner is closing out his local film interests and plans to leave for the Orient about the middle of September, where he will be the sole Selig representative, handling all of the Selig productions. His stock of films has been purchased by Davis Bros., who are enlarging their quarters at 187 Golden Gate avenue, to handle the added business, and he is making a short business trip to Los Angeles. Upon his return he will make a flying visit to Chicago and will then sail from this port for the Far East.

California Film Exchange Notes.

San Francisco, Cal.—E. H. Goldberg, for five years with the California Film exchange, at Los Angeles, has been placed in charge of the Bluebird office at San Francisco, succeeding A. Markowitz.

L. F. Zelinsky is a new salesman out of the local office and he has been bringing in some fine contracts.

Dave Bershon, who was here recently with his family on a visit from Los Angeles, where he is branch manager, has returned home by auto.

John Pervis, of the shipping staff, has been enjoying a vacation and is now back at work again, filled with his usual ginger.

Carl Laemmle, president of the Universal Film Manufacturing Co., is expected here late in August.

Two huge billboards at the entrance to Film Row have been leased by Manager Markowitz and exhibitors cannor enter or leave the district without seeing the attractive paintings on these. A late one represents a great crowd making for the nearest Bluebird theater.

A large contract has been signed between Manager M. L. Markowitz and the Honolulu Film Company for Universal and Bluebird service on the Hawaiian Islands. The Honolulu Film Company is a new concern incorporated with a capital stock of $3,000 by Toru Masuhara, William F. Wallace, Mataji Nagamori and Isami Ta Kano. The concern controls a circuit of theaters and will sub-rent films after it has made use of them.

Notes From Progressive Exchange.

San Francisco, Cal.—The new offices recently taken over by the Progressive Motion Picture Company in the Pacific building have been remodeled and are now being occupied. Separate rooms have been made for the bookkeeping and booking departments and local Manager J. W. Allen has been given another private office. A private telephone exchange has been installed and considerable new office equipment added.

Harold N. Harshman, of the single reel department was married on August 13 to Miss Agnes S. Campbell of this city.

Miss Marie Cooper, of the bookkeeping department, has been sent to the new Portland office to assist Manager C. M. Hill.

D. K. Reed, formerly of the Los Angeles branch, is now the feature booker at the home office, and Mr. Lohman has been promoted to the office of chief booker.

"Come Through" Scores a Success.

San Francisco, Cal.—The Strand theater has met with great success in its run on "Come Through," which is controlled personally in this territory by Morris L. Markowitz.

Supply Business Picking Up.

San Francisco, Cal.—Local dealers in machines and theater supplies state that business has been showing quite an increase of late. G. A. Metcalfe recently sold two Power's 6B Cameragraphs, a Westinghouse motor generator set and full operating room equipment to the Rosebrook Amusement Company, which will open a new theater at Piedmont in September and has likewise sold full outfits, with Power's machines, to the Fetters Hot Springs and the Mount Shasta Amusement Company of Etna Mills. A large lot of lobby display equipment was purchased by W. M. Englehart, of Truckee, who was recently here on a visit.

Mutual Representative Visits Golden Gate.

San Francisco, Cal.—A. S. Kirkpatrick, of the home office of the Mutual Film, spent a short time at the local branch recently. The sales force of this office has been augmented by H. Von Emmel.

San Francisco Jottings.

Thomas O'Day, of this city, is erecting a theater near Camp Freemont to have a seating capacity of 1,500. It is on the edge of the great army camp in the suburbs of this city.

Otto Laurelle, a veteran exhibitor of San Francisco, and Charles Rasmussen, a well known dealer in moving picture houses, have opened the Oriental theater, in the heart of Chinatown. With a Chinese girl in the box office and a Chinese attendant at the door, this house has a real Oriental air and the patronage is largely from Chinatown.

John Bromberger, a musician of note, has been made manager of the Panama theater on Market street. He was a witness of a hold-up recently, but was not molested, other than being compelled to elevate his hands.

The Alhambra theater, on Market street, Sam Gordon, proprietor, will change shortly from straight pictures to moving pictures and vaudeville.

A pay-as-you-enter system has again been installed at the T. & D. Tivoli opera house.

Jules E. Smith, of the Butler theater, Tonapah, Nev., was a recent visitor, having been spending a vacation in California.

H. D. Naugle, western division manager of the Greater Vitagraph Company, paid the local branch a visit about the middle of August.

Northern California Notes.

Oakland, Cal.—Phil Doll, of the Circle theater, will reopen the Home theater. Alterations are being made and a full operating room equipment installed by Walter G. Preddey, of San Francisco.

Petaluma, Cal.—The Gem theater has been destroyed by fire.

Vallejo, Cal.—A. M. Bowles, who recently took over the Rex theater, has sold his interests to J. Marsh.

Great Organ for California Theater.

San Francisco, Cal.—The organ for the new California theater at Fourth and Market streets, San Francisco, Cal., which will be opened to the public on November 1, arrived recently and the event was regarded of such interest and importance by the management of the house that a parade was organized, and headed by a band of music the twenty-one large auto trucks required to move the parts making up the great instrument covered the downtown district.

This instrument, which required five large cars to bring it from the factory, is a Wurlitzer Hope-Jones Unit Orchestra, and is the largest ever turned out by the company. It cost more than $50,000 at the factory, and the installation will bring the cost up to about $10,000 more. Many unique features have been incorporated in its manufacture and it has five complete sets of marimbaphones, which will be heard for the first time in this theater. Manager Eugene Roth, under whose direction this house is being built, promises a genuine musical treat to the patrons of this new theater.

The services of Bruce Gordon Kingsley, an organist of international fame, who gave a series of thirty-three eminently successful concerts at the Panama-Pacific International Exposition in 1915, have been secured for a period of three years at a large salary and the musical programs are already commencing to receive attention.

The console of the organ is located in the center of the orchestra pit and is placed on an automatic elevator which permits the organist to rise to the level of the stage when rendering concert numbers and allowing the audience to see the intricate console, with its four manuels. Five large organ chambers house the tone parts of the instrument, which duplicate the music of any instrument ever made.

The contact room in the basement occupies a space of ten by twenty feet and is surrounded on three sides by plate glass, it being the intention of Manager Roth to permit the public to inspect the working of the marvelous electric keys which manipulate the instrument.

Proaucing Company Organized in Spokane

C. J. Ward Is Taking Steps to Incorporate Washington Motion Picture Company —Finds Northwest Better than California for Studio Sites.

By S. Clark Patchin, E1811 Eleventh Ave., Spokane, Wash.

SPOKANE, WASH.—"An Investigation of several weeks convinces me we have found, here, conditions more favorable for the production of moving pictures than in California," said C. J. Ward, manager for Tyrone Power, and who is taking steps for the incorporation of the Washington Motion Picture Corporation. Continuing he said:

"With a contract for the services of Mr. Power for the next few years, I have been in a position to complete the essentials for a profitable enterprise.

"We are completing the organization of our company and will at once file articles of incorporation. A board of directors will be elected within the next few days and we will be able to announce within two weeks where we will construct the studios.

"I feel confident that within 60 days the production of pictures will be under way. After spending next week in Spokane Mr. Power will proceed to New York City, where I have contracted for him to accept a limited engagement at the Manhattan opera house. While he is in New York we will arrange to take part of the pictures for a production entitled "A Man and His Brother," in which Mr. Power will appear."

A Neat Small Town Theater.

Douglas Wyo.—Exhibitor Irwin A. Erdman, of the Princess theater, at Douglas, Wyo., sends to the Moving Picture World the accompanying picture of his pleasing Princess Theater, Douglas, Wyo.

Princess theater. It seats 600 persons and serves a town of 1,800. "It would do Mr. Richardson's heart good," writes the manager, "to see our operator eat up his projection department in your publication. The handbook he calls his bible."

Artillerymen Are Guests of Theaters.

Spokane, Wash.—C. E. Stilwell, manager of the Stilwell Theaters Company, is keeping open house at all of his theaters for members of the field artillery being organized in Spokane. They are at liberty to visit the Class A, Rex, Unique and Casino with the exception of Saturday afternoons and Sundays.

Notes From Spokane Filmdom.

Spokane, Wash.—Ellis Cohen, of New York City, representing the "Gray Ghost," being put out by the Universal, is spending a few days in this territory. He is visiting W. Potter, manager of the Universal. Mr. Potter has just completed a trip through Western Montana and reports business good.

J. H. Baum, of Portland, Ore., who has spent 30 days in Spokane territory with "20,000 Leagues Under the Sea," returned to Portland.

P. L. Carroll, manager of the Pathe exchange, is covering his territory along the Great Northern Railway, and reports business good.

Seattle News Letter.

Special Concerts a Drawing Card at Clemmer.

SEATTLE, WASH.—With the opening of "The Whip" at the Clemmer theater on Sunday, August 19, the eight-piece Russian Orchestra was enlarged by the addition of a harpist and another violinist. The orchestra is also giving two special concerts a week in the evening in addition to the regular Tuesday and Friday afternoon concerts. M. Guterson and his Russian Orchestra since their coming to Seattle a year and a half ago have won a large following among the music lovers of the city, and these special concerts have become one of the Clemmer's greatest drawing cards.

Regular patrons of this theater have also welcomed with enthusiasm the return of the Drew comedies to the program. Slapstick comedies do not as a general rule appeal to the high class patronage which this house draws, but the funny situations in the Drew comedies and the funnier mannerisms of Sidney always appeal to them.

The Hearst-Pathe News is also a very welcome attraction which has returned to the Clemmer program.

Motion Picture Business Booming in Java.

Seattle, Wash.—According to A. W. Walker, of the firm of Robinson and Walker of this city, exporters and importers to Java, the motion picture business in this and other islands of the Dutch East Indies is flourishing. Messrs. Robinson and Walker make a specialty of exporting film to this section of the Orient, and so keep in close touch with conditions in the industry there. Many fine new bioscopes, as the motion picture theaters are called in the Orient, are being erected; and the inhabitants are demanding better pictures to be shown in them. Motion pictures are just coming into their own as the most popular amusement of the people, and the natives are crazy about them.

Seattle Exchange Notes.

Seattle, Wash.—J. F. Paine, special representative from the New York office, is spending several days this week at the Seattle Triangle office. With S. P. Peck, head of the booking department, ill and two stenographers away on their vacation, H. H. Hurn, manager of the office, is busy.

Melvin G. Winstock, of the L. J. Schlaifer Attractions Company, will leave next week for Portland, where he will open headquarters for a month.

L. Ernest Ouimet, president and general manager of the Specialty Film Import, Limited, of Canada, with headquarters in Montreal, spent a day or two in Seattle this week. Mr. Ouimet handles the Pathe films for Canada, and while here he obtained Alexander Pantages' signature to a contract for Pathe pictures for all his houses in Canada.

Visitors on Film Row.

Seattle, Wash.—Among the exhibitor visitors to Seattle this week were: Hector Quagliotti, Colonial theater, Vancouver; I. L. Williams, Orpheum and Monroe theaters, Snohomish; A. H. McDonald, Rex, Eugene, Oregon; George Hunt, Page, Medford, Oregon; H. T. Moore, Colonial, Tacoma; A. C. Anderson, Apollo, Tacoma; C. E. McKee, Orpheum, Everett.

Portland Suburban Houses Plan Price Raise

Exhibitors Propose to Charge Fifteen Cents for Evening Shows—Raise Will Be Simultaneous—High Cost of Features the Reason.

By Abraham Nelson, Majestic Theater Bldg., Portland, Ore.

PORTLAND, ORE.—A movement is on foot among suburban exhibitors to raise the evening admission price to 15 cents The raise has been talked of since the downtown theaters went to 15 cents for matinees as well as for evening performances several months ago, but it has not until now been whipped into concrete shape.

At meetings of suburban exhibitors held at the club rooms of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of Oregon propositions to charge 15 cents on Sundays have been made at various times, also further propositions to raise to 15 cents for certain brands of features. Owing to the fact that competing exhibitors would be unable to obtain sufficiently strong pictures on the 15-cent days, it has been concluded that a general raise of fifteen cents for every night in the week will be the only practical thing.

Suburban exhibitors agree that unless additional revenue is got at the box office several nights in the week, at least, they are not going to make any money at film quotations recently received from several big producers. The need for a raise in price has become so urgent that even the most active competitors are getting together on the proposad plan.

Another incentive toward the price raise is the demand by certain producers that their product be not run at less than 15 cents.

General Film To Return to Portland.

Portland, Ore.—After an absence from Portland of about six months the General Film Company will again open an office here. The exact location had not been selected at the time of this writing, but negotiations have been going on for quarters in the film exchange building on Ninth and Burnside. It is reported that the new manager will be a San Francisco man who has met with a great deal of success in the southern territory. Manager L. A. Todd, of the Seattle office, was in Portland August 17 to arrange details.

Cameraman Returns from Strenuous Trip.

Portland, Ore.—Jesse J. Sill, popular Portland cameraman, is back in the Rose City resting after a strenuous jaunt through Glacier National Park, Montana. He has been absent over a month, accompanying Robert C. Bruce, scenic director for the Educational Films Corporation, in search of new material. The next trip will be made through Rainier National Park, Washington.

Former Owner Returns.

Seaside, Ore.—O. Cacheralis, who conducted the Orpheum for several seasons, has again taken charge of the showhouse. Ed Berg, who managed iit for Tom Gekas, having left. The seaside season is about 45 days late, but has turned off very good.

Julian Eltinge Makes Films in Portland.

Portland, Ore.—Julian Eltinge, the famous female impersonator and now Lasky star, made his first stage appearance at the People's theater here since his entry into film stardom some months ago. This popular star was just as much, if not more, enthused over the success of his appearance before a photoplay audience as he was during his appearance on the "legit" stage a few months ago, when it cost his audience two dollars a seat. In fact he was so pleased with his reception at the People's that it was at his own suggestion that he went back for a second personal appearance.

Mr. Eltinge and company of 20, under the direction of Donald Crisp, arrived from Los Angeles, Aug. 13, on the steamer Beaver. Production manager Fred Kley was highly impressed with the grandeur of the Columbia River Highway and the Oregon scenery generally, and he promised to have his players in Oregon again this fall.

The production upon which Mr. Eltinge was working when in Portland was "The Clever Miss Carfax," in which he is being supported by Miss Daisy Robinson.

Eugene Theater Gets New Owner.

Eugene, Ore.—The lease of the Eugene theater has been transferred from H. F. Hollenbeck to J. A. Morrison, a moving picture man from Canada. Big moving picture features and road shows will be featured in the house. New projection equipment, supplied by the Service Film Company, of Portland, was recently installed.

I. W. W's. Cause Theater Closing.

Portland, Ore.—Col. Warden, Orpheus theater, Klamath Falls, Oregon, was a recent visitor on Film Row, and stated that I. W. W. troubles in the Southern Oregon town had compelled him to close his house temporarily. The industrial troubles have caused a closing of the mills for the time being.

Majestic Books Goldwyn.

Portland, Ore.—The first run theater in Portland to run Goldwyn pictures will be the Majestic. Manager J. J. Parker recently signed up for this brand with C. F. Hill, of the Seattle Goldwyn office. The first picture will be "Polly of the Circus," which is scheduled to show at the Majestic Sept. 15.

Sumpter Theater Burns.

Sumpter, Ore.—The Electric theater was destroyed August 13 when a fire wiped out the business section of the town doing over $200,000 damage. The Electric theater was the only showhouse in this picturesque mining town, and was owned by Herbert L. (Cap.) Davies, a veteran showman.

Brief Oregon Theater Items.

Corvallis, Ore.—A Sunday closing fight that has been going on here for some time will be put direct to the people at the polls Sept. 4.

Portland, Ore.—Herman Wobber, Progressive Motion Picture Company, San Francisco, was in Portland for a few days supervising the installation of the new Paramount office.

J. A. Berkowitz was in Portland with "The Argonaut," and A. W. Watson with "War On Three Fronts."

Bert Latz, manager for Universal at Seattle, and Joe Baum, traveler, were visitors at the local Universal office.

Exhibitors visiting Portland exchanges recently were: Sam Whitesides, Corvallis, Ore.; O. C. Smith, Dallas; F. A. Watrous, Forest Grove; F. H. Park, Molalla; O. Phelps, Hillsboro; C. J. Pugh, Falls City; John Wesley, Scio.

MORE SEATTLE NOTES.

French Official War Pictures at the Strand.

Seattle, Wash.—The French Official War Pictures, which opened at the Strand theater Sunday, August 19, have been showing to big business. The success of these pictures is undoubtedly due, partly, to the big advertising given the British Official War Pictures during their showing at the same house a few weeks ago. Mr. Smythe has added to his collection of war relics which he displayed in front of his theater during that showing and has an army man to explain about them. This was one of the most effective of the many forms of advertisement which he employed for the British pictures.

E. R. Redlich Will Take Charge at Metro

Seattle, Wash.—C. J. Kerr has resigned as manager of the Seattle Metro office, and E. R. Redlich, now manager of the Toronto Metro office, will arrive in Seattle within a week to take charge of this territory. Before leaving this city last spring to go to Toronto Mr. Redlich was coast division manager for Fox and had been in the film business here for years. Exhibitors and exchange men will be glad to welcome him back, for everyone who had dealings with him liked him.

Until Mr. Redlich arrives Harry Lustig, Metro special representative, is managing the Seattle Metro office, assisted by B. F. Rosenberg, special advertising man for Metro.

J. S. Clemmer Member of Committee on Four Minute Men.

Seattle, Wash.—James Q. Clemmer, of the Clemmer theater, has been appointed to serve on the committee of the Four Minute Men for Seattle. Mr. Clemmer will have charge of the arrangements for the four minute speeches in the theaters.

More Theater Notes for Middle West.

Russellville, Ark.—The Crescent airdome is being razed and the site will be covered by a new $25,000 theater, of which Oscar H. Wilson is to be the owner. Mr. Wilson has already negotiated a lease with E. H. Butler to take charge of the new theater upon its completion.

Des Moines, Ia.—C. C. Taft, A. Frankel, and Ira R. Thomas have leased the lot at the corner of Eighth and Locust streets for a motion picture theater.

Shelby, Ia.—W. C. Howland has purchased the motion picture theater of Charles Albertus.

Kingsley, Ia.—Jesse Schofield will open the Reliance theater soon.

Council Bluffs, Ia.—Peter Steenhusan has become the proprietor of the opera house.

Kamrar, Ia.—L. A. Miller has sold his motion picture house to H. E. Ryland and his wife.

Onawa, Ia.—Krigstin & Wonder have purchased the motion picture theater formerly operated by Fairchild & Paine.

Milo, Ia.—J. G. Tharp is now manager of the Star theater.

Spencer, Ia.—H. B. Gray has purchased the Fraser theater.

Allerton, Ia.—The new Majestic theater has been opened. Mr. Lane is the proprietor.

Fayette, Ia.—Charles Halverson has sold the Princess theater to T. J. Leshy.

Stories of the Films

General Film Company, Inc.

FALCON FEATURES.

THE STOLEN PLAY (Four Parts Drama). The cast Sylvia Smalley (Ruth Roland); Leroux (Edw. J. Brady); Charles Edmay (Wm Conklin); Alice Mason (Lucy Blake); Foster (Harry Southard); Mrs. Edmay (Ruth Lackaye); Togo (Makato Inokuchi). Story by D. F. Whitcomb. Directed by Harry Harvey under the supervision of H. M. and E. D. Horkheimer.

Edmay, a blind playwright, is engaged to marry Sylvia, his amanuensis. Leroux is anxious to produce a play that Edmay has about finished, but the playwright is reluctant to sell. Leroux plans to secure the play. Working over the play Sylvia has become nervous and Edmay morbid. Leroux sends Alice Mason, his agent, to steal the script and he abducts Edmay and Sylvia. Alice has an encounter with Togo, the playwright's valet, and accidentally killed him. Leroux has hypnotic ability, and placing Sylvia in a trance gets a dictation of the completed play, while Edmay is detained in a wine cellar. Leroux learns to love Sylvia which leads to a stormy scene with Alice who is infatuated with him.

Alice starts to leave Leroux's house but is pursuaded to remain as a caretaker of Sylvia. Leroux discovers that in a hypnotic state Sylvia is capable of great dramatic powers, and at the play's premiere she takes the leading role with success. The effort is too great, however, and she succumbs to exhaustion. Leroux revives her, she realizes her position and so reproaches him that he releases Edmay from his prison and permits her to escort him home.

Overheard by Alice, Leroux plans a dramatical end of his career; placing a tool of his, Foster, under hypnotic control Leroux commands him to wall up the entrance to the underground prison and leave the country forver. Leroux enters the vault and is walled up alive. At the approach of his death Alice reveals herself to him in the vault where she had secreted herself to die with him. At this apparent climax the story takes a different turn and concludes in an explanatory manner.

ESSANAY.

DON'T LOSE YOUR COAT (Black Cat Feature—Two Parts)—At Hick's Corner, Farmer Jones strikes oil and gets rich. He goes to the city to celebrate. At the hotel a matrimonial agent is seeking to escape from a dozen women whose affections he has tampered with. While Jones is taking a bath, the crook exchanges clothes with him and, disguised as a farmer, gets away. Jone is forced to put on the agent's clothes. He starts to see the sights but the women, mistaking him for their Nemesis, make a dash for him. Then a chase begins which does not end until the farmer gets back to Hick's Corner.

SPARKLE COMEDY.

BRAGG'S LITTLE POKER GAME.—Late one night Bragg gets a message that a poker game is in progress at a friend's, and manages to leave the house without waking his wife. Soon after a burglar enters the house, followed by a cop. The burglar gets into the twin bed vacated by Bragg and when the cop appears says, "Hist! don't wake my wife." The policeman leaves the room determined to wait for the burglar. In the meantime the poker game is raided and all are arrested except Bragg, who escapes and arrives home only to be captured by the cop. He protests that he is Bragg, but his wife, half asleep, says that her husband is in the next bed, and Bragg is led away. Later Mrs. Bragg finds out her mistake and the real burglar is taken by the police.

At the station the members of the raided poker party, who are all in one cell, discover that in the scrimmage a pack of cards has been saved and, with additional partners, the game is continued.

JAXON COMEDY.

PLAY BALL.—Pokes and Jabs, clerks in the brokerage office of Adam Fossil, are both smitten with the charms of Edna, the stenographer. Fossil also indulges in an occasional flirtation with her.

The baseball season is about to begin and the enthusiasm of Pokes and Jabs is aroused to concert pitch by announcements of the opening game. Old Fossil catches them playing an imaginary game and fires Jabs and Sc[illegible] to work posting the ledger. Pokes resorts to a little liquid refreshment to brighten his spirits. Edna has a headache and is excused for the afternoon. Pokes writes himself a letter stating his grandma is seriously ill, and is also excused. He meets Edna and they go to the ball game. In the midst of an exciting play Edna discovers the boss is directly behind them, and Pokes sneaks off to another section.

Meantime Jabs has entered into a plot with Bill Blutch to rob Fossil's safe. The game is at its height. The last inning score tie and two men out, three men on bases, when the heaviest hitter has an argument with the umpire and is ordered out of the game. Pokes offers to take his place and hits the first ball so hard that it flies into Fossil's window, hitting Jabs on the head just as he has lit the fuse to blow up the safe. Pokes scores a home run and the stands go wild with delight.

The safe explodes and the noise arouses Pokes from his slumber. Rushing through the offices, he finds everything going on as usual. Returning to the counting room he throws the bottle of rye out the window, repeating to himself, "never again."

SELIG.

BETWEEN MAN AND BEAST (Two Parts). The cast: Milbank (Wheeler Oakman); Blackmoor (Roy Watson); Mrs. Milbank (Bessie Eyton); Baby Alma (Lucile Carter); Chimp (Sally Edwards); Nig (A. S. Stecker). Written by W. E. Wing. Directed by Colin Campbell.

Blackmoor, an adventurer, who trails Milbank, accompanied by his wife and his faithful black, into the jungle, is inspired by two motives, first to locate the mining claims that Milbank's father had discovered, and second to cause the death of the party, so that he will secure the gold. The Milbanks locate the cabin of the old man, but they have arrived too late, for he has passed away. Young Milbank starts alone to locate his father's mining claims. Blackmoor follows after first setting fire to the shack which houses Milbank's wife and child. Nig, the faithful native, saves the woman and baby from death.

Milbank, attracted by the fire, returns finding it in ashes and his loved ones gone. Blackmoor picks up Milbank's hat and finds in its lining a description of the locations.

Mrs. Milbank falls asleep in the forest. An ape carries away her child. The mother starts in pursuit, dropping her shawl. The ape proves a kindly guardian for the little one. Eventually comes Milbank and his anguished wife whom he has found. They are astonished to discover the child alive and well in the care of the ape. In addition they find a rich mining claim.

Blackmoor finds his stolen data useless for the mines the paper represent are worthless.

HER SALVATION.—The cast: Sandy McCarthy (Joe King); Pat McGuire (Wheeler Oakman); Ryan (Frank Clark); Dicky (Roy Clark); Nance O'Shaughnessy (Bessie Eyton); Gertie, her friend (Gerti Ryan); Mame Ryan (Eugenie Besserer). Story by Honore Willsie.

Nance, a little Irish American girl from the great East Side, works in a laundry where she meets Pat McGuire, a spieler for a cheap dance academy. Sandy McCarthy, a nice lad from the country, comes to the city to make his way and, meets Nance.

Mame Ryan, who frequents dance halls, loves Pat McGuire, who has no use for her. One night he strikes a woman and his action opens Nance's eyes, for she is inclined to favor the man. Ultimately Sandy McCarthy meets Pat McGuire and whips him.

The Celtic instincts of Sandy and Nance draw the pair together more strongly and they conclude to marry.

BROADWAY STAR FEATURE.

THE FURNISHED ROOM (One of the O. Henry Eeries—Two Parts).—The cast: The Girl (Agnes Eyres); The Boy (J. Frank Glendon).

The boy and girl live in the country. The girl has a voice and is anxious to go to the city and become a great singer. She is encouraged to go by an unscrupulous promoter. She tells the boy and they quarrel. She goes to the city to learn that her voice is only mediocre. Too proud to confess defeat, she struggles to exist in the big city without success. The boy learns of her plight and comes to bring her back. Like the characters in Evangeline the boy and girl just [illegible] to [illegible] each other by an eyelash each time. The girl gives up the fight and writes home to the boy to come and take her. The letter returns with no answer. She feels he has forgotten her. She attempts suicide which is [illegible] and taken to a hospital in a dying condition. The boy is just about to attempt suicide in [illegible] way when the odor of magnonette stops him. It is the girl's favorite perfume and he knows she has been in the room. Learns all, and goes to the hospital and finds her. They are happily reunited.

THE DEFEAT OF THE CITY (One of the O. Henry Series—Four Parts).—The cast: Robert Walmsley (Frank Glendon); Alicia Van Der Pool, his bride (Agnes Eyre); "Old Man" Walmsley (Frank Chapman); Ma Walmsley (Mrs. Fisher); Tom, Robert's younger brother (Frank Heath); Millie and Pam (Alice Rodier and Virginia Spraggins). Directed by Thos. R. Mills.

Robert Walmsley, at the end of six years in the city, has won fortune, fame—and Alice Van Der Pool, a "daughter of the old burghers—high and cool and white and inaccessible." So Robert feels that he has achieved the ultimate end of success and happiness.

Alice finds a letter written to Robert by his mother—a letter straight from home, full of farm lore and gossip. She prevails upon Robert to take her for a visit to the farm. Robert is dismayed at the prospect, fearing Alicia will be shocked at the crudeness of his rural atavism. Theer his wife sits silent and immovable while Robert cuts ridiculous capers. Alicia presently ascends to her room. Robert, suddenly feeling that he is disgraced in her eyes, and that he has been unmasked by his own actions and that "all the polish, the poise, the form that the city has given him has fallen from him like an ill-fitting mantle at the first breath of a country breeze," grows quiet.

Presently he follows Alicia upstairs—prepared to meet his fate. He knew the rigid lines that a Van Der Pool would draw. She is standing at the window, in the twilight. Robert silently takes his place beside her. "Robert," said the cool, calm voice of his judge, "I thought I married a gentleman—" Alicia steps closer to Robert. "But," she continues, "I find that I have married—something better—a man. Bob, dear, kiss me, won't you?"

JERRY TRIES AGAIN (One Reel—September 6).—The cast: Jerry (George Ovey); Marie (Claire Alexander); Expressman (George George); Pete (C. E. Feehan); Postman (Tom Riley); Policeman (Harry Jackson); Physician (Harry De Roy); Minister (Louis Fitzroy).

Disappointed over his failure to marry Marie by reason of the ruling of the Eugenic Bureau, Jerry's only consolation is a large and growing accumulation of postage stamps he received in answers to an advertisement he inserted in a daily paper for a wealthy wife.

Jerry meets several candidates for his lot in life and leads them to the Eugenic Bureau, where one after the other they are disqualified.

Jerry finally makes the mistake of his life and sends for six girls to meet him at one time. He leads his collection of would-be brides to the examining physician who promptly rejects all but one, a large, healthy but heavy maiden. The disappointed girls are furious. They wreak vengeance upon Jerry with their fists and umbrellas, but he escapes with his abundant prize to the minister. All seems clear for a happy ending when the minister demands Jerry's certificate. He rushes to the bureau for examination. He is immediately rejected.

JERRY'S WHIRLWIND FINISH (September 13).—The cast: Jerry (George Ovey); Hank (George George); First Cop (Gordon McGregor); Second Cop (C. E. Feehan); Third Cop (Harry Riley). Written and produced by M. H. Fahrney.

Jerry becomes affected by the wiles of a park flirt who has been lavishing attention upon a large and enthusiastic collection of bench-warmers, to say nothing of several park policemen. Jerry presses his suit, but when discovered by one of her policemen friends, is temporarily routed. Jerry finds a telephone wagon nearby where he procures a coil of rope and succeeds in lassoing the cop and the girl and pulling them into a deep pool. A whirlwind chase ensues, participated in by the entire police force.

Jerry drops from the second-story window of a house into the vacant saddle ordinarily occupied by a mounted policeman and dashes away to freedom. The cops in their flivver run out of gasoline, but make the grade by hoisting a sail, and continue the chase. Jerry rides headlong into the arms of Shoot-em-up-Bill, a bad man, who exhibits a $5,000 sack of gold. "Shoot-em-up" commandeers Jerry and his horse and together they ride into town. Shoot-em-up puts the gold in a safe, and Jerry runs to a room overhead. Safe-crackers blow up the safe, the force of which shoots the gold up through the floor into Jerry's arms. The mast on the flivver waiting below provides the means of Jerry's escape from yet another difficulty.

REEL LIFE NO. 71 (Sept. 6).—"The Five Senses—in Business and Pleasure." While in no sense to be regarded as a dramatization of the five senses, the pictures show how the world's work and the world's play are rendered easier and pleasanter by the development of the senses. The dictaphone, the phonograph and the Braile system are some of the means of demonstrating the senses. Then the delicate work of the diamond buyer, the coffee taster, the perfume blender is pictured.

A continuation of the postoffice pictures which began in a recent number shows how parcels post and money orders are handled. The spectator of this reel is taken "behind the scenes" and shown the immense amount of work required in handling these two branches of Uncle Sam's postal system.

"Pets Which Will Never Be Popular" is the title of a section which records a visit to a skunk farm. The one of the five senses most in evidence here cannot be transported to the screen, and the millions of people who visit the farm via these Gaumont pictures will be highly instructed without suffering any ill effects. An interesting feature of this picture is that the farm is conducted by a fifteen-year-old girl. She appears in a number of the scenes.

"A Watering System for a Small Farm" pictures a method of irrigation possible where intensive farming is followed. Pipes supported on posts about six feet from the ground are perforated, and the water flows through these holes to the soil below.

"Fresh Advances in the Champagne District" is a humorous animated drawing founded upon a picture in "Life," the leading magazine of wit and satire.

REEL LIFE NO. 72 (Sept. 13).—How the Government is Planting Trees to Conserve the Nation's Water Supply.—To prevent Americans having such barren, arid areas as China is cursed with, the United States Government has undertaken the work of reforestation of mountain areas devastated by forest fires. It is, thanks to the forests, that our rivers do not carry down the soil of the mountain sides, that they retain the water that otherwise would come down in great floods. Pictures of the work of the national foresters are shown. Most of the views are of the Wind River tree nursery in the State of Washington. How the pine cones give up their seeds, the planting, the transplanting of the small trees, and the camps of the foresters are shown in an interesting manner.

"An Unusual Colt" is a picture of a Shetland pony which weighed only twenty pounds when five weeks old. Its hoof was the size of a silver twenty-five-cent piece. This picture will be particularly pleasing to children. It is only a short section of the reel.

"Hunting Turtle Eggs" shows the habits of the loggerhead turtle which comes out of the ocean at night and lays her eggs in the sand. When it is on the nest, the pictures illustrate how it is captured by turning it over on its back. One hundred or more eggs are found in a nest.

"Testing an Auto Tube" is an interesting illustration of how the inner tube of an automobile can lift a weight of 2,290 pounds. The unusual method is adopted of having the tube lift the automobile which the tire is to support when inflated.

A picture of "The Midnight Sun" completes the reel.

MUTUAL STAR PRODUCTION.

CHARITY CASTLE (American—Five Parts—Sept. 3).—The cast: Charity (Mary Miles Minter); the Prince (Clifford Callis); Merlin Durand (Alan Forrest); Zelma Verona (Eugenie Forde); Simon Durand (Henry A. Barrows); Elmer Trent (Ashton Dearholt); Graves (Robert Klein); Lucius Garrett (Spottiswoode Aitken); Bill Turner (George Ahearn); Sam Smith (Gordon Russell). Directed by Lloyd Ingraham.

"Charity" is a little girl who has been orphaned with her little brother, popularly called "The Prince," these two falling into contact with Merlin Durand, the young son of Simon Durand, a millionaire, who being a miser as well as a millionaire, objected to "Sonny" Durand's scheme of expenditure. At the time the story opens "Sonny" has been told to get out and hustle for a living.

Charity is so sorry that she takes "The Prince" into her confidence. These two youngsters invade "Old Man" Durand's library, with the intention of pleading with him to "please be good to Sonny," but "The Ogre," as Durand was known, had gone away and the servants had departed for a holiday.

Finding the castle uninhabited but filled with good things, Charity and "The Prince" decided to make the best of conditions, so they invited Lucius, a vaudeville actor; Bill, the Badlands burglar; and Sam "the bum" to spend an evening with them.

It is this gathering that "Old Man" Durand interrupts when he returns from taking the "water cure" and discovers "The Prince" master of ceremonies. There is trouble in the wind, but Charity intercedes with "The Ogre," who is so impressed that he forgets the offenses of his son when Charity champions the latter, and all ends happily.

REPUTATION (Five Parts—September 3).—The cast: Constance Bennett (Edna Goodrich); John Clavering (William Hinckley); Edmund Berste (Frank Goldsmith); Mrs. Berste (Carey Lee); Nellie Burns (Esther Evans); Mrs. Williams (Nellie Parker Spaulding); Mrs. Clavering (Mrs. Brunage). Directed by John B. O'Brien.

Constance Bennett is reared in a small town by a maiden aunt, and is the sweetheart of John Clavering, son of the local grande dame. Constance goes to New York, where she becomes a model in a suit and cloak house. Edward Berste, her employer, forces his attentions upon her, and Mrs. Berste becomes suspicious and later wildly jealous.

Constance returns to the home town to escape the attentions of Berste and men of his type. Berste, however, follows her there. She has established a store of her own, and before a crowd of customers Mrs. Berste walks in and accuses Constance. The girl faces ostracism at home. She is turned out of the church. In despair she returns to New York. She meets Berste and visits the cabarets with him. They return to her apartment, where she traps him into an avowal of love. She has summoned his wife and exposes him. Berste seeks to retaliate and hires a woman to trap Constance. She goes to dine with them in a hotel and finds herself alone with Berste. Clavering has returned from Mexico and has followed her. She fights with Berste, and Clavering bursts into the room. A pistol is fired. Berste is mortally wounded. Constance faces trial for murder and is acquitted. She returns to the home town as Clavering's bride.

GOLD SEAL.

THE EMPTY GUN (Three Parts—Week of Sept. 3).—The cast: Frank (Lon Chaney); Mary (Claire McDowell); Jim (Sam De Grasse). Story by J. G. Alexander and F. Myton. Produced by J. De Grasse.

Frank, riding through the storm, approaches the station, to give ten thousand dollars worth of gold, which he has just brought from the mine, into safe keeping. Dave the agent hears him, and when he finally appeared, disappointment awaited Frank.

"I can't take charge of the money," says Dave. "I'm sorry, Frank, but the train is late, and the gold can't go on tonight. I saw two suspicious-looking characters hanging around here, and I won't take the responsibility."

Mary, formerly beautiful, but now haggard from work and loneliness, stands at the window of her dilapidated shack clenching a letter which says: "Dear Frank—You and I know it was you, and not Jim, that started me on the downward path, but I did not know you persuaded me to accuse him so that you could marry that innocent thing you were both in love with." Mary can hardly keep back the tears and when Frank enters, she keeps her back turned, even when he remarks he supposes she is crying again because she is sorry she married him. After putting the gold in a drawer, Frank leaves the shack.

Shortly afterward Mary goes and stares at the gold, then fingers the revolver which lies near by, and sits by the fire, lost in revery.

Jim knocks at the door. Mary asks who it is, but Jim will only answer: "A stranger lost in the storm." She opens the door. Both are startled and delighted. Jim picks up the gun and asks what she is doing with an empty gun. Laughing, he loads it.

Mary shows Jim the note and he is angry. She sees he still loves her and pleads with him to take her away. Jim takes her in his arms. Then, thinking of Frank, determines to make him account for the past. He leaves to find Frank.

Frank is attacked by one of the tramps, but overpowering him, exchanges clothes with him and hurries to the shack.

The wind from an open window blows out the lamp. Mary hears a noise and sees only a man's eyes, and when he enters the room she orders him to stop, but he only smiles. As he still approaches, Mary fires and he springs at her; they struggle.

Jim, undecided as to the direction of the station, returns to ask Mary. He jumps into the struggle, but the stranger is getting the best of the fight; he breaks away, picks up a heavy object and swings it above his head to strike Jim, who has already been knocked to the floor. Mary picks up the gun again and fires at the stranger, who sinks to the floor. Jim puts his arms around Mary; he removes the mask from the man's face, and both are horrified to see Frank.

"It is the judgment of the Highest Court," says Jim, solemnly.

BISON.

THE LURE OF THE CIRCUS (Two Parts—Week of Sept. 3).—The cast: Bud (Fred Church); His Father (Doctor Crane); Lily Wright (Eileen Sedgwick); Bringley (Kewpie Morgan). Story and production by W. B. Pearson.

"Shoeing mules is all you're fit for, so get busy." So spoke Bud's father, the village blacksmith, as his son was treating him to the story of his talents as an animal trainer.

"Well, I'll show you some day," muttered Bud, and just that minute Lilly, his sweetheart, rushed up with a circus ad, looking for a girl to ride bareback and a man to learn lion taming. It looked like Providence, and Bud dropped his work at once.

Bud and Lilly are employed, Bud with the understanding that he is to start taming the young lions first and thus get used to them. But the men around the arena make fun of Lilly in her riding outfit, and the horse leaves her in the ring hanging on the end of a pole. She soon loses much of her ardor for her new profession. Bud also has his troubles, for when he starts training some cubs, the mother lion gets away and comes after him and he climbs wildly up the cage wall. Then Al, the trainer, comes to his rescue and chases the lions away, but just for fun, lets them out again and they run after Bud, pursuing him until he has climbed over a fence.

Meanwhile, Bringley has dropped a plug of tobacco near Charlie, the elephant, who eats the plug. Then, infuriated with such treatment, Charlie pulls his chain loose and makes his way to the office where Lilly is just telling Bringley that she doesn't want to ride horses any more. Charlie knocks the office building over; Lilly and Bringley are lost in the wreckage. Lilly finally meets Bud outside the arena, and together they return to the blacksmith shop.

"I'll train mules, pop," says Bud, pulling on his leather apron.

VICTOR.

THE CURSE OF A FLIRTING HEART (Two Parts—Week of Sept. 3).—The cast: Max (Max Asher); Mrs. Max (Lillian Peacock). Story by C. B. Hoadley. Produced by Craig Hutchinson.

"If he flirts all the time with strange women, I don't see why I shouldn't flirt with strange men," says Mrs. Max, as she puts on her best hat and goes out.

In a park where the mayor of Bugville is flirting with a swell-looking woman, Mrs. Max seats herself behind her parasol. Max comes along, sits beside his wife and starts a flirtation, neither knowing the other, but Max discovers his error and flees. A cameraman is going about the town shooting local scenes. Max picks up an acquaintance with a young woman who is hanging out clothes; they decide to go to a picture show. Mrs. Max becomes friendly with this same neighbor's husband and they also go to the picture show, sitting directly in front of Max and his friend.

Max and the neighbor have been chased out of a barn by a mule while trying to hide from Mrs. Max. Max crouches in the crowd as he enters the show. The neighbor hides behind Mrs. Max's skirts as he goes in. The manager of the show receives word that the films for his program missed the train.

The operator writes on a slide and flashes on the screen: "There's a man in the house with another man's wife and the husband is looking for him." Max and the man with Mrs. Max both sneak out of the show and later return, Max being seated by his own wife and the neighbor by his.

The mayor and his wife are also in the show. Because of the lack of regular films, the local views, taken by Professor Shutter, are shown on the screen. All the scenes of the different flirtations are shown; the mayor chased by a bull; the episode with the mule; a prominent old maid and a man flirting; Max and his wife flirting behand the parasol.

"Never again for ours!" vow Max and his wife.

STAR FEATURETTE.

A DREAM OF EGYPT (Two Parts—Week of Sept. 3).—The cast: Dorothy (Lena Baskette); Her Mother (Betty Schade); Her Father (Albert MacQuarrie); the Prince (Fred Montague); Prince's Confidant (Walter Belasco). Story by Myrtle Stedman. Directed by Marshall Stedman.

Dorothy was a little girl whose great passion was dancing. She was never tired of looking at a book in the library called "Mysterious Egypt," which told the story of a famous dancing girl and a Prince. "I know what I'll do," she exclaimed. "I'll get a shawl out of the attic, and play I'm the beautiful dancer."

Draping the shawl around her, she starts to dance. She imagines she is the girl in the picture. Her mother watches her, but tells her she must change her dress, as her father will soon be home for dinner.

The father brings home a beautiful statuette of a little Egyptian dancing girl, as a surprise for his wife and child. It is placed on a pedestal at the foot of the stairway. Dorothy is delighted and gazes at it enraptured. Later, Dorothy creeps down-stairs and dances before the statuette.

Dorothy has a wonderful dream. She is the statuette dancing girl; her mother is her sister and her father the sweetheart of her sister. All of them are poor Egyptians. The child dances on the street while her sister sells flowers, and her sweetheart works in the markets of Cairo. A prince falls in love with the sister and desires her for his harem and, because the flower girl refuses, the prince has her seized and taken to his palace.

Dorothy tells the sweetheart what has happened. She makes up her mind to gain entrance to the palace to plead for her sister. Stopping by the guards, she comes to the palace and begs the prince to let her sister go. When he refuses, she begins to dance. The prince is fascinated and at last says he will let her sister go but she will be held to dance for him. Meantime, the sweetheart has gotten help and fights with the guards.

The prince orders the sister released, but she refuses to leave the child. Then the sweetheart gains admittance to the palace and rescues the two girls, just in time to have the slaves tear the child away from him.

The prince demands that the child dance. She obeys, but finally falls exhausted to the floor at the foot of the raised dias on which the prince is seated.

"Wake up, Dorothy! You've fallen out of bed and pulled the covers with you!"

With these words in her ears, Dorothy wakes from her dream of old Egypt.

JOKER.

OFFICER, CALL A COP! (Week of Sept. 3).—The cast: Bow Nee (Milburn Morante); Sweeney (William Franey); Evelyn Dale (Janet Eastman). Story by A. F. Statter. Directed by W. W. Beaudine.

"Good day, officer. Nice weather, isn't it?" said Evelyn Dale to Sweeney, as she dismissed her machine at the entrance to Chinatown, and passed down the street to deliver some tracts on "The Social Uplift."

Sweeney looked after her with a sigh, which changed to a gasp of fright, as the girl was suddenly surrounded by a band of Chinks, who dragged her into their lair.

"Stop thief!" began Sweeney, starting to rush to the spot. His spirit was willing, but his feet were weak, and they headed him in the opposite direction, landing him in a familiar saloon.

In the meantime, Evelyn was beating furiously on the panels of an underground chamber. Sweeney had a shot of his favorite beverage, and began to remember the credit of the force of which he was so conspicuous an ornament. Soon he was on his way to the place from which Evelyn had disappeared.

Thud—kerplunk! Sweeney knew no more. When he came to, Bow Nee was offering him a pipe and a pill, and the unsuspecting cop accepted both with resignation. Blissful dreams were his, but a rude awakening followed when the police raided the joint.

"I rescued Miss Dale! I discovered the den! I put out Bow Nee! I done it all?" And Sweeney got away with it, too, until, just as Mr. Dale was handing over the reward for his daughter's rescue, the pesky opium pipe had to fall out of his uniform.

"The cooler for you with the Chinks!" said the heartless captain, and Sweeney's pipe dream was over.

A GALE OF VERSE (Week of Sept. 3).—The cast: Lizzie Loose (Gale Henry); Jerry (Milton Sims); Phoney Felix (Charles Haefli). Story by Tom Gibson. Produced by Allen Curtis.

"And while the bats go batting through.
My love for you will still be true."

Lizzie Loose had just finished reading this masterpiece to the editor of the Caterwaul, and he came to long enough to murmur: "Too good for us, I fear—too highbrow, you know."

"But you can't send me away like that. The stars told me to come to you" said Lizzie, fixing her cross-eyed glance upon him.

Just then a letter was handed to Ye Ed. It was from Lizzie's paternal parent, and said that he would give a hundred planks to the man who could make Liz go back to the farm. Jerry, the star reporter, pricked up his ears. He wanted a hundred dollars, and he was used to hard work. He frames it with the Ed to send Liz on a phoney assignment to an empty house, while he will appear in a series of different make-ups and scare her from the job. But Liz didn't have her long ears for nothing, and she overhears the plot.

In the cellar of the house lives Phoney Felix and his band of desperate counterfeiters. Jerry is seized and condemned to death. The composer's stone is suspended over his head with the rope in the flame of a candle.

Lizzie arrives. She thinks the whole thing is a frame, so she sails in and does up the gang. The police are attracted by the row and arrest the bunch. Lizzie wins the big reward for the capture of Phoney Felix. She remembers Jerry just in time and, rushing to him, blows out the candle and saves him.

"But if I untie you, you'll have to marry me," she whispers coyly.

"Marry you? To get out of here I'd marry the ——— himself," and Lizzie takes that for a compliment.

NESTOR.

LOOKING THEM OVER (Week of Sept. 3).—The cast: Eddie (Eddie Lyons); Lee (Lee Moran); Eddie's Wife (Edith Roberts). Story by Lyons and Moran. Directed by Roy Clements.

Eddie is married, but plays the cafes regardless. Lee is married and realizes it every minute. Eddie persuades Lee to go out for a night, and by means of a ruse Lee gets away from the house.

While they are enjoying themselves at a cafe with two pretty entertainers, Lee wife's brother and a friend arrive from the West. They are hungry and get the two wives to go to go to a cafe for something to eat. They go to the same cafe that Lee and Eddie have chosen. Two husbands see their wives with the strange men, and flee to the kitchen for a consultation.

They decide to stay and watch their wives. Donning waiter's clothes, they proceed to wait on the party. Their jealousy is aroused more and more as they watch their wives dance with the two men. Finally their anger leads them to crown the two men with dishes of soft food, and a chase and general scramble ensues.

"Forgive me, darling, I didn't have a bit of a good time without you," says Lee.

"Forgive me, sweetheart. He's only my brother," says wifie, and so peace is restored once more.

MR. OPP (Five Parts—Aug. 20).—The cast: Mr. D. Webster Opp (Arthur Hoyt); Willard Hinton (George Chesbro); Jimmy Fallows (George Hernandez); John Mathews (Jack Curtis); Guinevere Gusty (Neva Gerber); Miss Kippy (Elsie Maison); Mrs. Gusty (Anne Lockhart). Screen version of Alice Heagan Rice's novel. Scenario and direction by Lynn F. Reynolds.

Daniel Webster Opp, egotistical, vain and with only a smattering of education, is the epitome of cheerfulness and optimism. He has ventured into many careers and has made a failure of all of them, until he becomes a traveling salesman for a St. Louis show firm. Just when promises are golden, Opp receives word that his stepfather has died and he must go at once to his old home to settle the estate.

He is met at the hotel in Cove Junction by his brother, Ben, who demands that a settlement be made on the basis of D. Webster taking the homestead while Ben shall have the few dollars in cash that complete the estate. In this arrangement Ben plans to send Kippy Opp to an institution for the feeble minded. As a result of the ravages of fever Kippy at the age of twenty-four has only the mind of a child.

D. Webster Opp decides to sacrifice himself to the care of his sister. He gives Ben the money and settles down in the old homestead to start life anew. As Cove Junction boasts no newspaper, Mr. Opp establishes The Opp Eagle. His optimistic editorials are read by a wealthy promotor who goes to Cove Junction to investigate the possibilities of getting coal from the ground in that vicinity.

Mr. Opp's plan for a "Greater Cove Junction" enthuses the populace, and he is chosen as the community head in forwarding schemes to make the town famous and prosperous. John Mathews, the promoter, addresses an assembly of the townsfolk, promising to co-operate with them in developing the coal lands if the citizens will invest with him in the Turtle Creek Development Co., which he undertakes to form. Mr. Opp's enthusiasm leads the citizens to invest, and Cove Junction begins to boom.

With Guinevere Gusty, the village belle, Mr. Opp has fallen in love, proposes marriage and is accepted. This happens before Willard Hinton, because of threatened blindness, is compelled to abandon his position as private secretary to John Mathews. Hinton decides to remain in Cove Junction and goes to board at the home of the Widow Gusty. This move ends Mr. Opp's matrimonial aspirations, for Guinevere falls in love with Hinton and Mr. Opp releases the girl from her engagement.

John Mathews returns to Cove Junction and at a meeting of the stockholders declares that the coal lands have been found to be unproductive of profit, but offers a plan to sell out to a rival corporation. All the stockholders, except Mr. Opp, agree to sell. Mr. Opp declares the whole transaction to be dishonorable, preconceived by Mathews to trick the rival company into buying a worthless proposition. He, however, is voted down and the sale is consummated.

Then and there Cove Junction's boom begins to wane. Hinton, having married Guinevere, makes a proposal to buy the Opp Eagle and retain Mr. Opp as an employee. Seeing his last hopes vanishing, Mr. Opp sells out on the day the townsfolk have set for a banquet to do honor to the man who has done so much to advance the prosperity of Cove Junction. Mr. Opp finds himself the hero of an occasion that brings to his heart the manna of adulation and praise for which he is so hungry. He is then and there nominated for the office of Mayor and the story ends with Mr. Opp happy in the homage of his follow citizens with a life of devotion to the brain-sick Kippy.

THE CHARMER (Five Parts—Aug. 27). The cast: Ambrosia Lee (Ella Hall); Charlotte Whitney (Belle Bennett); Cynthia M. Perkins (Martha Mattox); Don Whitney (James McCandlas); Franklin Whitney (George Webb); Judge D. W. Appleby (Frank McQuarrie). Story by J. Grubb Alexander and Fred Mynton. Directed by Jack Conway.

MARK THIS

Pictures are judged by the results which depend as much upon the ability and experience of the developer and printer as it does upon the one who takes them.

EVANS FILM MFG. CO., 416-24 West 216th St., New York City Telephone St. Nicholas 3443-3444

When an enemy torpedo sank a great trans-Atlantic liner, Ambrosia Lee was left an orphan. The only lifeboat heard from after the catastrophe came ashore, with Ambrosia and her two charges—Caesar, a black little imp, and a pet monkey.

The refugees were taken to the general store in Penntucket where the male population were wont to gather for the purpose of assembling 'round the stove and adjusting the fate of the nation. Judge Appleby, supreme in finally settling disputes, ruled that Ambrosia should be contributed to the war bazaar that was then being held in the basement of the parish church.

The wheel of fortune was designated as the means of deciding who should win the prize, and the lucky number was held by Cynthia Perkins, a spinster of rigid New England disposition. Ambrosia, once established in her new home, resumed her communication with fairies that had been interrupted by the disaster on shipboard. A copy of Grimm's Fairy Tales supplied the medium for passing many hours in dreaming of the day when Prince Charming should come to claim her.

The immediate necessity of washing dishes and doing housework was reluctantly observed, but she was always waiting for an event that, suddenly and unexpectedly brought her Prince—and a great deal of trouble to boot. Don Whitney was her Prince Charming and he had been sent to Penntucket because his father and mother were not getting along first class in their matrimonial arrangements.

Mr. Whitney sent Don to his boyhood home and when Mrs. Whitney started her divorce she took the lad elsewhere, leaving Ambrosia forlorn. Ambrosia, having heard of the domestic storm in the Whitney family, had written a letter to Mr. Whitney, telling him the fairies would adjust matters and all would be well.

Mrs. Whitney's lawyer had arranged for a hired co-respondent to give the testimony that should free her from her husband, but when it came to trial the said co-respondent failed to appear. When Ambrosia heard that the trial could not proceed for want of a co-respondent, she remembered the letter she had written Mr. Whitney. Adjudging herself eligible as a "correspondent" Ambrosia took the witness stand—and had explained to her the meaning of the two words she had confused in communion with the fairies.

The interpretation Mr. Whitney gave to the Court as to the contents of Ambrosia's letter touched Mrs. Whitney's heart and impelled her to withdraw her suit. When Cynthia Perkins heard of Ambrosia's "outrageous conduct" she turned her out upon the cold, cold world. When the Whitneys heard of Ambrosia's distress they adopted the child and we leave the little orphan and Don Whitney happy in the extreme.

BUTTERFLY PICTURES.

WHO WAS THE OTHER MAN? (Five Parts—Sept. 3).—The cast: Herbert Cornell (Duke Worne); Senator Washburn (Wm. T. Horne); Marion Washburn (Mae Gaston); Wanda Bartell (Beatrice Van); James Walbert, and Ludwig Schumann (Francis Ford).—Story by J. Lowe. Produced by Francis Ford.

"Prettiest Girl I ever saw," says Ludwig Schumann of the Secret Service, as he catches sight of the young American at the desk of the Grand Hotel in Paris.

He learns she is Marion, the daughter of Senator Washburn of Texas, and is engaged to marry Herbert Cornell, a favorite of Washington society, to whom her father has only one objection. He thinks Herbert has played the role of society butterfly too long, and it is time to prove he is made of sterner stuff. Therefore, he consented on the condition that Herbert take charge of the delivery of the plans for an international canal, and see that they reach the proper hands.

Schumann is about to address Marion, when a young American enters. The spy is struck with the resemblance of the newcomer to himself. His stare attracts the stranger, who is also astonished at the likeness.

The American is James Walbert. He sees Marion, and is attracted by her beauty. A small, dark man enters the hotel and gives Walbert a paper as he passes. Walbert realizes the occurrence is unusual, and goes to his room. He opens it and finds a woman's photograph, with instructions to take the steamer on which she is sailing that evening for America. Walbert, knowing that he has been mistaken for the other, decides to go through with the undertaking.

Schumann meets the dark man, who says: "You will have to hurry if you want to make that steamer tonight."

"What on earth are you talking about?" says Schumann, and is disconcerted to discover the agent has given the message to the wrong man. He ascends to the other's room, and Walbert looks up to see the muzzle of a revolver covering him.

"Hand over the instructions you received," says a curt voice, and Walbert, bowing to the inevitable, raises his hands above his head. An interruption occurs, and Walbert overpowers his double, ties him securely, rushes for the nearest exit and springs into a taxi.

On the steamer he sees Marion Washburn, the then Wanda Bartell, whom he recognizes from the photograph as his intended confederate. He makes himself known to her. Walbert realizes Marion is far more charming than he thought at first sight. He learns of her engagement to Herbert Cornell with a distinct pang.

Arrived in New York, Walbert and Wanda report at the headquarters of the Black Legion. They have learned that the plans have been intrusted to Cornell, and instruct Wanda to play the old, old game.

It is the ancient passion of jealousy which Wanda calls to her aid. It is not hard for her to contrive an accidental meeting with young Cornell, and the upshot is an invitation to her rooms, and a toast to their better acquaintance. He remembered nothing after drinking the toast, and Wanda relieved him of the plans he carried. Then, as she contemplated his death-like face, a sob burst from her, and she covered her face with her hands.

"Heaven help me! I love him!" she confessed.

"That's one reason why you'll hand me those plans. And the other is this!"

The voice was that of her "confederate," and "this" was the badge of the United States Secret Service. Snatching up Cornell's half empty glass, the woman drained it and fell at Walbert's feet.

Walbert left the room, however, determined on rounding up the Black Legion single-handed.

For days Marion had been disturbed by the sense of impending trouble. Many small things combined in her mind into a certainty that Herbert, and possibly Walbert, were in danger. Meeting him on his way to the docks, she had a sudden inspiration.

Walbert, entering unsuspiciously after giving the password, was not prepared for the attack launched against him. Schumann had escaped, and wirelessed the news of the impersonation to headquarters. No match for the dozen men, Walbert was putting up a splendid fight when the police summoned by Marion burst into the place. The Black Legion had held its last meeting.

EVERY GIRL'S DREAM (Five Parts—Aug. 25). The cast: Gretchen (June Caprice); Jane Cummings (Kittens Reichert); Carl (Harry Hilliard); Hulda (Margaret Fielding); Mrs. Van Larn, Gretchen's mother (Marcia Harris); Mynher De Haas (Dan Mason). Scenario by Adrian Johnson. Directed by Harry Millarde.

Olenberg, a town in Holland, is famed for its pretty girls. One of these is Gretchen, who lives with her foster mother, Mrs. Van Lorn. Gretchen is beloved by everyone. Carl, a woodchopper, particularly loves Gretchen. He, too, is a foster child. Mynher De Haas, the town lawyer and capitalist, loves Gretchen and despite his fifty years cannot understand why the girl will not consider him as a suitor.

Mrs. Van Lorn prefers the lawyer. Incidentally the lawyer holds a mortgage on the Van Lorn homestead. But Hulda, a dark beauty, is determined Gretchen will not have Carl. Every time she finds them together she notifies Mrs. Van Lorn who drags Gretchen away and leaves Carl and Hulda.

One day De Haas comes to pop the question. As he is making a fervent plea a friend fastens a fishhook to his wig. When he gets up off goes his wig. Gretchen laughs heartily. Mynher leaves in a rage. Determined to make the Van Lorn family pay for the insult he looks for the mortgage in his pocket. It's not there. He has Gretchen arrested as the thief. At the same time Carl is in the woods. A carriage approaches. On nearing Carl it stops and a liveried attendant gets out. Noticing a birth mark like a fleur-de-lys on Carl's back he calls another attendant, seizes the youth and throws him into the carriage. They drive off.

The next day finds Gretchen on her way to the stocks, to pay for her theft. Mynher is following her. Just as the girl is to be locked in the lawyer finds the mortgage. He asks that Gretchen be freed. When the populace learns of his mistake they put him in the stocks, and free Gretchen.

That evening a courier enters the town seeking a lost princess. The lucky girl has among her trinkets a beautiful locket. Hulda finds the locket in Gretchen's trunk. Hulda is proclaimed the princess. In a carriage in the square, she is told, is the prince she is to marry. The carriage door opens and out steps an old, wrinkled man.

Hulda runs off, crying she isn't the princess, that Gretchen is the girl and that she stole the locket. Gretchen is placed on the throne.

But the old man wasn't the prince. The prince, no other than Carl, comes from the coach and sits beside Gretchen. After the town's celebration a messenger announces that Carl's father has died and Carl is king.

While the people hail him, Carl gathers Gretchen into his arms and asks her to be his queen. Then Gretchen awakes and finds it was only "Every Girl's Dream".

GREATER VITAGRAPH.

THE DIVORCEE (Five Parts—Aug. 27). The cast: Wanda Carson (Mary Anderson); Rev. Jerry Ferguson (Alfred Vosburgh); Sam Carson (Pliny Goodfriend); Mrs. Pelham-Wilson (Jean Hathaway).

Wanda comes to Reno to visit her brother but he is away on business and in her search for excitement she decides to play the up-to-date divorcee. She makes up a story of martial infelicity which wins her the sympathy of the colony in which she becomes the leader, although in her heart she disapproves of the fast, careless lives they live.

Fond of horseback riding, she meets a young minister whom she mistakes for a cowboy. Riding is just a diversion with him, however, his main purpose being the repeal of laws which makes for easy divorces. She champions the cause of the divorcees and replies to the minister's attacks in press and open meeting, although he is unaware of her identity.

She is frequently put to embarrassment in maintaining her pose and is nearly exposed when her women friends demand that she show her marriage certificate. Her wit saves her, however, when she produces the child of a woman companion who accompanied her to Reno and of whom they knew nothing and challenges the divorcees to show such good proof.

Meantime, the friendship of the minister has grown into love, when Wanda in disgust breaks all relations with the divorcees, who inform the minister that the woman he admires is one of them and has a little girl in the bargain.

Wanda riding out to meet the cowboy minister is witness to a stage hold-up and is convinced that the minister is the robber. She hurries to warn him of a posses' approach and he, under a misapprehension, believes she is fleeing from an angry husband who has found her retreat. And so the two race ahead of the sheriff with bullets falling about them, until finally cornered.

Explanations follow and the sheriff, an old friend of the minister, quickly vouches for him. It might have gone harder with the "divorcee," only her brother Sam, also a friend of the sheriff, happens to be in the posse and she is speedily relegated to her rightful position of a very attractive and unmarried young woman who loves only the minister.

SOLDIERS OF CHANCE (Five Parts—Sept. 3). The cast: Billy Mountain alias Captain Josslyn (Evart Overton); Josephine Winton (Miriam Fouche); Dolores (Julia Swayne Gordon); Philip Winton (Charles Kent); Peter Lawler (Charles Henderson); Yawkey (Denton Vane).

Lawler, the promoter, has Winton, the girl's father absolutely in his power, financially, when Billy Mountain, unrecognized as Lawler's enemy, arrives in New York. He needs money to start a revolution in South America to exploit mahogany concessions, and gets Lawler on his yacht intending to force him to sign away valuable securities. Miss Winton and her father also go on the yacht.

Lawler, defiant, refuses to sign any papers and the party finally arrives at the South American estate of Mountain, who starts the revolution. Lawler joins the federal forces and betrays Mountain, who is captured, along with the girl, and sentenced to death the following day.

Miss Winton gets word to the revolutionists of Mountain's plight and agrees to marry Lawler if he will postpone the execution one day. By forced marches, Mountain's men arrive before the palace just as he is about to be shot. There is a battle in which the federals are put to rout and Mountain and Lawler meet face to face. The latter is killed by one of Mountain's followers and the father is cleared of the stigma of a murder with which he has been charged, by the arrival of the man he was supposed to have killed. Mountain and the girl have learned to love each other.

SIRENS OF THE SEA (Five Part). The cast: Sybil (Louise Lovely); Gerald Waldron (Jack Mulhall); Julie (Carmen Myers); Hartley Royce (Wm. Quinn); Wellington Stanhope (Sidney Sean); Mrs. Stanhope (Helen Wright); Haji (Evelyn Selbie). Story by Grace Helen Bailey. Produced by Allen Holubar.

In the night a terrific storm arises off a strange island and a ship is cast furiously about, sending forth rockets in an appeal for help. As the sun begins to appear, fishermen start drawing in their nets. The rocky shore is strewn with wreckage among which the old beachcomber, Haji, is picking up driftwood. As Wellington Stanhope and his wife, who lives in the Grecian villa, come down to the beach, the fishermen have opened their nets and discovered a tiny blonde child. Haji mutters and looks across the sea. The Stanhopes take the child and try to resuscitate it, and when the tiny girl opens her eyes, they conclude God has sent this little one to fill the void in their hearts.

Fourteen years later Sybil has blossomed into womanhood. Her school chums are spending their vacation at the villa. Julie, a cold, calculating girl, is jealous of Sybil. They go to a nearby island where they start undressing behind rocks, preparatory to going in swimming. Sybil takes their bathing suits. The girls don sea-weed and chase Sybil, then start playing ukeleles and dancing. They are seen by Gerald Waldron, who, bored with society, has found a means of escape on his yacht, but has been unable to escape Hartley Royce, who finds Gerald's money much to his liking. The boys find that there is no such island noted on the map and figure that they have made a discovery. Gerald says it is an enchanted island and over yonder sits Lorelei and her sirens. Destruction or not, he is going to Lorelei. Hartley determines to go back also.

Gerald and Hartley fall in love with Sybil; Julie rages and finds herself relegated to Hartley. A fortnight goes by. Julie and Hartley plot to separate the lovers. Julie insinuates that Sybil is not the daughter of the Stanhopes. Hartley tells Sybil not to worry about Gerald, who has a sweetheart in every port.

It is Sybil's eighteenth birthday and a celebration is in progress. After telling Julie her plan, Sybil slips away to go for Haji, to induce her to tell the fortunes of the young people. Julie informs Hartley, who follows Sybil. She tries to elude him, but he gains and passionately catches her in his arms. She rushes to the top of a cliff and, though she warns him, he rushes toward her and she jumps into the sea. After several moments of horror, he picks up her cloak which has been washed to shore, and returns to the villa. Gerald is frantic. After hours of fruitless searching the dawn finds him hopeless and exhausted. He has heard Haji saying Sybil came from the sea and has gone back to the sea; that she is the spirit of the Greek sculptor, who, lured by the sirens, left his wife and child, and the wife drowning herself and the child, cursed the land and water "until true love shall reign again."

Gerald and Hartley start out to find the girl, each in a different direction, and to each is accorded a series of startling adventures, which end with the sailing of Sybil and Gerald for America.

PANTS (Essanay—Five Parts—Drama—Sept. 10).—Little Betty has a luxurious home, an army of servants and the costliest of toys. But she hasn't what a child wants most of all—other children to play with. The result is that she runs away and joins a group of children from the ghetto district on the beach. In play she exchanges clothing with a little boy. That evening Betty doesn't return home. Her maiden aunt—an over-zealous guardian—is frantic. She notifies the police. The same evening the father of the boy, who has lost his position and is facing starvation, decides to turn burglar. He steals into the home of Betty's father. The household is awakened and the intruder captured. At that moment the police arrive with the boy whom they have mistaken for Betty on account of the little girl's clothing which he wears. All are utterly bewildered. The denouement comes with Betty's entrance at this juncture, garbed in the boy's clothes. She likes the boy and on her plea he and his father are liberated. The experience teaches Betty's father that his little girl should have more than his wealth can afford her; that is, other children to play with.

CONQUEST PICTURES.

(On K-E-S-E Program.)

THE PRINCESS' NECKLACE (Edison—Four Parts—September 1—On Program No. 8).—The cast: The King (William Calhoun); the Princess (Kathleen Townsend); the Stranger (Wallace MacDonald); the Little Girl (Susan Mitchell); The Girl (Dorothy Graham); the Shepherd (Roy Adams).

Once in a country called Happyland there lived a good and wise King. To his beautiful daughter, Princess Loree, the King presents a priceless pearl necklace. A mysterious stranger arrives. He meets the Princess and they fall in love at first sight. He reveals to her that he comes from a country where the people are forever in gloom and he is here to learn the secret of happiness. He meets with a number of adventures which teach him some of the principles of happiness, but not its Master Secret.

One day a goblin takes the necklace and brings it to his chief, who hides it in the wall of the Goblin's Cave. The Princess and the people are grief-stricken and the stranger decides to find it. He enters the Enchanted Woods and after a series of adventures reaches a secret passage which leads him into the Cave of the Goblins. The chief of the goblins promises to return the necklace if the stranger will brave any perils that may confront him. The latter consents and passes undaunted through them all.

He obtains the necklace and returns it to the Princess, whose happiness is restored. The King is willing to give him half his kingdom as a reward, but all the stranger asks is to be allowed to speak to the Princess one hour every day for seven days. At the end of the seventh day he leaves, promising to return shortly.

Weeks pass. The King informs the Princess the newly-crowned King of Roseland is coming to pay homage to Happyland and that she better don her finest apparel and help him entertain the illustrious guest. The King of Roseland arrives and the Princess is happy, for in him she recognizes the Stranger. She inquires if he has discovered the Master Secret. He answers in the affirmative, saying true happiness consists in deeds that bring happiness to others, and in the realization of one's ideals—love crowning all.

THE PUZZLING BILLBOARD (Edison—850 feet—September 1—On Program No. 8).

This is a puzzle story arranged by Sam Lloyd of a billboard or rather of the evolution of a word thereon from pants to nails. On the surface there seems to be no connection between pants and nails; yet it is as easy as eating pie to make nails out of pants if you know how. The first word advertises the product of a clothing man. But he has made his reckoning without the host—or rather a number of hosts. For a florist, a furrier, a jeweler, a plumber, a dry-goods man, a carpenter, a physician, a lawyer, a mason, a ship's chandler and a hardware man happen along one after the other, and, by merely pasting over one letter of the word on the billboard with a different letter, each alters the word into an advertisement of his own product. The film is ingeniously arranged so as to give the onlooker a chance to use his wits in guessing the next word on the billboard. In the end a goat comes along and eats up the poster. This goat is a puzzle in itself. Is it a rear goat? Who knows?

IN OLD ENGLAND (Edison—250 feet—September 1—On Program No. 8).

This scenic is interesting by virtue of the marked contrast between the rural scenery of Albion and that of our own country. We still boast pristine forests and regions untrod by man. But England is a tight little isle, teeming with population. Nature there bears no aspect of rugged grandeur. Everything, be it sward or tree or brook, is trimmed down to a nicety—according to model. Everything is orderly and prearranged as things in Toyland. We gain this impression as we follow the tourists along English roads, past quaint little houses, where everything is peaceful and serene and unruffled, down the banks of the Thames, under bridges and through massive locks.

THE BLIND FIDDLER (Edison—One Reel—Sept. 1—On Program No. 8—With Viola Dana as the Fairy).—The blind fiddler is playing his weird and haunting music outside his hut, but he is very unhappy. He sighs: "Ah if I could only see my lovely wife, how happy I would be." A fairy is moved by his prayer and restores to him his sight. But the world he has imagined so beautiful bursts repulsively on his sight. He sees a man beating his dog unmercifully. His wife turns out to be old and ugly. The disillusionment affects his genius and his violin is deprived of its haunting, almost human witchery. He cries out in despair for the return of his blessed darkness. The fairy restores it to him and therewith his happiness.

WOODCRAFT FOR BOYS (Edison—400 feet—September 1—On Program No. 8).

This film shows that many schools have complete courses in woodcraft for boys. Two-day canoe trips are part of the course. While out camping, the boys enjoy the simple life, living in tents, taking their daily swim and cooking their own meals. Matches are not needed, and it is a treat to watch the boys starting a fire without them. The flapjacks they turn out would arouse the envy of a Broadway chef. Their bodies are hardened by such sports as racing, swimming and spear throwing. In the evening they dance around the camp fire and indulge in such simple games as knocking each other off the stool. The ending of this split reel shows a boy blowing the bugle and the camp breaking up.

SHIPPING LIVE FISH (Edison—200 feet—September 1—On Program No. 8).

(Photographed at a New York aquarium under the auspices of the New York Zoological Society.)

Fish breathe oxygen from the water. If a fish is placed in a small amount of water he soon exhausts the oxygen and dies of suffocation. The New York Aquarium has solved the question of supplying the oxygen on long-journeys even when fish are placed in small jars. The jar is first filled with pure sea water. The fish to be shipped are placed in it and the jar is inverted in a tank full of water. Sufficient oxygen is then admitted to force out one-third of the water. The jar is tightly corked under water and hermetically sealed with waxed linen. The jar is then packed in a barrelful of sawdust or excelsoir, addressed and shipped to its destination. The fish will live for more than fourteen days in a jar of small size. It is therefore possible to ship them from New York to any part of the United States and to most parts of Europe.

THE BROOK (Edison—400 feet—Sept. 1—On Program No. 8).

This famous poem by Tennyson is made the subject of a scenic comprising a tableau of pictures that interpret the mood of the poem. We follow the falls bickering down the valley and the brook as it chatters over stony ways in little sharps and trebles, as it steals by lawns and grassy plots and murmurs under moon and stars in brambling wilderness, as it hurries down the hills past town and under bridges, winding in and out with here and there a foamy flake until it joins the brimming river.

THE LUST OF THE AGES (Seven Parts—August).—Edmund Craig, obsessed with the ambition to acquire wealth, pays scant attention to his wife and daughter, Lois. Mr. and Mrs. Craig reap their harvest, but in different ways. Craig, in the excitement of the hour and in the moment of consummating a large financial transaction, is stricken with heart disease and dies.

Lois completes her education at a female "Freshwater" college and is awarded the literary prize as a result of her book, which she has entitled "The Lust of the Ages." Professor Mason, a kindly, elderly gentleman, marvels at the strength of the work, and prevails upon Lois to permit him to have it published. Lois shortly after her graduation becomes the fiancee of Byron Masters, a wholesouled American. Masters is the chairman of the Board of Trustees, whose financial contributions permit Professor Mason to keep his college open. Professor Mason for his commencement lecture, chooses the subject, "The Iniquities of Wealth Wrongfully Applied," and inveighs against monopolies and aggregations of wealth generally.

Masters is the head of a combination seeking to control important railway lines and, hearing Mason's address, determines to remove him as president of the college and forwards him a notification to that effect.

Professor Mason delivers the first copy of Lois Craig's novel to her in the garden of her home and there also tells her of his removal by Byron Masters. Lois protests and tells Professor Mason she will have him restored. She calls on Masters and when she realizes that he, too, is obsessed with the lust for gold, and with the lesson of her mother's experience in her mind, tells Masters they could never be happy and terminates the engagement. She leaves with him her book and asks him to read it.

Masters commences to read the book and the photoplay then visualizes what Lois Craig has written. She proves the dissipation and squandering of wealth, immoral entertainments held by those of the rich, the want and privation of the poor, the reason that girls are driven to immoral deeds and then traces the history of the lust of all ages from the time of the ancient days, when there was no money and wealth was acquired through the medium of barter and exchange. There was then known a habitation called the Valley of Content, but the army of Mammon invaded this peaceful valley and, re-

A SOLDIER BOY SINGS

"I want tobacco just as much as bandages and socks,
So drop your contribution in my old tobacco box!"

SEND 25 CENTS, and we will forward a "comfort package" of tobacco to some soldier or sailor at the front—enough to keep him in tobacco for a week. Or SEND $1—it keeps a fighting man happy for a month. Tobacco is the only thing that cheers the soldier boy through the dreary hours in the trenches. He'll probably send you a post card in acknowledgment—a war souvenir you will treasure. Send your "Smokes" at once—he needs them badly. Every cent contributed goes for tobacco for our soldiers and sailors abroad.

The next morning Tom is captured by the Priestess and her followers, and the camp is set on fire just before Pearl and "The Spider" reach it. Pearl and "The Spider" are locked in the burning cabin, while Tom is led away captive by the Priestess and her followers.

TRIANGLE FILM CORPORATION.

WEE LADY BETTY (Five Parts—Aug. 19). The cast: Wee Lady Betty (Bessie Love); Roger O'Reilly (Frank Borzage); Fergus McClusky (Charles K. French); Shamus McTeague (Walter Perkins); Lanty O'Dea (L. Jefferies); The O'Reilly (Walter Whitman); Mrs. O'Reilly (Aggie Herring); Connor O'Donovan (Thornton Edwards); Father Dan (Alfred Hollingsworth); Michael O'Brien (J. P. Lockney). Story by J. G. Hakws. Directed by Charles Miller.

On the Isle of Kilcroney Wee Lady Betty ruled O'Reilly Castle with a stern hand and a big heart. Their fear of the Wee Lady was next to the fear of the ghost of "Slasher" O'Reilly. Sir Daniel O'Reilly, the rightful owner died, leaving the castle to Roger O'Reilly, who announced that he was coming to take possession. The tenants would not have this as the Wee Lady had been good to them, but she told them to receive the new master kindly.

Not having the wherewithal to provide for her aged father, the Wee Lady contrived a scheme. Feigning to leave the castle, she had her father returned after dark the same night and she installed in the haunted chamber, keeping the key. The next day when Roger arrived with his mother his reception was a chilly one, the villagers believing that he was responsible for the Wee Lady's supposed departure. The Wee Lady Betty in the guise of a maid showed them through the place, paying particular stress on the haunted chamber and the ghost of "Slasher" O'Reilly.

When Roger had gone, his mother demanded to see the haunted room, so the Wee Lady got into an old suit of armour and said "Begone!" Mrs. O'Reilly fainted. The Wee Lady found that she had developed a strong liking for Roger but was thrown into despair when he declared he would nail up the door of the chamber. While getting food to her father that night she heard a door open and beheld Roger entering the room. Once more she got behind the armour and said "Begone!" and her answer was a shot from Roger's pistol, grazing her arm. There was a loud noise outside and Roger rushed from the room, not knowing the work his pistol had done. The villagers had stormed the castle and were rushing up the steps when Roger appeared at the top. A fight ensued when the Wee Lady appeared and commanded them to leave. They left the castle, leaving the Wee Lady Betty and Roger clasped in each other's arms.

A PAWNBROKER'S HEART (Triangle Keystone—Two Parts).—The cast: Glen Cavender (Boss of Pawnshop); Caroline Rankin (His Wife); Chester Conklin (Clerk in Pawnshop); Peggy Pearce (His Wife and Cavender's Maid); Ben Turpin (Janitor in Pawnshop).

Peggy didn't figure that feeding her husband with the choicest cuts from the Cavender steak was anything but proper, but it led to complications. Glen essayed to go into the kitchen and bawl out Peggy for sending little more than a bone to the family table. Mrs. Glen misconstrued the situation, and Peggy was canned.

In the pawnshop, Conklin and Turpin doing their best to get their salaries with as little effort as possible. Peggy comes in and secrets herself with Cavender, in an effort to get her job back, it starts something, for Mrs. C. and Peggy's hubby don't get the angle. A band of crooks plan to rob the pawnshop. Clothing store dummies play an important part, and two bags, one with and one without cash, figure prominently in the plot.

GRAFTERS (Five Parts—Aug. 26). The cast: Jack Towne (Jack Devereaux); Mark Towne (Frank Currier); Doris Ames (Anna Leher); Mrs. Ames (Irene Leonard); The Menace (George Siegmann); "Laughing Louie" (Robert Crimmins). The story of "Grafters" details the efforts of Mark Towne to teach his nephew, who has just inherited a million dollars, to beware of swindlers. The nephew, Jack, falls so easily for suave strangers who specialize in selling blue sky, that he eventually engages a band of crooks to swindle Jack in a small way, and so teach him through the wisdom of experience to take care of the rest of his money.

At the head of the band of conspirators is Doris Ames, a young woman who is working to save her mother from the poor house, and she and Jack fall in love. In due course Doris finds the rest of the conspirators are planning to make a good haul from Jack while they are at it, and determines to defeat their aims. At about the same time Jack engages a band of detectives to trap the crowd. From this situation, fun follows fun, to a thrilling end.

TEN OF DIAMONDS (Five Parts—Sept. 2). Neva Blaine, a cabaret girl in a cheap cafe in a great city, at the price of every youthful and womanly hope has retained her virtue. Her coldness, cynicism, hate and disillusionment form a background for her frantic efforts to help young girls who enter the cafe with men who prey. Between her songs at the cabaret she habitually tells her fortune with playing cards.

Into her life came Warren Kennedy, wealthy society man. He was to have been married to Blanche Calloway, a social butterfly, when his enemy, Ellis Hopper, intrigued against him. Hopper succeeded in getting Miss Calloway to wed his son, leaving Kennedy shamed amid the wedding guests at a great church. Hopper further humiliates him by personally delivering the note in which the girl tells of her treachery.

To forget the tragedy of his love, Kennedy began a night of debauchery, ending in the dive where Neva worked. She was selected to get his money. Instead, she fell in love with him.

A plot of revenge occurred to Kennedy. He determined to educate Neva in social affairs, launch her as a wealthy tourist, have her trap his enemy in to marriage, and then he, Kennedy, would feel his revenge on exposing her origin and Hopper's plight.

She does her part successfully, winning Hopper but loving Kennedy, who rejects her efforts to become more than a friend to him. she despises Hopper. On the day of the wedding, she delays preparations to write a note to Kennedy, imploring him to save her from the unwelcome bridegroom. Kennedy informs her it is either Hopper or the slums for her future.

In desperation she prepares to suffer the wedding, when she determined on a tragic relief. She secured a bottle of wine, spilled much of the contents over her wedding dress, so the odor was offensive, then pretended drunkenness and reeled through the fashionable crowd toward the altar.

The guests fled from her. Hopper horrified denounces her. She returned to her room, abject in her woe. Then Kennedy could not resist the forces that drew him to her. He went to her room, they exchanged vows of love, and both their lives were made happy.

THE MAN HATER (Five Parts—Sept 2). The cast: Phemie Sanders (Winifred Allen); Joe Stull (Jack Meredith); Phemie's Father (Harry Neville); Phemie's Mother (Jessie Shirley); Lucy Convey, the Widow (Marguerite Gale); The Doctor (Robert Vivian); Phemie's Little Sister (Anna Lehr). Story by Mary Brecht Pulver. Directed by Albert Parker.

Despite her hatred for the other sex, Phemie assumes charge of her little brothers blacksmith, in order to escape the tyranny of her drunken father. When her parents die, Phemie Sanders marries Joe Stull, a stalwart and sisters, taking them into her own home. She still declines to give her husband any affection, for she told him frankly before their marriage that she could not love him.

In desperation, he attempts to awaken her jealousy by writing notes to himself on lady's stationery and signing them "Lucy." Coincidence helps the scheme. A pretty widow named Lucy Conyer moves into the home across the street from the Stull's and commences a flirtation with Joe. Phemie's attitude toward this affair gives a humorous twist to the story, proving that all women are more or less inconsistent, particularly where men are concerned.

The Motiograph for Dependability

EVERY MOTION PICTURE THEATRE OWNER and MANAGER should read the following letter from Kansas City, Mo.:

Dear Sirs:

Many times I have been considered as a radical man in my views regarding the equipment that I use in the Sapphire Theatre, but the fact that I am compelled to run at such a high rate of speed and run so continuously from early morning until midnight, I feel that I must use only the equipment that gives the best results and costs me the least money to maintain.

In my experience in the show business (which started seven years ago), I have used every make of machine with the exception of one, and until such time as you persuaded me to install the Motiograph equipment I had been buying new machine heads every six months and in many instances I had to have my machine heads overhauled thoroughly at an expense of from ten to thirty dollars. I have had the two Motiographs in service running at the rate of from five to eight minutes per reel for more than seven months; the expense so far has been eighteen cents, and from what my operators advise me they are good for another six months' steady running without any more expense.

If any of your customers desire any further confirmation of this letter (that is, if you show this letter to anyone), have them write or see me, for I know good equipment when I see it and will be only too glad to assist any manager towards locating the most practical moving picture machine that to my knowledge has been manufactured. Yours very truly,

A. E. Elliot, Prop.,

SILVERTIP

Use Carbons that Do Not Give Flicker or Poor Definition!

Are you sure that you won't be called upon to explain frequently an annoying flicker or the indistinct pictures which so often accompany the use of a poorly designed projector carbon? The real way to avoid such occurrences is to use a tried and tested carbon, one that has the endorsement of your fellow operators.

The Silvertip negative projector carbon is a sure remedy for such carbon troubles. Its high current carrying capacity and small diameter insure that intense white light which is so necessary for clearly defined pictures.

Moreover, a Silvertip negative with National upper trim is a sure cure for flicker.

Our new booklet tells you why. Sent free on request.

Fire-safety for your audience

Safeguard your patrons against the dangers of sudden fire and panic. Provide against emergencies by hanging J-M Fire Extinguishers along the walls of your theatre, so your employees can make short work of a blaze. You'll find it a paying policy to protect your audiences.

Fire-safety for your investment, too—for unless you snuff out the fire before it has a chance to grow dangerous, your losses may run to big figures. And the Johns-Manville Fire Extinguisher will smother any incipient fire, whether from grease, oil, gasoline, or electric arcs. It's a real investment in safety, at minimum cost.

Discharged by simple hand pumping—or in close quarters where there's no room to pump, by air pressure previously pumped up and released by opening the nozzle. This valuable two-way operation is an exclusive Johns-Manville feature.

The Johns-Manville Fire Extinguisher is examined, approved and labeled by the Underwriters' Laboratories, Inc., under the direction of the National Board of Fire Underwriters.

BY USING SPEER HOLD-ARKS

Exhibitors should endeavor to gain the confidence of their patrons. Prove to them that the same intense bright light is used every day. No flickers or sputters and a perfect picture.

The demands of the public today are very severe but to satisfy them means success. It also means the adoption of the famous "Speer Hold-Arks" as the negative carbon.

Gentlemen.

I want you to know that after experimenting with several other makes of machines we have finally decided to again use the Simplex projectors simply because we have been convinced that there is nothing on the market that will give the net results obtained from the Simplex projectors.

As you know, the Rialto standard demands the very finest work possible, regardless of expense, and it is the aim of the writer at all times to improve and to not alone keep up the standard but to make it better and better, and in adapting the Simplex machines for this theatre after these experiments is a tribute to you and your product that I know you will be glad to receive

Very truly yours,

EXTRA EXTRA

New York's thrilling "GOOD-BYE" parade to her soldiers, with wonderful Fifth avenue scenes, released on our Twice - A - Week-News-Service WITHOUT ONE CENT EXTRA COST TO EXHIBITORS.

—enabling all Exhibitors to secure the combined big winners—The Universal Animated Weekly—and—The Universal Current Events—for months first with the biggest news events of the entire world.

Compare our release dates with competition and you'll see how far in advance the "U" Animated is. This plus the popularity of the "U" Screen Magazine has given to Exhibitors the week's biggest crowd-getter —the Universal's TWICE-A-WEEK-NEWS-SERVICE, especially now during war time.

The demand for the "U" TWICE-A-WEEK-NEWS-SERVICE has prompted us to offer OPEN BOOKINGS. Things have changed in News Weeklies. Time was when the loudest shouter and biggest Trade Paper advertiser got the business. Exhibitors can't be bunkoed any more, by mere loud talk or lavishness in advertising spaces. Exhibitors have demanded the best news first. The Universal's TWICE-A-WEEK-NEWS-SERVICE is the answer. It is sweeping the country, delighting millions and bringing the crowds to thousands of theatres. It has no competition. There's nothing like it. "7 Keys to Baldpate"

(From New York World)

The World Says—

'BALDPATE' ON SCREEN CROWDS THE RIALTO

"Seven Keys to Baldpate," in moving picture form, was shown at the Rialto theater yesterday before crowds that packed the house several times In the evening several hundred persons were so anxious to see the film that they waited over an hour outside the theatre until the first crowd left and the second showing began.

"Seven Keys to Baldpate" is one of the best examples of George M. Cohan's playwriting skill. Those who have never seen it on the stage should certainly seize the chance afforded by its reflection on the moving picture screen; while more fortunate persons — and many were among the spectators last night—may greet the story as an old friend.

"Polly of The Circus" Captures Chicago

GOLDWYN'S first production has been seen by the public and critics of Chicago at a pre-release presentation in the Colonial Theatre. The result, as we expected, is a remarkable demonstration of approval. Exhibitors everywhere will be interested in these comments by the powerful and influential Chicago critics:

Chicago Examiner: "Polly of the Circus" is an event in Filmland's history. . . . Goldwyn has attained a high notch on the ladder of success with its first production.

Chicago Herald: Goldwyn has played a trump card by leading off with Mae Marsh in "Polly of the Circus." She is elfish and pathetic and the circus is a wonder.

Chicago Eve. Post: "Polly of the Circus" is a work of art, not merely a vehicle for the exploitation of a star. Mae Marsh is back, as wistful and appealing as ever. . . . A wonderful picture.

Chicago Tribune: Mae Marsh is a most lovable "Polly." She bubbles over with personality plus. The production has humor, pathos and the great horse race is a "pippin."

"THE MANXMAN" A STRIKING PICTURE OF HALL CAINE'S NOVEL

"The Manxman," Hall Caine's famous novel, had its first screen presentation at the Criterion Theatre last night, and ran such successful opposition to hot weather that it kept a capacity audience literally bound to the chairs for two hours.

"The Manxman" is an unqualified success. It is a big, gripping picture, filled with the stern, grim characters with which Mr. Caine peopled his novel. From the point of photography and setting, it is as near perfect as the most enthusiastic picture fan could wish. When frequent applause greets scenes in which the only action is provided by drifting clouds, or angry waves breaking on the rugged Manx coast—scenes in which humans play no part—sufficient has been said of the picture's photographic merits.

As for the cast, which is large, much might be written. The characters are as real as if Mr. Caine himself had suddenly discovered some where on the Isle of Man the men, women and children he put in his story and turned them over en masse to George Loane Tucker expressly for the purpose of making a motion picture. It would be difficult to single out any individual in awarding the laurels, but if this were to be done, Fred Groves, the Pete of the picture, would win without question. He has brought to the part an interpretation and a skill at delineating what the author wrote into the character that has seldom been seen on Broadway. Elizabeth Risdon as Kate Cregeen and Henry Ainley as Philip Christian complete the list of principals with well nigh perfect acting. Practically the same might be said of the remainder of the huge cast, even including three children, ranging apparently from six months to five years in age.

With story, cast, photography and setting on such a high plane of merit, it only remained for Mr. Tucker to add to the whole the element of the spectacular. This was not lacking, for the big scenes showed 11,000 people in the camera's range, including a regiment of real British soldiers, survivors of the Battle of the Marne. In these scenes the same skilful direction was evident.

The story of "The Manxman" is too well known to be dwelt upon. The picture is new to New York, but it is safe to say that few real picture fans will fail to see it.

Fred Groves gave a remarkably good performance as Pete, "poor Pete, with only his mother's name," and the whole cast was selected with the same care which characterized the production. 'THE MANX-MAN' SCORES HIT AT CRITERION

Exactly as for decades in the literary world every work of fiction that has risen to some extent of interest above its fellows has been hailed by some impressionable reviewer as "the great American novel," so has each moving picture during the last two or three years that possessed slightly more than the normal powers of attraction been labelled with, "The Birth of a Nation," at last surpassed.

The film version of Hall Caine's well-known novel, "The Manx-Man," received its first public showing at the Criterion Theatre last night before an audience greatly impressed by George Loane Tucker's super-feature.

Few films can lay claim to such universal appeal, both in theme and production. It offers a strong human story of love, told by three principal characters and a host of extra players, a plot that holds tense interest throughout, the construction of the scenario and development of scenes making the film entertaining for all, whether familiar with the book or not. It is utterly devoid of any suggestive or sensational scenes, the plot so delicately and forcefully unravelled that it can be appreciated by all ages.

JEWEL Productions are a direct answer to the national demand of the show-man to "get away from the old and give us something new."

Jewel Productions, Inc., is not a producing concern. Its sole business is to market fine pictures. It will buy negatives outright or it will book them for the producer on percentage, solely on the basis of merit.

We may release a picture a month—or not more than five or six a year—entirely according to the supply of pictures that are up to the high standard we hope to maintain.

We have thus far acquired the rights to only five pictures after examining a large number.

One was made by Edwin Thanhouser, with the intention of selling it on the state rights plan; but we secured the world's rights.

Three are from the Universal Film Manufacturing Co.

One is from Lois Weber.

All are of the calibre referred to in the trade as "state rights" quality—a quality that will stand the acid test of a Broadway run.

We have given our offices four of these great plays as a beginning. The fifth we will hold back until later in the season. The four that are now ready for bookings are:

"Come Through"—George Bronson Howard's greatest melodrama.

"The Man Without a Country"—the patriotic classic.

"Sirens of the Sea"—the picture beautiful.

"Pay Me"—a big drama of the West.

You may see these plays and arrange for bookings at any of the following offices, already established:

In New York—Jewel Productions,

In Chicago—Jewel Productions,

If there is no Jewel Office as yet in your territory, address requests for bookings to the nearest office in the foregoing list, or else write direct to the Home office of Jewel Productions, Inc., at 1600 Broadway, New York City. We are opening other offices as rapidly as possible and will advertise them from time to time.

We will not bore you with extravagant statements about our pictures. We THINK we have bought the best the market affords. We will stand or fall on their merits and on whether you think our judgment is good.

MADE IN RUSSIA

N. S. Kaplan's repertory of Russian plays must not be confused with pictures advertised and marketed as Russian but which depict Russian scenes that exist only in the imagination.

NONE of the so-called Russian pictures heretofore presented in this country have been made in Russia. While possessing a moiety of Russian characters and Russian incidents, they are little better than travesties and the directors have exhibited the most ludicrous ignorance of elemental facts. To reproduce Russian life, to get Russian atmosphere, one must go to Russia.

N. S. Kaplan's repertory of Russian plays was actually produced in Russia by celebrated Russian stars from stories of world renowned Russian authors, but under American direction—a combination that has given to the world

Not a cancellation!

Pearl White has again proven that she brings more money into the box office than any star in the world. Hundreds of exhibitors have reported capacity business with and this in the hottest weather of the summer. Not a single cancellation has been reported on this serial while every week the bookings increase phenomenally. We have today more bookings on "The Fatal Ring" than we had on the wonderful "Iron Claw" the same number of weeks after release date.

¶ Many theatres have run the first six episodes and many of our branches have shown the first nine episodes. Exhibitors and exchange men say every episode has a punch and is better than the previous one.

¶ The home office film committee has just seen episodes 10, 11, 12, 13 and 14 and they are the best yet. Thrill after thrill, mystery, suspense, lavish production—"The Fatal Ring" is crammed full of them.

¶ "The Fatal Ring" will go down in film history as being a bigger business getter than "The Iron Claw" and that means that it is the biggest serial attraction that has ever been made. It is

An enormous success

¶ If you haven't booked this serial do so to-day. If it has already been shown in your community run two episodes a week until you catch up. Every one will want to see it, so there's capacity business for all. "The Iron Claw" meant the difference between profit and loss to hundreds of exhibitors last year. Here's your big opportunity this year.

TODAY

and

THE MAD LOVER

WITH

the two greatest pictures of the year will be sold on

STATES RIGHTS

This gives to States Rights buyers an opportunity for profits which has rarely been equalled and certainly never surpassed.

TODAY

is beyond all question Miss Reed's greatest triumph. Adapted from a play by Geo. Broadhurst and Abraham Schomer that took Broadway by storm and played for over a year to S. R. O. houses, it is one of the most powerful dramas that has ever been put on the screen. In the cast with Miss Reed are players all of whom are worthy to be starred in their own productions. The direction by Ralph Ince is perfect—the production lavish. "Today" is pronounced by the magazine and newspaper reviewers a marvellous picture. We believe "Today" will outdraw any feature made this year.

THE MAD LOVER

was written and directed by the celebrated Leonce Perret who has produced a wonderfully artistic picture, combining strength and beauty. Robert Warwick does in it the best work of his career. His talent is so well known as to need no elaboration. He is supported by the beautiful Elaine Hammerstein. "Today," tremendously vivid, sensationally dramatic, is in seven parts. "The Mad Lover," rarely beautiful, delighting eye and mind alike, is in six. Produced by Harry Rapf.

The bare announcement that these great pictures are offered on States Rights should interest every States Rights Buyer.

PHOTOPLAY MAGAZINE SCREEN SUPPLEMENT

TWELVE single-reel journeys to the homes of the players—screen views of such stars as Douglas Fairbanks, Charlie Chaplin, Bessie Love, Viola Dana, Mabel Talliaferro, Henry Walthall, Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Drew, Lucille Lee Stuart, William S. Hart, Warren Kerrigan, and countless others, as they live, frolic and indulge their pet hobbies when away from the studios.

Positively the greatest box-office attraction ever offered the state rights buyer, or the exhibitor who operates a chain of theatres and is seeking subjects to play his circuit and, later, sub-lease to other exhibitors.

All the Profits to the Red Cross!

All the profits from the sale of territorial rights to Photoplay Magazine Screen Supplement will be turned over to the American Red Cross. Photoplay Magazine is not in the film business for profit, and much of the credit for these pictures must be given the manufacturers who have so generously permitted the filming of their stars. Bids for these twelve single-reel subjects are arriving in every mail. You may still be able to secure exclusive territory for what is sure to be the most talked-about feature on the screen, and at the same time "do your bit" for the Red Cross. Big Exhibitors Book Fairbanks and Hart Reissues

Here are a few of the great theatres of the country which have booked the Fairbanks and Hart reissues, first run, for a full week's showing.

These are exhibitors whose success is the best indication of their judgment:

Clemmer Theatre, Seattle.
Kinema Theatre, Oakland.
Garrick Theatre, Los Angeles.
Paris Theatre, Denver.
Majestic Theatre, Detroit.
Park Theatre, Boston.

The pictures which these theatres have booked are the pictures that made Fairbanks and Hart. The prints are all new, with new paper and accessories. The Fairbanks or Hart series of pictures can be booked separately and at regular intervals of four weeks. They are open to all exhibitors, preference being given to Triangle exhibitors. The first Fairbanks is released September 2d and the first Hart September 16th.

Every exhibitor in the country can pay for these pictures and make a good profit.

EXPLANATION!!

PARALTA PLAN

Costs More—Worth More

INFORMATION reaching the offices of this company indicates that some exhibitors have misunderstood the price of Paralta Plays sold under the Paralta Plan.

That there may be no doubt in any mind in reference to this important point, we will endeavor to present a concrete example—

Supposing you are renting a picture for $25 a day and are running it two days. That would cost you $50.

Now, under the Paralta Plan, the price would be, say, $75; but the additional $25 secures for you special advantages represented in —

AN UNLIMITED RUN, A TWELVE-MONTHS' CONTRACT, A RESTRICTED TERRITORY AND RE-BOOKING PRIVILEGES, WHICH FREE YOU FROM COMPETITION.

A picture sold you under the Paralta Plan is WORTH MORE AND IT COSTS MORE, for we give you an opportunity to create something for yourself and to keep all that you create.

If you do not want to buy Paralta Pictures under the Paralta Plan, you can secure them on the Star Series booking system—eight smashing big Bessie Barriscale and eight stupendous J. Warren Kerrigan productions a year.

Facts and Comments

WE have called attention many times already in these columns to the ways in which the present executive of the League and the coterie of his friends now in control are merely using that organization as a booster for the publishing venture of President Ochs and his friends. The latest attempts along this line include consideration by the so-called executive committee of the League on how best to promote the circulation of Ochs' paper and a ruling by the same committee prohibiting the giving out of any information on League matters by the League Secretaries or any individual member, all such news only to be given out in the future through the office of Ochs' paper. If this is not making the League merely a tail to the President's kite, what would be your answer to the riddle? The great majority of thinking and successful exhibitors throughout the country are not likely to be fooled by the tactics of these few politicians under the guise of exhibitor organization.

* * *

ON Page 1348 of our issue dated September 1, we published a short article on the N. A. M. P. I. by-laws, which is worth a second reading in view of the recent vote of that organization refusing to admit to membership a large, representative and influential body of exhibitors. We counted on fourteen League votes as sure to be cast against admitting other exhibitors into the organization, but we certainly are at a loss to understand by what line of reasoning the other directors voting against the motion felt justified in taking such action. Playing into the hands of a few at the expense of the many and at the cost of fair play and justice is surely poor policy, that cannot be justified even by the prospect of securing 50 per cent. of exposition profits. As members of this association we are compelled to enter this protest against the majority vote in this case. Majorities are not always right nor minorities always wrong. These by-laws should be amended to prevent a very small and unrepresentative body of exhibitors from refusing representation to the great majority of exhibitors of the country.

THERE threatens to be another flood of publicity on the so-called "open booking" plan. Wonder if anyone knows what anybody thinks the "open booking" plan means? What the theater manager wants is a plan whereby he can get good pictures—good average pictures—with regularity to show his patrons and get them with the least trouble and expense to himself. Dependability is the big idea, and the plan that doesn't comprehend that idea is not worth fussing about. The producer who will make interesting pictures, facilitate their distribution to the greatest degree and rent them at a fair price will get the business, no matter what he calls his "plan."

* *

There is really only one "plan" that deserves attention; it is the plan that will reduce the cost of distribution to a minimum. The high cost of stars is with us to stay for many days to come, so that if there are to be any reductions made they must come out of the cost of administration and distribution. Conservation, efficiency, forethought and a few other cardinal virtues common to almost any other business one might mention, would reduce manufacturing and distributing costs to a fraction of the present figures in many instances. Competition should, in the natural course of business, give this advantage to the exhibitor. Such a "plan" would receive immediate attention from the exhibitors. As for the rest of them—camouflage.

* * *

A SUBSCRIBER closed a recent letter with the following: "Have learned that an established policy backed up by common sense business principles and plenty of advertising makes for success." We might add that above plan will make for success in moving picture exhibiting perhaps more surely than in any other line of business that we know of. The idea that brains are not necessary in the moving picture business certainly does not apply to the exhibiting end of the business.

Don't

By Louis Reeves Harrison

THERE are all sorts of trade combinations in prospect or in embryo, some of them made necessary by extortionate demands of actors and directors who think they ought to get it all, or by new and changing conditions in distribution, while some are the natural outgrowth of strife for superiority. The grouping of interests may stimulate growth and improvement when it results in a higher test of skill, but, as in the past, it will only prove self-destructive when designed to throttle competition. It is through natural love of superiority, emulation, and through the stimulus of intelligent criticism that we expect to completely win public confidence.

No producer who sincerely desires to improve his product objects to capable criticism—it may hurt for the time, but it pays in the long run to have the good qualities and demerits of a product clearly defined and separated. Just so it helps for one concern to rival competitively another, especially when the desire to equal or surpass another is actuated by honorable motives. Competition in business, however, is very different from that in artistry. Any concern, or group of concerns, which attempts to boycott artistry will soon find itself clear out of the game.

Money is an overpowering factor in ordinary commercial rivalry, and it is a big factor in stimulating the sculptor, the author, the dramatist, the painter—it may be used to advantage to quicken creative genius in any field, but not obstructively. Real creative genius is as sensitive as it is rare. Opposition withers and blights it, only encouragement and nourishment can bring it to full flower. Constructive talent may do what it is told, but the creative kind works by impulse, to less advantage when compelled. The marked distinction between these two is seldom understood.

The motion picture public is sometimes easily amused, some portions of it, but it also easily forgets the superficial representations of life and movement. A man may go to the movies for occasional amusement merely to watch the unfolding of plot in a story, and idly conjecture how it is all to turn out, but he is not strongly enough impressed to care much whether he goes back again. The characters in ordinary screen plays merely drift through some oft-repeated incidents to an inevitable conclusion, one more or less foreseen from the beginning. Such is the commonplace photodrama turned out regularly for routine distribution.

It is in the very breath of creative genius to abandon this machine-made humdrum, to follow some troubled heart through all the vague and mysterious workings of destiny to an end which cannot be foreseen at any stage of development, though it be the most natural end in the long run. Such stories are fascinating pages from the book of the human soul. They have the snap and vigor of a strong pulse in high action. It is when they drag along by the old accepted routes that they become weak or tiresome. The man who goes to the movies may be living a drama, or he may be trudging along in weary commonplace. In both cases he is most deeply impressed by revelation of what has been going on in his spirit without being conscious of it, which is artistry's true appeal.

There is little of this dramatic essence in the stuff turned out by scenario editors, though they may be capable of fine work. They buy an "idea," meaning a plot or a situation, even from an amateur, and work out a machine-made scenario. Any editor who buys on a synopsis basis is on a par with a publisher who would buy the script of a novel on reading a brief summary, or a reader of stage plays who would do such an insane thing. There are none such.

The successful actor, especially one boosted into prominence by producers and exhibitors alike, will form his own company and begin to write his own plays. He may be a playwright, but his tendency will naturally be to keep himself in the limelight as much as possbile, transforming an otherwise good story into a dull vehicle for his specialties. A really good actor can portray character without using the drama for a vanity box, a mere publicity scheme to get all there is while the getting is good. He might prevent other dramatists from working, but he would naturally be among the last to encourage them.

At a time when there is crying need of original stuff, when professional authors have turned cold on the whole moving picture proposition, nothing is to be achieved by clogging the source of creative work. The very men we want, those who have an unfailing font of invention and have mastered the thousand technical difficulties of intelligent authorship, who might double public interest in this new medium, will adhere to the older ones, where there is no boycott of any kind, where genius is SOUGHT, not merely tolerated, where it is recognized and adequately compensated.

The aloof attitude of producers and professional writers, with both at fault, has been responsible for much of the quackery now being forced on the exhibitor and on the public. Authors should know more about screen requirements than they do about details comparatively mechanical of studio craftsmanship, without which their stories often become ineffective, while producers should place a higher value on the profound insight into human nature required of successful authorship. The great composer of music must master his medium before he can use it to advantage, but mastering the medium does not mean successful composition unless the true creative gift is behind it all.

Exactly the same condition we are in has existed in our theatrical world, when adaptations were the rule and native talent at a discount. A talented critic of the time says, "Surely we have been very stupid not to suspect the actual fact in the case, not to realize that there are among us plenty of men peers or superiors of England's Pinero, Shaw, Jones and Hope; of France's Rostand, Donnay, Coppe and Porte-Rich; of Germany's and Austria's Suderman, Fulda and Hauptman; of Norway's Ibsen, Italy's Giacosa, Belgium's Maeterlinck, and Russia's Ostrovsky. Why in the school of nations should we wear the fool's cap"?

Why in the school of arts should this new and beautiful medium of expression dubbed "the movies" wear the fool's cap, when there are men in this line of work capable of writing magnificent dramas for screen representation if they were given time to do so and suitable reward for the time and labor expended?

Timely Thoughts By Sam Spedon

Twenty-Four to Five.

TO AN individual exhibitor the National Association of the Moving Picture Industry may not mean much, but to exhibitors as a body it should mean a great deal. We believe it does, both individually and collectively. Wm. A. Brady, the president of the N. A. M. P. I., expressed himself in favor of the association admitting the American Exhibitors' Association to its membership, but by a vote of the majority of the board of directors the A. E. A. was rejected. The vote was 24 to 5, and the twenty-four dissenting votes comprised fourteen directors from the National Exhibitors' League and ten votes from other branches of the industry. We held the same opinion as Mr. Brady, that the A. E. A. should be admitted under a certain section of the association's by-laws.

The A. E. A. claims that it can act more freely unaffiliated with the National Association. We hope it can, but we believe there would be a greater chance of harmony between the A. E. A. and the National League if they were all members of the National Association of the industry. Besides, we believe if the two exhibitor bodies were members it would strengthen the National Association in the accomplishment of good for the whole industry. According to parliamentary precedent, we must abide by the decision of the majority, but, like Paddy with King William's nose, we still have our own opinion.

A Flight of Fancy.

Thought expression produces other thoughts that develop into ideas, take form and establish facts. Here is a thought expressed a few days ago: Will any of the many organizations recently formed ever assume the proportions of an exclusive club on the Stock Exchange when it may cost a good round sum to become a member?

It sounds like a pipe dream. Greater things have come to pass. We never can tell to what heights and flights anything in the moving picture world might ascend. Better get in while the getting's good.

Somewhat Different View.

A well known theatrical man said: "Moving pictures haven't hurt the legitimate theater at all; the stage is as popular as ever. In my opinion they have hit periodicals more than anything else. Persons who were in the habit of staying at home every night reading magazines now go to the 'movies' and spend an occasional fifteen cents and evening in that way." Looks feasible.

Another County Heard From.

An exhibitor from the South said: "I have had no difficulty in securing star features at a price commensurate with the earning capacity of my house; even the biggest companies are willing to make fair concessions. I have a theater of five hundred and fifty seats, in a city of 15,000, with several theaters of different grades. We have no competitive opposition, which proves that exchanges will meet conditions where organized consolidation of responsible exhibitors exists."

From 5 to 10 and 10 to 15.

The increase in admission prices from five to ten cents and ten to fifteen cents does not mean that the public is being charged more for what they formerly paid the smaller price. It means that the public is paying more for better service, better pictures, and more comfortable theaters. The public today demands, no matter how small the house, attractiveness, cleanliness, and all the comforts of home. These things, with the increased price of help and materials, make an increase in price of admission necessary. You don't have to get it from the public, it is willing to pay what the service is worth, providing you give it what it wants. Formerly it had to be satisfied with five cent quality, now it wants higher quality and better service; it is educated up to it.

Some exhibitors make it possible for those of limited means, particularly women who wish to take the children, to see the shows by retaining the five and ten cent admission for matinees up to 6 p. m., which strikes us as a very fair arrangement under the present advance in the cost of everything else.

Always With Us.

"You don't happen to know of a position in the film business for a young man with 90 per cent. appearance and 10 per cent. ability? If you do, we know of several who can fill that kind of a job. We have a few on our waiting list, and there are more to follow. We have a lot more with 95 per cent. gall and 5 per cent. ability." This is from the contents of a letter we received about two years ago from a friend of ours in an employment agency.

The woods are full of them, and the film business sequestered something like fifty per cent. of them. It is a little different now. Most of those employed have to produce and make good, the army and navy are willing to take the rest of them. Easy jobs and easy money are getting scarcer every day.

Should "Honor" Funkhouser

WE rise to protest against the opprobrium that is being heaped upon our esteemed collaborator, Major M. L. C. Funkhouser, censor of Chicago. Motion picture men have greatly misunderstood the efforts of the Major. While his seeming opposition to pictures of a certain class has occasioned recourse to law to enable them to be shown in Chicago, it should be borne in mind that the columns of publicity his actions breed in the Chicago papers could scarcely be obtained in any other way. Not even the Chicago sob sisters in chorus could produce such results. You might kittykelly a picture to a fareyouwell and it would not mean a thing in the young lives of Chicago's highbrows. But let Major Funkhouser so much as raise his eyebrows and, bluey, the picture is lifted to the power of popularity. Let it be known that we believe Major Funkhouser's usefulness has been greatly underrated and his efforts meanly recompensed, therefore, in justice to him and as a slight recognition of his services to the trade, we hereby recommend that he be decorated with the red badge of courage and nominated for life membership in the Almighty Press Agents.

National Association Holds Meeting

Elects Officers and New Members—To Give Films to the Soldiers in France

THE first meeting of the recently elected board of directors of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry, which is to serve until the annual meeting in June, 1918, was held at the organization's headquarters, Times Building, Monday, August 27, with President William A. Brady in the chair.

Thirty-two of the forty-two members of the board were in attendance. This was the largest and most representative meeting of the board since the organization of the National Association in August a year ago. The following were present: William A. Brady, William L. Sherrill, Adolph Zukor, Samuel Goldfish, Walter J. Moore, Lee A. Ochs, Alfred Hamburger, N. C. Rice, C. E. Glamann, Alfred S. Black, Thomas Furniss, Eugene M. Clarke, Frank Eager, Louis L. Levine, Louis F. Blumenthal, J. H. O'Donnell, Dan Chamberlain, Hector Pasmezoglu, Robert Levy, J. A. Berst, Arthur S. Friend, P. A. Powers, Richard A. Rowland, J. E. Brulatour, J. H. Hallberg, Joseph F. Coufal, Arthur James, William A. Johnston, Joseph F. Lee, Thomas G. Wylie, Fred J. Beecroft and George Irving.

Following the reports of the officers and committee, the members proceeded to elect new officers for the ensuing year and the following were unanimously elected: William A. Brady, president; vice-presidents, Adolph Zukor, J. A. Berst, William L. Sherrill, Thomas Furniss, R. A. Rowland, J. H. Hallberg and Arthur James. J. E. Brulatour was re-elected treasurer and Frederick H. Elliott was re-elected secretary for the ensuing year.

The following companies and individuals were unanimously elected to membership: The Bray Studios, Inc., Producer Class C; Pathe Exchange, Inc., Producer Class A; Norma Talmadge Film Corporation, Producer Class A; Selig Polyscope Company, Producer Class A; Inter-Ocean Film Corporation, Standard Engraving Company, Pictures Corporation, Producer Class B; Harry Rapf, Producer Class B; Mayfair Film Corporation, Producer Class B; Robert Welch, George Gould, Frances Klein, J. S. Judd, William McCormack, E. Kendall Gillett, and H. A. Wyckoff.

The aplication of the American Exhibitors Association for affiliation under Article 2 of the by-laws was denied by a vote of 24 to 5.

The secretary's report reviewed the activities of the association since the last meeting of the board. Practically all of the secretary's time, as well as that of the office staff, had been devoted to the work of the War Co-operation Committee in carrying out instructions from Mr. Brady, who was requested by President Wilson to mobilize the industry, and in the perfection of the organization of the national committee. It was reported that all of the twenty-eight state chairmen appointed on July 3 had accepted and were actually engaged in the organization of the exhibitors for the purpose of carrying out the instructions received from the motion picture committees, the chairmen of which are in constant communication with the members of the Cabinet, federal offices, Red Cross war council, Council of National Defense and the four-minute men.

A report was presented by R. H. Cochrane, chairman of the advertising trailer committee, that at the Chicago convention of the national exhibitors the proposition contained in the set of resolutions in regard to showing advertising trailers was rejected. Members of this committee were present and suggested that the committee should be continued in power, with a view to carrying out the plan at some future time.

Resignation of the Mutual Film Corporation as a member of Distributor Class No. 4 was presented and tabled by unanimous request and referred to President Brady for action. The resignation of the Billboard Publishing Company as a member of the general division was accepted. An invitation from the United States Chamber of Commerce to the association requesting it to send delegates to the War Convention to be held at Atlantic City, September 17-21, was presented and President Brady was authorized to appoint delegates to attend this important meeting.

The Inter-Ocean Film Corporation in an application for membership requested a new classification for exporters of motion pictures, which was granted, as was also the application of the Standard Engraving Company in a new classification for engravers.

It was decided to invite all individual state right buyers to join the association as members of the general division, Class 5, entrance fee $10, annual dues $5.

A resolution was adopted requesting President Brady to appoint a committee to confer with the committee of the National Exhibitors League in regard to the holding of future expositions. The following committee was appointed: William A. Brady, ex-officio; Arthur S. Friend, J. E. Brulatour, William A. Sherrill, J. A. Berst, Gabriel L. Hess and J. H. Hallberg. The joint committee went into session immediately following the directors' meeting.

Mr. Brady stated that in view of the increase of the board of directors from thirty to forty-two, it is his opinion that the executive committee should be increased from nine to twelve. This action necessitates an amendment to the by-laws, and the directors decided to call a meeting of the members of the association to be held at headquarters on Thursday, Sept. 20.

Uncle Sam's soldiers will be provided with film entertainment while they are encamped on French soil, through the good offices of the National Association. At the suggestion of President Brady many of the leading manufacturers and distributors guaranteed to contribute films to a distributing agency to be conducted under governmental control, for the entertainment of the soldiers.

President Brady was empowered to name a man to assume charge of this agency and to offer his services to the government, and it is considered possible that in view of the great value of such an agency the man in charge will receive a commission from the president.

Adolph Zukor, president of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, asserted he was heartily in favor of this move, but suggested that instead of giving old films, the manufacturers should contribute new pictures. Messrs. Rowland, Berst, Brady, Powers and Hess signified their willingness to participate in this arrangement.

Brady Personal Representative of President.

President Brady made a spirited speech and was heartily applauded. He reviewed the work of the association for the past year, declaring his belief it had accomplished wonders. Again he appealed for the getting together of exhibitors. The president made the flat declaration that his appointment by Mr. Wilson to mobilize the industry for service was in his individual capacity and not as president of the N. A. M. P. I. and that he was responsible only to the President of the United States. He said further in that position he would recognize any individual he felt impelled to recognize. Mr. Brady spoke as follows:

Gentlemen: In accepting this office for another year I would like to have it understood at the outset that I am doing it at great inconvenience to myself. I feel that since it seems to be your desire that I should continue for another twelve months that it is my duty to do so, and therefore I accept the office.

I feel, however, in accepting it, and with no intention of boring you in the slightest as to what I've got to say—I will put it in as short a manner as I can—I feel as I felt in Chicago, and I want it distinctly understood by the exhibitor directors who are in the room, that never in any way, shape, manner or fashion have I participated in any politics connected with the Exhibitors' League of America or connected with the American Exhibitors' Association, and I also make this statement in advance, that during the next twelve months, if I live, I shall follow the same rule—that I know nothing but good of the National Association as a whole. I know nothing of the quarrels that may come up between any of the factions in the National Association.

I shall rule honestly and in a fair-minded fashion to the best of my ability on any question that may come up before this association, no matter who it hurts, whether it be the biggest man in this business or the smallest man in the business.

Having that distinctly understood as a so-called platform as to what I want to do, I want to proceed further and say that I feel at the end of the first year of this association that we have accomplished wonders. We are not in debt to any extent that can't be wiped off in an hour. We have succeeded in almost everything that we have attempted, except one thing, that is, the complete organization of the motion picture industry as a national unit, and the principal reason why that has not been accomplished has been the troubles and dissensions among the exhibitors.

I believe at this stage of the game that it is the duty of every exhibitor in the United States to get together in some fashion that you know better than I how to do, and form yourselves in one great, big national group. I feel that it is a great mistake for the exhibitors, either as an association or two associations, either collectively or individually, to stand apart from the National Association.

I received a circular this morning from the American Exhibitors' Association. In one of their clauses, in fact, the first clause in summarizing what they intend to do, is this statement: "Are the exhibitors of this country going to run their own business or are they going to see it run to ruination by senseless censors, idealists, reformers and self-seeking gentlemen in other branches of the industry?"

After having passed through twelve months, I would like to ask the gentleman who wrote that sentence what he means by "self-seeking gentlemen in other branches of the industry?" I have mixed up with fights in associations of this kind since I was 25. Never in those years of experience have I ever seen men stand together at times when they were needed to stand together as these or other "self-seeking gentlemen in other branches of this industry."

I am not for any branch of this industry. I don't depend for a living upon any branch of this industry, therefore, I can speak fearlessly to any man in this room, and I say to you that the exhibitors who have been connected with this association during the last twelve months would not be men, would not be honest men, if they did not testify to the fact that every time that a proposition has come before this association that the exhibitors have received every bit of value they were entitled to.

(Lee A. Ochs—"Right.").

There never has been a time in the twelve months where a great crisis has come up, as for instance the rows we had in Albany, and after all, Albany is the principal capital city in the United States, because if the reformers and the tax legislators there had succeeded in doing what they proposed to do, in which they almost succeeded in doing, every state in the Union would have followed in their footsteps and the tax that would have been put upon the industry would have been something almost impossible to estimate. I say that we went there as a group. I say that the producer, the exhibitor, the distributor and the miscellaneous class fought just as finely, came forward with their money just as quickly, as any class in the business.

Who would have suffered in that glaring instance of adverse legislation? The exhibitor of America.

We went forward, nearly two hundred men, on a special train, every man paying his own expenses, and put before the legislators at Albany as dignified and intelligent a group of men as they have met representing any industry during the last session.

I testify here to every man in this room and to every exhibitor in America that the manufacturer, that the producer, that the distributor, that every branch here is willing to stand with the other branches, and I claim that those men are not against the exhibitor. I claim that they are for the exhibitor, that upon the success of the exhibitor depends their business, and never have I found one iota of an attempt to injure the exhibitor, but rather a unanimous and solid attempt to benefit the exhibitor. Therefore, I say at the beginning of the second twelve months of this association, that we should all get together.

Before we pass beyond this question of affiliation you will have to take notice of the fact that it places your president in a very embarrassing position. As the American Exhibitors' Association quote in their letter, they tendered to me, as the representative of the President of the United States, their co-operation, and I accepted it, as I will accept the co-operation of any exhibitor, actor, director, producer or distributor in the United States. I will accept their co-operation without regard to any association that exists in the motion picture business.

I might state that at one time last month Mr. Bush of the Exhibitors' Trade Review attended here in company with Mr. Ochs, and he put the question direct to me as to whether I had received the appointment from the President of the United States because I was president of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry or whether I had received the appointment as an individual, and I told him straight that I had received the appointment as an individual, and I desire that every man in this room will appreciate that fact—that I am not responsible to the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry, nor to the Exhibitors' League, nor to the American Exhibitors' Association, nor to any collective members or individual members of this association. You may reconsider my re-election as your president if you will, but I am responsible only to the President of the United States to mobilize this industry for effective co-operation with the different heads of the government in the prosecution of the war, and if, in the carrying out of my national duty, I am compelled to recognize any association or any individual I shall do so.

N. A. M. P. I. and League Get Together

In Future the Two Organizations Will Go Fifty-Fifty on all Expositions, Balls, Etc.

AT a joint meeting of the committee representing the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry, and the National Motion Picture Exhibitors League of America, held August 27, consideration was given to matters pertaining to the promotion of future motion picture expositions.

After a careful survey of the situation it was finally decided to schedule two expositions for 1918, the first one to be held in New York City, during the month of February, and the second to be held in Boston at the time of the annual convention of the National Exhibitors' League, which begins on July 14. The promoting and management of both expositions will be under the direction of a joint committee, members of which will be designated by each organization, and it is the purpose to plan these two trade showings so that they will compare favorably with the annual shows and expositions held by other leading industries of the country. The same co-operation is to be effective in the case of balls and other public functions.

The National Association of the Motion Picture Industry was represented at the meeting by President William A. Brady, ex-officio, Arthur S. Friend, J. E. Brulatour, William L. Sherrill, J. A. Berst, Gabriel L. Hess and J. H. Hallberg. The National Motion Picture Exhibitors League was represented by Lee A. Ochs, president, ex-officio, Ernest H. Horstmann, Alfred S. Black, J. H. O'Donnell, Eugene M. Clark and Frank D. Eager. Present also by invitation was Sam Grant of Boston, manager of the 1918 Exposition.

It is expected that permanent committees will be appointed within a fortnight so that preliminary arrangements can be made for the New York exposition in February, which will include the selection of a building, date and manager.

No expositions of the motion picture industry have been held in New York during the past two years, and it is contended that a well organized and conducted exposition, at which every big producing and distributing corporation as well as supply and equipment companies, will be represented, showing the growth of the industry, will attract big crowds and prove a money maker for the promoting organizations.

The Expected Happens in Chicago

"The Spy" Held Up—Fox Sues to Restrain Mayor and Funkhouser From Interfering With Production.

THE Mayor of Chicago, William Hale Thompson, and M. L. C. Funkhouser, second deputy superintendent of police, who has charge of film censorship in that city, are named in a bill of complaint just filed by the Fox Film Corporation in the United States District Court for Northern Illinois.

The bill asks the court for an injunction to restrain Mayor Thompson, Mr. Funkhouser and Herman J. Schuettler, general superintendent of police, from preventing the production in Chicago of William Fox's film drama, "The Spy."

Funkhouser, having viewed the picture, refused to give it a permit, declaring (the bill states) "that the acting in the play was in places too powerful and too dramatic, and that it made the sweat stand out on his brow."

It had been planned to present this photoplay at the big Studebaker theater on August 26, but Major Funkhouser has declined to issue a permit unless certain scenes are deleted.

Mr. Fox, however, would not consent to the elimination of the scenes desired, because they were vitally necessary to the patriotic mission of the piece, and because, he asserted, the scenes could be condemned only as the result of a short-sighted policy.

"Mayor William Hale Thompson," the bill reads, "has repeatedly expressed himself publicly and privately as opposed to the war and opposed to the prosecution thereof by the United States."

The bill for the injunction establishes the point that since the outbreak of hostilities between the United States and Germany, President Wilson has specifically requested that film producers and distributors organize and mobilize to co-operate with the Government in waging war and in bringing it to a sucessful conclusion. "The primary purpose of 'The Spy,'" the bill continues, "is to arouse American patriotism and to encourage enlistments."

"Major Funkhouser," the bill proceeds, "heretofore has refused permits for motion pictures depicting the events of the war and the conduct of the war by Germany on the ground that it would offend Germans living in Chicago, and since the declaration of war he has established a rule in his department against issuing permits for such pictures."

Judge Straightens Out Mr. Funkhouser.

In the United States District Court, in Chicago, on August 31, Judge Samuel Alschuler issued an order restraining city officials from interfering with the presentation of "The Spy," the Fox subject which had been banned by the police censor of Chicago. Judge Alschuler ruled that Second Deputy Funkhouser's objection to the picture was not within the meaning of the ordinance creating the bureau of censorship; in other words, the issue involved in the case of "The Spy" was not one of morals and consequently Mr. Funkhouser had no jurisdiction.

SING SING PRISONERS SEE "POLLY OF THE CIRCUS".

Mae Marsh and the great photospectacle, "Polly of the Circus", the first of the Goldwyn productions to be released, will have for their initial showing east of the Mississippi the most remarkable audience in the United States, the members of the Welfare League of Sing Sing prison. Chairman E. J. Meagher of the Welfare League has written to President Goldfish of the Goldwyn Pictures Corporation asking that Goldwyn's first production be screened in the prison auditorium for the benefit of the shut-in men of Sing Sing. President Goldfish immediately consented, and "Polly of the Circus" will be shown to the prisoners on Sunday, Sept. 2.

League Executive Committee Meets

Decides to Co-operate with N. A. M. P. I. on Trade Functions—To Fight the Payment of Music Royalty.

A REGULAR meeting of the executive committee of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America was held at the Astor on August 26 and 28. There was a full attendance of members. Several important matters were taken up. On Monday, August 27, the League members of the board of directors of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry attended a stated meeting of that organization. One of the important results of the latter gathering was a decision to hold all expositions, balls and trade functions under the joint auspices of the League and the Association, the two bodies sharing equally in the profits.

The question of deposits was considered, and after passing a long resolution, in which it was declared bills should be presented in all state legislatures the coming year, whereby all deposits would be insured against loss, the meeting decided to hold the matter in abeyance pending a conference with the manufacturers.

By formal resolution the committee declared the League should pay a reasonable amount of money to the National Association in the way of dues.

It was decided to ask Ludwig Schindler, general manager of the recent Chicago exposition, as to the status of the receipts of the big show and to take steps to have the money transferred to the League as soon as it may be available. The committee appointed to have charge of the matter were Peter Schaefer, chairman; Alfred Hamburger, Lee A. Ochs and Joseph Hopp.

Frank D. Eager moved that a committee be appointed with full power to consider the question of a division of profits with the National Association on all trade functions. The motion prevailed, and the president appointed Lee A. Ochs, Ernest Horstman, Alfred S. Black, J. H. O'Donnell and Louis Blumenthal.

The committee decided to issue a general appeal in favor of the assessment of $3 on each theater in order to fight the demands of the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers that exhibitors pay royalties on copyrighted music. Nathan Burkan, general counsel, and President Maxwell, of the society, appeared before the committee and declared any exhibitor who played music copyrighted by any member of their society would be haled to court and prosecuted. Notice was served the society would search the country for evidence of violations. The call to exhibitors by the committee followed the remarks of the two officials of the society.

Peter Schaefer announced that Marcus Loew had joined the Manhattan branch of the Exhibitors' League.

Hector Pasmezoglu, of St. Louis, called the attention of the committee to the labor situation in his city as regards the union musicians. He declared the American Federation of Musicians is compelling theaters to place additional men in the orchestras, according to the price of admission. He charged the musicians with assuming a dictatorial manner and threatening that if the demands are not complied with the musicians will be withdrawn. On a motion by Mr. Eager the president of the League was instructed to communicate with Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, submit the whole question to him and endeavor to learn if the St. Louis musicians were acting within their rights in attempting to dictate how many musicians should be employed by an exhibitor.

Also, on a motion by Mr. Eager, the president and executive secretary were instructed when communicating with locals to secure all available information as to taxes and licenses paid in the various localities, wages paid to operators and musicians, number of hours and conditions of labor, data as to costs of electric lighting and fire insurance, the populations of the towns and number of exhibitors, and all possible information, and that this be collated and placed on file for the benefit of the committee at its next meeting.

The question of a trade show in New York the coming winter was taken up and the whole matter was referred to the joint committee of ten of the League and the National Association.

Virginia Exhibitors' Convention

Enthusiastic Meeting at Ocean View in Which Representatives From Other Southern States Join—Votes to Affiliate With A. E. A.

VIRGINIA Motion Picture Exhibitors held a notable convention at Ocean View, Va., on August 30, 31 and September 1. The organization convened as a branch of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League, and adjourned as an integral part of the recently organized American Exhibitors' Association. Seventy-five exhibitors were present, and fifty representatives of the exchange and manufacturing branches of the business were in attendance.

President Wells, of the State League, called the meeting to order at 1.30 o'clock Thursday afternoon. Addressing the convention Mr. Wells explained the objects for which it had been convened, and introduced Charles C. Pettijohn, general manager of the American Exhibitors' Association, who addressed the assemblage upon the principles of the new organization, and expressed a sincere desire that the exhibitors of Virginia and the other States represented would decide to become part of it. He was followed by Percy Wells of North Carolina, Harry Crandall of Washington, D. C., and Sam Trigger of New York.

President Wells stated that the Virginia State organization would enter upon its immediate duties, and the other members from other States withdrew. The committee on by-laws and constitution presented and read their constructions, and each section was considered separately. This occupied the remainder of the afternoon.

The reading of the by-laws and constitution was finished and referred back to the committee on Friday morning for revision as corrected, which was done very quickly, and the by-laws and constitution was adopted as read.

The motion was made and carried that the name of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of Virginia be changed to the American Exhibitors' Association of Virginia. This was followed by a motion that the A. E. A. of Virginia request charter from the National A. E. A., which was unanimously carried.

Election of State officers being in order the nominating committee presented the following names: President, Jake Wells, Richmond; vice president, E. D. Heines, Roanoke; treasurer, C. E. Geogheghan, Chase City; secretary, Chesley Toney, Richmond. All of whom were unanimously elected.

The convention reassembled as a whole at 3 o'clock. Mr. Pettijohn was again introduced by President Wells, and read the following telegrams, addressed to various officers of the A. E. A.:

Columbia, S. C.

South Carolina solid. Nearly one hundred now for A. E. A. Can't withdraw from League because never joined it. Your principles correct. We depend on you.—Geo. C. Warner, Pres. S. C. League.

Owensboro, Ky.

Charimanship for state accepted. Sure all exhibitors in Kentucky will be in new league in ten days. Look to you for protection and accomplish needed reforms. Forty-one in now.—Geo. A. Bluth.

Indianapolis, Ind.

Passed three hundred mark for A. E. A. last night. Will keep Indiana in first place if we have to build more theaters. Boys recommend you withdraw the 217 from old league and put in 392 in A. E. A.—Fay Andfews, Secy.

Cleveland, O.

Six members joined since you left. Pay for same so as to have all in good standing. Money on hand to refund. Success to A. E. A. from Ohio.—J. H. Simpson.

Buffalo, N. Y.

Assured of sixty Buffalo and surrounding theater owners. Enthusiastic over A. E. A. Success to convention.—I. Mosher.

Lexington, N. C.

Impossible to attend meeting. North Carolina is solid for A. E. A. More than one hundred in so far. All my personal energy and best wishes with you.—H. B. Varner.

American Exhibitors' Association stands first in Arkansas. As president of Independent Arkansas League I assure you of our hearty cooperation. Anything I can do to assist the cause have no hesitancy in calling on me.—Saul Harris.

Detroit, Aug. 29.

Your invitation to attend the Motion Picture Exhibitors' Convention received and thank you very much.

I am very sorry that I cannot attend as it is impossible for me to get away at this time. I have been out on a membership tour for the A. E. A. and have been very successful. We have now a better organization than we ever had in the League, and I expect to have 90 per cent. of the exhibitors in Detroit in by Oct. 1. We have not had a single complaint on our action in withdrawing from the League and joining the A. E. A.

With best wishes for the success of the convention and hoping to meet you all at the First Convention of the A. E. A. in Detroit in 1918, I am—Peter A. Jeup.

Providence, R. I., Aug. 31.

Telegram received. Accept your request to act as temporary chairman. About seventy-five feel sure of half.—Chas. F. Williams.

President Wells, in a stirring address, set forth the need of securing funds for immediate use in working out the objects of the A. E. A., and when he concluded seven members of the A. E. A. there and then subscribed one thousand dollars to the Association for emergency. Suggestions were offered to further augment the treasury by Fred Herrington, Sam Trigger, Percy Wells and Harry Crandall, all of which were referred to the Committee of Ways and Means.

On Friday, August 31, at 1.30 P. M. over two hundred guests sat down to a sumptuous shore dinner given by Messrs. Otto and Jake Wells. The ball on Friday night was attended by two thousand guests, and the following screen stars: Alice Brady, June Elvidge, Kitty Gordon, Marguerite Snow, Madge Evans, Rose Tapley and King Baggot.

The closing session on Saturday was marked by the appearance at the last moment of Lewis J. Selznick, who is on a tour of the States in behalf of his film interests. The convention then adjourned without delay.

A. E. A. to Fight Deposit System

Pettijohn Declares Action of N. A. M. P. I. in Refusing Affiliation Leaves New Association a Free Hand.

"NOW we are ready for our first great fight in the exhibitor's behalf, against the advance deposit system." This was the reply of Charles C. Pettijohn, general manager of the American Exhibitors' Association, when informed that the directors of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry had voted against the offer of affiliation made by the association.

Mr. Pettijohn was emphatic in declaring that the action of that body in no way affected the aims and purposes of the A. E. A. in working for the betterment of all branches of the industry, particularly where the exhibitors were concerned, and asserted that the vote of the delegates from the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League clearly indicated that it was too closely allied with the manufacturing interests of the trade to be called a representative exhibitors' organization.

As evidence of the stand to be taken in all questions pertaining to the best interests of the trade, Mr. Pettijohn has written William A. Brady, President of the N. A. M. P. I., pledging the support of the American Exhibitors' Association in all matters that will aid the Government in the successful prosecution of the war and assuring him that in every movement that tends to improve any part of the industry will have the backing of the association.

Mr. Pettijohn issued the following statement regarding the action of the National Association of the Motion Picture industry in refusing the offer of affiliation with the American Exhibitors' Association.

"At a meeting of the directors of the N. A. M. P. I., held Monday, August 27, the offer of affiliation on the part of the American Exhibitors' Association as set out in our communication of August 15, was rejected. The offer made the following stipulations:

"First—The American Exhibitors' Association on July 20, 1917, tendered through William A. Brady, not as President of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry, but as the designated official, by reason of his selection by President Wilson, our hearty co-operation and services to help carry on the work set aside by the Government for the motion picture industry during the present crisis. We are building a business organization of exhibitors to the end that this may effectively be done and good results obtained.

"Second—We care not whether we have one or fifty votes either as directors or members of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry, because voting inside the industry cannot interest us.

"Third—We are asking nothing of you, and are offering only our affiliation and assistance in a stand with the other branches of the industry for what is healthful and against that which unjustly attacks.

"Fourth—On the other hand, we will not at any time, by any unit vote or combination of votes, permit ourselves to be bound to support any act, measure or effort that is not for the best interests of real exhibitors of America, who comprise our membership, nor for or against any faction in any other branch of the industry that may hereafter develop.

"Fifth—We desire to have it clearly understood that our services are tendered, and that no application is made at this time for votes, or for any change in the by-laws of your organization.

"Sixth—We ask that the directors at the meeting August 27, 1917, either promptly reject our proffer of affiliation, assistance and co-operation in such manner as our position may be clearly and definitely interpreted by our officers and entire membership.

"We are informed that the fourteen delegates representing the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League voted solidly against it, and that seventeen of the other gentlemen present voted twelve for and five against. We are also informed that others present did not vote. It may have been that our offer to work harmoniously with the other branches of the industry was not sufficient, and it may have been that our plain statement that we would not co-operate with any movement which we did not feel was for the best interest of the exhibitors was retaining too much latitude on our part. We shall maintain that attitude, however, irrespective of the action of any other organization or branch of the industry. We feel that it was the proper premise to stand upon, and we still maintain that position.

"We regret the offer was not accepted in the spirit in which it was tendered, but the refusal will not conflict in any way with our plans to build up a real exhibitors' organization which stands for exhibitors only, and which will in no way be allied with the manufacturers either directly or through the medium of a trade paper which depends upon the manufacturer's advertising for its support.

"One thing is certain. This alliance upon the part of the gentlemen representing the other exhibitors' association, and men interested in other branches of the trade has relieved this association of certain embarrassments. Our acts are now free. Our pathway is clear to make a fight for exhibitors only without fear or favor of the manufacturer. To the five directors who voted in favor of the co-operation of this organization that stands for exhibitors we extend our thanks and sincere appreciation.

"There are some manufacturers who really want a business men's organization of exhibitors. There are others who do not care for one, and some who positively 'will not stand for one.'"

REMBUSCH TO HEAR COMPLAINTS.

The complaint department of the American Exhibitors' Association will be handled by Frank J. Rembusch of Indiana. He is recognized as one of the best informed exhibitors on trade questions and will gladly answer the inquiries of the exhibitors on all questions pertaining to the industry. He should be addressed, 412 Indiana Trust Bldg., Indianapolis, Ind.

Each suggestion and complaint will receive his personal attention and exhibitors are invited to write him regarding any angle of their business. Any movement for the betterment of exhibitors will receive his hearty support, and every communication will receive careful attention on his part. Such matters as can not easily be taken up in the Western offices will be forwarded to New York for investigation and a report made after the investigation has been concluded.

Horstmann Corrects Percy Wells

Record Bears Out Statement of Former That Massachusetts Cast but Nine Votes at Chicago.

Editor Moving Picture World:

In a statement issued by Percy Wells on Page 354 of the issue of The Moving Picture World of September 1 he makes a statement that Boston voted 30 delegates at the last convention held in Chicago. This is certainly an absolute misstatement of the facts as the records will show that in every case Massachusetts voted but nine votes. The other Leagues comprising the New England States were voted by their respective presidents who accompanied us to Chicago. Massachusetts, as Mr. Wells admitted, is entitled to nine votes, and that is all it voted.

Massachusetts has always been a lover of "fair play," and has always gone into the battle and come out with its shield untarnished.

Boston, August 29, 1917.

[At the evening session on the opening day of the recent convention of the Motion Picture Exhibitors League of America in Chicago the World man assigned to cover the proceedings was by President Ochs named as one of a committee of three to act as tellers on a vote to be taken. His note book shows that Massachusetts at that time cast nine votes.—Ed.]

GOLDWYN SHOWS "POLLY OF THE CIRCUS."

Several members of the Moving Picture World staff have been permitted an advance viewing of "Polly of the Circus," the first Goldwyn release. The subject was shown last week at the New York exchange, 509 Fifth avenue. Among those present were Vice President Fred B. Warren, of Goldwyn, who received for his company the congratulations of those in attendance. There seemed to be no doubt in the minds of the men and women who followed the fortunes of Polly through the eight reels, that the initial release of Goldwyn will make a strong impression on the photoplay public. "Polly" will not be formally reviewed in this journal until after the regular presentation at the Strand, but there is no hesitation in saying here that the production is above the average, that it is an all-around picture, that it represents a keen blending of the spectacular and of heart interest, as well as containing novel effects in night photography.

CLARA KIMBALL YOUNG BOMBARDS SOLDIERS WITH CHOCOLATE.

All work stopped at the Thanhouser studio Thursday, where Clara Kimball Young has been busily engaged on "Magda," while this enthusiastic little lady occupied a point of vantage to help speed the boys in khaki on their way. At each period of rest Miss Young showered the tired and perspiring soldiers with chocolate, which was weclomed in an enthusiastic and grateful manner.

Miss Young is very much interested in soldiers' kits, and will devote most of her spare time in providing comforts for the boys abroad. She insists that each kit must be well supplied with chocolate, which is so dear to the soldiers' hearts.

ANITA STEWART IN NEW COMPANY.

Anita Stewart, former Vitagraph star, has signed a contract with Louis B. Mayer, of Boston, to appear in a number of big features. Few details regarding the signing of the contract are forthcoming from Mr. Mayer or his associates. Mr. Mayer states that distribution plans and production plans will be made known within a week.

MARY PICKFORD TO REFEREE BOXING MATCH.

Mary Pickford, at the Mason Opera House, Los Angeles, at the benefit given for the French Emergency Hospital fund, will act as a prize fight referee.

Miss Pickford has offered to referee the terrific fistic encounter which is to be conducted by Charlie Chaplin and Eric Campbell, his "heavy."

Activities of War Committees

OF THE MOTION PICTURE INDUSTRY

THE Department of Agriculture, in co-operation with the war committee of the motion picture industry, has arranged for the display during the next three or four weeks at motion picture theaters in Illinois, Massachusetts, New York and Pennsylvania of lantern slides dealing with the canning, preserving, drying and pickling of perishable food products. This action was taken as a result of reports received by the department that a large surplus of perishable fruits and vegetables was accumulating in the big population centers and that there was great danger that large quantities would go to waste.

The following letter has been sent by the Secretary of Agriculture to motion picture exhibitors:

The help of motion picture exhibitors in your State is urgently needed at this time in bringing before their patrons the importance of conserving perishable fruits and vegetables. I am informed by agencies of this department which are in close touch with conditions that in your State a large surplus of perishables is accumulating, much of which will be wasted unless extraordinary effort is made to conserve for later use that which cannot be promptly consumed. In the emergency which our country is facing the waste of any of this food would be deplorable.

I am taking the liberty of inclosing four gelatine sheets dealing with the canning, drying, preserving and pickling of perishable products. You will be rendering a definite public service, and the Department will greatly appreciate it, if you will place these between cover glasses and project them on your screen between motion picture reels for a period of from one to three weeks, depending upon the number of runs you make, your patronage and other local conditions. It is important that they be shown immediately. While it would be preferable to display all of them at each show, they may be divided, if necessary, using Nos. 1 and 2 during one program and Nos. 3 and 4 when the program is changed. Since it was necessary in order to save time and expense to provide gelatine slides, will you please ask your operator not to leave them in the machine long enough to melt them?

The loyal support which the entire motion picture industry is giving to the Government in this emergency convinces me that you will be willing to assist it in this important matter.

Very sincerely yours,

D. F. HOUSTON, Secretary.

Approved and recommended by the committee of the Motion Picture Industry co-operating with the United States Department of Agriculture.

S. A. LYNCH.
LOUIS L. LEVINE.
W. R. ROTHACKER.

The National Association of the Motion Picture Industry has also in a general letter requested that all theaters insert the contents of the slides in house programs for a period of four weeks.

These Are the Slides.

The slides sent out by Secretary Houston are as follows, with the exception that the second paragraph of No. 1 is repeated in each of the others:

WAR MESSAGE NO. 1.

Let nothing be wasted. Preserve, can, pickle, or dry all surplus perishable fruits and vegetables possible to lessen the world's food shortage.

For instructions, write to the State Agricultural College, your County Agent, or the U. S. Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

WAR MESSAGE NO. 2.

Canning and drying are very simple processes requiring small, cheap equipment. Easy to do in a city house or apartment.

WAR MESSAGE NO. 3.

Tin cans are scarce. Put up perishable foods in glass jars or bottles. Dry such vegetables as beans, carrots, beets, peas and okra.

WAR MESSAGE NO. 4.

Dry fruits and vegetables in the sun, in or over a stove, or by an electric fan. Pack in plain or paraffin paper bags or cartons, in empty cereal boxes or coffee cans.

Offer Films to Soldiers in Europe

National Association Formally Agrees to Supply New Subjects for Entertainment of Men of Foreign Service.

IN line with the spirit of co-operation with the Government in the prosecution of the war as suggested recently by President Wilson, the board of directors of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry at its recent meeting in New York offered to supply regularly to the American troops in Europe all the latest motion pictures. These films will be sent to the soldiers without cost to the Government except such minor expense as may be involved in the transportation of the prints, and possibly the outlay necessary for projecting machines, in case these are not given.

P. A. Powers, a director in the National Association, was delegated to proceed immediately to Washington and present the matter to the authorities of the War Department. Mr. Powers interviewed Secretary of War Baker, who was much impressed by the possibilities for the entertainment of the troops contained in the offer of the association. Steps are now being taken to clear the tracks for the acceptance of the offer.

Mr. Powers tried to get in touch with Raymond B. Fosdick, chairman of the commission on camp activities, but Mr. Fosdick was out of the city. He will take up the whole question with Mr. Hammer, the representative in New York of Mr. Fosdick, and attempt a solution of the difficulties at present in the way of an acceptance by the Government of the Association's offer.

The chief significance of the proposition of the manufacturers lies in the fact that if the Government accepts the offer to establish an agency in Paris in charge of an officer of the War Department the troops will have the benefit of the newest films, enabling them to keep right up to date as to what is going on at home in motion pictures. It will be recalled that already the Government has accepted the offer of the Goldwyn company to supply one print of each subject to be released by that concern.

LOWRY TO SHOW "FOR THE FREEDOM OF THE WORLD."

Ira M. Lowry will present for a trade showing at 10:30 o'clock on the morning of September 10 his eight-part production of Captain Edwin Bower Hesser's story, "For the Freedom of the World." No pretense of a new theme is made. It is the old game of love with three players, one of whom must lose. For screen purposes, however, variation and importance are attained in the production by the employment of patriotic and military atmosphere.

E. K. Lincoln is featured in the character of a young American enlisting in the Canadian army, with Barbara Castleton furnishing a charming Canadian society girl to be wooed and won and Romaine Fielding in the unenviable role of a typical slacker. To Mr. Fielding was also entrusted the direction of "For the Freedom of the World," under the personal supervision of Mr. Lowry.

Why Be a Wolf? Asks Nat Brown

Paralta Man Advises Exhibitors to Choose the Best in Programs, in Open Booking and in Selective Stars

ONE man says program booking is the only rational system on which to conduct a moving picture theater. Another man says the open booking plan is the only one to follow. Another man says that the selective star series method will assure success. Another man says none of these are right; he can't state any other plan, but he is sure they are all wrong.

Why not seek the truth? Why be a wolf? The truth is that each of these plans possesses essentials of right, valuable if appreciated and properly applied. Why not combine the real benefits of all plans and profit by them?

The program system is unquestionably the most logical, for it furnishes substantial assurance of the basis of a strong bill and eliminates a very important element of doubt. No sane man would build or lease a dramatic or vaudeville house without knowing where his attractions are coming from, and the general merit of what he has to depend on to draw people to his theater.

The manager of a dramatic house depends on the productions provided by his booking exchange; the vaudeville manager is in the same boat, with this difference—he can strengthen the bill he books of his regular exchange by putting on a star act, or "big headliner."

The moving picture manager who books a program is in just the same position as the vaudeville man. He puts on a good program bill, but, being enterprising and desiring to give his patrons an entertainment they will appreciate and talk about, he puts in a star feature film, secured either on the open-booking system or under the selective star series method.

What is the result? He has a well balanced bill, and puts on a show that sends his patrons away with the opinion that he is a generous provider and is deserving of support.

The program will ever be the real foundation of moving picture exhibition, for it is certain in contract and of fixed charge. It enables an exhibitor constantly to secure the foundation of his bill under such conditions, and at such price, as will enable him to figure with some degree of certainty just what his operating charges are going to be on the week, and to what expense he can reasonably go to provide special star attractions.

The merit of program pictures, like the real merit of star feature pictures, varies somewhat. A big legitimate star may have an exceptionally strong vehicle one season and a mediocre play the next. The same condition prevails in all picture production. An absolute standard of excellence in a program cannot be maintained, but average merit can.

The open booking system appeals strongly to the man who has not experienced its uncertainties. He thinks, at first blush, that he can be a real "picture picker"; display not a little discrimination and make a big record for selecting the best productions made.

From the moment he enters into this proposition he goes back to the days, practically, when theatrical business was transacted on the curbstones in front of the old Morton House at Broadway and Union square. He abandons system, safety and certainty, and enters into a "catch-as-catch-can" contest with conditions of a most uncertain nature.

Nothing stays fixed, and in his effort to get things where something can be considered as nailed to the floor he soon finds everything in chaos; and, to cap the climax, like the old-time manager of the palmy days before the theatrical syndicate injected real business into the theatrical world he may find himself with two or three pictures booked for the same day in his anxiety to see to it that he gets all the good things.

Open bookings (indiscriminate booking of pictures of various makes and subjects) will never prove successful or satisfactory to the manager of a moving picture theater, for he has nothing to gain by it as a system except an advance in rentals.

Because of lack of responsibility behind most open booking features—a program name carries responsibility which must be met in quality—a manager depending on the open booking system for success will be forced to see run a large part of what he books.

Imagine what that means! He will spend much of his time in a projection room selecting what he may desire to play, whereas, under a program booking contract he knows he will get good pictures, for the program cannot afford to kill itself by putting out bad pictures.

Many fine pictures get on the market through open booking channels. They cannot be disregarded, and here is where the wise booking manager will avail himself of conditions favorable to him in the open-booking system and use them to his advantage. Combination of the valuable parts of the open booking system with the program system, wisely made through the selection of big features offered in open market, bring together two elements which are important to a well balanced moving picture theater management.

The argument for the star series selective method is also a strong one. This system makes for certainty to both producer and exhibitor. On the one hand the producer is proceeding on that certainty which comes from knowing just what his market is, and what he can get for his pictures. On the other hand, the exhibitor can secure a series of pictures of a star most popular with his patrons, under such conditions, and at such cost, that he is enabled to so figure his other bookings that he can "cut his coat according to his cloth."

The producer cannot afford to take the great speculative chances entailed in the tremendous salaries of stars, the great amounts now demanded for adequate subjects and the growing cost of production created by the constant public demand for greater things, without full and complete advance knowledge, so far as lies in human power, of the disposal of his product and the price he will get for it.

Entering into a contract with a star of established drawing power in these days is something of a responsibility, combined with other contingent obligations which run into hundreds of thousands.

A producer cannot fairly be expected to take these chances without knowing the most important of all things to any rational business enterprise—how he is to get his money back with a profit reasonable in the light of the hazard he takes.

The selective star series method is really a step forward, meeting public demand for constant advancement in quality of entertainment. The history of the theater, in this respect, is being repeated in the moving picture. Competitive production and public demand means constantly bigger and better things; and these can only be provided on such a basis as the selective star series method of booking makes possible.

So, instead of the adherents of any one of these systems getting out in the open and shrieking his views with the vehemence of an intolerant fanatic, he would far better study in what way the other fellow's idea may hook up with his.

"Why be a wolf?"

That's one of the great troubles with this business—this habit of seeing where the other fellow may walk a little lame, and then the whole pack jumping on him and eating him up in critical moment.

There is virtue in most all plans for the distribution of moving pictures. Why not combine these virtues and reject the errors. Such a course would not only help the producer and distributor greatly, but it would help the exhibitor—much of the uncertainty under which he now operates would be eliminated.

Most exhibitors are not trained showmen. They read the views expressed by producers and distributors, and try to come to a conclusion which will be right and helpful in the conduct of their business.

How can exhibitors come to any definite and stable conclusion about anything, when one producer or exhibitor may argue one thing and another man may say another thing in reference to the same proposition, and a third man may argue, in the face of obvious truth, that the other two are wrong, and with the Rev. Jasper of Mississippi he agrees that "de sun do move"?

"Less critical conversation and more practical sense," would seem to be an important impression yet to be made on some moving picture producing distributing minds.

Join the best of the program plan, the open-booking plan, the selective star series plan, and a very nearly perfect system will be evolved. This will mean the full protection of the interests of everybody—producer, distributor and exhibitor.

Help it along. "Why be a wolf?"

NAT I. BROWN.

Embargo on Films

Motion Pictures Among Articles Listed by President Wilson—Exporters Must Obtain Licenses.

FILMS are to be prohibited of export from the United States under the proclamation just issued by President Wilson, extending the list of commodities subject to the provisions of the limited embargo law, unless the exporters shall first obtain a license.

In his proclamation the President stated the public safety requires that, except at such time or times and under such regulations and orders, and subject to such limitations and exceptions as the President shall prescribe, until otherwise ordered by the President or by Congress, the articles named, including films, shall not, on and after August 30, be exported or shipped from or taken out of the United States or its territorial possessions to Abyssinia, Afghanistan, that portion of Belgium not occupied by the military forces of Germany or the colonies, possessions or protectorates of Belgium, Bolivia, Brazil, China, Chile, Columbia, Costa Rica, Cuba, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, France and her colonies, possessions or protectorates; Guatemala, Haiti, Honduras, Italy and her colonies, possessions or protectorates; Great Britain and her colonies, possessions or protectorates; Japan, Liberia, Mexico, Monaco, Montenegro, Morocco, Nepal, Nicaragua, the colonies, possessions or protectorates of The Netherlands; Oman, Panama, Paraguay, Persia, Peru, Portugal and her colonies, possessions or protectorates; Roumania, Russia, Salvador, San Marino, Serbia, Siam, Uruguay, Venezuela (excluding any portion of the foregoing occupied by the military forces of Germany or her allies), or any territory occupied by the military forces of the United States or by the nations associated with the United States in the war.

"The purpose and effect of this proclamation," a statement from President Wilson said, "is not export prohibition but merely export control. It is not the intention to interfere unnecessarily with our foreign trade; but our own domestic needs must be adequately safeguarded and there is the added duty of meeting the necessities of all the nations at war with the Imperial German Government. After these needs are met, it is our wish and intention to minister to the needs of the neutral nations as far as our resources permit. It is obvious that a closer supervision and control of exports is necessary with respect to these European neutrals within the sphere of hostilities than is required for those countries further removed."

The administrative processes will be simplified by this action, it is said, and the policy of minimizing the interruption of trade will be continued.

Applications for export license should be made to the Exports Administrative Board, 1435 K street, Northwest, Washington, D. C., or to the branch office at 11 Broadway, New York; or they may be filed at any of the branch offices of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, of the Department of Commerce, at Boston, Chicago, St. Louis, New Orleans, San Francisco and Seattle, where blank application forms may be obtained. Licenses will be issued at the branches of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce in all cases possible, but in certain cases it will be necessary for applications to be forwarded to the office of the Exports Administrative Board in Washington.

Licenses will ordinarily be good for sixty days, unless revoked prior thereto, and at the expiration of that time must be renewed to be valid.

It was reported some time ago that large quantities of old films were being bought up by German agents and were being shipped into Germany to be converted into high explosives. American exporters and others were urged to be very careful to see that the good offered by them to foreign buyers should not go to the people who would either send them to Germany or her allies, or to others for that purpose. Under the proclamation of President Wilson, it will be impossible practically for such a thing as this to again occur, for suspicious looking cases will be scrutinized and examined carefully.

SALLY CRUTE IN "BLUE JEANS."

Pretty Sally Crute, a favorite motion picture player, has been engaged to play Sue Eudaly in the special screen production which Metro Pictures Corporation will make of the old-time stage success, "Blue Jeans," with Viola Dana as star. Sue Eudaly was a vampire in the days before there were any vampires, formally so-called, and to Miss Crute has been entrusted the task of presenting to theatre-goers of to-day the splendid charms of the wicked Sue Eudaly of twenty-odd years ago.

At the Leading Picture Theaters

"Efficiency Edgar" Showing at the Rialto, "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm" at the Strand.

The Rialto.

AT the Rialto, the week of September 2, Clarence Buddington Kelland's "Efficiency Edgar" will be presented, with Taylor Holmes in the title role. It is a story with an idea back of the usual romance—that of a business man who decides to apply to his personal affairs the same efficiency methods that he has applied with great success to his business. Aiding Mr. Holmes in the fun-making are the well known players, Virginia Vallie, Ernest Maupin and Rodney La Rock.

In the Rialto Magazine, a feature of timely events that makes a history of great value, there will be shown among other pictures of the moment those taken a few days ago at West Point which are rather more intimate and interesting that the usual views shown of this famous military academy. A new "Mutt and Jeff," and a new Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Drew comedy promise an exceptionally fine program.

Many requests have come to Dr. Riesenfeld for Puccini's "La Boheme," and this with a revival of Leo Fall's operetta "The Dollar Princess," will be the two more important contributions by the big orchestra.

Greek Evans will sing, in English, "The Two Grenadiers," for which some special lighting and scenic effects have been devised by Mr. Rothapfel. Madame Felicia French will sing the aria from "Ernani" by Verdi.

The Strand.

One of the most pretentious film offerings ever presented will make its initial appearance at the Strand theater, where Mary Pickford will be seen in her newest Artcraft picture, "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm," by Kate Douglas Wiggin and Charlotte Thompson.

Some interesting views from the French battle front also will be shown. Manager Edel has made special arrangements whereby new French battle pictures will be shown every week at the Strand. Victor Moore will be seen in his latest farce entitled "Camping." The Topical Review contains the latest news pictures of interest from this country and abroad.

The musical program is headed by Henri De Caux, the tenor, who will sing "Celeste Aida." Helen Scholder, the 'cello virtuoso who created a sensation at the Strand last week, will be heard again in Popper's Mazurka No. 1 and Drage's Serenade. The Strand concert orchestra, under the direction of Carl Edouarde, will play Liszt's "Prelude." This will be the last week of the Strand concert orchestra. Commencing Monday, September 10, the new symphony orchestra will inaugurate the afternoon symphony concerts which will be given every week day at 2:15 preceding the regular program of motion pictures and vocal and instrumental selections.

Eighty-first Street Theater.

At the Eighty-first Street theater for the entire week Douglas Fairbanks will be seen in his own story, his newest, funniest offering, "Down to Earth," presenting his own optimistic view of life.

At Other Broadway Houses.

At the Globe "The Spy," the Fox spectacular story of German intrigue in the United States, continues for the week.

At the Criterion "The Manxman" is running indefinitely.

ANOTHER GROUP OF SPARKLE COMEDIES.

Another series of Sparkle Comedies is now ready for General Film distribution. As in the preceding groups there are six subjects, the producer, Jaxon Film Corporation, finding significant response in issuing its product in compact series.

The new Sparkles are "Hearts and Harpoons", "Toodles", "Bangs Renigs", "Triple Entente", "Whose Hosiery" and 'Wrong Wrights". The first of these is ready September 20, the others following in order and insured for delivery without a break each week.

Like the first and second series of Sparkle Comedies the new releases are refined farce comedies with each a clever story and snappy production. Care has been taken to get good people, far above the average of players in one-reel pictures, and a reputation for consistent excellence is being clinched with each succeeding group.

Chester Beecroft Returns

Says He is the Only American "Film" Man Who Has Visted Russia and Other Belligerent Countries in Two Years.

CHESTER BEECROFT of 501 Fifth avenue, New York, who has been touring Europe in the interests of his film exporting and importing business for the last four months, returned to America on a Scandinavian-American liner, landing on August 30. Mr. Beecroft left New York on the steamer which carried General Pershing and the first American expeditionary forces to the battle-front in France and enjoyed the exceeding good fortune to witness the entrance of the American commander and his staff into London and later on into Paris.

Chester Beecroft.

It is said that Mr. Beecroft is the only American commercial traveler and possibly the only traveler of any class whatsoever whose passport shows the successful entrance and departure to and from England and France, a return departure from England, then Norway, Sweden, Denmark, Finland and Russia, during the last two years of the war. In making this extraordinary voyage over more than twelve thousand miles of water Mr. Beecroft passed through the majority of the most dangerous submarine and mine areas in the world, including two trips across the Atlantic by different routes, two through St. George's Channel, two across the Straits of Dover, one through the Irish Sea and the North Atlantic, twice across the North Sea and once through the Skager-Rak and Kattegat.

In course of these thrilling voyages, some of which were made in small freight boats under the most trying circumstances, Mr. Beecroft's vessel was twice attacked and once sunk by submarines. Mr. Beecroft does not hesitate to state his reasons for risking his life in so perilous a voyage. He says that conditions in the foreign film markets have changed so rapidly and so completely during the last year that no one on this side possessed any definite knowledge of the subject and that so many mistaken impressions had gained credence here that the American manufacturers were bewildered and had no way of basing a definite policy for the foreign distribution of their pictures. So many conflicting statements had been made by those who knew a litle and those who pretended to know much, that in many cases extraordinary prices out of all proportion to the possibilities of the market were being asked. Sometimes these prices were absurdly high and sometimes absurdly low, few people indeed having any idea as to what kind of picture was suited to the various countries in which they were endeavoring to make a sale. It frequently happened that a product which had absolutely no chance of being placed in a certain specific market at any price at all was being held at a price which was peculiarly suited and which consequently would net the buyer or distributor a handsome profit were being slyly coaxed away by the "wise ones" at a figure far below their worth.

It was this state of affairs, so unfair to the American manufacturers of today, and so inimical to the American product of the future, that determined Mr. Beecroft to go abroad, despite all hazards, to study first hand and to learn from actual observation the exact conditions which obtained in the principal European markets. Mr. Beecroft found, among other things which will be of particular interest to picture producers here, that the film business is far from enjoying the full confidence in certain official circles and that the American manufacturer should use the utmost caution and make most thorough investigation, as an unfortunate association, however innocent the action of the seller may be at that time, is almost certain to have a most serious effect upon the standing and future activities of the manufacturer or seller himself.

While abroad Mr. Beecroft closed several important contracts and considers his journey to have been even more successful than anticipated. He, no doubt, has many friends in the business who will be glad to hear of his safe return.

Tanya Fetner, Russian Actress

TO a public ever on the alert to discover some new favorite in the films there is a promise in the announcement of the Russian Art Film Corporation that in its first release a young woman who bears the unfamiliar name of Tanya Fetner will appear. Miss Fetner plays the title role in "The Painted Doll," which has in its cast two of the most popular players in Russia, Ivan Mozukin and Natalia Lesienko. In Russia Miss Fetner is merely one of the company at the famous Moscow Art theater. She is undergoing the usual course of training which has evolved all the great Slav stars of the stage, which means that until she becomes a star herself in her native land she must play the parts assigned to her, whether on the speaking stage or in the motion picture.

Tanya Fetner.

When Mozukin assembled his cast for the Pushkin drama he selected Miss Fetner for the part of Tanya, wife or a plodding engineer in the employ of the most brilliant man of the profession in Russia. While her husband works and works under the direction of this man, played by Mozukin, the pretty wife fascinates his employer. Kresslof, the name of the character created by Mozukin, despises the social aspirations of his wife, they are separated for long periods and he yearns for feminine associations. He finds them in Tanya, who is ambitious and looks beyond her own narrow sphere.

In the development of this familiar story the famous Russian poet and dramatist departs from obvious methods and keeps up the suspenses by numerous original devices of the author of great artistry. The role of the young wife at once excites the sympathy of the audience and is condemned as it deserves. Miss Fetner in her delineation of the character always emphasizes the better side of her nature and suppresses the weakness born of ambition for a larger life. Trained in the most comprehensive school in the world, she never overacts and her appearance on the Russian Art Film programme in "The Painted Doll" is expected to achieve the succcess in America that is always waiting for the artist of talent. "The Painted Doll" will be presented to the trade in a few weeks.

GRAHAM BAKER MANY SIDED.

As an antidote for the serious work of writing one Big V slapstick comedy each week, Graham Baker, of the Vitagraph scenario staff, has relieved his sombre moments by picturizing "The Grell Mystery," in which Earle Williams is appearing under the direction of Paul Scardon; adapting "The Flaming Omen" for Mary Anderson and Alfred Whitman; and writing titles for "An Alabaster Box," featuring Marc MacDermott, and assisting in the titling of "For France," a thrilling spectacle featuring Edward Earle and Betty Howe.

Mr. Baker's versatility will be appreciated in the fact that "The Flaming Omen" is a play with a deeply religious motive; "The Grell Mystery" is a detective play; "An Alabaster Box" is a story of country life; and "For France" is a patriotic picture. To fill in his spare moments, Mr. Baker reads and passes on all comedies submitted to the Vitagraph for sale.

War Cameraman's Kit

Leon H. Caverly With Marine Corps in France Describes the Methods and Needs of the Cinematographer at the Front.

AN old-time "weekly" motion picture cameraman, Leon H. Caverly, who is now "somewhere in France" with the Fifth U. S. Marines, writes an interesting letter to the Moving Picture World regarding the methods he employs in taking photographs, both still and motion, and what a cameraman at the front needs in the way of a "kit." Here are his directions:

"Motion Picture World, New York, N. Y.

"Gentlemen: I am taking the liberty to send you a description of the outfit which I am now using in the capacity of war cinematographer for the U. S. Marine Corps, thinking that it may be of interest to some of your readers. For the benefit of some of my brother photographers who are interested to know what constitutes a complete equipment for the war photographer, I herewith list the following equipment which I have thus far found adequate for all conditions at the front.

"As one is often obliged to carry his outfit on 10-mile hikes, weight and bulk are very important factors. Developing and printing movie film while in the field is entirely out of question, but with the aid of an Eastman developing tank and a pail of water, which, by the way, often has to be carried a mile, good results can be secured on all stills. As ice is very hard to obtain I have found the water cool enough for all photographic purposes early in the morning when it has had ample time to cool over night. By using one ounce of alum to a barrel of water and allow it to stand over night we get, by draining off the top, very good washing water. This method has to be resorted to many times owing to one's inability to secure fresh running water.

"To return to the proper outfit for recording every phase of modern warfare we must divide such pictures into two classes, moving and still pictures. I am now using a Pathe (Outside Model), with the magazines enclosed. A Debree Moy or Bell & Howell are all equally good for this class of work. My outfit is fitted with the Goerz Michrometer mount adjusted to take the 2-inch, 3-inch and 6-inch lenses. A set of color screens to fit these lenses will oftentimes allow one to secure artistic results, but are not a real necessity.

"The ball-bearing tripod manufactured by the New York Motion Picture Apparatus Company is considered the best on the market, although any good substantial tripod with panoramic and tilting top will do. Extra retorts sufficient to carry 3,000 feet of film will more than prove sufficient for any day's work.

"Leather cases for one's equipment should be especially made of extra heavy hand-sewed leather with brass bound corners as they secure unusually severe treatment in transit.

"Eastman's negative film should be ordered in separate cans of 400 feet each, and only opened as needed for immediate use. Development should follow at the earliest possible moment for best results.

"Light values I find about the same as in America at this season of the year. "X" backed film may be used during cold weather, and should static appear, cotton soaked with ammonia or a weak solution of glycerine placed in the corner of the retort will prevent this bugbear of the cameraman. A metal crank has also been recommended as a preventative of static, and I believe, has been used to good result. Loading retorts under blankets for a dark room is but one of the many tricks the camera man has to resort to in his long line of inconveniences.

"Still pictures offer far less difficulties, and armed with the 3-A Eastman Kodak Special fitted with a 6.3 Zeiss Tessar in Optimo, also a 3-A Graflex and F4.5 Tessar, complete my outfit of still cameras. Good aerial pictures can be secured only with the proper equipment, and this I have found possible by using the Eastman Aeroplane Camera. Owing to the extreme high speed of the aeroplane it becomes necessary to use a much faster exposure, both on account of this fact, and also that one is traveling at a tremendous rate of speed. Regardless of what class of photography is being covered in the events of actual warfare, one is constantly up against all kinds of difficulties which have to be overcome in one hundred different ways as they come up from time to time.

"The strict censorship on all mail returning to the States prevents my going further into detail in regard to what I am actually photographing, still you can judge my location to some extent when I tell you that the roar of battle is distinct here both day and night. I am sorry that I cannot accompany this article with a series of photographs, but upon my return to the States will be pleased to go further into detail and offer such pictures as you may care to accept for publication, with the permission of the Publicity Bureau.

"With your kind permission I will take this opportunity to send my regards to all my brother crank turners, from somewhere in France. Very sincerely yours,

"LEON H. CAVERLY."

Louis Rosenbluh Comes Back

Famous Manager of Greater New York Exchange Will Handle Fox Standard Pictures in the East.

WITH the announcement by the Fox Film Corporation of the inauguration of Standard Pictures, comes the further news that the chief executive for their distribution in the East will be Louis Rosenbluh, well-known in film circles throughout the country, and particularly in the New York territory, where he has for years conducted his successful operations.

Mr. Rosenbluh's re-entry in the field of film distribution brings back into the fold one of the strongest personalities in the industry, as well as it recalls to the trade a career notable for its spectacular features. Ten years ago Mr. Rosenbluh, in co-operation with William Fox, entered the exchange business with their Greater New York Film Rental Company on Fourteenth street.

Louis Rosenbluh.

At the height of its success came complications with the Motion Picture Patents Company, and there ensued a long controversy in the United States Courts. To the credit of the Greater New York Film Rental Company came a striking victory over the Patents Company, which, as every exhibitor knows, has made the film rental situation easier for the exhibitor.

Recently the Greater New York Film Rental Company was sold. Mr. Rosenbluh has looked carefully over the film manufacturing market for the organization which he believed was producing the class and type of pictures that the exhibitor demanded. He aimed high and found his haven in Standard Pictures under the banner of Fox Film Corporation.

Mr. Rosenbluh describes the situation as follows:

"Not until I viewed the first Standard Pictures on the screen did I decide that I had found films that were worth my conscientious recommendation, and which would retain for me the confidence which my customers have always had in any product I recommended to them. Apart from that, as a pure proposition of dollars and cents, Standard Pictures are the first proposition I saw that merited unquestionably the effort that I intend to put into them."

This brings back into the field a man whose every move has always had a reason, and having satisfied himself, as he outlines above, Mr. Rosenbluh is now busy with his staff, getting into shape a home befitting this high opinion of Standard Pictures. These quarters will occupy the seventh floor of 130 West Forty-sixth street, where the old friends and the new will be welcome to come in and renew acquaintance.

SYLVIA BREMER LEADING LADY FOR HART.

As William S. Hart's leading lady in his initial Artcraft picture, "The Narrow Trail", Thomas Ince has selected Sylvia Bremer, the popular Australian actress. Miss Bremer has won fame, not only on the stage of her native country, but in a series of plays that enjoyed long periods of financial and artistic success in America.

Universal Gets Government Contract

Official Films, Showing Work of Department of Agriculture, to Be Distributed By Big U Organization at Reasonable Price.

UNIVERSAL this week signed a contract with the officials of the United States Department of Agriculture to distribute all motion pictures showing the work and activities of the department during the coming year.

This is considered one of the most important deals of the kind and significant in showing that the national government is fully alive to the power of the motion picture as an agency of enlightenment. It is also a striking indorsement of Universal's distributing facilities, as many other companies were competing for the contract.

A number of pictures have already been completed by the Department of Agriculture, and others will be made with the co-operation of Universal, as the contract provides that the services of scenario writers, producers, directors, actors and actresses and others shall be furnished by the distributing organization whenever needed. Operators are also to be provided for the exhibition of pictures in foreign lands.

Some of the pictures already made show the work of the forestry bureau in fighting fires and caring for the immense tracts of wild land under government supervision. There are also many beautiful and picturesque studies of the agents of the department at work among the sheep and cattle ranches of the west, and a reel devoted to the work of road building under various circumstances is highly instructive, besides possessing many splendid bits of photography.

One of these features will be released every two weeks, bearing the notice, "Official Film of the United States Department of Agriculture, Distributed by the Universal Film Manufacturing Company."

Special advertising matter and lithographic paper will also be issued for the series in co-operation with the department.

Any scenes that are of particular timeliness will be utilized in issues of the Animated Weekly, Current Events and the Screen Magazine. It is planned, however, to edit the original films so as to bring out all of the dramatic and human interest qualities in the subjects handled.

Each feature released will thus be the official expression of one of the most interesting phases of work carried on by the government of the United States, presented in a way to interest and educate all classes of citizens.

Charges for this service will be made reasonable enough to meet the purse of any exhibitor in the business.

WELL KNOWN WRITERS DOING PATHE SCENARIOS.

Gladys Hulette's latest picture, "Miss Nobody", which has been very well received, was written by Jos. F. Poland, the author of the story "The Fraud", which being put into scenario form by Howard Irving Young, was produced as a Pathe Gold Rooster play by the Astra Company, under the title of "Miss Nobody". Mr. Poland is an author of ability and particularly successful at injecting "human interest" into his stories.

Mr. Young, who did the scenario, has just completed his course of training at Ft. Myer and is now an officer in the Reserve Army.

The previous Gladys Hulette Gold Rooster play, "The Streets of Illusion", was written by John B. Clymer and Harry O. Hoyt. The scenario was prepared by Philip H. Bartholomae, the well known dramatist.

INFORMATION WANTED.

On behalf of some of its readers, the Moving Picture World desires information as to the present address of the Hall of Fame Publishing Company, Inc., or of Harry Ash, who was connected with that company. For a time they occupied an office in the Brokaw Building, near 42d street, New York, and were soliciting copy for a publication which was to be devoted to leading moving picture artists, publication of which was promised before the end of last year. Mr. Ash is said to be a relative of a well-known film director, and his father was believed to be interested in the company also. All information will be considered confidential, if desired.

GOLD KING DOUBLES FACTORY.

President Jones of the Gold King Screen Company, announces that their factory has doubled its capacity. The Gold King Screen will be handled by picture theatre supply houses exclusively in future.

Selznick on Tour

Will Spend Six Months Meeting Exhibitors of Every Section of the United States—Starts With Five States Convention at Ocean View, Virginia.

LEWIS J. SELNICK left New York Friday afternoon, August 31, by Old Dominion Steamship for Norfolk, from which place he will proceed to Ocean View, Va., where the five states exhibitors convention is being held. Mr. Selznick will address the convention by special request of the exhibitors, invitation having been extended by H. M. Crandall, owner of the important Crandall chain of theaters in Washington, and Jake Wells, owner of the Colonial Theater in Richmond and a great chain of theaters in the South, who came to New York to urge Mr. Selznick to attend the convention.

Five states convention is a get-together organization formed by the exhibitors of South Carolina, North Carolina, Virginia and Maryland, with the District of Columbia included. This organization includes in its membership some of the livest operators of motion picture theaters in the South Atlantic territory, and they are especially interested in the Open Door policy of which Lewis J. Selznick has been the pioneer.

Mr. Selznick, before leaving New York, expressed himself as unusually pleased that the Southern exhibitors wanted to meet him and to have him address them, as many of these men were adherents to the closed program system when Mr. Selznick began preaching the open door policy.

But this is only the beginning of an extensive tour which Mr. Selznick intends making. In the interest of the Select Pictures—the new distributing corporation which has just been formed—Mr. Selznick will spend six months touring every part of the United States and meeting the exhibitors in every city and town of importance. This will occupy about half of Mr. Selznick's time during the coming twelve months, and it is the first instance of a producer of the highest quality pictures taking steps to put himself into personal touch with exhibitors throughout the land.

Mr. Selznick draws an apt comparison between conditions in the film industry and the banking business.

"There was a time," he says, "when the president of a bank always hid himself away behind a closed door at the rear of the banking offices. Neither depositors nor borrowers, nor anyone except his intimate friends could reach Mr. Bank President. Now, however, all that has passed. The bank president today sits in an open office near the entrance to the bank, and it is part of his business—one of the most important parts of his business—to meet the patrons of his bank."

Just such an evolution has taken place in the motion picture industry, contends Mr. Selznick. "The producer used to be an unknown quantity to the exhibitor as far as personal acquaintance is concerned, but the time for that has passed. Today the producer and the exhibitor must get together for their own good and the good of the industry; and I am going out to meet the exhibitor in his home town."

Mr. Selznick looks for great results from this pilgrimage of friendship, during which he will bring home to every exhibitor in America the tremendous importance of Selznick Pictures and of Select distribution.

SALISBURY RETURNING FROM CHINA.

Edward A. Salisbury, according to advices just received by the Moving Picture World, stating that he is returning to America on the Steamer Siberia Maru after his extended trip through Japan and China for Prixma. From present indications, backed by the assurances from this noted photographer-explorer, Dr. Salisbury has not only obtained the most valuable records ever photographed in these countries, but he has preserved for the first time in color the customs, habits and costumes of these interesting peoples of the Orient.

Dr. Salisbury had the good fortune to be in Pekin at the time of the recent uprising. Concerning this he cabled Carl H. Pierce recently: "I have the only camera here. Have fine close-ups of the fighting, bursting shells, etc. Large footage;" following this up with another message: "My camera is the only one in Pekin during all the trouble and I have taken several thousand feet and am still taking. It is all in color. Taken for The Prizma, Inc."

Doubtless this is the first time in the history of the world that a revolution in China or in any other country on the globe has been taken in color and the Prizma people are enthusiastically awaiting Dr. Salisbury's arrival, because it is expected that these views of bursting shells and other battle scenes will give Americans and the public at large a better idea of actual fighting conditions as they exist than anything yet offered for the screen.

Billy the Exhibitor

While Appreciating the Benefits of Properly Prepared Press Matter, He Hands Out a Joke to the Publicity Man Who Sells Himself to the Boss.

By E. T. Keyser.

BILLY had a pipe in the southwest corner of his mouth, a pair of shears in his right hand and a paste brush in his left, the waste basket was overflowing and his office looked like the editorial room of a country paper just about to go to press.

"Gee, I am glad to see you," he observed with that portion of his mouth not holding the pipe. "I have a few observations regarding press agents that would sour in my system if I didn't get them out pretty quickly."

"What is the brand of calamity that is making you so exceedingly glad to see me on a busy day?" I asked.

"See that waste basket?" said Billy. "It's full of press dope that was fired at me by misguided individuals who imagined that I had any particular interest in the fact as to whether the plans of various picture companies were formulated after hard and laborious study, who did the studying, and also why he thinks his concern is the greatest that ever came down the pike or ever will come and incidentally how, when or why the boss of the aforementioned concern is one of the greatest minds in the picture field today."

"Then you don't care about personal reminiscences of that sort?" I inquired.

"I certainly do not," said Billy with much emphasis. "I don't care the forty-second part of a rap whether the boss stayed up all night to figure out a program or a policy or whether it came to him in the guise of an acute attack of indigestion produced by a Welsh rabbit having the wrong reaction on a lot of ill-assorted wet goods.

"Neither do I care how big or how grand is the celebrated Mr. B. Unkum. The only thing I care about is information I can spread to my fellow-townsmen that will make them want to come in to see the picture and make them want to come so badly that they will leave tangible evidence of their desire in the box office.

"Neither do I care how many near accidents stars, starresses and would-be stars experience in the course of a week or a rehearsal. Perhaps if one of them jumped off a cliff and was spattered over the surrounding landscape, thereby creating a universal interest in the afore-demised's last picture I might gain a fuller house if the news was tactfully spread abroad, but otherwise you cannot expect anyone to buy an extra admission because Molly Molasses narrowly escaped drowning by not embarking on a boat that ran ashore two days later."

"Then you don't like the line of press work that is being handed out?" I asked.

"A great deal of it, no," said Billy, "and still there is enough of good stuff written by fellows who know their business to help me get out my house organ and liven up my program, but I notice that this line of matter comes from men who have held their jobs down long enough to be able to distinguish between what will help an exhibitor increase admissions, and what the boss will like because he finds his name mentioned in nineteen assorted places.

"The trouble seems to me that just about the time a press agent gets wise to the kind of dope that helps exhibitors, the boss's first cousin by his fourth wife comes along and wins the experienced man's job away and has to be taught all over again and by the time he really begins to make good the boss's fourth wife becomes an angel and some relative of number five succeeds to the job."

CHAPIN PHOTOGRAPH IN LINCOLN HOUSE.

O. H. Oldroyd, noted as the owner of the house in which Lincoln died in Washington, D. C., which contains the famous Oldroyd Lincoln Memorial collection, requested a photograph of Benjamin Chapin for framing in the Lincoln House just after the Lincoln Cycle was given a private showing in the National Capitol.

Mr. Chapin felt so pleased with the request that he immediately arranged for a special sitting at his studio, and the portrait has been sent to Mr. Oldroyd by special messenger with a note explaining "The Lincoln Man's" gratification at being able to find place in the Oldroyd Lincoln collection.

RATH GOES TO YAPHANK.

Frederick Rath, scenario editor for Apollo Pictures, Inc., has been called in the draft. He was passed by the medical board and enters the military service on September 19. The chairman of the district board has selected him to have charge of the drafted men from his district when they entrain for Camp Upton at Yaphank, L. I.

Prompt Rebuilding of Eastern Studio

Jaxon Film Corporation's Progress Unchecked by $65,000 Fire at Providence, R. I.

BY a fire that started from undetermined causes at 3 a. m. on August 23, the extensive plant of the Jaxon Film Corporation at Providence, R. I., was damaged to the extent of $65,000. By 3 p. m. work had been resumed making pictures. On the second day following, Saturday, ground had been broken for rebuilding.

The fire destroyed the main studio building at the plant, but left the laboratory unscathed. The company is enabled to go along with its regular work from having an outdoor studio and a small indoor studio left. The work of making Sparkle Comedies and Jaxon Comedies for release through General Film Company will therefore not be interrupted. A serial which the company is producing will not be delayed much. However, considerable film which was being handled on government contract was destroyed in the building which was burned, entailing a setback which will be costly. Arrangements have already been made to replace this film.

Main Studio of Jaxon Film Co., Which Was Gutted by Fire.

The new building is to cost $75,000. The company has also a studio at Jacksonville which can be used if necessary.

Defective insulation of electric wiring is supposed to have caused the fire.

TRIANGLE WANTS EXHIBITORS' CRITICISMS.

"The Triangle Film Corporation will organize an exhibitors' service department at the Culver City studio, which will be maintained solely for the purpose of studying exhibiting conditions and co-operation with exhibitors from the studio end," says Manager Davis. "The individual and community needs of the exhibitors will be investigated from every viewpoint, and sincere effort will be made to determine the most satisfying kind of pictures and the methods of production that will best please exhibitor and public alike.

"Right now I want to take occasion to appeal to every exhibitor in the country to communicate their needs, suggestions and complaints to me at the Triangle Culver City, California, Studio, and I will see that they are given immediate attention by this department. We do not expect to satisfy or please every exhibitor, but our efforts will be directed toward securing the best results obtainable for the majority."

JUDGE WILLIS BROWN WRITES FOR UNIVERSAL.

Judge Willis Brown, widely known throughout the United States as a juvenile authority and educator, has been lured into the motion pictures. That is, the founder and first judge of the Utah juvenile courts and the originator of the Boy City movement, has written a number of stories for the screen which are to be produced by Universal. The first of these stories to be filmed is entitled "Nancy's Baby," in which Violet MacMillan will be starred on the Butterfly program. A series of boy stories will follow. It is in connection with his Boy City idea that Judge Brown has made the greatest contribution to the advancement of children, particularly boys.

The Roll of Honor

EARL METCALFE, announcement of whose appointment as a lieutenant in the officers reserve corps of the United States Army was recently made, was born and raised near Fort Thomas, Kentucky. Lieutenant Metcalfe was a graduate of the Plattsburg camp. At one time he was a captain in the Kentucky National Guard, and has organized many drill organizations. He has appeared in many military and naval characters on the screen. When with the Kalem company he was one of the first players to don a uniform in a war time subject. Also with Lubin he appeared in many military dramas. His last appearances on the screen before departing for Plattsburg were in a Mutual serial, in which he played the leading male role, and with Art Dramas. Lieutenant Metcalfe, who is twenty-eight years old and married, has been assigned to the National Army at Camp Upton, Long Island.

Edward J. McCloskey, formerly Moving Picture World correspondent for Boston and vicinity, and well known in moving picture and newspaper circles, has enlisted in Uncle Sam's Navy, and has been assigned to transport duty. Mr. McCloskey was given a fine send-off the other night in Boston when he departed for New York, where he goes on to one of the world's greatest liners, now a transport, as a yeoman. Mr. McCloskey for two years has been on the reportorial staff of the Boston American. Before that he was a member of the force of the Atlanta staff of General Film. When Edward J. Farrell took over the Southern office of General Film he took Mr. McCloskey South with him as his secretary and assistant manager. On Mr. Farrell's return to Boston, Mr. McClockey left the film business and returned to active newspaper work.

Mr. Metcalfe joined the First Battalion, Forty-eighth Highlanders, and is at Camp Borden, Ontario, preparatory to sailing for the front. Mr. Metcalfe is a native of England. He played in several London stage hits before crossing to this country. He has been with the Essanay company two years.

MRS. ALLEN WALKER WITH NOBLE.

Mrs. Allen Walker, who will be remembered for her characterization of Mother Camillo in "The Call of Her People," supporting Ethel Barrymore, has signed with Director John Noble and will appear in a new picture supporting Arnold Daly. For the first time in many years Mrs. Walker will be seen in other than a character part, her "gypsy" and "hag" roles having made her famous in that particular line of work.

Larry Peyton Hero of "The Red Ace"

LARRY PEYTON, one of the best known and most popular leading men in the films, who plays the leading role opposite Marie Walcamp in the new Universal serial, "The Red Ace," announced for release early in October, is an actor of wide experience. Originally "intended for the farm" by his father, who was a tobacco planter in Kentucky, his early training and education were anything but conducive to a career behind the footlights or before the cameraman. With a thorough foundation in the way of elementary education, he was sent to the Colorado Agricultural College, where he started in to learn all the fine points of stable sanitation, mechanical milking, and the rotation of crops.

Larry Peyton.

But, notwithstanding all the lavishing of money and attention upon his agricultural education, Larry always had a hankering for the stage. So it was not strange that the embryo farmer, once beyond the influence of immediate parental association, soon found his way behind the footlights. His debut, in an "ornamental" part, was made at the Curtis theater in Denver, but it was not long before the manager of the stock company gave him something to say. He worked hard those first three months, at the end of which period he went to Chicago and obtained, through a friend, a part in "Human Hearts," that rugged old melodrama known to almost every town in America boasting an opera house. He toured throughout the West in this production, and was later associated with many traveling companies. One of his last roles in the spoken drama was that of Stephen Brice in "The Crisis."

But in spite of his success, Peyton longed for work in the out-of-doors. "I never could accustom myself to the speaking stage," he said the other day, "notwithstanding its fascination for me—it always seemed such a cramped place for a man to work in. I suppose that was due to the fact that I had lived so long in the open, and when a chance came for me to get into the movies I lost no time in availing myself of it. I would never think of going back to the stage."

Before joining the Universal, Peyton appeared in productions of Kalem, Balboa, Lasky and others, and has played important roles with Marguerite Clark, Blanche Sweet and Geraldine Farrar, appearing with the last named as Gaspard in "Joan the Woman." He is fully six feet tall and of fine physique, proving the ideal hero of "The Red Ace."

FOX FILM CORPORATION TAKES MORE SPACE.

To keep abreast of the need for more space, due to the expansion of its business, especially within the last year, extensive alterations are being made in the Leavitt Building, at 130 West Forty-sixth street, New York, after the completion of which Fox Film Corporation will occupy the entire seventh floor.

The primary reasons for taking greater area, in addition to that it already has, is the rise of Mr. Fox's Standard Pictures and the growth of the Fox Special Features, which are released weekly. It is only a few years since the company occupied a single floor.

This space has increased steadily until the offices now require five floors. The corporation also maintains an enormous loft, or storehouse, in the downtown section of New York.

The Mutual Film Corporation has appointed J. G. Connor, formerly a salesman, as temporary manager of the Indianapolis branch office.

MOVING PICTURE WORLD NEWS REEL for AUGUST

Pictures for War Purposes

An Interesting Chat With John R. Freuler on Patriotic and Other Films.

DURING an interview with John R. Freuler, president of the Mutual Film Corporation, last week the conversation touched on the desire of producers to render willing and intelligent service to the Government in the present crisis. Mr. Freuler is chairman of the war co-operative committee of the N. A. M. P. I., in connection with the Navy Department, and he is in favor of the production of features the stories of which would meet the requirements of the Navy and War Departments. The secretaries of these departments are exceedingly busy men just now, but if each could outline the needs of the hour in his department so that they could be embodied in a feature story for production, the producers of the country are ready to do their share in making films that will give these needs the widest publicity.

John R. Freuler

Regarding the "four-minute men," who deliver speeches in picture theaters throughout the country, Mr. Freuler is of the opinion that much better results could be obtained if the subject matter of these speeches was turned into story form and visualized. By this means more can be told on the screen in four minutes than could be done in a speech that would take half an hour to deliver, besides, the screen story would be more vivid and lasting. This method would also avoid causing complaints from exhibitors, as is now the case in several instances, where the speakers sometimes take up fifteen minutes instead of four. Mr. Freuler intends taking up this subject in the near future with George Creel, civilian chairman of the committee on public information.

There is no doubt that producers will be glad to make special patriotic feature pictures, if the Government departments will outline the special needs that are to be met and which should be given the widest publicity. Devotion to country by those who offer themselves at the front should be equaled at least in willing service by those who remain at home. It is understood, of course, that these special patriotic features are to be released and rented just like other features, and that in themselves they have the attractiveness to win liberal patronage.

Mr. Freuler incidentally mentioned "Our Country's Call," in which Mary Miles Minter plays the leading role, and which will be released October 1. This photoplay story has deep human interest and strong patriotic appeal. Indeed, the dominant note is patriotism. It was produced by the American Film Company, Inc., under the direction of Lloyd Ingraham.

Speaking of the Charles Frohman players now being visualized, Mr. Freuler was much pleased with the outlook. The first of these, "Outcast," with Ann Murdock in the leading role, will be released September 10, and this will be followed by "The Runaway," in which Julia Sanderson stars, the release date being September 17.

"Please Help Emily," which as a play had fine vogue in this country and is still showing in England, is now being produced at the Empire studios, Long Island, with Ann Murdock in the lead. Olive Tell, one of Charles Frohman's stars, is now working in "The Unforseen," another successful Charles Frohman play. The announcement that William Gillette will soon begin work in "Secret Service" at the Empire studios will be received with great acclaim by exhibitors throughout the country.

Mr. Freuler makes no bones in saying outright that he is never satisfied with business; but on this occasion he was compelled to state that he had no cause to complain. And well he may refrain from complaining; for no less than 100 new customers—in the Chicago territory alone—have been secured within the last two weeks in view of the two features a week released, which include Charles Frohman plays and the product of the American Film Company. This, Mr. Freuler concedes, is most encouraging at the present time.

D. W. Griffith Champions England's Natural Light.

At various times we have either read, or have heard it said, that the natural light in England was poor for producing purposes. Now no less an authority than D. W. Griffith explodes the statement, as is shown by the following paragraphs from a recent interview which appeared in the Weekly Dispatch, of London, England:

"There is nothing to compare with the variety of color in an English landscape. You have old walls of between 300 and 400 years old which only time could have painted. The winding lanes have unexpected lines and changing beauty. In the new country the houses are all exactly like each other; in the old country, in the villages, there are so many different shapes and styles of houses that you wonder how it is possible for them to have been invented. Let the people in the States see moving pictures of your English country life—the pastoral simplicity of the villages.

"It is absolute nonsense to say that your lighting here is a handicap. Some of the pictures we have already taken here are the most beautiful we have made anywhere. The light is as good as in the States, and, what is more important, it lasts longer. In the States we have to stop at six o'clock; it gets darker much sooner. Over here we have taken pictures as late as nine o'clock in the evening. Here, too, we can get much more artistic effects because of your long, varying twilight. It is the most beautiful twilight imaginable."

Peel Off the Cotton Wool.

The untiring activities, of late, of Major Funkhouser in the censorial field, as shown in his attitude toward "The Little American," "Within the Law" and "The Spy," all films to which no loyal American can take exception, have aroused great hostility to his methods in Chicago.

The Second Deputy, by some fancied God-bestowed wisdom, assumes the right to prevent adults, no matter how enlightened, from viewing pictures on which he has placed his ban. He predicted for the release of "The Little American" great injury to the feelings of Americans of German origin, and other ills; but I have talked with a number of these citizens and they have testified that they had not suffered any ill effects. The truth is these men are good Americans and don't give a snap for the Kaiser. America is their country and their sons are going to the front for her.

The Major is getting what he richly deserves from all sides, a sample of which is furnished by the following editorial from the Chicago Post, which appeared under the title, "Peel off the Cotton Wool":

The delicate sensibilities of Chicago's public are being tenderly protected. We are not allowed to see anything that might shock or horrify. We are not permitted to feel a little of the reflected anguish of Europe. Broken bodies and shed blood are the commonplaces of France and Flanders, but pictures that would help us to visualize something of what our allies have suffered are kept from our gaze.

We understand that the pictures showing the tanks in action at the battle of the Ancre were subjected to the "cut out" process and all unpleasant scenes eliminated before permission was given for their local production. And now the guardian of our innocence refuses to allow "The Spy" to be shown until the "close-ups" are expunged that show a loyal American suffering torture because he refuses to disclose secrets greatly desired by the Berlin police and the German war office.

It is about time we peeled off the cotton wool. This nursery care which we are now enduring makes mollycoddles of us. We cannot hope to live in isolation from the pain of the world—and we should not hope to.

The banned picture contains no horror that the Kaiser's vassals have not inflicted numberless times on their victims. Many things more cruel have been done. It is part of the needed education of the American people to know about these things, and to know about them in a way that will make us feel them.

Major Funkhouser's services as a shock absorber for Chicago are tiresome, harmful, and ought to be ended.

Chicago Film Brevities.

Director J. A. Richmond recently completed "A Midnight Bell," of the Selig-Hoyt comedy series, and is now engaged in the production of "A Contented Woman," another of the Selig-Hoyt comedies, which will be released Monday, Sept. 17. The first mentioned was released Monday, Sept. 3.

Mary Miles Minter took second place, with 1,000 votes, for the first week of the popularity contest now being conducted by the Photoplay Art Magazine. Gail Kane, Juliette Day, Charlotte Burton and Kathleen Kirkham, other American Film Company stars, also secured high places on the list of contestants.

* * *

Colin Campbell, dean of the Selig directors, recently returned to the Selig Los Angeles studios from his summer vacation and is now engaged in the production of "The Still Alarm," in which Thomas Santschi plays the lead. Other prominent Selig players in the cast are Bessie Eyton and Fritzi Brunette.

* * *

Sidney E. Abel, manager of Chicago Vitagraph branch office, is circulating a petition for signatures which asks that Major Funkhouser be removed as film censor, or that the censorship be likewise applied to newspapers, sermons and stage dramas. "Within the Law" (Vitagraph) is still held up by the Chicago censor.

* * *

It has been announced that Henry B. Walthall's productions will bear the Paralta brand and that they will be released through the Triangle Distributing Corporation.

* * *

Peggy O'Neil, the well known star in the stage success, "Peg O' My Heart," has been selected to play the lead in "The Penny Philanthropist." She arrived in the city last week and began work at the Wholesome Films studio under the direction of Guy McConnell. Ralph Morgan, who is a popular figure in the cast of "Turn to the Right," which has been turning many away at Cohan's Grand and which is now in the thirty-third week of its run, is playing opposite Miss O'Neill.

* * *

In a recent interview, in England, D. W. Griffith announced that he has already produced a picture in that country which will be worth 100,000 men to the cause of the Allies when shown in the United States.

* * *

"The Spy," a patriotic production by Fox, in which Dustin Farnum plays the lead, has been forbidden public showing in Chicago by Major Funkhouser. A special invitation presentation of the picture, which was attended by many prominent Chicago people, was given at the Studebaker Monday morning, Aug. 27, and the consensus of opinion was decidedly in favor of the Funkhouser ban being lifted. An appeal to the courts will be made for permission to have it shown here. The photoplay critics of the Chicago dailies, who saw the picture at the Studebaker, are all in favor of its being presented in Chicago. Kitty Kelly writes:

"The picture is strongly American—strongly anti-enemy, which is in this case anti-German. It's perfectly respectable, so far as that section of the ordinance goes, and certainly should not arouse any race riot or prejudice among American citizens—the only kind of people there is room for in the country at present."

Wm. N. Selig, president of the Selig Polyscope Co., recently forwarded a composite film to the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry, New York, which is intended for use in a nation-wide campaign for legislative uses. The first part of this film shows the famous fight in "The Spoilers," in its entirety, which is considered the most realistic fistic event ever shown in a photoplay; the second part shows Tom Mix in some of his most sensational cowboy feats on horseback, and the third shows Kathlyn Williams in several of her hair-raising adventures with wild animals. Everyone who has seen this Selig composite film has pronounced it a strong attraction.

Friday, Sept. 7, is the date of the next regular meeting of Chicago Local, M. P. E. L. of America, in their hall, on the fifth floor of the Masonic Temple. As Messrs. Joseph Hopp, Peter J. Schaefer, Robert R. Levy, Alfred Hamburger and William J. Sweeney—who attended the recent meeting of the officers and national executive committee of the M. P. E. L. of America in New York—will have some interesting statements to make, a large attendance should mark the occasion.

"Efficiency Edgar's Courtship," by Essanay, has been receiving favorable criticism from the local press generally during the week. Taylor Holmes comes in for numerous compliments and high praise for his work in the title role.

Mae Marsh

THOUGH she got her start in motion pictures more or less by accident there is no question but what Mae Marsh, the famous little celebrity and star in "Polly of the Circus," the first Goldwyn release, found the vocation she was best fitted for. Her rise in motion pictures has been meteoric.

Miss Marsh is one of the youngest of the stars of the screen. She is only twenty years old. She was born in Santa Fe, N. M., where her father was an officer of the Santa Fe railroad.

The "accident" by which Mae Marsh became associated with motion pictures occurred in Los Angeles. She was in a studio watching her sister, Marguerite, rehearse for a production being directed by D. W. Griffith. The director was attracted by the little girl sitting on a box in the corner and asked her if she would like to go into motion pictures. With a nod of her head Mae Marsh entered upon a great future.

Mae Marsh.

Within three years she was featured in "The Birth of a Nation," and a year later was the star of the modern episode of "Intolerance." Last September Samuel Goldfish, president of Goldwyn Pictures, induced Miss Marsh to join the company he was forming. He admits she was the inspiration for the formation of the Goldwyn corporation. The following is a partial list of the big picture productions in which Miss Marsh has appeared either as the star or in important roles, and covers a period of five years: "The Birth of a Nation," "Intolerance," "The Wharf Rat," "The Little Liar," "The Marriage of Molly O.," "Hoodoo Ann," "The Wild Girl of the Sierras," "The Escape," "A Child of the Paris Streets," "Judith of Bethulia," "The Sands of Dee," "A Temporary Ruse," and "Man's Genesis," the latter her first "hit" and the one responsible for her permanent engagament by the Biograph Company.

News of Los Angeles and Vicinity

Yorke-Metro Coming East

Balshofer's Company Will Make Pictures in Eastern Studios For Three Months.

IN ORDER to complete the production, "Paradise Garden," which was begun in the Hollywood studios of the Yorke Film Corporation, the Harold Lockwood company, under the direction of F. J. Balshofer, will this week go to New York, where scenes of the picture requiring locations in New York City will be filmed.

Following the completion of "Paradise Garden" in New York, Mr. Balshofer's company will probably undertake the production of several Lockwood comedy-dramas before returning to the Los Angeles studios. Stories are now under consideration, and it is probable that either two or three of these will be produced in the East.

Since bringing the Harold Lockwood company to California about a year ago, the Yorke-Metro company has produced six pictures at the Hollywood studios. According to Balshofer, this is an ideal location for the making of most of the Harold Lockwood features. The York-Metro studios in Hollywood will therefore be closed only temporary, or until perhaps the first of 1918, when it is expected that the Lockwood company will have returned from the East.

Those who are leaving Los Angeles for New York this week are Harold Lockwood; Fred J. Balshofer; Lester Cuneo, heavy man; Richard V. Spencer, scenario editor; Tony Gaudio, cameraman; Ben Pierpaolo, assistant; and Wiley J. Gibson, business manager.

Crane Wilbur to Go on Tour of United States.

Crane Wilbur, whose present contract calling for appearance in a series of pictures for the Art Dramas expires August 22, will leave Los Angeles early in September, to begin the first lap of a nation-wide tour, in which he will make personal appearances at a large number of motion picture theaters throughout the country. Mr. Wilbur will fill the first engagements of his personal tour in the southern and middle-western states and will continue through the leading cities for an extended trip of several months duration. The route of his tour is being arranged by Carlyle R. Robinson, who accompanied J. Warren Kerrigan on the first extensive tour of this kind to be undertaken by a motion picture star.

Los Angeles Film Brevities.

Work on the seventh episode of "The Lost Express" the Signal-Mutual serial featuring Helen Holmes is progressing rapidly, Director General J. P. McGowan having "shot" 180 scenes in two days.

For scenes in this episode Mr. McGowan took the Helen Holmes company to Delmar, California, where a number of locations about the Saratoga Inn were used.

Sherwood Macdonald, former director of Jackie Saunders, Horkheimer Mutual star, is having his first experience at "shooting the baby" as, in studio vernacular they call photographing the baby star, Gloria Joy.

* * *

Anita King, Balboa's new star, has begun work in a five reel feature under direction of Edgar Jones, who has just completed "The Twisted Thread" for Horkheimer Brothers. Miss King's first story is "The Girl Angle" by L. V. Jefferson. Miss King will be the featured star in a series of six photoplays all to be produced under the management of E. D. Horkheimer and for release by Mutual.

* * *

Jack Dillon, formerly of the Vogue and Keystone Companies, has joined the Triangle Film Corporation directorial staff and soon will begin the production of a picture in which Olive Thomas will play the leading role.

* * *

Mildred Delfino, the Triangle actress who was dangerously injured while working in support of Miss Margery Wilson at the Hartville ranch studio several days ago, is recovering rapidly and soon will return to her studio duties at Culver City.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Todd, and daughter Margaret, Harold Lloyd, Marie Mosquini and Gil Pratt were guests at a reception and dinner given by Bebe Daniels, leading lady of the Rolin, at her seashore home at Ocean Park, Sunday, August 19.

* * *

Al Griffin, for five years technical director with the Essanay Company and also with Rex Beach for a long period, has been engaged by the Rolin Company as technical director.

* * *

Deep inroads are being made into the ranks of the Rolin Company by the National call to the colors. Three of the boys have already appeared before the examining board and have been found physically fit for the selective army. They are Hal Roach, Director-General of the company; Herb Kerrigan, assistant director to Mr. Roach and Harry "Snub" Pollard of the Harold Lloyd Company. Dwight Whiting, treasurer, secretary and manager of the Rolin, has just been notified to appear for examination.

* * *

The Harold Lloyd Company, under the direction of Alf Goulding, has started the filming of a new one reel comedy featuring Harold Lloyd. He is being supported by Bebe Daniels and Harry "Snub" Pollard.

Josephine Sedgwick, who recently joined the Triangle Culver City studio playing forces as a stock woman, has done such creditable work in the first production in which she appeared that she has been elevated to the rank of a leading woman and will play opposite Roy Stewart in the Western star's next picture.

In her new position Miss Sedgwick will be one of the youngest leading women enrolled under the Triangle banner, but she has been engaged in dramatic work since childhood. She was in vaudeville several seasons with members of her family as one of the "Five Sedgwicks" and has been before the camera two years. Her previous appearance in a Triangle picture was in support of Belle Bennett in "Ashes of Hope," which will be released in the near future.

George Stone, Beulah Burns, Thelma Burns and the celebrated Triangle Kiddies soon will be seen again in a production which has been begun at the Triangle Culver City studio under the direction of William V. Mong.

Margery Wilson is the featured player in the cast and is supported by George Chesboro, but the youngsters have prominent parts in a counter plot that will enable the many admirers to enjoy their work.

"The Firefly of Tough Luck" is the new drama E. Mason Hopper is directing at the Triangle Culver City studios. Walt Whitman and Alma Reuben are playing the leading roles.

Four hours a day was the limit of work for the Triangle Company directed by Lynn Reynolds, while in the vicinity of Victorville, shooting scenes for the Olive Thomas Comedy-drama, "Broadway Arizona," due to the fact that the mercury around Victorville is on speaking terms with one hundred degrees in the shade, and no shade to be found.

* * *

With activities at the Triangle-Keystone studios in Hollywood, California, slipping along in two-four time, comes the announcement that the famous song writer and director, Harry Williams, will again be with the comedy forces, starting Monday.

Harry Williams has three stories under consideration, his initial production with the Triangle-Keystone studios to be determined as soon as his company has been organized and decided upon. It is likely that he will make his first comedy with Max Asher, who has just signed a Triangle-Keystone contract. Asher is a well known figure in film comedy, his most recent work being with Universal.

With five companies in operation turning out one and two reel comedies, and another to start next week, the scenario staff at the Triangle-Keysone studios have found litle else to do but work and work hard. Headed by Albert Glassmire, the Triangle-Keystone writing staff now includes Walter McNamara, Walter Fredericks, Harry Wulze, and Anthony Coldowey.

* * *

Enid Markey is finishing her work with the Fox company, a special engagement opposite George Walsh. Her future plans are not fully developed, but she is already considering several offers.

* * *

Margarita Fischer has completed her work in "The Girl Who Would Not Grow Up" and promses to pay Los Angeles a short visit soon. The film is a bright comedy written for Miss Fischer, has been made in and around San Diego. It is likely that Miss Fischer will stick to this line.

* * *

Henry King brought his wife, Gypsy Abbott, to Los Angeles to submit to an operation and the plucky little lady, now in a Los Angeles hospital, is reported as getting along nicely. Miss Abbott was unable to see herself in the preview of "Lorelei of the Sea" in which she did capital work.

* * *

Ten Los Angeles film exchanges will soon be extablished, with convenient offices and supply facilities in a six-story reinforced concrete building at 720-24 South Hill street, alterations to be made by Lawrence B. Burch and Dr. W. Jarvis Barlow, lessees of the building. Plans have been made by architect Frauenfleder for remodeling of several floors of the building for motion picture firms.

* * *

The Los Angeles photoplay colony was a large contributor of talent for a benefit performance given at the Mason Opera House for the French Wounded Emergency Fund. Among those who gave their bit to entertain the audience were Raymond Hatton, Louise Huff, Wallace Reid, Mary Pickford, Charlie Murray, Eric Campbell, Charlie Chaplin, Harry Carol, Julian Eltinge and Hughie Mack.

* * *

W. Todd Martin, of Australia, is registered at the Hotel Alexandria. He is here to buy feature films for release on the Australian market.

Dan Cupid continues to be a happy busybody at Universal City and a few nights ago the little god of love was chief guest at the wedding of Miss Eileen Sedgwick and Justin H. McCloskey.

* * *

Miss Sedgwick has been featured during the past year in Bison thrillers in which lions, leopards and other beasts of the jungle contribute to the exciting scenes.

* * *

McCloskey came to Universal City from New York a year and a half ago and at present is assistant to Director George Marshall, producer of western pictures.

* * *

The filming of the sixth episode of the latest Universal serial, "The Phantom Ship," has begun under the direction of Francis Ford. Ben Wilson is the featured player with a large supporting cast headed by Neva Gerber, Kingsley Benedict, Duke Worne and Elsie Van Name.

* * *

Director Eugene Moore is rapidly nearing the completion at Universal City of a five-reel drama entitled "O'Connor's Mag." The production, the story of which was written by Charles J. Wilson, Jr., features Edith Roberts. Others in the cast are P. S. Pembroke, Francis McDonald, Harry Mann and Marie Van Tassel.

* * *

With Eddie Lyons and Lee Moran as his principal players, Director Harry Edwards is filming a two-reel Nestor comedy, "The King Was Crowned," at Universal City.

Frank H. Spearman's story, "The Run of the Yellow Mail," is under production at Universal City by Director George Marshall in three reels. The leading role is played by Helen Gibson, supported by Val Paul, Buck Connors, G. Raymond Nye and Wadsworth Harris. R. A. Dillon prepared the scenario.

* * *

"The Ghost Girl" is the title of a five-reel comedy-drama being produced at Universal City under the direction of Jack Wells. Donna Drew plays the leading role. Miss Drew has in her support Casson Ferguson, Claire Du Brey, Fred Montague and Victor Rottman. The story was written by Patricia Foulds and prepared for the screen by Charles J. Wilson, Jr., and George Hively.

* * *

The Universal western company under the direction of Jack Ford is filming a five-reel drama entitled "Bucking Broadway." It features Harry Carey with Molly Malone playing opposite. George Hively wrote the story and prepared the screen version also.

* * *

With an all-star cast of players headed by Dorothy Phillips, William Stowell and Jack Mulhall, Miss Ida May Park of the Bluebird studios is filming a five-reel drama entitled "The Boss of Powderville." Miss Park prepared the scenario from a story written by Thomas Addison, and which appeared in "Adventure."

* * *

Frank Borzage, who has just joined the Universal company, will make his first appearance opposite Brownie Vernon under the direction of Allen J. Holubar in "The Twisted Soul," a five-reel feature production.

Borzage before entering the motion pictures was on the legitimate stage for several years playing in various stock companies.

With Ruth Clifford and Monroe Salisbury as his principal players, Director Rupert Julian is filming a five-reel drama at the Bluebird studios. This photoplay, which is being produced under the working title of "Julie Sandovel," was written by Elliott J. Clawson.

* * *

A five-reel drama, dealing with the backwoods, is under production at Universal City by Director E. J. Le Saint. It is entitled "The Wolf and His Mate" and features Louise Lovely. The story was written by Julia Maier and was prepared for the screen by Doris Schroeder. Hart Hoxie, Hector Dion, George O'Dell, Betty Schade and Georgia French appear with Miss Lovely in this production.

* * *

Al Santell, who is directing Victor comedies at Universal City, is engaged in the filming of a one reel farce comedy entitled "The Pink Pajamas." Gladys Tennyson and Dave Morris are the principal players.

* * *

The production of the sixteen-episode serial, "The Gray Ghost," is nearing completion at Universal City, Director Stuart Paton now being engaged on the fourteenth installment of the story. The action is largely carried by Priscilla Dean, Eddie Polo, Harry Carter and Emory Johnson.

* * *

Director Allen J. Holubar has under production at Universal City a five-reel drama entitled "The Twisted Soul," featuring Brownie Vernon. Supporting Miss Vernon are Frank Borzage, Murdock MacQuarrie, Joseph Girard and Miles McCarthy. The story was written by J. Grubb Alexander and Fred Myton.

* * *

To the cast supporting Miss Mae Murray in "The Princess Virtue," which includes Wheeler Oakman, Harry Von Meter, Gretchen Lederer, Jean Hersholt and Clarissa Selwynn, has been added Paul Nicholson, popular star of the musical comedy stage.

This engagement marks Nicholson's first screen appearance since the perfection of motion pictures. He is, however, one of the pioneers of screen acting.

David Horsley is expected to return to his Los Angeles studios early next week after nearly a month's business trip in Eastern states.

* * *

The Cub Comedy featuring George Ovey has just completed the filming of "Officer Jerry," written and directed by Milton H. Fahrney. The action is somewhat unique in that Jerry is called upon to enact a "cop" role, the sight of a policeman to Jerry ordinarily being the high sign to "beat it."

* * *

Director Thomas Ricketts will this week complete the filming of Mary MacLaren's second feature photoplay made under her contract with David Horsley.

Harrish Ingraham has nearly completed "The Child of M'sieu," a five-reel drama featuring Baby Marie Osborne for the Pathe program. The camera work executed by William Nobles promises many new efforts as the result of a number of experiments made recently under a new lighting process.

Export Items

By E. T. McGovern.

LEROY GARFINKLE, New York representative of the Sociedad General Cinematografica, has just closed a deal by which his company controls the rights in Chile, Uruguay, Paraguay and Argentina for the Triangle Pictures.

Myron Selznick has moved his office to the 8th floor of the Godfrey Bldg., and is handling the film advertising service. There is a rumor afloat that Myron may go into the foreign rights selling field.

* * *

Felix Malitz, General Manager of the Piedmont Pictures Corp., is receiving regularly extremely interesting films from France and England showing current topics. His latest arrivals were films showing General Pershing and the American troops in Paris on July 4th and the celebration of July 14th by the French troops.

* * *

Alexander Beyfuss, President of the Iliodor Picture Corporation, informs us that the demand for foreign rights on "The Fall of the Romanoffs" has exceeded his utmost expectations. No contracts will be closed until the showing is made to the trade at the Ritz-Carlton Hotel.

Fred Warren of the Goldwyn Pictures, reports a continued demand for the rights on his pictures from the Spanish speaking countries.

* * *

The Fleitzer Film Co. of 220 W. 42nd Street, have received five Danish five-reel features for exploitation in the United States and South American territories.

* * *

Jacob Glucksmann has moved from the third floor of the World's Tower Building to suite 407, the same building, into more spacious quarters and invites offers from producers for distribution through Max Glucksmann of Argentina.

* * *

The Russian Art Films, now being exploited in the United States, are open for negotiations for distribution in the South American markets.

* * *

The Universal is inaugurating a campaign through its export department for the sales in South America of "Twenty Thousand Leagues Under the Sea." This picture should have a strong appeal to the Spanish and Portugese speaking people.

* * *

J. Frank Brockliss is preparing to return to England. He will leave his office in capable hands for the erection of a larger export trade than ever before. The Billy West Comedies are a great attraction to foreign buyers and a number of sales have been consummated.

* * *

The Bray Cartoons have been sold for Mexico. There seems to be a strong demand for these laugh-provoking pictures in the Latin-American fields. They now are contracted for in Argentina, Uruguay, Paraguay, Chile, Porto Rico and Mexico.

* * *

The Precision Machine Co. reports a rapidly increasing demand for the Simplex in the South American countries. A big contract is now in contemplation with one of the largest importers in this territory for the exclusive agency of these projectors.

COMPETITION FOR JUVENILE REVIEWERS.

William Fox is offering prizes of $500, to be distributed in five awards of $100 each, for the best written reviews on "Jack and the Beanstalk." Any boy or girl under 14 years of age is eligible and is invited to compete in the contest, which begins with the announcement.

The reviews should be written on only one side of the paper and should be sent to the Fox Kiddies Editor, 130 West Forty-sixth street, New York City. All communications regarding the contest should be addressed to the same office.

Australian Notes

THE censorship trouble has been largely remedied, and all concerned are much more satisfied than they were three months ago. The board has reaffirmed its decision regarding productions of a salacious and harmful nature, and such pictures are not to be allowed to be imported.

* * *

Owing to the great success of his first production, Beaumont Smith, formerly well-known in the theatrical line, has completed a second film subject. A comedy entitled "Hayseeds in Sydney," which is a burlesque on the Australian bush farmer who brings his family to this city. The chief sights of our premier village are shown.

* * *

The Southern Cross Film Company has been registered in Sydney, and will produce short stories. The present program of production consists of two single-reel comedies and several one and two-part dramas. The head of the new concern, J. Goudet, is at present organizing an efficient staff of helpers for all branches of his venture.

John F. Gavin is likely to give up producing features and devote his energy to two-reel dramas. The great number of features imported monthly from America hardly gives the Australian producer a chance, as his production must be much better than the imported stuff to be marketable. Gavin has therefore decided to produce program fillers, and hopes to finish one subject each week. He has secured a large studio in the I. O. O. F. buildings, Pitt street, Sydney, and is fitting it up with all the latest apparatus.

Australasian Films, Ltd., this week presented on behalf of the Commonwealth Government a series of war films under the general title, "Australian in Action." This included the "Australians at Pozieres," "The Battle of the Marne," and "The Tanks at the Ancre." Some very original advertising stunts were tried, one of which was a motor-car disguised as a tank, which went round the streets. The "Disguise" was done on a very elaborate scale, and the effect was most realistic.

"The Barrier" is the current attraction at the Sydney Lyceum. E. J. Carroll's very efficient publicity manager has put over a great advertising campaign in connection with this subject, and the result has been very satisfactory. The picture is undoubtedly a good drawing card.

Hoyt's Limited has opened a new exchange for a brand of English features, the Ideal productions. These are shown first at the same firm's city theater. Two subjects have already been released: H. B. Irving in "The Lyons Mail" and Albert Chevalier in "The Fallen Star."

"The Honor System" closed a month's very successful run at the Sydney Theater Royal last week. The big Fox feature has been very favorably commented upon in all quarters. The Farnum de luxe attraction, "A Tale of Two Cities," is the current special attraction at the same theater.

Australian Feature Films, Ltd., distributors here of Paramount features, have announced that, starting shortly, all features will be released on the open market basis.

The news that Ince and Sennett productions would be released through this exchange, conveyed in a full page newspaper advertisement last week caused much amazement to all in the film business. THOS. S. IMRIE.

"Oh! Do you know Bill Hart personally?"
"Tell me, is it true that Gertie Gimpus is married?"
"I'd just love to be in a picture to see how I'd look!"
"I have a friend who'd take fine in moving pictures!"
"Does Charlie Chaplin really get what the papers say?"
"See that actor on the screen there? Well after seeing him on the street, I must say the camera certainly is lenient with him!"
"It must be nice to know the actors people read about!" etc., etc., etc.

Spokes from the Hub

By Marion Howard

COMMEND me to "The Sawdust Ring" for pure fun and kid stuff which pleases young and old alike. Why have we not seen the youngster Harold Goodwin before? Strikes me he shared the honors with Bessie Love. Here we get real circus life in action, the young pair traveling with a genuine company, and it was some show when Bessie got in the ring with her burlesque stunt. Nothing deep or new in the plot, but it is good entertainment, and that is what we go to the theater for. One of the funniest things in this was the dream indulged in by the kids, the horse and the dog, worked out for our edification. On the same program at the Exeter theater was George Beban in "The Cook of Canyon Camp" and who had a penchant for flapjacks, otherwise known as griddle cakes. Beban's methods are about the same and he had splendid support in Helen Eddy. It was a joy to see the fine work of Monroe Salisbury. I had not seen him since "Ramona," in which he scored as Alessandro. He had a sympathetic part and deserved all that came to him later, thanks to the cook. The outdoor scenery was excellent.

Is it not questionable taste for acrobats and other persons doing stunts to drape their bodies with "Old Glory"? It "sure is," at this time, when our flag is held in such high respect the world over—even our enemies have a secret regard for what it spells. I saw a short subject Sunday night, picturing a man on a skyscraper wearing our flag in a questionable manner, and I was glad to hear a few hisses round me. What are directors thinking of to so offend good taste! I have seen my first "Scarlet Runner" with Earl Williams and enjoyed it as all did. We are to get the series each week at the Exeter, which runs good Universal short stories Sundays.

"The Second Mrs. Tanqueray" went well at the Fenway, though it is somewhat of a tragedy, as all know who have seen the speaking play. Sir George Alexander, Hilda Moore (who is so like Mrs. Pat Campbell in this character) and a finished array of English players gave us an artistic treat. The interiors were pretentious and beyond criticism; still it is not a picture one cares to see twice because it lacks lightness and good finale.

The Hub is just now enjoying "The Italian Battlefront" picture, one of the best attractions of its kind, put on at the Tremont theater, the first home of "The Birth of a Nation" here and which is one of our coolest theaters. So much has been written in this publication and by the critics all I can say is "them's my sentiments, tew." We have a very large Italian colony—40,000 at least, and I hope all will be able to see this.

The Community Picture Bureau is doing a tremendous business in its new quarters, and has placed pictures in army camps in New England and other pictures as far away as San Diego, Vancouver and Montana. It does not make any pictures, but supplies the calls from far and near for clean, virile pictures and selects them and it knows what's what. Mrs. William Foster and a large staff are busy well into the night filling orders. This bureau is a Hub institution and unique.

Glad to see that Rex Beach is making his own titles; that Lillian Walker is getting busy on new pictures, but why such a title as "The Lust of the Ages"—why the misleading word, "lust"? What if it has naught to do with sex, is it a good box office word?

* * *

We had fun over the Motoy doll pictures and liked the novelty.

* * *

"Her Strange Wedding" was some picture and oh, my, doesn't Fannie Ward wear some stunning gowns? Edythe Chapman is one of my favorites, a graceful, well-groomed woman who makes a capital society mother.

Do we need such plays as "A Strange Transgressor"? It pointed no moral, had no comedy in it to relieve the tension felt in front, and was not especially wholesome. We are surprised at this Triangle offering, though it was superbly acted and put on. Louise Glaum made a fascinating member of the demimonde class, so much so that a man said to his companion, "Gee, I don't blame John Hampton, for she has class." The redeeming part was centered around the kid and here we had some good touches, showing the great mother love willing to sacrifice her all for the sake of the lad. Still, the play apart from this is unreal.

I saw two splendid pictures of late, one "Time Locks and Diamonds," from the Triangle studios and in contrast to the one just mentioned, for here we get William Desmond and looking for all the world like William Gillette, in a part which suits him evidently. We get a lot of suspense in this, some trickery and good twists. Mildred Harris is better in this than in recent pictures and we liked the ending.

* * *

"Forbidden Paths" with the Japanese actor was another Lasky picture to go well here, with Vivian Martin, Tom Forman and others, and here we get the stoicism of the Japanese wonderfully displayed by Hayakawa. It was a fine bit of acting, as we learn to expect at his hands.

* * *

We liked "The Stolen Treaty" as we do all plays with the secret service sauce as spice. Earle Williams has some support in Corinne Griffith, and doesn't she film well!

* * *

Again I went to see "The Little American," and got a bit more of the picture at the Fenway as Manager Sumner did not cut the offending reel picturing the Red Cross nurse after the vile attack which might better be eliminated, as it is a blot. Mrs. Ayer did not use it at her theater—hence my remark in my last letter. What a wonderful picture Artcraft has given us here, and not a bit of it overdrawn. Good idea to have these scenes presented as they exist somewhere in France and Belgium—yes and in more harrowing detail. We get enough here in this to open the eyes of the indifferent to the type of system we are up against in dealing with the enemy. Raymond Hatton is some actor and wonderfully versatile—here as the young French officer wearing the medal of bravery, sacrificing his arm and with a sorrow in his heart because he could not win the "Little American." He was an artist all through. Only last week I saw him in another role vastly different as a king in that delightful picture, "What Money Can't Buy." I wonder no critic has mentioned his make-up, as he looked like Charles Dickens when he came to this country fifty years ago. It was startling. The titles were great and got a hand.

Another pair of gems is "The Uneven Road" and "The Lighted Lamp" given to delighted fans by the Essanay company. In the first named where little McAlister figures as a blind child there were two features to hold attention and which have passed unmentioned. One was the unconscious influence of that child (wandering along the street led by her wonderful dog) upon the lascivious mind of the man bent on moral destruction in her home. Of course, "hubby" returned suddenly, but there was the earlier transformation in the man who suddenly realized the mother's would-be sacrifice for the child. Will you who have seen this ever forget the closing picture of Mary and the dog eating ice cream and the knowing look of the dog toward the house? Edwin Arnold seems a dependable man for "The Lighted Lamp." The opening scene was of the cave man order, but I liked best the camp with the lonesome men thinking of the absent ones when the juice of "Home Sweet Home" was turned on in the machine. These plays are novel in idea and well worked out. This is the day of the short story well sandwiched on the program.

"TOM SAWYER" NEARLY READY FOR RELEASE.

Boys of all ages, from ten to ninety, will welcome the advent of Tom Sawyer, the immortal boy, in motion pictures, and the much-loved juvenile hero, who seems to symbolize the real boy character as no other has ever done, will strut bravely across the screen when Jack Pickford portrays the character in his forthcoming Paramount production. The fact that Louise Huff, the other member of the famous "kid" duo, will interpret Becky, is assurance these two figures will be adequately rendered to the last degree of perfection.

The filming of the exteriors at Hannibal, Missouri, the place where Mark Twain spent his own boyhood—seventy years ago—has been accomplished. Hannibal Cave figures in the picture and many other spots made familiar through the author's work.

British Notes

AS INDICATION of the hold the moving picture has upon the industrial classes in northern England the suggestion has been made by the Kinematograph Exhibitors' Association that the time is opportune for the industry to possess direct parliamentary representation. There are several areas in industrial districts, it is pointed out, where a candidate, apart from political currents, would be well supported in championing the cause of the national amusement, the kinema. In view of the momentous issues before the nation at the present day this may be too optimistic an estimate of his chances, nevertheless, by association with the labor interests now in office with the moving picture as the main plank in the election platform, the return of a candidate does not seem improbable. The Exhibitors' Association, being now a registered trade union, has much to gain by affiliation with the central organization of trade unions, controlled in politics only by the Labor party, and negotiations to this end have already been opened. Speculation is rife in the trade as to who will be the first "Movie M. P." Many names have been mentioned, but popular selection favors either A. E. Newbould (chairman of the Exhibitors' Association) or W. Gavazzi King (secretary of the association).

Samuel Goldfish's undertaking, Goldwin Pictures, proposes a strong campaign for its features on the British market. R. S. Edmondson (American Film Releases) has found temporary office accommodation at his new and commodious premises just off Wardour St. for the preliminary work and advertising. Goldwyn's London address until further notice is 16 Great Chapel street, London, W. I.

Film production is as a strange black art to the Irish peasant people. The colleens of Mullinahone, near Clonmel, were horrified a few days ago at the extravagance of a director of the Film Company of Ireland in rebuilding a thatched cottage, only to burn it down again. The scene was one of many recorded in the Clonmel district for inclusion in a new feature play entitled "Knocknagow."

Admiral Jellicoe recently stated that the number of ships in the navy now was in excess of 4,000. From this can be gathered a conception of the immensity of the task of supplying the fleet with moving picture films apart from the gigantic task of distribution. The Lord Mayor of Liverpool has raised a substantial fund for the provision of further Kinematograph outfits for the senior service, while today (July 23rd) sees the opening in London of "navy week." For the next few days many theater and kinema theater proprietors are devoting a day's proceeds for this and other comforts for our sailors.

The final sitting of the Kinema Commission took place at Westminster last Monday. The Bishop of Birmingham presided and announced that the report (a 500-page volume) would be issued within the course of a few days. He specially thanked the trade for the assistance given the Commission, particularly by Messrs. Newbould and King.

Printed histories of the great war are as numerous as flies, but it has been left to the instigation of Pathe Freres to make a moving picture anthology illustrative of the progress of the European conflagration since the assassination of the Austrian arch-duke three years ago. War pictures are apt to pall unless of some great battle, but this cannot be attributed to the Pathe "History of the War." It is comprised of the brightest and most interesting selections from miles of negative taken by Pathe cameramen on six war fronts. Mr. Balfour and Lord Derby attended the trade shows last week and warmly commended Messrs. Pathe on the coherence of the animated history.

The motto of the successful film producer has long been "The Play's the Thing," but it looks as though this slogan is to be steadily usurped by the intervention of the song theme into the gentle art of filmongery. A popular song does not usually embody a plot, but it does have a theme for the nucleus of a story. One of the most successful British subjects, "My Old Dutch," was a simple story written around Albert Chevalier's famous ballad of Cockney life. Now the Ideal Co. is almost ready with another champion tear-enticing melody of last decade, namely, "Asthore," while International Exclusives have visualized that super-sobber, "Daddy." Cannot someone produce a song-story from a humorous favorite by way of a change?

D. W. Griffith still keeps in or about London, and has been engaged in Kent taking scenes for a forthcoming drama featuring the sisters Dorothy and Lillian Gish. One scene is of a society garden party, and among the people whom Griffith persuaded to appear in the scene were Lady Paget, Lady Drogheda, Miss Elizabeth Asquith and the Princess of Monaco.

Indian Notes

By S. B. Banerjea.

RECENTLY certain leading film manufacturers of America requested the American consul in Calcutta to furnish them with a list of all the bioscope theaters in India. This news has caused some uneasiness in the English bioscope world in India, one of the organs of which has suggested that both British and native proprietors should combine for mutual protection, as the Americans mean the sort of enterprise in the near future which will harm their interest. It adds: "If American promoters intend after the war to open up in various towns in India, they or any others, not British subjects, should be impeded by a special theater tax, or be similarly handicapped by a tax on receipts. So far India has managed very well without American theatrical enterprise, and we have yet to discover that this country is pining for it."

Now, there are not many picture houses in India. Only Calcutta, Bombay, and Madras boast of half a dozen picture theaters, while Delhi—the Imperial city—Lahore, Mussooric, Darjeeling, and certain other cities have only one theater each. These theaters, I must state, are owned by natives mainly. It must not be concluded that the Indians are not patrons of the bioscope. In fact, they will gladly patronize any decent show. But where is the enterprising showman to cater to their wants? If now Americans come here and open picture houses they will simply meet a want. If you, Mr. Grumbler, have the means, why don't you open picture theaters in the leading cities and towns of India? If you have not the necessary means or cannot command the necessary capital, your rival is sure to occupy the field.

When the Picture House of Calcutta, which is owned by natives, opened the other day we were told that we would get the best Universal and other American films. We have too much of Pathe in the Elphinstone, and thought that we might now expect a variety of American films. It is understood that, owing to certain reasons, the policy of the Picture House has undergone a change. This policy, we are assured, has been crowned with success, and that large audiences are now greeting the all-British films. I prefer not to discuss the new policy of Messrs. K. D. Bros., the proprietors of the Picture House, but will only remark that they have acted a bit hastily, as they will find out sooner or later.

Referring to the trial scene, which is a feature of "God's Witness," the leading paper of Asia remarks: "It was a splendid story, but we wish the Americans would be a little less free with their maker's name in movie titles." Obey this order, ye American film manufacturers, otherwise ye run the risk of banishment from India!

* * *

I would advise some enterprising American dealer to secure the great Red Cross film, "The Sick and Wounded in Bombay," for exhibition in his country. It shows that India is trying to move with the times. The rights for premises just off Wardow St. for the preliminary work and is 16 Great Chapel St., London, W. I.

India and Burma have been acquired by the Royal Opera House of Bombay. I think the American rights have not been disposed of yet.

Calcutta has at last got its board of film censors. It consists of three members—one a representative of the police, and one each from the Trades Association and the European Association. Every Thursday morning they visit one or other of our bioscope theaters and pass the weekly program. It is to be regretted, however, that no native is on the board. The bioscope theaters are mostly patronized by natives, and it stands to reason, therefore, that a representative Indian should have been among those selected. The censorship has been established on the score of morality. Now, many European manners and customs are repugnant to the Indians. Take the film, "Midnight at Maxim's," for instance. It is objectionable in Indian eyes, but Europeans do not object to it. No wonder it has not been withdrawn. But if an Indian were on the board he would have insisted upon its withdrawal. The Indians found little or nothing objectionable in "Who Pays," but only three or four episodes of this series were shown. I need not multiply instances. Suffice it to say, however, that on the board of censor the Indian and not the European element should have predominated. I should add that the board is a tentative measure. It has a life of one year only, but it will be made permanent. The Calcutta vigilance committee, to which the board is mainly due, has just issued a report of its activities, which contains much interesting reading Already I hear the wails of the proprietor of a leading bioscope theater of Calcutta. He has been compelled to take off certain films. He has had a fling at the "crank brigade" in his paper recently, and hopes that its interference will not influence the Government toward any decision which will unduly tie the hands of proprietors and managers. He specializes in all British films.

We have had a succession of Gold Rooster plays at the Elphinstone. By way of variety, Mr. Madan is now showing us the big Balboa film, "The Red Circle." It is bound to draw big houses. At the Picture House we have had the opportunity of seeing the Bluebird photo drama, "The Girl of Lost Lake," "The Secret of the Swamp," and "Barnaby Rudge." At the Bijou we witnessed "The Black Orchid," "Ultus and the Secret of the Night," and the Selig film, "The Hare and the Tortoise." This theater had to withdraw "The Chalice of Sorrow" after showing it for one day only. Mr. Bandmann is showing "The Battle of the Seine" to crowded houses. At the New Alexandra cinema (Kristma Theater) of Hyderabad, which was opened last January, "The Woman Who Did," "Pearl of the Ganges," "She," and other all British and several Chaplin, Keystone, and L-Ko films have been shown with success.

The Essanay company's decision to announce the running time of film instead of its length has been approved by Mr. Incasse and other Bioscope theater proprietors. Mr. Incasse suggests that the Essanay action should be copied by all other film manufacturers, and that Bioscope managers should also notify the time table of the feature film in their program. At any rate he has begun doing so. I hope Mr. Madan will follow suit.

BLACKTON RESIGNS FROM VITAGRAPH.

Having completed the taking of scenes for his first production for Paramount, "The World for Sale," a screen version of Sir Gilbert Parker's widely-read novel, J. Stuart Blackton has formally resigned as vice-president and secretary of the Vitagraph Company of America, with which he was so long associated.

Commodore Blackton feels that inasmuch as he will henceforth devote all his time to his own productions, he would be unable to properly fill the offices he has held with Vitagraph.

CHARLES MILLER NEW DIRECTOR FOR NORMA TALMADGE.

Charles Miller, who for two years directed many of Triangle's greatest productions, has been engaged by Joseph M. Schenck to direct the Norma Talmadge photoplays. The first effort of Mr. Miller's new affiliation will be Grace Miller White's "The Secret of the Storm Country," where the original scenes of the story were laid. Mr. Schenck's attention was called to Mr. Miller through the splendid work he did under the Triangle banner, for Bessie Love, in "The Sawdust Ring," for Dorothy Dalton, in "The Flame of the Yukon" and for Bessie Barriscale.

Arthur Leslie's Book

"Who's Who and Why: The 100 Leading Lights of the Screen" Is Well Received By Newspaper Editors.

WHO'S Who and Why: The 100 Leading Lights of the Screen" is both the title and the description of a compact biographical cyclopaedia of photoplayers just prepared and published by Arthur Leslie.

As its name implies, it is selective in its scope and aims only to include the actors and actresses of the screen who have won assured position as recognized favorites, or those who have given proof that they will soon take their place with them. As the "Why" in its titular "Who's Who and Why" indicates, this book does not limit itself to the dry details of the player's professional career, but gives his or her life history in such manner as to throw informing light on the causes that have led, or are leading, to the winning of success. In these intimate personal details of early work and early struggle that are here given may be found a deeper interest than in the later records of achievement. It is a book that will be of the greatest aid to every editor controlling a department devoted to photoplays and photoplayers, and the one purpose that led to its compilation was to fill a need that has been felt in every newspaper office. Wide recognition of this fact is already coming from editors throughout the country.

The book is inscribed "This work is respectfully dedicated to Carl Laemmle, President of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company, whose fine courage and broad vision made the motion picture world safe for democracy." Leslie refers to the fight made by Mr. Laemmle as the first big independent producer.

Vivian Rich with Universal

VIVIAN RICH, one of Universal's latest acquisitions, is at present playing opposite Neal Hart in a five-reel feature entitled "The Bumble Bee." Miss Rich says that when she graduated from high school her parents wanted her to go to college, but she had a longing for the stage and prevailed upon her father and mother to permit her to gratify her ambition in that direction. There was no serious objection upon their part, as both had been theatrical people themselves.

Vivian Rich.

One of the first productions in which Miss Rich appeared was "The Country Girl" at the Herald Square Theater, New York. The same season she joined Gus Edwards in vaudeville and after a time with his company came with her mother to the Pacific Coast. That was in 1913, and she joined the American Company, subsequently playing under the banner of William Fox.

Among the notable features in which she has appeared are "Holly House," "Pastures Green" and "The Little Troubadour," in all of which she played leads. Miss Rich also appeared opposite William Farnum in 'The Price of Silence."

Vivian Rich is a great reader. She is seldom to be seen without a book, and her dressing room looks like a small library. Occasionally she tries her hand at a short story, and has had some success in inventing scenarios. Nearly all outdoor sports appeal to her, motoring being her special hobby; but, unlike most girls, she is a thorough mechanician and can overhaul her own car like a paid expert.

CARMEL MYERS WITH JEWEL.

Carmel Myers, one of the most beautiful women of the screen, has joined the forces of Jewel Productions, Inc., and made her first bow as a Jewel star in "Sirens of the Sea" at the Broadway theater. It is understood that Miss Myers will shortly be featured in an important Jewel production.

"Efficiency Via Express" (Paramount-Bray).

THE manner in which our express packages are handled on their way from one part of the country to another is shown in the 82d release of the Paramount-Bray Pictograph. Here we learn that in one of the largest express offices in the country some 50,000 packages arrive per day. These packages must also leave this office and start on their several journeys on that same day; and in order to do so and to avoid congestion remarkable efficiency is necessary in the handling this immense mass of material, including live stock, plants and all the other kinds of things that travel by express. When waggons come to the terminal a crew is ready to unload it. The packages are then tossed onto a wide endless belt which precipitates them onto a tremendous revolving cone. Around the base of this cone stand forty-eight men, each man representing one of the forty-eight states of the Union, and so expert are they that as the packages slide down the slippery sides of the cone they are picked out and properly sorted into the bins of the proper states. Back of the bins again stand boys who reassort the packages according to counties, cities, towns and villages. The subject is well illustrated and interesting.

"Alaska Wonders in Motion No. 3" (Educational).

This interesting reel opens with views of the village of Kenai which was founded 160 years ago by a tribe of the same name. A number of types of this tribe are shown, and we are told that many of them go blind because of the number of months to which they are subjected to darkness, having only three months in all the year when they have daylight. Some good views illustrative of the fishing industry are given, and remarkably well-photographed scenes in which the interest is focused on the ice floes in the neighborhood of Miles Glacier, showing the constant dropping of immense pieces of ice into the water below. This Alaska series is an unusually good one, and can be relied upon to interest an audience. Other scenes of interest are the interior of a Russian church, and the Million Dollar span on Copper River between Miles and Childs glaciers.

"China and the Chinese No. 5" (Educational).

One of the principal features of this number illustrates the cotton industry as it exists in China. Here the laborers work at picking and hauling the cotton for a few cents a day. We are shown their primitive methods of spinning and weaving the cotton, and later a more modern method, to photograph which the side had to be taken from the small factory in order to get enough light by which to make the picture of a girl at work at a loom The making of bamboo and grass rope introduces us to other primitive methods. Then there is pictured a feast day, and the elaborate funeral of a rich Chinaman. A leaning pagoda 1,300 years old is among the other interesting sights of the picture and also a view of the Loo Chow pagoda, the largest and most beautiful in China.

"Norway" (Paramount-Holmes).

In his trip to Norway Mr. Holmes lands us at Bergen, where he gives us a closeup view of the genuine Norwegian at the fiish market of this typical Norse city. A journey by rail takes us from Bergen along the shores of the famous Norse fiords through the most beautiful of scenery. In carioles we make the trip through the Romsdal, alighting now and then at the very steepest places, or to gaze at the splendors of such waterfalls as the Voringfos or to photograph Alpine lakes snuggled in the heights of the mountains. One of the delights of the trip is a cruise on the Telemarken Canal, which your steamboat passes through in about 30 minutes of actual time. The famous Trondhjem cathedral and the hotels at Balholm are also interesting sights. Finally we arrive at Hammerfest, the most northerly of all the cities of the earth, where we meet the Laplander with his reindeer. A delightful scenic.

"Historic Monterey, California" (General Film-Selig).

In World-Selig Library, No. 15, is a good series of pictures of points of interest in Monterey, the capital of the province under Mexican rule. The first theater (built as a hotel), the first frame house, and the first brick are shown. The most interesting view is the home of Robert Louis Stevenson. The custom house, which has had the flags of Spain, Mexico and the United States over it, is shown. Also the rose bush planted by General Sherman. He fell in love with a senorita when he visited the city and when he left he planted a rose bush, saying that he would return when the roses bloomed.

"Animals in Winter" (Educational-Ditmars).

This picture opens with a delightful winter scene showing a herd of buffalo feeding at the Zoo in winter. The scene is especially effective, photographed as it is with the winter landscape as a background. This is followed by several scenes at the Zoo during a blizzard, with sheep huddled together on a rocky slope. Then we are introduced to the walrus in his winter quarters and learn that his icy surroundings are the height of his ambitions. The same is true of the Polar bear, who sniffs the approach of the winter season with evident delight. The tropical gorilla taking a carriage ride well muffled up to protect him from the elements is amusing. The picture closes with some amusing scenes showing the feeding of the beckoning bear.

"Ancestors of the Horse" (Educational-Ditmars).

The various species of the horse family as shown in this picture, which has been carefully arranged by Raymond L. Ditmars, are the Celtic horse which roamed a part of Europe during the ice age, the Norse or Scandinavian horse of the same period, the wild horse of Mongolia with colt, and the kiang or wild horse of Tibet. Then there is the Chapman zebra with its colt, the Abyssinian zebra with narrow stripes and the mountain zebra with wide stripes. An interesting number.

"The Silk Industry of Japan" (General Film-Selig).

In World-Selig Library, No. 15, silk is traced from the egg of the moth to the finished cloth. The moths are shown laying eggs. Then after a gorge of mulberry leaves, they are shown making cocoons. The process of reeling this silk from the cocoons as they float in a pan of warm water, is shown, followed by the spinning and weaving processes. Four thousand yards of silk may be taken from a single cocoon. We have often read of these processes, and we can say that they mean much more as pictured here.

"Tuna Fishing in the Pacific" (General Film-Selig).

In World-Selig Library, No. 15, is a picture of how tuna fish are caught in the Pacific. They are pulled into the boat, knocked on the head with a club and cleaned at sea. Some of these fish reach a length of fifteen feet and weigh fifteen hundred pounds. Fish of this size are not shown. Other fishing subjects shown in brief scenes on this reel are: Mussel hunting, and salmon and rock cod fishing. A fifty-pound salmon is shown. An interesting feature is the securing of salmon for spawning purposes. Taking the eggs from the female is shown clearly. The subtitle calls this "despoiling the female." This has a criminal connotation. It is as if one should speak of stealing hens' eggs instead of gathering them. The correct expression for taking the eggs from the female salmon is "stripping them."

"Pioneer Days" (Selig).

This is a two-reel historical picture of the massacre of the whites at Fort Dearborn settlement (the site of Chicago) by the Indians on August 15, 1815. The picture begins with scenes about the fort. Then follows the evacuation and the attack by the Indians. In the course of the massacre several persons are tapped on the crown with tomahawks, but the picture is not bloody. This is an instructive picture. It is entertaining. And it is done on a big scale.

Russia to the Front

Rialto Theater Gives Up Whole Program to Depicting Scenes Relative to Russia's Freedom Preluded by Scenes on the Russian War Front.

THE unusual program exhibited in the Rialto theater, New York City, the week of Aug. 20th, is deserving of more than a passing comment. The management, alive to the importance of a picturization of Russia's awesome position of having at last entered the gateway of freedom after centuries of serfdom, gave up the entire program of an entire week to the exhibition of the Skobeleff Committee's motion pictures of the Russian campaign on the Caucasian front, the Southwestern front, the Russian Revolution and the famous first celebration of Russian independence held May first, 1917.

These pictures are not only well photographed, but have the quality of conveying more clearly, more impressively than anything else possibly could, the immense significance of the Russian Revolution in world civilization. One could scarcely view these scenes in which surging masses of individuals of all classes joined hearts as one in celebrating what was not only the greatest event in the history of their country, but one of the greatest events in the history of the whole world, without being aroused to a high degree of enthusiasm and admiration for the heroes of the hour.

The program opened with Tschaikowsky's "March Slav" splendidly rendered by the Rialto orchestra, followed by scenes on the Caucasus front showing the transporting of supplies and wounded soldiers over the mountains. The "Plastun" Cossacks in a flanking movement in the rear of the Turks presents some effective scenes which are followed by a view of Anatolia as seen from an aeroplane. With the Russian fleet on the Black Sea we see the destruction of a causeway bridge, breaking communication between the Turkish army and Trebizond and the destruction of a floating mine by machine guns, as well as much else of interest. The fall of Trebizond is also well depicted, showing Mr. Kaiser, United States Consul, at the head of the people of Trebizond, who carrying a white flag of truce went out to meet the commander of the Russian detachment, to hand over to him the keys of the city. The desecration of the monastery of Pochayev, showing how the German soldiers, respecting not even the dead, opened the tombs and threw the corpses from their coffins in search of treasure, and the replacing of the bodies and re-bricking of the tombs by the Russian soldiers, testifies to the grossness of German soldiers.

The remainder of the program had to do with scenes relative to the Russian Revolution and encompassed the funeral procession of the four hundred victims in Mars Field, Petrograd, when the entire population of the city turned out to pay a final tribute to the heroes of the Revolution. Views of the fortress of St. Peter and St. Paul, the gala jubilee session of the State Duma, April 27th, 1917, and scenes showing the celebration on Mars Field on May 1st, 1917, encompass a wealth of material to make the thoughtful individual stop and think. Pictures of the Czar, the Czarina and the entire Royal family of Russia, who, according to a subtitle, "are now in an ordinary railway coach on their way to Siberia", are also included in the collection.

The weight of this program was relieved by interpolations of Russian music well rendered by the Rialto orchestra and a Russian male chorus.

New Suffrage Film

"Woman's Work in War Time" Title of Propaganda for New York State Woman Suffrage Party Made by S. S. Film Company.

J. CHARLES DAVIS, JR., of the S. S. Film Company, 220 West 42d Street, New York City, recently produced for the New York State Woman Party, a propaganda film which is not alone destined to fulfil the purpose for which it was made, but is a credit to its maker.

This statement is not intended to convey the idea that the two-part picture, "Woman's Work in War Time", is an elaborate production with a big story, for it is not. On the contrary the story interest is very slight. We are introduced first to a much domesticated mother whose daughters are enthusiastic workers for the suffrage cause. The daughters in a successful attempt to convince the mother that their cause is a just one, and that women are at the present time actively engaged in important work for the nation, taking the places of men who must answer their country's call to battle, afford an opportunity of exploiting the subject on the screen. For this purpose Mr. Davis has photographed the various recently acquired activities of women, such as farming, making ammunition, working in locomotive shops, and working as conductors on trolley cars. Some scenes showing the food conservation classes at work at the War Service Department of the New York State Woman Suffrage Party are also included in the picture. Scenes at the headquarters of the Suffrage Party picture Mrs. Norman Whitehouse and her associates discussing important matters; and, in closing the picture, the son of the house having gone to war a splendid view of the soldiers marching down Fifth avenue is given.

During a conference of the New York State Woman Suffrage Party which was held at Saratoga on Aug. 29th and 30th, this film was exhibited before Governor Whitman. It is expected that it will be given immediate distribution throughout New York State by the A. Kay Company of 729 Seventh avenue, New York City.

Retreat of the Germans

Official Government Pictures Taken on the British Front at the Battle of Arras Shown at Strand Under Direction of Pathe.

THE Pathe Exchange, Inc., is responsible for the presentation of the Official Government Pictures of "The Retreat of the Germans at the Battle of Arras", which have been seen at the Strand theater in two instalments during the past two weeks. These pictures are remarkable for the fact that they bring us extremely close to the actual battle. They repeat without any startling gruesomeness the story of how a great battle is conducted. They suggest again the dreadful efficiency embodied in the British tank; and in fact we are face to face with the realism of battle as we view these pictures. We see men obedient to the battle call emerging from their dugouts to man the big guns for an attack on the enemy's positions and the various maneuvers and rushing forward of troops and artillery in pursuit of the retreating Germans. There is nothing singularly spectacular about these pictures. They are merely as true a statement as a merciless camera can give of things as they happened at the Battle of Arras.

The Call of the World

The Moving Picture Must Put Forth Its Full Power in the Service of Humanity.

By Rev. W. H. Jackson.

Under the caption of "A Call" many pictures have been put upon the market and readily accepted by the public as filling certain very necessary conditions, revealing certain requirements and meeting with acceptable and often profitable responses. "The Call of Nature" has been made and met; "The Call of the West" and "The Call of the Wilds" have each in turn had their messages instructive, helpful and entertaining by means of the moving picture. A new call has now come in a more concrete form and from a far wider field than any yet imagined by any scenario writer. This call is not for a certain kind of picture from a certain locality and for a certain purpose however laudable; it is a world call for the whole powers of the moving picture to put forth its greatest efforts in the service of humanity.

The Call from the Nations.

All the great nations of the earth have called upon the moving picture to assist them in seeing that which the human eye cannot see and to record indelibly all the varied scenes of domestic, commercial, industrial activities both for peace and war. In war the activities of a nation are exercised to the utmost degree and to the last detail. Every nation has become one vast unit through the amalgamation of all its powers and forces for concentration upon one purpose and objective.

The moving picture has been seized upon as being at once a time saver, illustrator, teacher and recorder; it would seem difficult to find an occasion of necessity which the pictures do not fill their new, yet all important task, and that they do so with thoroughness and efficiency is only a natural result of their applied powers.

In addition to the numerous unofficial uses of the camera, every government has taken official cognizance of the need of the times and official pictures of the natural activities and especially the war scenes are being exactly recorded.

The great nations have organized and equipped moving picture departments, so that faithful reproductions of all stages of the war's progress may be permanently recorded. How different to former years when the description of an intrepid war correspondent alone was sufficient of the artist to produce a few pictures of important events for the walls of the nation's art galleries. Now any selected scenes may be faithfully reproduced while the whole relationship of scenes and events become an eternal chronicle.

The Call of Governmental Departments.

As if in subdivision of the work of the nation, the departments of the Government find the need of the moving picture and call for its particular and specific aid. Answering this call in the United States the moving picture industry is now positively mobilized into War, Navy, Treasury, Agriculture and other permanent departments, including the new commissions, such as Food Control and Training Camp. In a word, there is no department, either permanent or special, which is without its associate branch in moving picture work. The work of these departments must of necessity be most helpful and far-reaching and the help given by the pictures beyond computation. When the government saw the wisdom of mobilizing the moving pictures it secured at the same time the interests of the whole people, for are they not inseparable, and from the fact that the pictures are the great leaders of the people, we can safely paraphrase an old saying and declare that "as go the pictures so go the people," and when the government secures the picture help they secure the people also.

The Call of the Red Cross.

Patriotism and Humanity are nowhere linked together as in the Red Cross; the two highest attributes of human character are found in the theory and practice of the Red Cross movement; nowhere else are God, Country and Man blended in happy unison for the good of all. The Red Cross has asked for money by the millions of dollars and has been fully answered. The Red Cross has asked for trained volunteers by the thousands and has received a noble response; now this same organization calls for the moving picture to bring its influence to in further spreading its gospel of help to all mankind and the moving picture is going to reply to the fullest extent of its great abilities. To secure twenty millions of members is the first object of this new call to show America's teeming millions how, while patriotism is compelled to fight battles, humanity can minister to all those needs the curse of war imposes upon all. Never was a nobler work placed before or upon any power than that which is here made the objective of the moving picture and never will any response be more thorough and acceptable.

The Call of the People.

Race, creed, color and language are one in the interpretation of the moving picture. This is another link in the chain of mutual purposes now dominating the civilized world, and the peoples of the earth are calling upon the moving pictures to do three things: Aid them in that war which is to destroy war and make democracy safe for all; keep them enlightened as to the progress of all the many sided events of that war and become the eternal historian, chronicler and illustrator, so that in ages yet to come because of the moving picture, "generations yet unborn" shall receive an education which shall lift them into a realm of knowledge so superior to our times that, beginning where we leave off the benefits of our struggles, aims and victories shall be the seed from which shall spring up a newer, brighter and safer world.

EXPERT REVIEWING.

"A Pleasing Role." While the ability required to review a picture is of no mean order, the power of descriptive language should run parallel with the ability to discern. The art of the reviewer was recently the subject of some sarcasm in a certain moving picture trade paper which tried to ridicule—without cause and without effect—the reviews of one of its contemporaries; to this same paper we are indebted for what their own reviewer considers "A Pleasing Role."

The latest release of a picture in which Madam P. takes a leading part, we find she fills the role of a young lady who is compelled to marry a man she despises to save her mother from a scandal consequent upon her cheating at cards.

Her married life being one of prolonged and intense misery, which she endures for the sake of her boy, who is a victim of the father's cowardly hate, until unable longer to endure his treatment the wife, seeking to defend the boy from further abuse, shoots the father and so tragically puts an end to a life of such brutal associations. This is the "Pleasing Role" which our neighborly reviewer describes as being so well filled by Madam P. Just in what way it is "pleasing" we are not enlightened; possibly our ignorance prevents us from seeing the point, but we learn the lesson that when a woman becomes the wife of a coward and a brute and enacts a tragedy to defend her home from his continued abuse, she is filling "A Pleasing Role." TRUE AND "FAKE" FRENCH OFFICIAL WAR PICTURES.

Edmond Ratisbonne, head of the French Official Pictorial Service in the United States, has had his attention called to certain war pictures advertised as "French Official" and showing gruesome or faked scenes of prejudicial character.

The French Official pictures, handled in this country by Mr. Ratisbonne, who is the delegate of the Photographic and Cinematographic Division of the French Army, are very carefully edited and titled, and are patriotic, educational and intensely interesting from the American as well as the French point of view.

It is unfortunate that certain unscrupulous parties are using "patched up" Official pictures with other pictures which are not official, and which give a distorted and undesirable impression, and are offering these pictures to the exhibitors as "French Official."

Mr. Ratisbonne wishes to call the attention of all patriotic exhibitors to the fact that these are times when the performances of the Allied Armies must not be misrepresented, and that they should co-operate with him by preventing the exhibition of "pirated" pictures.

All owners of bona fide Official French war pictures may obtain the written endorsement of Mr. Ratisbonne; and all exhibitors showing such pictures are urged to demand such evidence before booking pictures which are represented to them as French Official. W. H. J.

WEEK'S RUNS AT NEW YORK'S ACADEMY.

Arrangements have been made to show William Fox's three big Standard pictures, "Jack and the Beanstalk", "The Spy", and "The Conqueror", at the Academy of Music, New York, after the runs of these productions at the theatre for the entire week. The doors will be opened at ten o'clock each morning, and inasmuch as the historic playhouse seats more than 3,100 persons, new attendance records will probably be established.

"The Spy", now at the Globe for a limited engagement of two weeks, will then take the screen for the entire week of September 9, at the Academy. During the week of September 23, "The Conqueror", R. A. Walsh's American drama with William Farnum in the stellar role, will be the attraction.

The policy at the Academy of Music, of which John Zanft is managing director, has been hitherto to make a wid-week change in programme.

Compiled by the Statistical Department.

MALONE, Molly. Born in Denver, Colorado. Her father was Irish and her mother English. Is five feet two inches tall and weighs 108 pounds. Fair complexion, chestnut hair and dark brown eyes. Miss Malone has had no stage experience, making her debut directly before the camera in 1915 in The Little Angel of Canyon Creek. He is at present a Universalist, but has been with the Vitagraph, Lubin and Lasky Western companies. Some of the best remembered plays in which she has been seen are The Girl in the Garret, The Red Stain, The Telltale Clue, The Lawyer's Secret and Mountain Blood. Miss Malone writes that swimming, tennis and riding are her pet fads, but the thing she loves the most is her work, and she adds "truly," with a line under the truly to make it emphatic, because she did not have time to run down to the notary and hold up her right hand and solemnly swear.

Molly Malone

KING, Henry. Born in Christiansburg, Va. American parentage. Is half an inch over six foot mark and weighs 184 pounds. Fair complexion, brown hair and blue eyes. Mr. King made his stage debut in February, 1903, and for ten years played in stock and productions. In stock he has played in New York, Cleveland, Buffalo and Chicago. He has also appeared in The Lion and the Mouse, The Devil, Graustark and for a season played a round of Shakespearian parts. In January, 1913, he made his debut in pictures in the lead in Love and War in Mexico, a Lubin West-Coast production. He remained with Lubin for a year, then went to Balboa, where he remained for three years and ten months, and is now with American. He has been director and co-star of Should a Wife Forgive and with Little Mary Sunshine in Joy and the Dragon and Twin Kiddies. Likes swimming, motoring and all out door sports.

Henry King

SLOMAN, Edward. Born in London, England. English parentage. Six feet tall, weighs 165 pounds. Dark complexion, dark brown hair and gray eyes. He made his stage debut Christmas, 1904, and for more than eight years played in English and American productions, including the lead in The Wolf. He made his picture debut on March 10, 1913, his first part being the juvenile lead in Universal's The Severed Hand. He was Trine in the serial Trey o' Hearts, Prince Hassan in Under the Crescent, Aaron in The Vengeance of the Oppressed, and had the leads in many of the Lubin productions made by Capt. Melville on the West Coast. He is at present with American at Santa Barbara and directs as well as acts. His fads are an odd mixture, for he loves hunting and motoring, but is also a painter and writer, being the author of numerous two to five reel plays done by Lubin and American.

Edward Sloman

PERIOLAT, George E. Born in Chicago. His father was born in France and his mother in Ireland. He is five feet ten inches in height and ten pounds shy of the 200 mark when he gets on the scales. Brown hair and blue-gray eyes. Mr. Periolat was for eighteen years on the speaking stage, and will be best remembered in his stage work through appearances in Otis Skinner's Prince Otto and Julia Arthur's More Than Queen. He is a veteran of the pictures as well, for he made his camera debut away back in 1909, appearing initially in Forgiven. He is at present with the American, at Santa Barbara, but he has signed the payrolls of Essanay, Selig and Universal. Some of his best known plays have been Oil on Troubled Waters, The Man from Nowhere, A Diamond from the Sky and Annie for Spite, but he has literally hundreds of well-played parts to his credit. Likes swimming, music, etc. What does etc. mean?

George E. Periolat

KANE, Gail. Born in Philadelphia, American parentage. Is five feet five inches tall and weighs 140 pounds. Dark complexion, brown hair and eyes. Miss Kane is now with the American, but has also played for the World Film. She is best known as a dramatic actress, for her connection with the pictures has been comparatively recent. She was one of the stock of the Little Theater in New York and has figured largely in George M. Cohan productions. Some of her best dramatic roles have been in Arizona, Seven Keys to Baldpate, Anatol and The Miracle Man. Of her picture career Miss Kane says nothing, evidently feeling that it is too recent to need repetition, and she does not say a word about her fads, ignoring the fact that a hardworked cuss has to make these paragraphs run twenty-four lines whether the player says anything or not, but it is safe to say that she likes all outdoor sports and is devoted to her work. Selah!

Advertising for Exhibitors

Conducted by EPES WINTHROP SARGENT

Maine Advertising.

EVIDENTLY Maine advertisers should be represented by a minus rather than a plus sign. Recently we discussed the advertising in Waterville and spoke of the work down the river, but the other day we got a file of the Daily Kennebec Journal and went over it systematically. This paper is published in Augusta and serves a considerable territory; most of the towns being represented by weekly papers or being too small even to support a once-a-week. The entire advertising in the average issue would not make a single regular advertisement for many western houses.

Because of the large proportion of space given the nearby towns there are special headings for the leading points, and three house ads appear below these headings, but without definite indication. Gardiner, for example, has two houses. One of these recently reopened after a shut down and actually splurged to the extent of six inches of space in the form of a two threes that shows:

The Strand Will Reopen
On Saturday

7 reels of high class motion pictures. George Walsh in, "THE ISLE OF DESIRE," and a Fox 2 reel comedy. Matinee at 2.45, Evening 7 and 8.30.

jly6d2t

This ran for two insertions and then the house dropped to the level of its opposition and runs on with three inches daily, each house getting 1½ inches across two columns. The paper seems to require that all ads be cut off by double rule and the measuring is done between these rules, so the actual advertisement is only 1 5 16 inches deep, including two point rule. As the stuff is on the Gardiner page there is no town name in the advertising. Only the stranger in Augusta would go around looking for the Johnson Opera House in that town.

The City Opera House, Waterville, takes from an inch and a quarter to an inch and three-quarters deep. The Silver does not advertise, apparently, save in the local paper. Having the page to himself, Mr. Kelliher does not trouble with rule work save to box in with a light line the house title.

The Colonial, Augusta, has the same type of advertisement as the Gardiner houses and generally takes the same three inches a day divided between two columns, but the Fourth of July brought out nine inches in which to announce the Pershing picture in two four and a halfs. Sometimes the regular advertising runs as high as two threes, and the house seems to gauge its space by the attraction. Mabel Tallaferro got 36 inches for "A Magdalene of the Hills," four nines being used. Moreover, it is a very well set advertisement; the first really good advertisement for a motion picture we have seen in a Central Maine newspaper.

But even the Colonial, livelier than the rest, does not appear to have declared in on Dollar Day in Augusta, where Charles Decker, of Grand Junction, Colorado, for example, actually inaugurated a dollar day, stirring up the merchants just to get the crowd into town. There were two dollar days in succession and the house did not seem to know it, to judge from the newspaper advertising.

Other houses in the smaller towns do not advertise. Even the summer park within the ten cent fare limit, does not announce its attractions. They all seem to trust to word of mouth advertising or the desire for amusement. None of them go after business. No wonder they do not do better business, yet they complain because they cannot draw better. It is entirely their own fault. There must be some real live wires in the state—there used to be—but if there are, we would be glad to get some examples of their work. It would be a novelty.

Makes Its Border.

The Grand theater, Faribault, Minn., sends in a window card for Miss George Washington, nicely done in red and blue. The card is 14 by 22 inches and has a home-made patriotic border. Evidently they had on hand a lot of white stars with dark grounds. These are about eighteen points square. By putting three bits of three-point rule between the stars, they get an effective running border, printing the star backgrounds in blue with the stripes in red. It is not a flag border, the use of which is prohibited, but it is striking and timely. This red, white and blue will not reproduce, as the blue takes too white, but in the original the display is excellent, both as to copy and type composition. In connection with the showing of the subject a local dry goods house gave a free ticket to every woman purchasing goods to the value of $1.50 or more to the evening performance, and took four sevens in the local paper to advertise that fact, giving the house considerable publicity both in the advertisement and the accompanying reader, while paying straight box office prices for the tickets. This, of course, is the ideal condition, but if your matinee business is poor and you want to build up you can arrange with some local store to work in with you, perhaps paying half price for the tickets and guaranteeing a certain amount of publicity. Show this reproduction to your prospect if he is in doubt as to how it works, and point out that the shopping public will be more apt to read an announcement of free tickets than straight bargain dope. It works good to both house and store.

Good Ideas.

The Ideas slip now being sent out with all Bluebird press sheets is good advertising. Generally there is offered one or more street stunts and the copy for a post card or form letter, but the point is that the ideas are calculated to work instead of getting the user into trouble with the police, which is the chief trouble with many of the schemes. That is one point to be watched. If you expect to use a traffic impeding stunt see the chief of police in advance and tell him what you want to do, and ask if you may. Generally you can, save in the larger cities, and it is better to have a permit than a summons given you.

A Rush Drawing.

Gordon F. (100%) Fullerton, of the Liberty, Seattle, Wash., sends in a new cut example and writes:

Thank you for the story on the Liberty, which you ran in the MOVING PICTURE WORLD of July 7. The suggestions for the use of the Benday are very good. Had it not been for the simple reason that the feature was picked at the last minute, and I had to get an idea for the cut and have the drawing made in a little more than an hour, I would have had more details and finishing touches. We appreciate your criticisms because we want to improve our work.

FLAME OF THE YUKON
SEVEN REELS
The story of an Alaska dance hall girl, a northern light that like the great Borealis lures and beckons but is not for man to have and hold.
First at Pike, Continuous 11 to 11 ADMISSION 15c—CHILDREN 5c

We are enclosing "FLAME OF THE YUKON" Sunday ad. It is a wonderful picture. We have tried to get the atmosphere of the picture in the drawing. This is another one of those rush order drawings, turned out while you wait, and it might have been better. In spite of the fact that the temperature hovered around ninety degrees (equivalent to 130 degrees in the east), the crowds jammed the theater all day Sunday and were standing out in the streets by night to see this feature.

If you will turn to the issue for July 7 you will see an hour-glass cut for The Witching Hour. The black masses were unrelieved by white save the figure eight of the glass itself. In the cut reproduced here there is less black in any one mass, though probably the artist used no more ink on the other cut. Here the black is better distributed, and so a better display is gained. But Benday, when it is needed should take no more time than plain black, and Benday is effective where too solid a mass is to be avoided. We think that had this been cropped slightly above the title with another box of type above that, the advertisement would have shown as well, since the top part contributes but little to the atmosphere. The main point, however, is that a display drew a turnaway. More than that no manager can ask. An hour is a pretty limited time for drawing. Under the circumstances, the artist has done well, but he should get more time and be encouraged to study the subject ahead. Here he got the main idea well—that of an Alaskan dance hall girl, but we think that sun must have been the one that brought the 90 degree weather. But what does Mr. Fullerton mean about 130 degrees back east?

Catch Up Matinees.

Lately we had the Luncheon Matinee. Now it's the catch-up matinee. This is part of the front page of the Lagoon theater, Minneapolis:

To Every Woman and Her Husband.

Dear Madame:

So wondefully interesting has proven "The Neglected Wife" featuring Ruth Roland, and so thoroughly am I convinced every woman and man should see this great serial photoplay in its entirety, we have arranged to give a "CATCH-UP" matinee on WEDNESDAY, JULY 11, at the LAGOON theater, at which every adult woman will be given FREE ADMISSION.

On this occasion the first three episodes, consisting of six reels, will be shown. You are cordially invited. REMEMBER, there will be no charge for this Wednesday Matinee.

The fourth episode of the serial will be shown Wednesday evening and Thursday matinee and evening. The CATCH-UP matinee will enable those who did not see the opening chapters to see the picture in its entirity from the beginning and follow it consistently to the end. It is going to be a very fascinating and pleasant entertainment for thousands of women, for aside from the entertainment the Lagoon theater is delightfully cool on hot summer afternoons.

This is in typewriter type, and is signed by the manager, J. S. Woodhouse. Since the letter is addressed to "every woman and her husband" the salutation should be changed to match. Repetition of the first of a serial is not at all a new idea, but calling it a catch-up matinee gives it a new kink.

Growing.

The Colonial, Camden, N. J., is closed for a brief period to permit the enlargement of the auditorium. Mrs. A. R. Woodruff is a steady and consistent advertiser. She has worked her house program into a model of its kind, and she goes after business intelligently. Instead of making a "poor mouth" and joining the general cry that she is slaving to keep the exchanges prosperous, she is increasing her auditorium to take care of the crowds that seek admittance. Good advertising backed by good bills and courteous management will bring money and more money to a house. No kick of poor business comes from the real hustlers. If your own business is poor advertise more and advertise more intelligently. You cannot pull business with no advertising and films so old they are ready to drop apart. We saw a year old Chaplin the other day, and it was in wretched shape, yet it was a feature of a house that tries to bolster up poor business with a musical comedy stock company that is even worse than the business. It cannot be done that way. Mrs. Woodruff knows the way, and so she has to add more seats.

Program Stuff.

Here is an unusually good program reader. It is by E. P. Coe, of the Theater Louisiana, Baton Rouge, La., the home of the model program. Mr. Coe seldom runs general copy in his small folder, but when it does it is all there. You can adapt this to your own facts:

SOMEBODY HAS SAID:

"The greatest preacher of them all is the ant—and he says nothing!" But then the ant has nothing to advertise. Theater Louisiana offers a good show every day. The best in pictures perfectly presented and projected. A comfortable house at all times. Typhoon ventilation; air changed twice every minute; fresh air too, from fifty feet above the street. And last but not least, courtesy at all times and a marvelous ability to listen to criticism—sometimes called "kicks." These we do not get often, but they are appreciated when they come, and finally, be sure of this, that we are striving to please, and we thank you most heartily for your generous patronage in the past.

P. E. COE, Manager.

There is nothing extravagant about this. It is all plain, common sense stuff that sounds as if Mr. Coe meant it, as undoubtedly he does. If Mr. Coe can write as well as this it would pay him to take half the back page each issue just for a chat and change weekly.

Just So—What?

This is by L. J. Scott in the Essanay house sheet:

WHAT COULD HE EXPECT?

A PATRON RECENTLY ATTENDED A THEATER ON THE NORTH SIDE OF CHICAGO TWO NIGHTS IN SUCCESSION. THIS HOUSE IS LOCATED IN ONE OF THE MOST THICKLY POPULATED DISTRICTS WHERE COMPETITION IS KEEN.

ONE PROJECTOR WAS OUT OF FOCUS, A DIRTY FRINGE SURROUNDED THE APERTURE PLATE OF EACH MACHINE, AND THE LENS ON THE SLIDE PROJECTOR WAS COVERED WITH A SMEAR OF GREASE THAT ALMOST OBLITERATED THE SLIDES. THE SECOND NIGHT NO ATTEMPT HAD BEEN MADE TO REMEDY THE FAULTY PROJECTION.

AND YET THE MANAGER OF THIS SHOW IS WONDERING WHY BUSINESS IS BAD.

Just so. Why shouldn't business be bad. The exhibitor would not expect to sell decayed bananas for the price of fresh fruit, but to too many anything on a film seems to be a picture no matter how rainy it may be or how poorly projected.

Real Time Tables.

The Third Street theater, Easton, Pa., has another good wrinkle. It is a pocket size folder captioned

Time
Table
July 1917
Pennsylvania
Lehigh Valley
Central Railroads
and
Third Street Theater

Below is the explanation that it shows the trains running to and from Philadelphia and New York and the features at the theater for the second half of July. The second page gives the schedule to and from Philadelphia, trains of all the roads being listed in chronological order, saving the consultation of three time tables in order to discover the next train. Page three gives the trains to New York and the back page lists the features. This is something that is really valuable to the recipient, for even the man who does not expect to travel likes to have a time table. Linking the house with the railroad and even semi-public institutions is an excellent scheme. The Third Street management keeps thinking winter and summer.

An Improvement.

C. H. Bayer, of the Opera House, Leighton, Pa., has turned to a nice folder program that is about as neat as anything he has done. The card is 3 by 4½ inches, a nice buff, printed in a warm brown. The front page is really artistic. There is a small cut of a player to the left with a strip of border and the type choice is excellent. The days are dates and stars are set in roman caps with titles in full face. Evidently Mr. Bayer was fortunate in getting hold of a printer who takes a pride in his work, and between them they have turned out a model issue. We hope to reproduce one as soon as we can get one on white stock. Mr. Bayer does not make the error of trying to tell too much in small space. He has just one line of brief comment for each play, but the line tells something. "A tear or two and more than a few smiles," means more than "Thrilling society drama" or any other of the bromides. Mr. Bayer has a program that is worth holding to for a time.

Too Extravagant.

The Lafayette theater, Baltimore, Md., is inclined to be too effusive. Where everything is "splendid," nothing is good, and it is better to use a sliding scale of adjectives. One announcement, for example, starts off: "This program combines some of the grandest selections in picturedom for this week." The next week they have "Intense interest in every subject, elements of suspense constantly before your eye and startling plunges of mystery and love." That sounds almost too good to be true. Next week the bill is "So vividly interesting, breathless action, thrills, suspense, heart interest, romances, so intensely dramatic, enacted by the cream of popular players." That is so glittering that it means nothing at all. It is not even a grammatical sentence. A more temperate announcement would be more convincing to the average patron. "Grand" should never be used. Its erroneous use always cheapens a statement. The same lack of continuity of thought is apparent in the detail program, and the proofreading is poor. Take this for Tillie Wakes Up:

> Some comedy drama, you begin to chuckle, it spreads to joy, the merriment it creates when Marie makes for the witching waves and her dizzie feeling from the effects of old Scotch, says nothing saying nothing about her seated on a cake of ice, when Tillie wakes up. What wild experiences and hilarious moments caused by these spandiards effects can only be known, when you see this photoplay. Don't miss this fun.

Lindley Murray himself could not parse that. Another announcement tells that the heroine was the hero's "all in," instead of "all-in-all," which is something else again. Greater care would give the program infinitely greater value as advertising material. The present phrasing is apt to convey the suggestion that a management so unfamiliar with good English is not apt to know how to run a good show. This probably is not true, but that is the impression the stranger prospect is apt to receive.

Booming West.

Phil L. Ryan, of the Standard Film Corp., Kansas City, asks for a personal letter of criticism on a mailing sheet for Billy West Comedies. We trust that the carbon of this copy will suffice. The sheet is 17 by 22 inches, printed as a whole on one side and in half and sixths on the other. The full sheet is rather awkward to handle for mail use, but it folds well and one of the sixths is printed for the address. It is done in a gray brown and yellow and the use of tint suggests three colors. As an example of good press work it qualifies and the general argument is good, though we think that too much stress is laid upon sending for the campaign book. This sheet should be the salesman and not the campaign book. Some of the argument is too extravagant to be convincing. For example, the statement is made that Director Gilstrom's salary is "the largest paid to any individual man in the business with the exception of Charles Chaplin and Douglas Fairbanks." Not only does this put West in the position of the tail to the dog, but the statement is so utterly at variance with the facts that your credence is weakened and you can believe nothing that is said. No exhibitor is going to swallow such a statement as that, and it weakens the entire sheet.

Bottled Up.

John C. Green, Galt, Canada, Canadian handler of the Wharton features, uses a bottle cut-out to advertise "The Great White Trail." The bottle has no bearing on the release, but the label reads:

PEP
and PUNCH

The Sure cure

Open me up and look me over.

Cut-outs are costly, but they generally attract, and if they can be picked up at a bargain almost any cut-out can be made to apply to a release. Personally we prefer glass bottles with extractable corks, but this idea is neatly done. Inside there is a neat typographic idea that can be used when there are three stars, one of whom is the feature. Here the principal name is set in 36 point with the supporting stars in two eighteen point lines, one at either side.

English Programs.

Arthur Peel, of the Queen's, Nelson, England, sends in a new advertising booklet and writes that he proposes to issue this monthly. It is 3 by 4½ inches, a heavy tint cover and eight pages in blue on white inside, making twelve in all. This carries portrait cuts and announcements of coming attractions and supplements the house program. This last is a six page folder, a rather awkward size unless one is used to it, but a standard British form. The full sheet is 11 by 17 inches folded to get a six page railroad. The two changes for the week stand on either side of the musical program in the center, and there is plenty of space for the trade advertising. The front page carries a sketch design and there is some film chat on the other pages in the program space; giving reading on every page of advertising. The small booklet, because of the portraits, is apt to be retained, and it is small enough to class as a vest pocket. It admirably supplements the weekly program by attracting prior interest.

Parkway Programs.

The Parkway, Baltimore, in one recent program used cuts two inches wide by an inch and a quarter high in spaces 3½ by 4½. Making these special cuts from stills showing close-ups gives a much better effect than could be had from portrait vignettes or the regulation scene cuts supplied by the manufacturer. The pages of the Parkway are always well laid out, and a neat looking page is the first gun in the campaign. You must have an attractive page if you would have it read in the proper frame of mind. The McHenry, a sister house, uses a six page railroad style, taking the inside for the three changes of bill and the back for house talk and full information from times of feature showing to the free ice water.

A Voting Idea.

H. G. P. Nerge suggests a new adaptation of the voting scheme. In place of the checked ballot he contemplated using the half of a ticket given the patron in many houses as a seat identification, though the common duplex ticket will work as well, or a card may be specially printed and handed the patron on entering. The essence of the scheme is a series of boxes near the exit, the slots being letered "for" and "against" the feature or features. Where but a single feature is used, the idea works well, but with two or more features and but a single vote, the patron is left undecided and is apt to vote erratically. It should be remembered, in all voting schemes of this sort, that some people will vote adversely through a misdirected sense of humor, and a certain allowance should be made for this fact.

One Good Maine Man.

We were pleasantly surprised the other day to pick up a good advertisement at the Belgrade Lakes, Maine. It was only a four by eight throwaway, printed on one side, but well printed from clean and well selected type. It advertised the Acme theater to the campers and hotel guests, and must have been distributed broadcast, for we picked a couple out of the road.

A NEW HELP FOR MANAGERS

Picture Theatre Advertising

By EPES WINTHROP SARGENT (Condensed of Advertising for Exhibitors in the Moving Picture World)

A TEXT BOOK AND A HAND BOOK, a compendium and a guide. It tells all about advertising, about type and type-setting, printing and paper, how to run a house program, how to frame your newspaper advertisements, how to write form letters, posters or throwaways, how to make your house an advertisement, how to get matinee business, special schemes for hot weather and rainy days. All practical because it has helped others. It will help you. By mail, postpaid, $2.00. Order from nearest office.

INQUIRIES.

Questions concerning photoplay writing addressed to this department will be replied to by mail if a fully addressed and stamped envelope accompanies the letter, which should be addressed to this department. Questions should be stated clearly and should be typewritten or written with pen and ink. Under no circumstances will manuscripts or synopses be criticised, whether or not a fee is sent therefor.

A list of companies will be sent if the request is made to the paper direct and not to this department, and a return stamped envelope is inclosed.

Bill Wright Writes.

THE story from William Lord Wright, now of the Selig Staff, throws some light on certain closed markets. Selig is not buying much now because he bought so liberally in the past. He has a stock on hand that supplies his present needs. Now he wants only the most striking and the most timely stuff. Only lately a former employee said that the Selig company had thousands of dollars worth of stuff in its vaults. Selig still wants the biggest and most important stuff, but is not in the market for what might be termed "good average stuff," for this was bought in the market when the average was considerably higher than it is now. Mr. Wright says:

> According to William N. Selig, president of the Selig Polyscope Company, that company is not in the regular market for scenarios, although ready to consider any unusual idea or story that can be developed into a feature production. Stories or ideas dealing with comprehensive subjects or timely questions are always worthy of consideration. Two of the recent releases of the Selig Company are criterions. "Beware of Strangers," filmed with all the care and expense for which the Selig Company is noted in big stuff, dealt with the operations of Mann Act blackmailers, and polished swindlers. The work of these crooks filled the public prints some months ago and it remained for the Selig Company to present a drama that has proven both artistically and commercially popular. Another drama soon to be released by the Selig Company is entitled "Who Shall Take My Life?" Miss Maibelle Heikes Justice became interested in the pros and cons of the Capital Punishment question—a question that is being universally discussed. She secured consent of the authorities to visit Sing Sing, and did so as the guest of Thomas Mott Osborn, then Warden. She is said to be the only woman who ever received permission to visit the Death House of Sing Sing and converse with the prisoners there. She then wrote a seven-reel feature protesting against Capital Punishment, and in the drama she used the atmosphere she gained during her visit to the prison. The production is said to be a strong plea against Capital Punishment, also carrying a dual love story.
> One occasionally reads of the dearth of material for motion picture plays. The Selig Company claims enough plot material to supply all needs for years to come, and that is one reason why the company is not in the open market. Mr. Selig finally passes on all stories accepted by his company, and he early realized the wisdom of buying good material. For years he has paid authors the prices they have asked for their work, and those writers who may complain today have been the ones who yesterday importuned the Selig Company to buy their stuff and sold it.
>
> In the Selig Company vaults are both stories and poems from practically all of the famous writers of the present day. Not only novels but short story rights to pictures are owned by Mr. Selig. At a moment's notice he can supply a director with a tale by a well-known author, for a feature film, a five-reeler, or interesting stuff for one, two and three-reelers.

Get It All.

Now and then the boob letters are lightened by something real. Here's a line from a man whose work is selling and whose vocation indicates the possession of real brains. He says:

> Of course every photoplaywright in America should read your page every week. I do, and it has been untold assistance to me in my work. But he should also read the Moving Picture World from "kiver to kiver." In the issue of June 9th I ran across a little ten-line review which proved to me in just five seconds that one of the best ideas I ever had had been anticipated by an earlier and perhaps better author. When the first pangs of disappointment had pased away I realized with a deep feeling of thankfulness that by reading that one item I had saved myself many days and nights of hard but absolutely unproductive labor; for, with the other fellow "beating me to it," my script would not have been worth the paper it was written on.

There are two big facts in this letter. In the first place he does not say his idea was stolen. He is able to understand that another might have the same idea, particularly since he has not submitted his, but the main point is that he reads the entire paper, and reads it carefully. Do you? You should. It saves trouble in many ways.

Psychology.

"I have too much psychology in my stories," complains a writer. "My plots are all dependent upon the thoughts and emotions of my characters rather than their actions." The inference is that the ideas find visual expression in drab action. Perhaps this is true, but the fault may be with the thinker and not with the thought. Perhaps the writer takes too seriously the psychology of his stories without giving heed to the action rising from those stories. The desire of a man for wealth, for instance, the subordination of all else to this desire, taken by itself is purely mental and not physical, but this desire surely can find symbolism in pictured action if the author is careful not to make the thought superior to action. Suppose that we conceive the idea of a man who sacrifices everything to a desire to be wealthy. As a psychological study of character, this would scarcely be interesting, even in words, but this desire, the striving and the result are all capable of being pictured in action as clearly as his mental processes may be described in words. We have a wealthy person as the symbol of his desire. We have the woman he loves as the symbol of his renunciation. By a skillful handling of these symbols and the lesser factors, we can indicate as clearly in action as in words the struggle and the sacrifice he makes. All photoplay really is, is the substitution of action symbols for word symbols. You express avarice in the five letters, g r e e d. You can express it more forcefully by showing the result of greed, the deliberate putting away of happiness and contentment for power and wealth; the marriage for money instead of for love, the severance of home ties that bind ambition. Idea is the spring which gives movement to action, but any person should be able to replace words with action if only they strive to arrive at a proper appreciation of the value of idea, and can come to realize that the exact and definite expression of an idea in words is seldom as effective and graphic as the showing of the results of that idea in happenings. To say that a man discarded love to marry money conveys an idea. Building up we can tell just how he came to put wealth above affection, but if we use words to do this we merely leave the reader to put into picture the thoughts we express in language where, by realizing the picture ourselves we can put on paper words conveying actions that, done into pictured action, will make the play. The trouble with the writer seems to be that he values idea too highly and action not sufficiently. He fails to see that the apparently indirect expression of the idea in action is really the most complete and understandable expression of the thought. Photoplay should be the most complete exposition of thought. It will be when its possibilities are fully understood. The author seeks to convey thought in word pictures. The sculptor seeks to reproduce life. The artist paints pictures of life and often seeks, more or less unsuccessfully, to convey the idea of motion. The photoplay writer writes in life-motion. He realizes the goal for which the others all have striven. It is a pity that so few realize fully their wealth of opportunity and use their wonderful resources only to convey the simplest and most banal ideas.

You Can't Fool Pop.

C. B. Hoadley, better known as Pop Hoadley, one of the original Inquesters and one of the best old scouts in the photoplay end, is now reading comedies for the Universal. He writes that there is a small market for comedies at the Big U, but adds: "One must be acquainted with the needs of the various companies to get by with it. I have a good staff, and we supply nearly all of the stuff, with a script from the outside now and then. Good comedies are becoming scarce. Most of the stuff submitted is of the musty, mouldy brand, and the dubs are trying to peddle me my own stuff, written several years ago." You cannot fool Pop with old stuff. He was in the game when it was young and he has a memory that is the despair of the plagiarist. He remembers all his own stories and all the stories of others, and if he buys it must be brand new, and a thing is not brand new merely because you never heard of it before. It is brand new only if Pop never heard of it, and there are few comedy ideas he has never heard of before, so send him only the stuff so new that you're a bit surprised at its newness yourself.

Technique of the Photoplay

Projection Department

Conducted by F. H. RICHARDSON

Manufacturers' Notice.

IT IS an established rule of this department that no apparatus or other goods will be endorsed or recommended editorially until the excellence of such articles has been demonstrated to its editor.

Important Notice.

Owing to the mass of matter awaiting publication, it is impossible to reply through the department in less than two to three weeks. In order to give prompt service, those sending four cents, stamps (less than actual cost), will receive carbon copy of the department reply, by mail, without delay. Special replies by mail on matters which cannot be replied to in the department, one dollar.

Both the first and second sets of questions are now ready and printed in neat booklet form, the second half being seventy-six in number. Either booklet may be had by remitting 25 cents, money or stamps, to the editor, or both for 40 cents. Cannot use Canadian stamps. Every live, progressive operator should get a copy of these questions. You may be surprised at the number you cannot answer without a lot of study.

Reopens Charter.

Carl Gilbert, secretary-treasurer Sioux City, Iowa, Operators' Local Union No. 355, I. A. T. S. E. & M. P. M. O., writes as follows:

> Will you kindly have the following published in next issue of the department:
> The Sioux City Motion Picture Operators' Union, Local No. 355, I. A. T. S. E., will reopen its charter September 1st, and it will remain open until January 1, 1918. During this period the initiation fee will be $25, but on January 1st the fee will be raised to $50. This action is taken for the benefit of those operators working within the jurisdiction of this local who may wish to join. Application should be made to Carl Gilbert, Secretary, P. O. Box 834, Sioux City, Iowa.

It is impossible to get anything into the "next issue" after its receipt. In matters of this kind we expedite publication as much as it is possible. I would strongly recommend to all operators within the jurisdiction of the Sioux City local that they take this opportunity to climb aboard the band wagon and become members of the international organization. It is to be regretted that Brother Gilbert did not send a list of towns within the jurisdiction of the local.

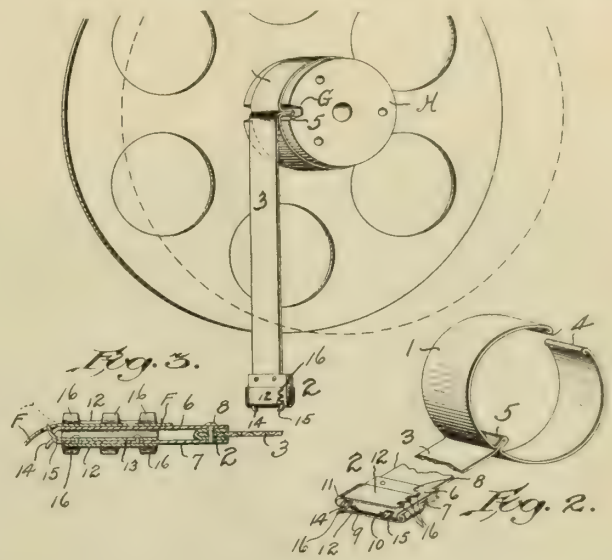
An Invention.

From L. S. Baluta, Roaring Creek, Pennsylvania, comes letter and patent papers (Patent Number 1,232,753), descriptive of an invention by friend Baluta, who also sends crudely made working models. He asks that the invention be criticised in the department; also for our personal opinion as to its merits, or possible improvements.

The invention consists of a metal clasp designed to engage the outer diameter of an ordinary wooden reel hub, an elastic band attached thereto, of length sufficient to reach beyond the outer diameter of the metal reel-side, and a metal clasp attached to the outer end of the said elastic band, the latter being so made that the film may be readily shoved under and thus engaged with the end of the band, though not so firmly but that it will readily pull loose at the end of the rewinding process. The whole is intended to facilitate threading the machine by making it easy to attach the film to the lower reel while the reel is in the magazine.

In the illustration, 3 is the aforesaid elastic band, 1 the metal clasp designed to slip over and engage the reel hub, and 12 is the film clasp. In figures 2 and 3 full detail is given, so that I think you can readily grasp the idea, as well as its practical operation. So far a slot G in the upper illustration, and dowel (don't know what else to call it) in figure 3 be concerned, I think they are unnecessary and impractical. They do not exist in the models sent. Ends of clasp 4 can be bent at right angles and have a saw-tooth edge which will provide ample anchorage, always supposing the clasp to be made of spring steel. Band 3 can be riveted to clasp 1 on its flat surface, extending clear around the clasp to prevent out-of-centering effect. Clasp 12 should be made of best grade spring steel, and there ought to be a slight shoulder between screws 8 and clasp 2, figure 3, in order that the film be engaged a little more firmly than it is likely to be with the plain, flat surface.

The thing seems to be practical, but there would, I am afraid, be more or less trouble through weakening of clasp 2, due to the necessarily very short bend, and the liability of operators when in a hurry to raise the clasp up to slip friend film under—not supposed to be necessary, but will be done just the same—and raise it too high, thus ruining the clasp. I would suggest that neighbor Baluta send two of these devices to each of the following operators, requesting them to make report to the department: W. G. Woods, Market Street theater, San Francisco, who can also report as to its probable marketability, he being connected with a firm making and dealing in theater specialties; Chief Operator Strand theater, New York City; E. A. Shields, Chief Operator Isis theater, Denver, Colorado.



Measuring the Intermittent.

A. G. Rollins, St. Louis, Missouri, propounds the following:

> I have received much benefit from the, or rather from "our" department. Just what the profession would have done without its help in years gone by I do not know, and I believe operators, as a class, do not properly appreciate what a tremendous help it has been, or in how many ways it has aided them. To my mind, immense as has been its aid in improving the technical knowledge of the operator, it has done an even greater work in making of the business of operating respectable in compelling the operator, often against his own will, to respect his own profession, and pounding into the mind of the manager the fact that projection is, when all is said and done, one of his very greatest assets.
> And now, having eased my mind of that load, may I ask a question? You often speak of the relation of intermittent speed to shutter blade width, and the importance of the operator measuring and comparing the various intermittents and their speed ratio. I think, however, it would help many of us if you would go further and explain the whole matter, including illustrated directions for measuring intermittent speed. It may seem childishly simple to you, friend Richardson, but to me, and I am sure to many more, it is almost anything else. May I hope to see a complete answer to this, my first question, in the columns of our department soon?

You certainly may, Brother Rollins. A request so courteously made is doubly deserving of attention; moreover I agree that the matter needs elucidation in the department. It is one of more than passing importance; also it is one very little understood by operators in general. In Memphis, Tennessee, the secretary of the local union did not even know what I mean by ratio of intermittent speed, and, in consequence of lack of knowledge on that and other points, he was cutting an unnecessarily large percentage of his light. And this same is true in very many cases.

The measuring of the ratio of intermittent speed is a very simple matter. But first let me explain that ratio of intermittent speed means the ratio the time the intermittent is moving and pulling down the film bears to the time it is at rest, and the picture being projected to the screen. Therefore it means the ratio of the time the main shutter blade must cover the lens to the time the lens is open, hence, while it does not necessarily mean the ratio of light to darkness (percentage of light cut), it has a direct and important bearing thereon, and does mean the ratio of light to darkness it is possible to obtain under a given local condition.

Examining the drawing we note mark A, B. C. A is a slight, but plainly visible scratch mark made on the machine frame, at any convenient point beside and as close as possible to the outer rim of the flywheel. We now turn the flywheel until the intermittent sprocket just barely begins to move. We must be very particular about this, and very carefully locate the precise point at which the sprocket begins to move. If we are to use our test as indicating the speed of the intermittent movement of a particular type of machine, then it will be well to use a new mechanism, and to be sure the intermittent is in proper adjustment.

Having located the precise point at which the intermittent sprocket begins to move, make a slight, but plainly visible mark on the rim of the flywheel, exactly opposite mark A on the frame. Mark B ought to be made on the outer diameter of the wheel, so it will come just as close as possible to mark A, because any variation, however slight, will affect the result. To locate the point of first movement of the sprocket an extremely accurate method is to set a straight strip of flat spring steel, such as the steel the main spring of a watch is made from, about three of four inches long, so that one end rests against one of the sprocket teeth and the other against any temporary stop, as shown in the second illustration.

But the steel must be not less than three inches long, and must be very light, since the parts must not be put under strain. Of course when the sprockets move the spring steel will instantly bow, either up or down. I suggest this as a very accurate method, but the beginning of movement may be detected quite accurately either by using a condensing lens as a magnifier, or by sense of touch.

Having located the point of first movement, and made mark B, we now turn the flywheel until the intermittent sprocket just barely ceases to move, using due care to locate this point with precise accuracy, and make scratch mark C.

We now have our ratio of movement laid out on the rim of the flywheel, and are in position to measure it at will. This may be done in several ways. One is to take a compass having very sharp points, and set it to just register the distance from marks B to C. Having done this, just "step" the compass on around the diameter of the wheel, and if you find there are just six "steps," including the distance between marks B and C, then the movement is a one to five, which means that the film will be at rest exactly five times as long as it is moving. You may also measure the circumference of the wheel with a steel tape line (an ordinary tape will not serve), and then measure the distance between marks B and C. Divide the first by the last and the answer will be the number of divisions. Suppose, for instance, the circumference of the wheel to measure exactly nine inches, and the distance between marks B and C to be exactly one and one half inches. Dividing nine by one and one half we get six, hence we conclude the movement to be a one to five.

Applying this to the shutter, it means that the lens must be covered by the main blade during one sixth of the period of time elapsing from the time the intermittent sprocket begins to move until it begins to move next time, qualified by the fact that the lens need not be entirely closed until the film has moved considerably, and may be opened before the film has actually come to rest. On the other hand, with a one to six movement the lens must only be covered one during one seventh of each picture cycle, which is a very distinct gain in picture brilliancy and in other ways. Of course I fully understand, Mr. Pick-It-To-Pieces, that in practice other things besides speed of intermittent have to do with necessary shutter blade width, but that fact does not in any way affect or alter the matter with which we are now dealing. If a certain local condition, due, for instance, to wide picture at short throw, necessitates a certain added width of shutter blade it will add just that much to the comparatively narrow blade of the fast intermittent machine, or to the already comparatively wide blade of the slow intermittent. Summed up, the faster the intermittent the narrower may the cut-off blade of the revolving shutter be, hence the less percentage of light will be cut off.

WEIGHT LAID ON MACHINE TABLE TO ACT AS A STOP.
SPRING STEEL WHICH WILL BOW UP OR DOWN THE INSTANT THE SPROCHET MOVES.
INTERMITTENT SPROCKET

As against this, however, the faster the intermittent the greater the strain on the star and cam, on the intermittent sprocket teeth and on the film sprocket holes. Experience has proven, however, that film sprocket holes will stand up well with a one in six movement, and the same is true of the mechanism, always provided it be well made and properly hardened. But with these latter matters we have nothing to do, other than to set forth the facts as we have found them. It is very necessary that operators understand these matters, and understand them thoroughly. And the more thoroughly you understand them the more valuable will you be to your employer and to the moving picture industry. You will find machine manufacturers who will argue for fast intermittent movement, while other manufacturers will argue for slow. It is for you, Mr. Operator, to understand, and be in position to intelligently weigh such arguments. There are other important reasons why speed of intermittent is of great importance, under certain local conditions. Let us hear from some of you as to your views in this matter; also tell us what would be most desirable in this respect in a house having short throw and wide picture, and why.

Better Be Careful.

J. R. Gralledale, Chicago, Illinois, wants information concerning a new projector. He asks:

> Will you please advise me as to whether or not the Stern Moving Picture Machine is a good machine It is made in Philadelphia, and its makers claim big things for it.

Claims, friend Gralledale, are easy to make—much easier than a projector. If the makers of the machine in question had a really excellent article, it is reasonably certain this department would have heard from them. The fact that we have not heard from them is not conclusive evidence that their projector has no merit, but it certainly does incline one to the idea that it is not up to the standard. That a manufacturer of a really superior projection machine would place his machine on the market without first having presented its points of excellence to the Projection Department is extremely unlikely. It has been the experience of eight years that those who have projection apparatus of merit let no grass grow under their feet in getting it to the Department, in order to secure its approval, which costs not one red cent. On the other hand the manufacturer of inferior apparatus invariably keeps it away from us as long as possible.

There are plenty of excellent, standard projection machines on the market, neighbor Galledale, and I would advise you to stick to goods of known value and merit, until such time as the manufacturer in question takes the trouble to present his goods for examination. We will then tell you precisely what he has, and you won't have to buy a pig in a poke.

From Texas.

D. Prather, San Angeleo, Texas, sends forty cents for the first and second sets of questions, and says:

> Am operator in the Lyric Theatre. We have two machines, one a Power's 6-A and one a Baird. The latter is a wonder in producing a flickerless picture. We have a large concrete operating room and a 110 foot distance of projection. The current is A. C., which we change to D. C. by means of a Mercury Arc Rectifier. Have just finished remodeling the house all over, and it certainly has helped a lot. We have just ordered 250 new opera chairs, and when they are in our seating capacity will be 600. It is 500 now. Have the very best programme we can buy and it gets the crowd, both at matinee and night.
> The owners are Messrs. H. B. Robb and E. H. Rowley. Please let me know about six weeks ahead of expiration of my subscription to the World, so I can renew without missing any numbers.

You will receive bill for renewal in good time, Brother Prather. And now as to the questions (which have been sent): Some few who ordered them seem to have the mistaken idea that the answers accompany them. If that were true it would make a book worth at least $2.50, if not more. The reason I still continue to sell the booklets is that the operator who gets them will have a guide to study. If he starts at the beginning and studies those questions, he will have acquired a wide range of technical knowledge by the time he has finished with them.

Glad to know your theatre is doing well, which means that Messrs. Robb and Rowley and their operator are also doing well. Come again when the spirit moves.

Working for Nothing.

From a town in the state of Washington comes the following:

> I wonder if other theaters in this state get film like I do. I am enclosing just a few of many faults amputated from the last 100 feet of "The Pride of the Clan," received from the Progressive Film Corporation recently. I mailed a lot of them to the Progressive, explaining what a world of trouble it put a fellow to. This thing of doing a lot of work for nothing gets very monotonous in course of time. Never hear of other operators making complaint—Washington men, I mean—and am wondering if I am the only goat. What is your idea of an exchange giving this kind of service?

My opinion of such mis-managed exchanges has been set forth so often that it hardly requires repetition. I wonder what sort of howl one of the exchange mis-managers who do this sort of thing would put up if he rented a house, at a good, stiff rental, on the presumption it was in good order, only to find the roof leaked like a sieve, and when he demanded that the roof be fixed the landlord told him to "fix it himself!" Or if the wall paper all fell to pieces and the landlord told him to "fix it himself, or go to the devil!" Oh, yes, Mr. Exchange manager, the cases are precisely analagous. The landlord rents you a building under the presumption that it is in usable condition—in good order. You rent a theater films on precisely the same assumption. The landlord has just as much right to tell you to "fix it yourself," as you have to tell the operator the same thing. But I believe this form of outrage on the part of irresponsible, incompetent exchange managers will never cease until one of two things happen, viz: Sending out films in anything but first class mechanical condition is prohibited (as it ought to be prohibited) by law, or the operator gets strongly enough organized to put a stop to it himself.

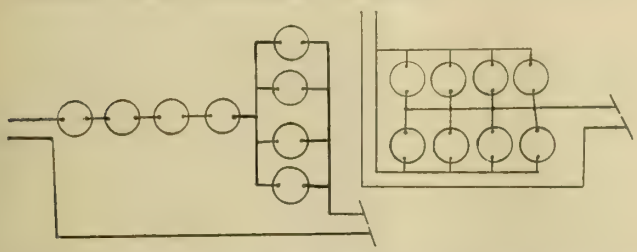
Figuring Resistance.

A. W. Reynders, Sioux City, Iowa, makes the following inquiry:

> As a subscriber to the Moving Picture World and owner of a handbook, which is very good indeed, I would like to have an answer to the following: What would be the resistance of the following. Please give formula for figuring it.



In the first connection you would have a series of four 8-ohm coils, making a total of 32 ohms, and a multiple of four 8-ohm coils in series with the 32 ohms. The placing of four coils in multiple would actually offer the resistance of one coil divided by four, so that the multiple would actually offer $8 \div 4 = 2$ ohms, which, added to the 32, makes a total of 34 ohms opposed to the voltage. In the second sketch we have eight 8-ohm coils in multiple, and eight divided by eight equals one ohm. In dealing with a multiple, if the coils or resistances all have equal resistance, just divide the resistance of one by the number of resistances, or coils, and the result will be the resistance opposed to the current. If the rheostats have unequal resistance, then add the total of them all together and divide by the number of rheostats. The result will be the total resistance opposed to the voltage. In these calculations no account has been taken of the arc resistance.

Probably a Loose Lens.

J. B. Stine, Covington, Indiana, is in trouble. I shall make my own suggestion, and ask operators who may have experienced similar trouble, and who may be able to suggest a different solution, to advise. Friend Stine writes:

> Have been a constant reader of the World for several years; also possess one of your handbooks, but have recently bumped into a projection proposition for which I have been unable to find either remedy or cause, though I have diligently searched my files of projection dope from A to &c. My present operator has had no previous experience with such a trouble, and I have had two high class operators trying to dope it out, but their success is represented by 0. So here I am, hat in hand, making my best bow and asking the Main Guy himself to get on the job.
> Some time ago I remodeled my house, increasing the distance of projection to 124 feet. Machine is a Power's 6-B, taking A C through Bell & Howell Compensarc, from a 110 volt, 60 cycle supply. Had to get a Gundlach-Manhattan half size or No. 2 projection lens, with the special Power shutter for large diameter lens. Picture is 14 feet. And now for the disease, which is really not so easy to describe on paper: The shutter seems to be in time, as there are no streaks either up or down from title letters, nor do we have what is commonly termed a "travel ghost" (Streaks up or down is precisely what travel ghost is, neighbor Stine. ed.), but there is a blur of all objects—a shaded-out effect very similar to a ghost, which sometimes appears on the left one third of the screen, and sometimes on the lower one third, while the upper part and center is usually, though not always, clear. This condition does not always obtain, there being times when the picture will run absolutely perfect for several consecutive minutes.
> Have tried all combinations of consenser lenses, using for a time, a 8½-9½ bi-convex set, but recently changed to 7½-9½ meniscus bi-convex, which gives us a beautiful, white light, almost equal to direct current. In using this set we have the lamphouse back as far as it will go, and get a clearly defined spot which looks good. Am using ¾ National cored carbons above and below. Smaller size seemed to pencil down to a point, and would not hold steady arc. If you can help us it surely will be appreciated. Enclosed find 4 cents, stamps, for carbon of department reply.

It seems to me, neighbor Stine, your trouble can only be due to one of two or three things. Take that lens out and shake it sharply, listening for a rattle which would denote a loose lens. But failure to hear the rattle should not stop you from taking the lens combinations out and examining the mounts. But before you even do this, take off the revolving shutter and project a light scene in some film, holding a piece of thin white writing paper over the front of the projection lens. It may be, and probably will be, found that the actual picture ray is very much smaller than the lens diameter. If so, then, with a pencil, while the film is running (the white light will not do), trace the outline of the picture ray on the paper. Then, using that as a pattern, cut a mask from black cardboard and place it in front of the projection lens, so as to just allow the actual picture ray to pass out, and nothing else. You may find that this will stop your trouble (though I hardly think so) and at the same time allow you to trim down on your main shutter blade considerably. Next, stop up the lens port in the operating room wall with black cardboard, or sheet metal—preferably the latter, and project a film (not the white light, but a film scene), marking the exact outline of the actual picture-carrying ray on the cardboard or metal, after which cut out the mask thus indicated. If these things stop the trouble, well and good. The next thing is a search for a loose projection lens.

I could not advise as to your condenser combination unless I knew your amperage. Ordinarily I would say you are wrong, but you have a rather long focal length projection lens, and maybe it is all right. The chart says that with 60 amperes A C a 7½-7½ meniscus bi-convex set, with 22 inches from center of condenser combination to film, is correct. The trouble with the 7½-9½ is that you have too great a distance from crater to lens. Suppose you try two 7½ lenses and let us know the result. They must be set close together, of course. Sorry your reply was somewhat delayed, but I'm just beginning to get half way straightened out after the Long Hike.

Information Wanted.

Under date July 7, Nebraska, asks:

> Will you kindly tell me how to take the jump and side motion out of a picture, and what carbons to use on A C; also what amperage and what make of lens. Please let me know at once, as my picture has a bad jump. Sprocket is new, as is also aperture plate. Enclosed find two cent stamp; also fifteen cents for your book.

Now brother, don't get insulted when I tell you you ought to secure a position under a competent operator and serve at least a year apprenticeship. While it is true you are in a comparatively small city, still photoplays which cost many thousands of dollars to produce are placed in your hands for reproduction, and the art of artists, than whom there are none better, is dependent entirely upon your skill for proper reproduction upon the screen. Nor is this all, for the patrons of your theater pay admission to see photoplays properly reproduced upon the screen, and still, beyond all this, you may be wasting, and probably are wasting money of your employer, since you cannot possibly work efficiently or intelligently unless you understand the apparatus, and your letter seems to indicate an almost total lack of knowledge thereof. As to fifteen cents for "my book," why you had me puzzled, but I guess you mean a copy of the Moving Picture World, which is $3.00 per year, or $1.50 for six months. I am returning your stamps. Carbon copies of department reply are four cents, not two. Even at that the carbon copies cost me a great many dollars a year more than they bring in. However, I am glad to supply them. And now to your queries: You have not even told me what kind of machine you have, so how I can direct you how to eliminate side motion, other than to say that to remove any side motion there may be in the intermittent sprocket, see that the guide rollers at top of the gate (if there are any) fit the film snugly, but without buckling it, and be sure there is no side motion to the machine itself. As to the jump, if it occurs regularly four times to every revolution of the crank the trouble lies in either your intermittent sprocket or its shaft. Be sure of the faces of your sprockets, particularly the intermittent sprocket, are perfectly clean. Dirt on face of intermittent sprocket is apt to make the picture jump. You should have described the "jump" very carefully, which you did not do. Am sorry your reply was so long delayed, but the letter came while I was away and was buried under a mass of correspondence. It should have been kept separate. As to carbons, why I could hardly take space to re-publish tables covering this. Would suggest that you procure a handbook from the Moving Picture World, price $4.00. It is precisely what you need. 700 pages dealing with practical projection in terms which you, or any other man, can understand. With this book and a year of apprenticeship you will be a thoroughly competent operator, provided you study, as well as work. The carbon-size tables for A C and D C will be found on page 287 of the handbook.

Wonder What's Up?

From San Francisco, California, comes a postcard, on one side of which are pictures of the exterior and interior arrangements of what seems to be a real swell hotel, and on the opposite the following: Hello Rich! Just on a trip to Frisco with a few chinks, en route to Hong Kong. Toro Glucksman. Huh, I am real curious to know what my old friend Turo, of New Orleans, is doing chaperoning a mess of ex-pig-tails around over the scenery; also whether it is only the crevices (joke! A Chink is a crevice, isn't he?) who are en route to the Flowery Kingdom, or is Glucksman also bound thenceward?

Fixing Baths (Continued).

WHERE acid short stop alone is used the acid carried over from the short stop may cause sulphur precipitation and the sudden neutralization of the alkaline carbonates of the developer, by a strong acid short stop, liberates bubbles of carbonic acid gas in the gelatine film, causing small round blisters. Where the short stop is made weak to avoid these blisters it becomes rapidly exhausted from the neutralization of the acid by the alkaline developer and must be often renewed to accomplish its purpose.

Plain hypo also becomes rapidly discolored by the old developer carried into it by the film. Acid hypo prevents staining of the film and remains clear much longer than plain hypo.

Sulphurous acid is a strong decolorizing agent and the acid fixing bath contains a certain amount of free sulphurous acid produced by the action of the acetic acid upon the sodium sulphite present.

Acid Hypo Fixing Solution.

Dissolve completely:

Water	10 gallons
Hypo	21 pounds

Then mix the following acid hardener separately and after it is thoroughly dissolved add it to the hypo solution above:

Water	40 ounces
Sodium sulphite (dessicated)	4 ounces
Alum (white, not chrome)	8 ounces
Acetic acid (No. 8)	24 ounces

When this acid hypo solution is run into precipitation tanks for silver recovery it is highly important that enough spent developer be also run into the recovery tanks to neutralize all of the acid present or the acid will react with the sulphide used for precipitating and produce an awful stench of liberated hydrogen disulphide.

When the fixing of the film is complete, wash it thoroughly and immerse for two minutes in a glycerine bath—water, 10 gallons (40 litres); glycerine, 32 fluid ounces (1 litre)—to maintain the flexibility of the film.

These formulas are given in the small quantities of 10 gallons each so as to render the calculation of larger quantities relatively simple. Most developing tanks hold very nearly some multiple of ten gallons, thus rendering the calculation for a 20, 40, 60 or 80 gallon tank the simplest kind of mathematical calculation.

By mixing the same amount of chemicals in a smaller quantity of water, a good stock solution may be mixed for the development of still picture negatives.

The following acid hardening bath has an even greater hardening action than the first, but may be objected to on account of its green color, and some claim that it is slightly more liable to sulphur precipitation than the plain alum bath. That is probably untrue, as either will remain clear as long as they will mix thoroughly if they are properly compounded.

The following formula for chrome acid hardener is for addition to ten gallons of 1 to 4 plain hypo solution:

Water	2	gallons
Sulphite of soda (des.)	2	lbs.
Sulphuric acid, C. P.	5	ounces
Chrome alum	1½	lbs.

Be sure to mix in the order given, and when adding to the hypo stir well and add slowly, otherwise precipitation may take place.

To insure permanency and perfect hardening, film should remain in this bath for twenty minutes, or at least twice as long as it takes for the milky appearance of the silver haloid to disappear from the back of the film.

Films from a properly mixed chrome alum bath will withstand the warmest of wash water.

Motion Picture Nomenclature.

The motion picture has brought into use a number of words and phrases peculiar in their significance when used in connection with the industry.

Many of them have a self-evident application while others are either ambiguous or have entirely different meanings as used in various studios.

The Sociey of Motion Picture Engineers has undertaken to define a few of the more common terms met with in the industry. It is to be hoped that they will lengthen the list in the near future, as there are yet many words which are still in need of concrete definitions and which are, therefore, used loosely and indiscriminately.

The following list gives the definitions which have been approved by the society:

Cine—A prefix used in description of the motion picture art or apparatus.

Condensers—In an optical projection mechanism, the lens combination which gathers the diverging rays of the luminant and converges them into the objective.
